As to future plans, Mrs. Fletcher, a native of Illinois, says that she would like to write other novels of North Carolina history since the field is not as crowded as others in history.

real work for veterans was being done, Nixon wasn't around.

5. Record on Civil Rights— Nixon has been making many recent speeches on civil rights, has urged the end of segregation in the District of Columbia. Yet as a member of the Senate Labor Committee he was one of only three Senators who voted to keep the Civil-Rights Bill bottled up in committee.

In other words, he did not even want the Civil-Rights Bill to go to the Senate floor for free and open debate, but to remain gathering dust instead, inside the committee. Other Senators voted the bill out over his head.

6. Gambling Intervention— Nixon stated, in explaining his $18,000 expense fund, that he had asked no government favors for those contributing to it. However, he wrote a letter to the American Ambassador in Cuba asking aid for Dana Smith, the man who collected the $18,000 and who had reneged on a gambling debt in Cuba.

Smith was playing the gaming tables at the Club Sans Souci in Havana, lost $4,200 and paid with a check, then stopped payment on the check. Norman Rothman, to whom the check was made out, then sued.

Nixon meanwhile wrote a letter to the American Ambassador recommending Smith as a man of good character and interceding for him regarding a matter that no U. S. Ambassador should have to concern himself with.

Dr. Friederich To Give Talk Tuesday Night

German Professor To Present Paper On Literature

Dr. Werner P. Friederich, professor of German and comparative literature will present a paper on the subject "What are the Really Great Contributions to International Literature" at a meeting of the Philological Club Tuesday evening.

The meeting, in the Faculty Lounge of the Morehead Planetarium will begin at 7:30.

Professor Friederich, who has studied at the University of Bern, the University of Paris, and Harvard University is editor of the UNC Studies in Comparative Literature and the Yearbook of Comparative and General Literature.

He is also an associate editor of Comparative Literature, a publication of the University of Oregon. Among his recently published books are Outline History of German Literature, Dante's Fame Abroad, 1350-1850, and Bibliography of Comparative Literature, as collaborator.

He founded the comparative Literature section of the Modern Language Association and is the American representative of the International Committee for Modern Languages and Literatures.

SUAB Votes Continuation Of Film Series

Responding to student requests, the Student Union Activities Board has voted to continue its series of renowned movies.

The next series will consist of two films, "Paisan" and "Orpheus."

The first film, "Paisan," directed by Roberto Rosellini, will be shown Nov. 19. This is the only picture that will be shown on Wednesday rather than Thursday night.

"Paisan" is the sequel to "Open City" made by the same director in 1945. A 1946 picture, "Paisan" shows the impact of war on a native population and a foreign soldiery. Beginning with the landing in Sicily the film follows the American and British armies through the invasion and liberation.

The majority of the dialogue is in English but there are English sub-titles for the German and Italian speeches.

The second picture, "Orpheus," is a modern 1949 version of the Greek legend by the same title.

Jean Cocteau uses surrealist cinema techniques to create this psychological study of death. Three motorcycle riders as the three fates show the type of modern twist Cocteau has put in his film. "Orpheus" in the film goes into the underworld to plead for the fate of his wife. Death, as a princess is in love with him and would have him forget his dying wife whose existence depends upon his behavior in the nether world.

Easily readable sub-titles are used to supplement the French dialogue.

Series subscriptions will be sold beginning Nov. 6 at the main office in Graham Memorial. No individual tickets can be sold. The series price is 60 cents.

Lost: Pair Of Contact Lenses

Dartmouth Fakes News On Befuddled Harvard

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 31—An infamous deed, perpetrated recently by young journalists, has the Harvard University faculty and administration in a state of confusion.

The hocus-pocus went on around 5:30 in the morning when a paper purporting to be the usual copy of the "Harvard Crimson" was circulated around all the Harvard dormitories, the Business School, the Graduate School of Design and some Law School Dorms.

The catch was that the paper was a fake arranged by the staff of The Dartmouth in Hanover, N. H. Typical sample of its contents was: Lost: one (1) pair of contact lenses belonging to a desperate football star named Dick Clasby: misplaced somewhere on revamped Soldier's Field, which has been condemned as structurally unsafe.

In order to be sure that no one missed the bigger, better Crimson, hawkers sold the parody copies in Harvard Square and in parking lots outside Soldier's Field to visiting alumni and friends who had not yet learned of the hoax.

At Radcliffe College and at Wellesley, the jokesters did their best to induce a mob scene by switching the Crimson in time for the regular newsgirls to deliver the fakes.

Dartmouth had been so successful that Harvard had not come out of the fog by late afternoon. Spies from the interior reported that many members of the University were still laboring under the hoax.

Copies also found their way into the administration buildings and in the home of University President James Conant.

Holsten Says Service Now Is Different

By John Jamison

"The Armed Forces aren't like they used to be," said Assistant Dean of Students Roy Holsten yesterday, pondering his recently completed tour of Lackland Air Force Base at San Antonio, Texas.

"The boys no longer stand nude in a supply line waiting to be issued 150 pounds of gear which doesn't fit. Now their dignity is spared, the uniforms fit, and the equipment is carried by truck to the recruits' barracks."

Holsten and Col. F. C. Shepard, military affairs adviser here, just returned from the three-day tour with much praise for the completely new training philosophy being used by the Air Force.

"For instance, the boys are given a series of eight lectures on citizenship, with emphasis on the processes of government," Holsten said. "They benefit from a new policy of multiple management, whereby they can act as a group to have their petitions considered and answered by their superiors."

Holsten and Shepard were among 19 North Carolinians invited by the Air Force to inspect facilities and training methods at Lackland. The Tar Heel entourage on one occasion met in an auditorium with several hundred service men and women from North Carolina. After a brief "pep rally," the service people expressed "great appreciation for the interest shown by the folks at home."

The civilian group was made up of persons in a position to advise young men and women on questions about the Air Force. Representatives were present from various state newspapers, radio stations, UNC, Woman's College, Duke, The Agricultural and Technical College at Greensboro and North Carolina College at Durham.

COL. LAWRENCE WESTbrook, above, has been fired from the Democratic National Committee by National Chairman Stephen A. Mitchell, in Washington, for participating in negotiation of a contract with the United States Government.

Playmakers Seeking Cast In New Play

Tryouts for Gogol's "The Inspector General," second of five major productions scheduled by the Carolina Playmakers for the season, will be held in the Playmakers Theater Tuesday at 4 and 7:30 p.m.

These informal auditions are open to all students and residents of the community.

Harry Davis, associate director of the Playmakers, wil stage this delightful farce comedy of small-town corruption, which has been adapted for the American stage by John Anderson. The play requires a cast of 15 men and four women. For those interested in reading the script in advance, copies are available in the Reserve Reading Room of the University library.

Public Health Officials Here For Six Days

Ten public health officials of Western Germany are here to spend six days observing the work of the School of Public Health.

Now on a tour of the United States, the doctors will visit a number of schools of public health and last week they were guests of the American Public Health Association in Cleveland.

The group visited the School of Public Health, Memorial Hospital, and other units of the Division of Health Affairs Thursday morning. They attended seminars and observed laboratories that afternoon. Thursday night they were guests of individual members of the public health faculty.

Yesterday morning they studied field training in public health and attended a seminar on public health education in the afternoon. They were luncheon guests of University administrative officials.

This morning conferences are scheduled on residency training in public health, and this afternoon they will attend a football game.

Dean E. G. McGarvran of the School of Public Health will give a reception at his home tomorrow afternoon for the German doctors and faculty members. That night the group will attend the current show, "Rocket to Mars," in the Morehead Planetarium.

Monday morning the doctors will visit the Durham tobacco market and inspect the cigarette factories and that afternoon they will accompany members of the Health Education Workshop on a field trip. Dr. John Wright of the School of Public Health will entertain them at his home that night.

Seminars on experimental medicine and research and on sanitary - engineering will occupy Tuesday morning's program, and that afternoon Dean McGavran and public health faculty will join in giving the visitors a summary of the work of the School.

Dorms May Gain New Jurisdiction

Men's dormitories soon may have wider jurisdiction over conduct of their residents.

The Interdormitory Council Court in a recent meeting discussed the question of making the dormitories responsible for dorm as a whole. Chairman Dick Gamble appointed a committee to draw up a sample amendment. A committee also was appointed to rewrite the bylaws of the court.

Newman And Kozar Meet At Knoxville

Carolina Frosh Expected To Pass UNC To Victory

By Biff Roberts

DAILY TAR HEEL SPORTS EDITOR

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 31—Carolina's Tar Heels, still wandering in a victory forest of virgin timber, will try to fell their first victim of the season here tomorrow at 2 o'clock when they meet Tennessee at Shields-Watkins Field.

Tabbed 20-point underdogs and already cut down by their first three opponents, the Tar Heels will probably rely on the passing arm of quarterback Marshall Newman to bring them the win—their first in four years over the Volunteers.

Pos.	North Carolina
LE	Kokornick
LT	Opitz
LG	Foti
C	Mullens
RG	Patterson
RT	Yarborough
RE	Walser
QB	Newman
LH	Parker
RH	Port
FB	Wallace

Newman has passed for three of Carolina's touchdowns this year and it was his passing which carried the Carolina offense in last Saturday's loss to Notre Dame, 34-14.

But for Newman to get a chance to throw the ball the Tar Heels will have the heroic task of holding off a strong Tennessee defensive line which has held its opponents to three touchdowns and 20 points in five games.

The Vols defense is led by 237-pound Doug Atkins who has been the chief impediment in the oppositions' offense all season. The line has held the first five teams to a total of 543 yards from scrimmage. The Volunteers, on the other hand, have gained 1263, running from the single-wing attack.

In their first five games the Vols have compiled an impressive record, but two of the games were against schools beneath the Tennessee class.

Tennessee opened the season with a close 14-7 win over Mississippi State. Then, when favored by one touchdown, the Vols lost their only game of the season, 7-0, to Duke at Durham. The next game found them overcoming little Chattanooga, 26-6.

Against Alabama the Vols made probably their best showing of the year by blanking the Crimson Tide, 20-0. It was in this game that sophomore tailback Jimmy Wade returned to the lineup after an injury and sparked the Tennessee offense out of its lethargy.

Since that game Wade has been the key to the offense and, although he didn't play in much of last week's slaughter of Wofford, 50-0, Coach Bob Neyland will count on him to keep the offense going today.

The Tennessee backfield is no different from the usual powerful Neyland teams. With Wade at halfback and Andy Kozar at fullback, Coach Neyland has an inside-outside combination that will be hard to stop.

Trip Abroad Will Be Topic Of Two Profs

James Godfrey and Arthur Fink, UNC faculty members who studied and did research work in England this year, will talk on "England Today" at a meeting of the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors at 7:30 next Thursday evening in the Faculty Lounge of Graham Memorial.

Godfrey, whose topic will be "The Labor Government and the Nationalized Industries," was awarded the president's fellowship from Brown University and spent almost a year doing research work in London. He also traveled in other parts of England for six or seven weeks.

Fink went to England on a Fulbright Fellowship and taught social work at the University of Birmingham from September of 1951 and also studied the social service of the labor government. His topic for Thursday is "The Educational, Health, and Social Services."

Honor Councils

The Bi-Partisan Selection Board will meet Monday night at 7:30 to select candidates to run in the fall elections for Men's and Women's Counicls.

The board will meet in the Men's Council room in Graham Memorial to choose the three junior seats on Women's Council and two junior, one sophomore, one freshman and one graduate seat on Men's Council.

NEWS IN BRIEF

COLUMBUS, Ohio—More than 1,200 convicts at state prison, apparently spurred by Illinois felons, made this correctional institution a mass of flame last night by setting fire to virtually every building within the prison walls. Only one guard was reported held hostage, however, and no deaths were reported. The warden said the prisoners were "completely out of our control." The guards have orders to fire with machine-guns if necessary, the warden added.

CHESTER, Ill.—Unruly convicts ended their four-day rebellion at Menard State Prison yesterday and released their seven hostages before Gov. Adlai Stevenson carried out plans for making a personal appeal to them. The convicts capitulated after an ultimatum was delivered by Michael Seyfrit, state director of public safety.

India To Undergo Vast Change In Next 5 Years, Says Student

By Tom Parramore

"I can assure you that in the next five years, India will be a very different country from that of the past."

This is the optimistic outlook of Dr. B. A. Sreenivasa Iyangar, one of the four speakers at Thursday night's YMCA Supper Forum. Dr. Iyanger's principle topic was "Public Health in India," which he approached by giving a summary of the main steps taken toward a public health program since 1859. Well qualified to talk on this subject, Dr. Iyanger is in charge of the public health department of the state of Mysore, India.

According to Dr. Iyanger, the killers of the past, malaria and plague, are coming under control. "The present state of public health in India is not as bad as some people believe," he said.

Other speakers on the program were Abdul Raszak Adamjee of Pakistan, and K. V. Ramachandran and K. C. Sreedharan, both of India. The group concerned itself chiefly with social and economic conditions in the countries, but also commented on many physical and spiritual aspects.

Adamjee spoke on Pakistan's present economic situation. "The occupation of the people is mostly agricultural," he said. Pakistan's chief exports, according to Adamjee, are jute, cotton, hides and skins. Most of

The Riddle Of Democracy

The Greeks had a word for it. Our forefathers found a use for it. The Russians have no use for it. And so many Americans have no time for it.

Every American is a stockholder in a tremendous corporation called Democracy. His vote is his share in the American way of life which pays dividends of freedom and the rights of the individual.

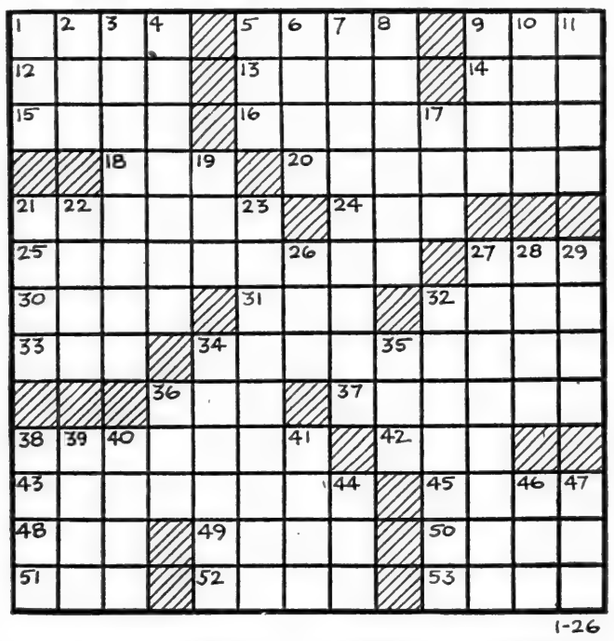
Each stockholder must take stock of the corporation's position and exercise his responsibility to protect his most valuable investment. And Democracy can make no allowances for risk.

The ballot well-used is one of the most powerful weapons of peace and self-rule in the world. On the other hand, a ballot misused or unused can be as disastrous as a fourth quarter fumble. Don't drop the ballot and expect a teammate to carry on for you. Every single member of this team has got to get on the ball and play his part.

When you put an X in the square, you're helping to cross out the possibility of an ex-Democratic nation. Don't give the Russians a red letter day by failing to write down your choice next Tuesday.

We'd like to see more than 50 per cent of the population at the polls next week. It only takes a few minutes to insure years of time that we can use as we see fit.

VOTE TODAY SO THAT YOU CAN BE SURE OF A VOTE TOMORROW.



DON'T BE REMOTE WITH YOUR VOTE

Vanishing . . .

We pointed out in The Daily Tar Heel earlier in the fall that the organization of SUAB was an indication of vanishing student "apathy." The cooperation of the students with the leaders of that organization is an even stronger indication.

Tuesday night in Graham Memorial John Sanders, President of the Young Democrats, and Ham Horton, representing the Students for Eisenhower, started the ball rolling for a YWCA sponsored round-table discussion of the forthcoming national election. Both speakers asserted their viewpoints and then questions were fired from the participants (approximately 50 students). The discussion on the whole proved valuable and what is more important, indicative of the fact that there are SOME students who feel keenly their responsibilities as voters.

We consider the interest shown in the discussion another indication of vanishing "student apathy" and encourage more and more of the same.

Tommy Sumner — VITRIOL

I like almost everybody; Ike, and myself too.

I intend to vote for Ike in the full knowledge that under the present block voting system of the electoral college my vote will probably be ignored. Republicans are in a minority in North Carolina and it is only through the action of those Democrats who vote for men and ideas rather than labels that our state will vote for Eisenhower.

Eisenhower has qualifications for the job which Stevenson cannot approach. It is Eisenhower, not Stevenson, who has spent months in contact with our allies in Europe coming to know the situation and conflicts there first hand.

It is he who has the military knowledge to meet the situation of Korea.

It is he who has the intimate acquaintance with the needs of the Armed Services necessary to cope with the staggering problem of balancing economy with security in this, the most expensive of the activities of the federal government.

It is he who is known and respected by our allies and known and feared by our enemies.

I like Ike, the No Deal Candidate.

I don't like Wayne Morse who deserted the party because he couldn't run the show.

I don't like Joe McCarthy who has been so careless with his privileges; however it is up to the people whom he represents to decide whether he shall continue to represent them. Certainly he is no worse than the two Talmadges of Georgia or a certain former senator from Missouri.

I don't like secret treaties or "agreements" which are kept secret for the security of the Democratic Party instead of the security of the nation, but which place the nation in peril.

I don't like the continual synthesis of international crises to provide excuses to keep the party in power, raise taxes, deliver ever increasing power into the hands of the president, and to enlarge the Federal payroll to make more people economically dependent on keeping the Democrats in power.

I don't like the foreign service gravy train being built up and removed from Civil Service.

I don't like an administration which not only fails to clean out corruption but deliberately shields it from investigation.

I don't like a party ignoring the clear preference for Estes Kefauver on the part of the people and nominating the candidate of the bosses.

I don't like a foreign policy which decides to give up Korea to Communism and later reverses itself in order to fight a war. I find this especially distasteful when it is done in order to provide an inflationary substitute for prosperity. I don't like the Defense Bonds I bought being worth fifty cents on the dollar.

A democracy is government controlled by the people.

A republic is democracy controlled by the people through their duly selected representatives.

I like democracy, I like this republic; I don't like the totalitarianism that another twenty years of "Trumanism" will bring. The Constitution is no protection then; it will be replaced by the exercise of "Inherent Powers."

"Naughty Naughty"

Drew Pearson — The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON—During the latter years of his life, Sen. Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan, Republican, was troubled with severe headaches from the brain tumor which eventually brought his death.

Dropping in to see him late one afternoon, it was obvious Vandenberg was not feeling well and I remarked on it. He replied.

"These headaches aren't half as bad as those given me by some of my Republican colleagues in the Senate."

Vandenberg was then in the middle of his fight to put across appropriations for the Marshall plan, and went on to explain that almost every night Republican isolationist Senators were meeting privately to hatch their strategy against him. These Senators he named as Jenner of Indiana, Kem of Missouri, Watkins of Utah, McCarthy of Wisconsin, Ecton of Montana, Cain of Washington, and Bricker of Ohio.

Vandenberg, who was cooperating with the Democrats on foreign policy in the same way I described earlier Republican Secretaries of State Frank B. Kellogg and Henry L. Stimson as cooperating with Democratic Senators, finally won the Marshall Plan battle.

And in recognition of that service, Vandenberg's close friend, Paul Hoffman, a Republican and then head of Studebaker, was made top Marshall Plan administrator. It was a wise choice.

No factor played a greater part in stopping the march of Communism in Western Europe that the Marshall Plan. And I can say this as one who has been to Europe many times before and since the Marshall Plan, who helped end the paralyzing shipping strike at Le Havre with a load of friendship train food in the dark winter of 1947, who toured through railroad stations pockmarked with bullets from Communist rioting, and paraded through streets carrying American food before crowds which only a short time before had cheered the Communists.

For this stopping of Communism, Vandenberg, Hoffman, and the authors of the Marshall Plan deserve great credit.

Paul Hoffman left the Marshall Plan to join the Ford Foundation and to head up the Citizens for Eisenhower Committee. Believing that Eisenhower presented the best chance of retaining an even-keeled, nonpartisan foreign policy, Hoffman was instrumental in getting the General nominated.

Since then, and since Eisenhower has embraced those same Senators who caused Vandenberg headaches, Hoffman has been strangely silent.

So also has Gen. Omar Bradley, who stormed the Normandy beachheads and, along with General Patton, bore the brunt of the advance through France and Germany. Once strong for Ike, Bradley has changed his mind.

Eisenhower, of course, is taking a calculated risk. He is risking a savage partisan attack on foreign policy, both in Korea, and Europe, on the theory that after he wins he can crack the whip over the isolationist Senators of his own party and keep them in line.

This will probably work for the first two years. But after the patronage runs out, after the jobs are filled, then the Maverick isolationists of the GOP will be just as difficult for Eisenhower as they were for Vandenberg.

By and large history has shown, as Frank B. Kellogg and Henry L. Stimson so well knew, that Republican Presidents get better cooperation from Democratic Senators than they get from their own party.

When General Eisenhower first decided to invade the South, GOP Chairman Summerfield cautioned: "The only time to go south is in the winter."

A secret Republican poll now indicates that Summerfield was right. It states: "It is now doubtful whether General Eisenhower will be able to carry more than two states in the South . . . best information available shows that Eisenhower's popularity reached its highest during the period Oct. 1-15."

The two Southern states are Florida and Virgina. In Florida, the GOP poll as of Oct. 22 showed Ike 50 per cent; Stevenson 45 per cent; 5 per cent undecided.

The Virginia GOP poll showed Ike 48 per ent, Stevenson 46 per cent, 6 per cent undecided.

Anti-Dewey sentiment is still so strong inside the GOP that when Ike's train approached Rochester, N. Y., a GOP dele-

Edgar Daniels — Pink Circus

"The Pink Circus," by Gonzalo Estrada, the first full length student production of the current Carolina Playmakers' season, opened Thursday night for a two day run. The near capacity audience was literally slapped in the face by the intensity of this drama.

In a story of a young boy's realizations that all is not a bed of roses on the home front Mr. Estrada has woven reality and dreams into a conglamaration of lust and pathos. The leading character, a boy of seventeen, is exposed to more in his few years than are most people in a lifetime. His emotional turmoils and Freudian dreams are brought home to the audience, not necessarily by the production, but by the lines themselves. In a piece that bears a great similarity to the style of John Steinbeck, the author presents a graphic description of incest, abortion and matricide, which goes far below the bounds of good taste.

The production as a whole is by far the finest student production that this reviewer has ever seen the Playmakers present. Although a bit heavy-handed with the dramatic, Director John Clayton left little to be asked for. Dick Epler's setting was one of the best this reviewer has seen on the Playmakers' stage. It was a pleasure to see that full length student productions are no longer treated technically like orphan children.

For the most part nothing really adverse need be said about the acting in "Pink Circus." Hal England, as the young boy Jimmie, gave one good performance of which he has a right to be truly proud. He was never off stage for more than a few seconds throughout the entire evening. England seemed to be an honest actor in that he appeared to be completely wrapped up in his character, and he gave the right note of sincerity that made this play at all believable.

Some of the highest laurels of the evening go to Bill Waddell, as Bush; Nancy Green, Florencia, the mother, and Jane Kottmeier, as the seductress.

Waddell's moving portrayal of Jimmie's best friend helped to carry the play through scenes that almost bordered on tedium. Miss Green, well remembered for her comic role in last year's production of "Spring for Sure," proved herself one of the most versatile actresses that the Playmakers have today. She was absolutely convincing as the main cause of her son's worry. One could almost feel the weight of her sins across the footlights. Jane Kottmeier gave one of the most surprisingly good performances of the entire production. Her excellent stage presence made it possible for her to have complete control of the stage the entire time she was on. Her part was not an easy one to play, but she got as much out of it as the traffic would allow. As Uncle Carlos, Florencia's lover, Manly Wellman was very disappointing. He shouted his lines and never seemed to get off more than one emotional level.

None of the characters that were supposed to be Mexican gave that impression at all.

W&M Snaps Junior Varsity's Winning Streak, 14-6

Ernie Liberati Scores Only UNC Points

By Melvin Lang

Carolina's junior varsity ran up against a stone wall whenever they got out of their own territory yesterday as the Tar Babies lost their first game in the last two seasons of play, dropping a 14-6 contest to a hard-running aggregation from William and Mary.

The Tar Heel junior varsity amassed a total of 297 yards during the afternoon, but were unable to get past the Indians until late in the fourth period when Ernie Liberati sneaked over from the one after a pass interference had been called on the visitors.

William and Mary took the lead in the rugged contest midway of the first period. The Tribe's defensive end, Klecha, blocked and attempted punt by Barry Pruss on Carolina's 15 yard line and ran it over for the touchdown. Lutz kicked the conversion, putting the Virginian's ahead by 7-0.

The winners marched 80 yards early in the second quarter to chalk up their second score, with a litle quarterback by the name of Grieco carrying the brunt of the attack. Grieco either passed or ran with the ball on seven of the 10 plays which it took for William and Mary to get down to the Carolina 18. On first down, Watson went off left tackle for 18 yards and the winning touchdown. Lutz again kicked the extra point.

Carolina threatened for the first time midway of the first period as it moved from its own 20 to William and Mary's 12 before losing the ball on downs. The Tar Babies were knocking again early in the fourth quarter, but lost out as Bob Lee dropped a fourth down pass from Liberati.

Going into the game with a three-game winning streak under their belts, the Tar Babies did not show any scoring punch at all until they finally succeeded in making their lone score. Charlie Poindexter started the scoring march by going to his own 48 after Stan Porginski had returned a punt 12 yards to the 42.

Ed Loughlin, who alternated with Liberati at the Carolina quarterback post, came into the lineup to toss a long pass to Van Weatherspoon which was good for 40 yards down to the William and Mary 12 yard marker. Vince Murray carried it to the nine, and Liberati proceeded to carry it down to the three. Grieco was called for interference as he held Weatherspoon in the end zone, giving the ball to Carolina on the one. Liberati carried it over from there. Poindexter's kick was short.

Vince Murray picked up most of the slack created by the departure of Flo Worrell and Billy Hawkes, the club's leading scorers who joined the varsity this week, and led the Tar Babies in their running attack.

Parker Starts At Halfback In Place Of Injured White In UNC Backfield

time he gets his hands on the ball.

The Carolina team, in addition to hinging its success on Newman's passes, may also call on the pitchout play to score on the Volunteers. The play hadn't been used to any great extent until last week's game with Notre Dame, but when it was used then, the Tar Heels did what little ground gaining of the game that they did.

With regular starter Bob White missing from the left halfback post because of a cracked cheek bone, suffered against the Fighting Irish, Coach Carl Snavely will have sophomore Larry Parker starting today.

Parker has the speed for the pitchouts and may be the solution to the problem of Carolina's split-T offense.

The rest of the backfield will be the same as has started in the other three games. Newman will be at quarterback, Bud Wallace at full, and Chal Port at right half. Parker had the best Carolina run of the day against Notre Dame with a 34-yard jaunt on a pitchout.

The Tar Heel defensive line will again be one of Coach Snavely's main hopes for victory. It held the Fighting Irish to a 14-7 halftime score before running out of gas last weekend, and after the Wake Forest game had ranked second in the Southern Conference.

Tennessee has also passed for three touchdowns but the completion average of its three passers is not impressive. Pat Shires, who played the halfback while Wade was out, has passed the most and has but a 31.7 completion average.

Wade has completed three out of nine while John Oleksiak leads the trio with six out of 16 for a 37.5 average.

If Carolina loses the handle on the ball as many times as it did against Wake Forest then the Tar Heels will be in for a rough day of it against the alert Volunteers. Tennessee has recovered 12 of its opponents fumbles this season.

The Carolina team held a brief workout yesterday in Shields-Watkins Field with the players working on passing plays in their sweat suits.

Tickets still remained for the contest before game time but Tennessee officials expected a good crowd of some 37,000 for the annual affair.

Following their Homecoming Day Game with N. C. State here Saturday, Wake Forest's Deacons will invade Texas for the second time this season. The Deacons will fly down to Fort Worth to play TCU, the defending Southwest Conference champion. The game will be played on Saturday, November 8.

Georgia Tech Meets Duke In Biggest Game Of South

By Vardy Buckalew

The big game in the South this week will be played in Durham today when the unbeaten forces of Duke and Georgia Tech collide in a game between two national football powers.

Tech will bring a string of 20 straight games without a defeat to the natural bowl on the Duke campus and the Engineers will be remembering the game last year when the Blue Devils upset the predictions and held them to a 14-14 tie.

Both teams have impressive records this year and Duke is fresh from a victory over previously unbeaten Virginia last week. They would like to make it two in a row over unbeaten teams.

Georgia Tech played Vanderbilt last week but hardly got warmed up while beating them 33-0.

Both teams are well balanced which is manifested by the fact that both are in the top 10 in defense in the nation, and although their offenses don't rank too high nationally, they are both known to be very good.

As in the past all of Duke's offensive hopes will be placed on quarterback Worth (A Million) Lutz, sophomore from Durham. Lutz has been the whole show for Duke so far in every game this year and the Blue Devils hope that today will be no exception.

Last week he passed for one touchdown, scored another, and got off on one of the longest runs of the afternoon, 49 yards. All told this season, he has completed 23 passes in 44 attempts.

The remainder of the Duke backfield is made up of such hard runners as Piney Field, Red Smith, and Jack Kistler, and they are expected to give Tech a rough time. Kistler will be seeing action in his first game for some time. He has been out with a leg injury and before being hurt he was the Devil's best ground gainer.

The Engineers, who have been the leading team in the tough Southeastern Conference for the past two years, will be piloted by their quarterback Bill Brigman. However, the big show for Tech offensively is their halfback Leon Hardeman, who is one of the best running backs in the country. He was outstanding in last week's defeat of Vanderbilt.

Georgia Tech was rated fourth by the newspaper polls last week while Duke was ranked in the sixth spot nationally. In statistics, the Tech defense is rated number one, with Duke being in fourth place. It could easily turn out to be a battle of the defenses.

Pre-game speculation has it that Georgia Tech is a one point favorite although many experts rate it a toss-up.

Should Tech get past this game, there is talk of a bid to the Sugar Bowl. Since the Blue Devils are unable to participate in post-season games due to a conference ruling, the pressure will be all on Tech in that respect.

Hopkins, Russell, Randolph Star In Fourth Straight Win

By Jim Wiles

Carolina's Booters took advantage of most of their breaks yesterday to defeat the Cherry Point Marine soccer team, 3-0, and rack up their fourth consecutive victory of the current campaign.

The Tar Heels, on defense throughout most of the first half, were in control of the ball on few occasions, as compared to the older, more experienced Marine outfit. However, the Marines left their half of the field unprotected frequently, and the fine teamwork of Renny Randolph, Tommy Hopkins, and Jerry Russell, backed by the superb relays of the halfbacks and wings, paid off in the form of three scores for the UNC team.

The first quarter went scoreless as the Marines dominated offensive play. Eddie Santos, Bud Zeitler and Phil Ozasky were the demons of Cherry Point's attempt for a goal, but were stopped when nearing the goal by swarms of Carolina defenders.

The locals' first score came midway of the second quarter as center Russell took a shot from about fifteen feet out and split the cage with a looping boot. The half ended after various exchanges between the two clubs.

Hopkins gave Carolina its second point late in the third frame and put the Tar Heels within breathing distance of victory.

On a beautiful play midway of the last period, Randolph took a relay from Russell and sent a drive squarely through the goal for the clincher.

A tired, but determined, Marine team tried desperately to pull the game out of the bag in the late stages but petered out against the freely substituting and fresh Carolina squad.

In post-game coment, Coach Al Moore said, "This was the finest team we've played all year, but we didn't play our best game by any means."

The Tar Heels' record now stand at 4-1, including victories over University of Virginia, Roanoke College, and Washington and Lee. Their lone loss was at the hands of the N. C. State in the season opener.

An interesting sidelight to the game was the serving of refreshments at halftime by the Carolina managers. Oranges, that were supposed to be eaten by the players of both squads, wound up in the stomachs of the more than ten spectators.

The Marine roster included many former college and professional performers. Ozasky had seen previous action with a team from the Argentine.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 31—Louis Leonard Gluckfield, University of Maryland student who offered three Maryland players bribes totaling $1,500 to hold the point spread in check in the LSU game, will fight extradition from Washington to Maryland for the trial.

Glickfield was described by his attorney as "completely innocent", and was awarded a three-week delay in court proceedings.

End Bob Ondilla is in the thick of the running for pass receiving honors in the Southern Conference this season. Ondilla has caught 15 aerials for a total gain of 189 yards. Ondilla and his Wake Forest teammates will play host to N. C. State here Saturday in the feature of Homecoming Day.

Wake Forest's football team has averaged 2.8 yards per rush this fall. The Deacons have gained a total of 647 yards on the ground in 235 plays. Wake Forest and N. C. State play here at 2 o'clock Saturday for the 46th time.

Sun Goes Down Like Red Ball; Carnival Atmosphere Prevails

The sun went down behind the trees like a cold, red ball. The air tingled with frost and smelled of pungent, autumn smoke. Down at the edge of the woods behind Woollen Gym, more than 300 people warmly dressed and gay in spirit, assembled under a pumpkin-colored moon, already risen above the pines. The clock in the bell tower struck six against the darkening sky, and from somewhere came the aroma of something good to eat.

This was the big barbecue, staged as a special event by the School of Education Thursday evening to promote closer ties of fellowship between students and faculty. Part of the carnival atmosphere had been compromised by a last-minue change of plans by the committee, who had sniffed the late-October air and decided to move the festivities indoors to the gymnasium basement. Despite this concession to more civilized procedures, the barbecue developed into a most successful party, and probably a more comfortable one. Textbooks and studies were temporarily abandoned as undergraduates, graduates, faculty members, and wives and families, converged upon the scene, drawn by the delicious scents of barbecued pork and hush-puppies.

The committee in charge of entertainment went to work right after the last diners had had their fill at the long tables. Art Weiner, of the Physical Education department, served as master of ceremonies. There was a minimum of serious business. Both Art and Jules Medwin, who followed him, rocked the crowded room with jokes. This was topped immediately by a skit performed by Professors Gwynn, Plemmons, Peacock and Jamerson, under the direction of Medwin who produced four fetching ladies' hats as props.

Came next a slightly more serious note when a quartet of faculty men arose to render nostalgic barbershop harmony. The event was fraught with confusion when it was discovered that one of their baritones had left town; nevertheless, Professors Hurlburt, Tarbet and Parker, vowing later vengance upon the departed member, carried on a very commendable performance, with each man carrying one and one third parts of the four-part harmony.

The most outstanding visitors at the affair were the 17 German school teachers, now at the University as observers. Called upon by Weiner to perform some of their favorite native ballads, this group of young men and women from the continent thrilled the gathering with several songs done in the incomparable German style.

The mood of the evening having swung from laughter to music, Miss Gay Hogan then took over to lead the crowd in group singing, which was the last event of the evening.

Other get-togethers of faculty and students are anticipated as a result of the success of the barbecue, according to Mrs. Maude Hollingsworth, chairman of the Faculty Student Activity Committee. Working with Mrs. Hollingsworth on this committee were Profs. W. H. Plemmons, S. M. Holton, W. W. Rabb, Doris Hutchinson, Martha Morgan, J. R. Skretting, and Donald Tarbet. Prof. Walter Rabb was in charge of food arrangements.

Education department students who worked to make the affair a success were Peggy Sears, Celia Lively, Chalmers Port, Margaret Dickinson, Art Weiner, Walter Hooper, Pat Cahoon, Jules Medwin, Herb Dowd, Ike Carr, and Bill Lahr.

AKPsi's Name Pledge Officers

Lewis Mack, a business economics junior from Mooresville, has been elected president of Alpha Kappa Psi's 1952 pledge class. Other officers chosen by the professional business administration fraternity were James (Slug) Claiborne of Charlotte, vice-president, and Robert Bruton of Asheville, secretary-treasurer.

They will head a pledge class of 19 students and three faculty members, the largest pledge classes in the recent history of the chapter.

The local chapter also announced plans for a formal banquet-dance to be held Friday night at the Chapel Hill Country Club where the pledges will be guest of honor.

Speaker for the banquet will be Carl G. McGraw, president of the Union Bank of Charlotte and an honorary member of the fraternity.

Commenting on education in Pakistan, Adamjee said there are now numerous colleges and five universities in his country, although there is still only 14 per cent literacy there. Cricket and soccer are the national sports of this nation of 76 million inhabitants, he added.

Sreedharan told of India's social revolution which has resulted in the abolishment of the old caste system. Child marriage, once common in India, has now been outlawed, he said. "The social problems which are facing us today are almost solved."

Family life of India was discussed by Ramashandran, who said "our family is not a bundle of isolationists, it is a close group." The woman is the "queen bee" of this family group. "The woman of India is not a very timid girl," he explained, and then told of how the women had actually taken up arms in the past against India's enemies and fought them on the field of battle.

India's worst problems, he continued, have come since the achieving of independence. India's provinces were ruled by maharajas at this time, who sometimes took half of the income of a province for their own personal use. After independence, explained Ramashandran, much power was taken from them so that they are now more like governors.

Some interesting statistics given by Rasmashandran placed India's population at 367 millions, of which 20 per cent were literate. India has 11 languages and 200 dialects.

CAROLINA CAROUSEL

By Deenie Schoeppe

Can't unedrstand it. Must be that everyone's saving up the parties for next weekend and it ought to be a big 'un.

Oh yes. Happy Hallowe'en. We are having all kinds of Hallowe'en parties. Pi Kappa Phi's will have one at their house tonight as will the Theta Chi's.

Zete Swain Stevenson of Halifax has just pinned Mary Jo Suiter of Roanoke Rapids.

While we're talking about Zete's, the ADPi's at Dook entertained Zeta Psi's Wednesday night over there.

Latest pinning is that of coed Marcia Zachary, Salisbury, to Lambda Chi John Rendleman, also of Salisbury.

Alpha Gam pledge Joan Mathis has just become engaged to Claude Kennedy of Carthage, also her hometown.

Chi O's had dinner and a Hallowe'en party at the Legion Hut in honor of their pledges last night.

Tri Delt pledges had the first sorority pledge party of the season Wednesday and all other pledges (sorority, that is) were invited.

And the SAE's are having a party for the Tri Delts Tuesday at the Carolina club following dinner at the house.

Lambda Chi's will have a cabin party tomorrow with the Duke chapter to celebrate their Homecoming.

With politics as the theme, the KA's will have a party for the KD's Wednesday nite.

What mad romantic things the people on this campus think up to do. St. A's are having a coon hunt tonite for real. Something happened to the last one and it kind of fell through.

Deke's, pledges and dates had themselves a buffet supper and party Tuesday night at the Carolina club.

Chi O Carmen Oastler, Atlanta, is now wearing a beautiful diamond given to her by Dan Allison, Phi Delt from Sylva. They are to be married next summer.

Tri Delts will honor their visiting district president, Mrs. Trammell Smith, Newton, and their national director, Mrs. W. P. Richardson, Chapel Hill, with a banquet Thursday evening at the Carolina Inn.

Pat Bohnenkamp, St. Louis, Mo., is the newly elected president of the ADPi pledge class. Other pledge officers include Alice Chapman, Welch, W. Va., Secretary-treasurer and Lynda Vestal, Liberty, N. C., social chairman. The pledges will be honored tomorrow with a coffee at the ADPi house from 4 to 6.

Kappa Delta's will also give a tea in honor of their pledges tomorrow.

Kappa Psi Tom Curtis, Waynesville, has pinned Marian Lewis, a Chapel Hill gal.

The campus ought to be full of Tech and Emory students this weekend due to the Tech game in Durham. Chi Phi's are expecting lots of their brothers from down that way.

Beta's from Duke and Tech will be here to party with the local troops for the weekend too.

Can't accuse the Pi Lams of ever missing an opportunity for a party. Part of the chapter has gone to Tennessee and partied in Asheville on the way last night and will party there again tonight. Those who didn't make it to the game will have a party at Louis Bates' house in Greensboro tonight.

Sigma Chi's from Duke and Carolina will have a party at the Legion Hut after the Duke game today.

Thursday the Sigma Chi's will entertain the Chi O's.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Joan Katz, New York City, to TEP Rick Levy of Jamaica, N. Y.

AKPsi's entertained their executive secretary-treasurer Wednesday with a party given at the home of one of the brothers.

An election party will be given by the AKPsi's Tuesday nite. Think there'll be a few more of these given too.

Beat Tennessee, happy birthday Barbara Reed, and everybody come to the ZBT cocktail party after the Virginia game. With that we leave you.

Psi Chi Fraternity To Sponsor Lecture

"Factors in Total Adaptation" is the topic to be discussed Wednesday by Dr. George C. Ham, Chairman of the Psychiatry Department of the UNC Med School.

Sponsored by Psi Chi, national psychology honorary, and the Psychology Department, the talk will be given in New West Building at 7:30.

Before coming to UNC, Dr. Ham was Research Associate in the Division of Neuropsychiatry at Michael Reese Hospital and a Clinical Research Fellow at the Institute of Psychoanalysis in Chicago.

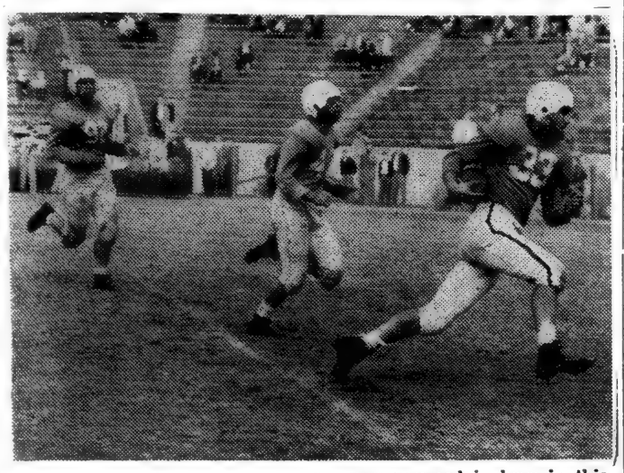
It's going to be possible for you to vote twice for your choice for president. And legally, too.

[illegible]election will be Tuesday when the nation goes to the polls; the other opportunity comes tomorrow when the campus will mark its man in a straw vote conducted by the Y.

The qualifications for tomorrow's mock ballot are somewhat less rigorous than those for the real presidential election. For the local balloting you need only present your ID card. No poll tax, no age 21, no voter registration—no nothing.



Results of the campus concensus will be announced Tuesday.

The Campus and Public Affairs Committees of the YWCA are sponsoring the straw ballot. Voting booths will be set up in the Y Lobby from 8 o'clock in the morning until 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Faculty members as well as students are asked to express their opinions with an x.

A number of colleges and schools of higher education elsewhere in the state already have held campus preferential votes. Usually, Eisenhower has led, but in most cases by only a small majority.

The most recent collegiate expression was released yesterday by students at Guilford College in Greensboro. The Guilford students cast 328 votes with Ike taking 184 of them. Stevenson's share amounted to 131 while 13 students said they were undecided.

In contrast to the student vote, 12 faculty members who attended the voting meeting gave their majority to Gov. Stevenson. Seven went for the Democratic candidate and five went for the general.

[illegible] gets hemmed in here in this first quarter play as he makes a short gain to his own 48-yard line. The tackler is unidentified. Closing in on the play are Tennessee's Ed Fisher (43), Andy Myers (57), and Joe Maiure (17), with the Tar Heel's Ken Yarborough (76), coming up to offer assistance.

Nomination Of Editor Tops SP Slate Monday

The Student Party will meet tomorrow night at 7:30 to complete fall elections nominations, including a candidate for editor of THE DAILY TAR HEEL.

Party officials called attention to the earlier meeting time and said it moved up because of the large number of nominations to be made and other wofk to be done. The meeting will be held in the Roland Parker Lounges of Graham Memorial.

Little contest seems likely for the job of DAILY TAR HEEL editor. Walt Dear, chairman of the Publications Board and summer TAR HEEL editor, has been mentioned by prominent SP members and he probably will get the party nomination without a fight.

The University Party will meet Tuesday night. Their editor's nomination is expected to go to Biff Roberts, former UP chairman and now DAILY TAR HEEL sports editor.

An editor is being chosen for the campus daily newspaper because Editor Barry Farber was drafted. Farber was elected last spring for a term of one year. Since he left two weeks ago, Farber's job has been run by an editorial board of Bev Baylor and Sue Burress, headed by Managing Editor Rolfe Neill.

Other nominations to be made by the SP tomorrow include Legislature seats in Dorm Men's 4 and 5 and Town Men's 1, 2 and 3; Freshman Class officers with the exception of president; Student Council and Legislature seats in Town Women's District.

Ike-A-Thon Set Tonight At 11

Today is the day for the Ike-a-Thon.

From 11 p.m. until 1 a.m., on television and radio, prominent supporters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will answer any question phoned in to them from throughout the state. The broadcasts, scheduled to be carried over most of the state's radio stations, will cost $6,000.

Professional entertainers will fill in between the question and answer periods.

Honor Councils

The Bi-Partisan Selection Board will meet tomorrow night at 7:30 to select candidates to run in the fall elections, Nov. 18, for Men's and Women's Councils.

The board will meet in the Men's Council room in Graham Memorial to choose the three junior seats on Women's Council and two junior, one sophomore, one freshman and one graduate seat on Men's Council.

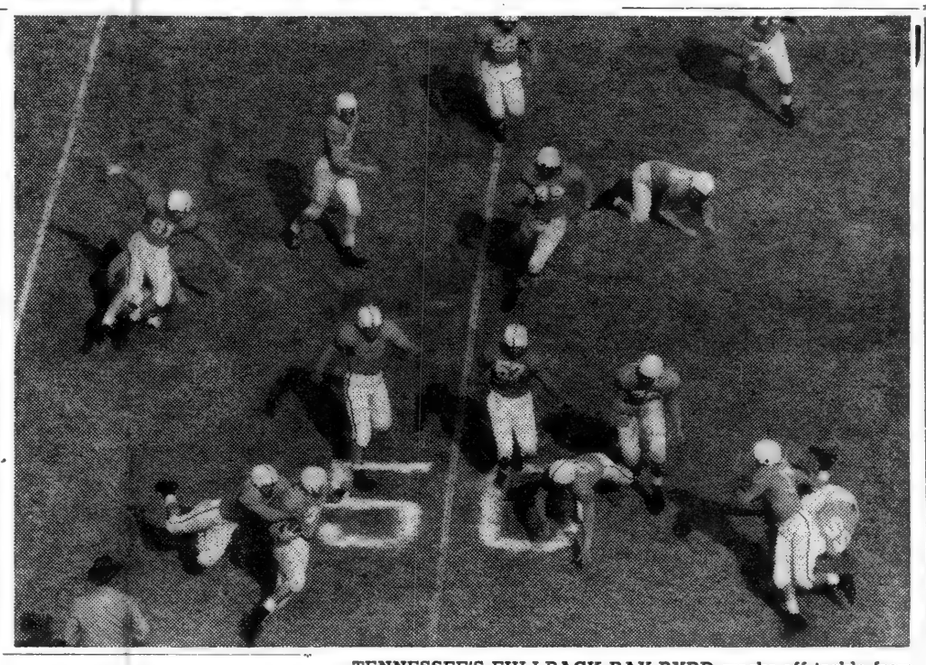
Youth Tops Person Hall Art Exhibit

Important trends in contemporary American painting, as revealed in the work of younger artists, can be seen in the exhibition, "Young Painters, U.S.A." in Person Hall.

The exhibit will continue through November 25. Hours are from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on week days and from 2 to 5 p.m. Sundays.

This collection, which is traveling on a national circuit under auspices of the American Federation of Arts, was selected from the original exhibition organized for the World Assembly of Youth, held at Cornell University last year. The traveling show of 30 paintings comprises more than three-fifths of the original display of 48. None of the artists is older than 36, many in their twenties.

Eugene Victor Thau and Jack Landau of the New Gallery, New York City, who selected and organized the exhibition, said of it in part, "Young Painters, U.S.A." is an attempt to show the World Assembly of Youth the level of achievement and the range of activity of United States artists of their own generation.



The paintings, ranging from symbolic realism to non-objectivity, should stand separately as personal statements by individual artists who work in many styles, derived from various sources.

YMCA Finance Drive To Begin Tomorrow

The YMCA will kick off its annual finance campaign among faculty members tomorrow night at 5:45 with a dinner for some 80 workers in Lenoir Hall.

The campaign will run tomorrow through Thursday and be conducted by a staff of 60 students and 20 faculty members. Clinton Lindley, Y treasurer, heads the drive. Student contributions were made earlier in the fall.

Dr. Frank Graham, former UNC president and secretary of the YMCA here, will be guest of honor at Monday night's dinner.

TENNESSEE'S FULLBACK RAY BYRD cracks off tackle from the Carolina 25-yard line to score the Volunteer's final touchdown in the 41-14 rout of Carolina. Chasing him for the Tar Heels are Paul Hursh (92) and safetyman Sonny Ridenhour (48).

500 Scouts To Be Here

Approximately 500 Explorer Scouts from throughout the State will assemble here Thursday for their second annual three-day Vocational Conference.

Dr. I. G. Greer, executive vice-president, North Carolina Business Foundation, will extend the University's welcome on Thursday afternoon.

That night facilities of the University's Testing Service to aid the Scouts in determining the field of endeavor for which they are best suited will be available. Friday morning there will be lecture-demonstrations by authorities in a number of fields, ranging from agriculture to medicine.

The Scouts will pitch tents on Emerson Field and take their meals in adjoining Lenoir Hall. Friday night they will join University students in a pre-game pep rally in Memorial Hall in preparation for the Carolina-Virginia game Saturday.

Dr. Stern To Lecture Tomorrow Night At 8

Dr. Curt Stern of the University of California will present a lecture at a joint meeting of the North Carolina and Duke chapters of the Society of Sigma Xi, honorary scientific research society tomorrow at 8 o'clock in Venable Hall.

Dr. Stern's lecture, "Two or Three Bristles, or the Gene in Development," will be concerned with the problem of why the cells of an embryo develop into different tissues and organs instead of forming a mass of identical cells.

South Needs To Improve In Education

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

WILSON, Nov. 1—Dr. Edgar W. Knight of the University of North Carolina said here today that many important educational trails led eventually back to the South where educational interests and efforts before 1860 compared favorably with and in some respects excelled those in other parts of the United States.

"But," he added, "the primary need in this region today is improvement in the quality of our educational work.

"With proper attention to that need we can have in the South an educational awakening such as no section of the United States has ever witnessed," he asserted.

Speaking in Wilson at the regional meeting of Delta Kappa Gamma, an honorary teachers' society, Dr. Knight, long-time student of American history an author of many books on the subject, including a five-volume documentary history of education in the South, published by the University of North Carolina Press, said:

"Historically viewed, the Southern states are in many important respects richer in sound educational ideals and traditions than any other part of the country and those ideals and traditions reach back to the earliest history of this country and are a record in which any people can take pride."

He said that it was in the South that the "first higher educational efforts in English North America were made and here was established more than three centuries ago the first educational endowment in what is now the United States, which is still active in Virginia.

"In this region was produced Thomas Jefferson, America's greatest educational statesman and philosopher. The American state university had its origin in the South and here was established what is believed to be the first degree-granting higher educational institution for women. Few educational subjects claimed wider attention from leaders in the antebellum South than the proper education of women and some of the most energetic advocates of

Two Newman Passes Score For Carolina

Mistakes, Fumbles Give Tennessee Four Touchdowns

By Biff Roberts
DAILY TAR HEEL Sports Editor

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 1—A packed jury of Tennessee Volunteers deliberated only 60 minutes here this afternoon before adjudging Carolina's Tar Heels four-time losers. The sentence was 41-14.

It was a case of the Tar Heels making too many mistakes—four too many, to be exact—and the Volunteers lived up to reputation of capitalizing on others' errors by converting them into touchdowns.

STATISTICS	TENN	NC
First Downs	23	9
Net Yards Rushing	267	68
Net Yards Forwards	115	167
Forwards Attempted	16	18
Forwards Completed	7	8
Intercepted By	3	1
Punts, Number	5	10
Punts' Average	29	36.4
Fumbles	6	3
Ball Lost	2	2
Yards Lost on Penalties	78	90

A blocked kick, a fumble, and two intercepted passes brought the Volunteers four of their touchdowns, more than enough to drop the Carolina team.

The Volunteers fooled everyone by deserting their running game and taking to the air lanes to do most of their scoring.

Three of their touchdowns came on passes, two on runs, and the sixth on a pass interception.

The first half followed the same pattern of the Notre Dame game with the Tar Heels staying close on the heels of the Volunteers, but trailing, 13-7, at the half-way mark.

Carolina's line held most of the Tennessee backs in control in the first half with the exception of fullback Andy Kozar. It was the Tennessee running attack that was expected to do the Tar Heels the harm but instead it was the passing of halfbacks Pat Shires and Jim Wade which did most of the damage.

Tennessee made the only threat in the scoreless first quarter. After safety Bobby Brengle had returned a Bud Wallace punt to the Tennessee 23, the Vols started to move.

Ed Morgan advanced the ball on a reverse to the 33, but then the defense held Kozar to no gain and knocked Shires for a one-yard loss.

Kozar then hit off tackle and raced to the Carolina 43 before tackle Tom Higgins could pin him down. Three more plays took the ball to the 33 where Kozar made another first down.

The Carolina line tried to hold then and almost did. But Kozar cracked center on fourth down for another first. Shires added nine more yards on a pass to John Davis to put the ball nearly on the 13.

Kozar went from hero to goat on the next play however, by by fumbling the ball on the Carolina seven. Dan Mainer recovered and the Tar Heels had the ball.

The team could run only three more plays before the quarter nded. The score, Tennessee 0, Carolina 0.

The Volunteers drew first blood

Challenge

Recently, a Chapel Hill minister posed the question, "Where are the University students who could add such a wealth of spiritual fellowship to our Sunday Schools and to our church services?" He paused; shortly, he answered himself: "In bed!"

He may have a point; and if the truth were known, he's likely right. But, on the other hand, there is a degree of self-justification which, if elaborated upon, could prove the minister partially in error.

Indeed, a great majority of students living in this area, pack an over-night bag and head for home. Still others (and this factor ties in closely with the first) have friends or relatives in nearby towns, and also in order to break the monotony of the Seventh day in Chapel Hill, spend their weekends away.

Still, this combined excuse—to wit, that students all aren't on campus over the weekend, does not alter the naked truth that from an even larger group, those who remain within the city limits of Chapel Hill, don't attend Sunday School or church.

True, they may enjoy benefits of religious talks via their radios, but our Chapel Hill minister has retorted to such an alibi that to reap fullest religious enjoyment, one must participate and come within personal "contact" with religion.

Take a look at your Sunday schedule. Does it open the day with dinner at 1 p.m.?

If it does, your minister would challenge you to make your Sundays more "vital" by introducing to you what he terms the rewards of church and Sunday School attendance. Test him!

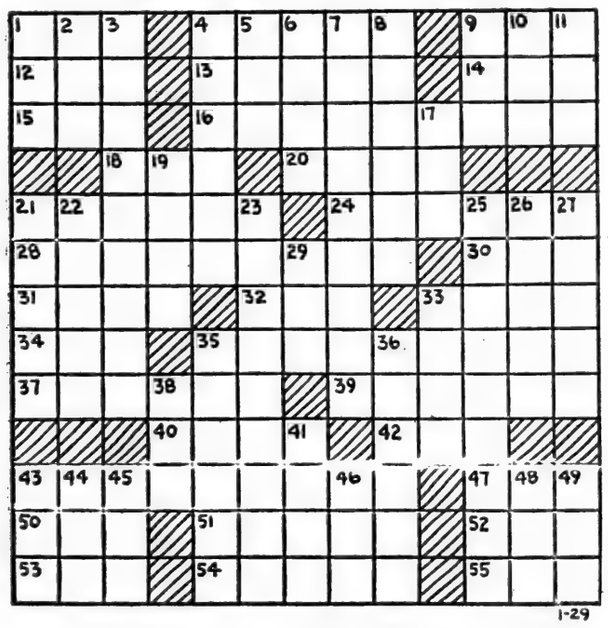
Pogo's Power

Appearance in the comic page about a year ago of a satirical-minded, euphonious-tongued small marsupial named Pogo has caught the American people's eyes—or ego.

This small, innocent looking animal has now settled down to a steady job of needling his country's population on subjects from the present presidential election campaign to other comic strip characters. Pogo also has friends who flip pancakes in the air while speaking.



The strip's artist, Walt Kelly, is having a great time, and presumably a profitable one, pointing out to the people to enjoy self-criticism, and Pogo does it in a harmless and amusing way.

Americans, however, have done a bit more than merely enjoy Pogo—they've attached social obligations to him. At this instant if you are unable to dash up to a friend and relate Pogo's latest escapade, and the "Say now, isn't that subtlenesses" of the venture, you're just one of the group. That is, if you don't follow Pogo you'll probably be looked down upon and dubbed a "clod."

Such social connotations have been placed upon such things as clothes, money and that daring new novel, but I doubt if a comic strip artist has succeeded so well before in attaching a "must-read" to his drawings.

Kelly, while thinking of new alliterations for the personalized possum to say, must feel a little sheepish—or greatly amused. For Kelly is capitalizing on this follow-the-leader, unoriginal-thinking trait of the American people to get them to read subtle jabs pointing out other weak traits.

Point here is, of course, Pobo ought to be enjoyed for Pogo, and not because your friends enjoy him, or your college enjoys him or your country enjoys him. Such a refreshing character needn'e be amusing for—ahh, socialnokle reasons.

General opinion seems to be directed away from nationalism now days. There is a fear of isolationism which is thought to rise from too much nationalistic interest. Pride usually runs hand in hand with nationalism but is often mistaken for it. We can see that today—here in these United States.

For several years now we have seen examplified those burried desires of men to be proud of their homeland. I refer to the Confederate flags an an illustration of my point. I likewise refer to the lack of flag waving in this country and the Stars and Bars as an answer to it.

In many foreign countries—nearly all, I suppose—there is a national pride in the people who raise their flags every morning. Even in Canada where some of our customs may have patterned Canadian living the people put out flags (not only on special holidays, and many wear the seal of their district or shire woven into their clothing. There is a wholesome — not binding, narrowing, pride in these folk.

Here—and particularly in the South—there is nothing more than a bank holiday signifying the birth of Washington. Labor Day is only a date preceeding school opening. Ten out of ten college students I asked did not know Lincoln's or Jefferson's birth date and eight did not know the month or season. Nine out of ten did not know the date on the North Carolina flag or its significance and several did not even know its colors.

This in itself is not important, but it is important that some pride be taken in our state and nation. In that pride rests the spiritual strength and vitality of patriotism needed in a country of mixed emotions and diverse sentiments. There must be a unifying agent and a flag—insignificant as it may seem—can bring a people together.

Houses and every building in many foreign countries fly their banners. Regard your city's Main Street next time you are home and note our own Franklin Street. Even Washington is naked compared to some Canadian towns and villages. We have come to mock national pride and are too astute to bow down before a symbol. It is true that that eliminates insincerity, but eventually there is no sincerety either.

It is still possible to stand tall and be humble and thankful to a country which lets us sleep peacefully.

Express Yourself

The Party

Editor:

The column that John Sanders wrote in last Wednesday's paper made me wonder if I really were a "thinking American" as he suggested all his readers were.

After reading the article, I wanted to grab the welcoming hands of any opposing party and pray for the abolishment of all Republicans. But a second reading showed the author had lifted his paint brush of propaganda to decorate the facts.

Politicians come in the bargain package with a party system, but when they challenge us to think perhaps we should.

Can you take individual men, dig up headline scandles about them and say "these men, my friends, are the party?"

Can you take isolated facts from past history and say, "look, just look at the despicible record?"

Can you in ending a political disertation say, "and now intelligent, deep-thinking American you realize that our party is absolutely good, true, honest, and of good report?"

No, Mr. Sanders the "thinking Americans" are not the ones your well-written but one-sided article should appeal to.

Good Deal

Dear Mr Wolf:

With one who is able to read the AF regulations so well it is hard to understand how you had difficulty wading through the first article concerning the AF-ROTC. The first writer at least seemed to know what he was writing about. Now you come along, take up a lot of space and don't say a damn thing! Don't get me wrong. I am not defending either of you. In the eyes of the military both of you have sinned. The first writer condems his superior officers. And what do you do Mr. Wolfe? You come along and condemn the cadets by calling them Draft Doggers. Not only do you condemn them, but it appears that you are trying to make points for yourself. If you are so sold on the AF why don't you sign up for a four year hitch as an enlisted man and get your commission.

Lets face facts, you have a good "deal" so why not take advantage of it without quibbling! Before you become an Officer you must become men!

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON—The Democrats have tried to keep it inside the family, but bickering and backbiting have broken out among Stevenson's top Lieutenants.

Chief source of trouble has been the Governor's administrative assistant, ex-professor Carl McGowan, who has planted himself as a roadblock in the way of anyone wanting to see Stevenson.

Even Democratic National Chairman Steve Mitchell discovered that, in at least three cases, important messages to the Governor never got past McGowan's desk. Stevenson's Campaign Manager, Wilson Wyatt, also had the same trouble when absent. His messages frequently were blocked by McGowan.

The two White House Assistants attached to Stevenson's headquarters, Dave Bell and Clayton Fritchey, have also had trouble getting past McGowan.

In fact, the situation has become so heated that Wyatt fumes at the mention of McGowan's name.

Among other things, McGowan kept the details of Stevenson's whistle-stop tour from the Governor, because McGowan was opposed to Stevenson's taking that kind of trip. Even though already overruled, and though Stevenson had agreed to make a whistle-stop swing through the east, McGowan stubbornly sat on the train schedules which Mitchell sent for Stevenson's OK. As a result, the whole trip was almost upset.

In case Stevenson is elected, it looks as if McGowan is trying to set himself up as another Matt Connelly, self-appointed head of a palace guard to protect the president from any ideas except his own.

General Eisenhower's "I will go to Korea" statement unquestionably won votes for the GOP, though it did just the opposite with a certain top-ranking General who has spent some time in Korea himself—namely General MacArthur.

When MacArthur heard the Eisenhower promise, he grumbled: "Why doesn't he come see me? I can tell him all about Korea without taking a trip over there."

MacArthur's reaction didn't help the efforts made by Herbert Hoover and other mutual friends of the two Generals to bring them together.

American newspapers haven't said anything about it, but Swedish papers have been playing up the story of Senator Nixon's Swedish maid who entered the United States on a diplomatic passport and is now working in his Washington house.

She is Ruth Ann Elizabeth Jonsson, who came to this country to work for the Assistant Military Attache of the Swedish Embassy, on a stipulation that she not work for anyone save Swedish Diplomats, and that she would return to Sweden after her job ended. Last summer, however, when her job did end, she went to work for Senator Nixon.

The Swedish Embassy notified the State Department, belatedly, that she had gone to work for Nixon and was thereby subject to deportation. Following this, the Justice Department interviewed Miss Jonsson and sent a report to Attorney General McGranery. McGranery decided to do nothing. It was indicated at the Justice Department that he did not want to tangle with Senator Nixon by deporting the lady.

Since then, Miss Jonsson has been telling other maids working for Swedish Diplomats that she makes only $70 a month, has to work from early in the morning until late, with only one day off a week. Though she would like to leave, she says that as long as she is working for a Senator she feels she will not be deported.

Following publication of some of these facts in the Swedish newspapers, the Justice Department has interviewed Miss Jonsson a second time. This time she came to the Justice Department accompanied by one of Nixon's secretaries, who remained present while Miss Jonsson was being interviewed—an unusual procedure.

The Justice Department has now lifted Miss Jonsson's passport, but still has not decided what to do about deporting her. Justice Department officials indicated they did not want to make the matter a political issue, but admitted that any other alien illegally working in the United States would be deported immediately.

Note—Senator Nixon has favored restricting immigration as under the McCarran act.

Tennessee's Passing Game Difference In Rout Of UNC

in the second period by departing from their vaunted running attack to passing.

After a punt return and a 15-yard penalty against the Tar Heels had put the ball on the Carolina 44, the Vols began to move. Fullback Ted Schwanger cracked to the 44 and then sophomore tailback Jimmy Wade tried twice to make a first on the 31.

Schwanger again bucked, making it to the 27. A reverse by Ed Morgan put the ball down to the 15 and then the Vols took to the air. The first attempt by Shires was incomplete but on the next play he hit John Davis in the end zone for the score.

Shires faked a kick for the extra point and passed again, this time to Ed Nickla and it was Tennessee 7-0 with 9:55 remaining in the half.

The Vols upped it to 13-0 a few minutes later. Bud Wallace, back to kick on his own 35 had to reach for a high pass from center and when he tried to get the kick off had it blocked—his first of his college career. Andy Meyers recovered.

It was quick work for Tennessee from there. Kozar bucked to the 33. Shires found Davis again on the 19 for a first down.

Shires missed on a pass, but Wade took over and bucked to the 14. Then the little sophomore stepped back and hit Vic Kolenik running across the end zone. Shires was wide to the right with his kick and it was Tennessee out front 13-0 with only 4:30 remaining.

As the clock ticked out it looked as if the Tar Heels would go scoreless during the first half. But with the ball on their own 24 the Tar Heels finally moved.

A penalty saved the Tar Heels from losing the ball on a pass interception and moved it five yards nearer the Tennessee goal. Kenny Keller took a handoff and went to the 35. Then with only 35 seconds remaining in the half Newman faded and heaved far down the field where Larry Parker had outraced the Vol secondary. Parker grabbed the ball on the 25 and raced the rest of the way for the score.

Tom Adler kicked the extra point to put the Tar Heels within striking distance, 13-7.

But the Carolina team never had a chance to strike in the second half. On the first play from scrimmage Parker fumbled and Roger Ratroff recovered on the Carolina 30.

Shires didn't waste any time on the ground and on the Vols' first play passed to Davis again. The big end took the ball on the five and stepped over for the score. Shires kick made it 20-7.

The Volunteers continued to capitalize on Carolina errors and before the quarter had ended scores two more times.

The first of these scores came with only 4:55 remaining. A Carolina fumble on its own 32 fell into the arms of tackle Doug Atkins, the giant who caused the Tar Heels much trouble all day.

Shires and Davie combined on a pass again and a toss over the middle put the ball on the three yard line. The Carolina line held once but on the next play Shires hit off tackle and the Vols jacked the lead again. Shires kick made it 27-7.

Lightening hit again only 30 seconds later. On the first play from scrimmage after the Tennessee touchdown Newman ran to his right in an attempt to pass But the ball fell conveniently into the arms of Nickla and the sophomore end picking up interference as he went along, ran the remaining 23 yards for the score.

Stires kicked the point to end the third quarter scoring and put the Volunteers out front 34-7.

The Tar Heels started to drive for their second TD right before the period ended however. With the ball on the 50 Newman hit freshman Kenny Keller in the flat and the little halfback, aided by a block by Walser, scooted to the 30.

On the first play of the fourth quarter Newman hit fullback Jack Cooke on a screen pass and he bulled to the 17. From there Newman sent Keller out on a flanker and then hit him in the end zone corner for our final touchdown.

Adler made good again and the Vol lead was cut to 34-14.

The rest of the quarter found reserves of both teams running the game. The Tennessee running offense started to move with ease but the Volunteers weren't able to cross the Carolina goal again until 3:55 remained in the game.

Then with the ball resting on the Carolina 2 yardline Ray Byrd, a home-town full-back cracked off tackle and hustled into the end zone un-touched. Shires made his fifth extra point and that ended the scoring.

The Vols had it 41-14, and with that most of the meager crowd of 22,000 began filing out of the large Shield-Watkins Stadium.

Tennessee Deals Harriers Second Defeat Of Season

By Biff Roberts

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. Nov. 1—Tennessee's Southeastern Conference cross country champions dealt Carolina's harriers their second straight loss here this morning, trouncing the Tar Heels, 15-42.

The Volunteers runners took the first five places before Carolina could get a runner across the tape. Frank Albertson, who has placed first or second in every meet during his three years at Tennessee, crossed the tape in a deadlock with Bob Kuykendall for first place.

The first two Carolina runners to come in were co-captains Bob Webb and Morris Osbourne who tied for sixth.

The winning time for the four-mile course was 21:30. Webb and Osbourne needed 22:39 to take the sixth position.

Following Albertson and Kuykendall across the line were Jack Hill in third place and Joe Waits and Ernest Gamble who tied for fourth.

The only other Carolina runners to finish in the top ten were Frank Marx, who came in eighth in 22:50, and Paul Vogel, the tenth finisher in 23:16.

The Carolina runners showed a marked improvement over last week's meet with Maryland when they were whitewashed, 15-55 but still weren't good enough for the Volunteers. Webb and Osbourne both gave good performances in finishing only a minute and nine seconds behind Albertson and Kuykendall.

The team remained here for the Carolina-Tennessee football game this afternoon before driving back to Chapel Hill.

Georgia Tech Knocks Duke Off Unbeaten List And Clinches Bowl Bid In 28-7 Win

By Tom Peacock

DUKE STADIUM, Durham, Nov. 1—Georgia Tech, number four team in the country, ignored vaunted Duke's press clippings and strengthened its rating by easily rolling over the unbeaten Blue Devils, 28-7, before a sellout homecoming crowd of 55,000.

Quarterback Bill Brigman cleverly alternated his fleet halfbacks, Leon Hardeman and Billy Teas, and the Ramblin' Recks made mincemeat of a Duke defensive line that had yielded but three touchdowns in six games.

Tech chalked up its 23rd straight game without a loss, and clinched a bid to the Suger Bowl in New Orleans January 1.

Duke halfback Charlie Smith scored the only home team touchdown on a 10-yard line buck in the third quarter after Tech sat back and coasted on a 28-0 lead Duke was never in the game, and didn't move the ball until the second half when coach Bill Murray sent in Jerry Barger to take over the split-T in place of Worth Lutz.

Hardeman, Teas, and Turner scored for Tech on runs, the four the Georgia score coming on a short pass from Brigman to Knox.

Tech stunned Duke by scoring twice in the first quarter. After an exchange of punts that placed Georgia on its own 40-yard line, the Ramblin' Reck straight-T formation started rolling. Long runs by Teas and Hardeman featured the Tech drive. Teas scoring on a nine yard off tackle play with 12 minutes left in the quarter. Rodgers added all four Georgia Tech conversions.

Tech's defense, the best in the nation, held Duke after the kickoff, and then tackle Bob Sherman came in to block Lutz's punt on the Duke 20-yard line. Two quick plays gave Tech a first down on the five, and Hardeman scored from there, to put the Georgians in the lead, 14-0, in the first period.

Duke, ranked sixth nationally, was no more successful at budging the Tech defense in the second quarter. The Georgians followed Lutz and his backs like hawks on the option play, deciphering the plays so well it seemed they were in the Blue Devil's huddles.

Tech safety man Bobby Moorhead took a punt on his 10 and ran it back to the 50 midway through the second period. A series of power plays put the ball on the Duke 15-yard line, and Turner scored from there by showing a tremendous burst of speed. The conversion was added, and Tech led, 21-0 at the end of the first half.

Another blocked punt set up the last Georgia touchdown midway through the third period. The whole Tech line rushed in to block a Lutz punt and get the Recks a first down on the Blue Devils 33-yard line.

An unnecessary roughness penalty put the ball on the Duke 7. Duke's defensive line held on two power plays, but Brigman threw to end Jeff Knox in the end zone, Knox picking the toss out of the hands of two Duke defenders to give Georgia a 28-0 lead.

Duke ended the game's scoring a few seconds before the end of the third quarter. Piney Fields ran a punt back 30 yards to the Tech 20, Barger got a first on the 10, and Charlie Smith wen the rest of the way to Georgia's endzone. J. Smith converted, and the score stood at 28-7.

Duke, under the direction of Barger, monopolized the last quarter, but Tech always managed to stop in somehow, and there were no more scores.

'More For Peace' Is Movie Tonight At 8

The Women's Fellowship of the United Congregational-Christian Church of Chapel Hill will present a movie, "More for Peace," tonight at 8 o'clock in the church auditorium.

The film is being shown in observance of World Community Day, and the public is invited. An offering will be taken to make it possible to continue the Christian Woman's action program for lasting peace, it was announced.

With the contributions medicines and vitamins will be bought for children in the world where the need is greatest. Old clothes for destitute children may be brought to the church tonight.

Dr. Johnson To Talk On Race-Religion

Dr. Guy Johnson will speak on "Race Relations: a Challenge to Religion" at the Unitarian Fellowship tonight at 8:30 at Gerrard Hall.

Dr. Johnson will talk about the present situation and the responsibility of the individual, as an individual and as a member of a religious group. Everyone is invited to attend.

Dr. Johnson, professor of sociology and anthropology, is widely known for his research and active work in the field of race relations. A native of Texas, he has been with the University for 23 years. He was first director of the Southern Regional Council in Atlanta and worked on the Myrdal study, later published as "An American Dilemma."

Maurice Cobb, chairman of the group, will introduce Dr. Johnson. Discussion will follow his talk.

In Your Church

Baptist

Five members of the Baptist Student Union here, Carl Lowthrop, Edlyn Freerks, Ernie Bumgardner, Pat Noah and Clyde Smith, are presenting a brief program to the Young Peoples' BTU at the First Baptist church in Durham tonight.

Each of the students will speak on some aspect of "Religion in College Life." The objective of the program is to acquaint the young people of Durham who are non-college students, with the functions of campus BSU groups, and to let them know that religion is not a forgotten factor in the life of all college students.

J. C. Herrin, student secretary, will accompany the quintet of students.

The weekly supper forum will be held tonight at 6 o'clock. Dr. Sylvester Green, executive secretary of the North Carolina Medical Foundation, will speak on one phase of "Christian Faith and Life's Decisions," the theme for this quarter.

Supper will be served for 50 cents.

Episcopal

"Light of the North," a film on the work of the Rev. William Gordon, missionary Bishop of Alaska, will be shown at the regular meeting of the Canterbury Club tonight. A supper meeting will be held in the Parish House, at 6 o'clock.

Daily prayer groups meet at 5:45 p.m. in the little chapel. The Newman Club will meet at 4 o'clock today in Roland Parker 1, Graham Memorial, for a forum.

Congregational Christian

To evaluate religious ideas and their personal interpretations the United Student Fellowship will discuss "What is Faith" at their meeting this morning.

Holy Communion will be observed at the 11 o'clock service this morning. Communion will be followed by the morning sermon, "Neither Hot Nor Cold."

After supper tonight, the United Student Fellowship group will see a film, "More for Peace," which is to be followed by group discussion.

Methodist

The meaning of social action, our responsibility as a Christian to social action, and the opportunities to fulfill such a responsibiilty, as well as other questions centering around social action, will be brought out in a panel discussion tonight at Wesley Foundation.

Graduate students and young adults are welcomed to the foundation meetings at 8 p.m. on Thursdays.

The Wesley foundation list its weekly schedule as follows: Tuesday, 8 p.m., young adults; Thursday, 5:45 p.m., vespers; Friday, 7:30 p.m. fireside meeting; Sunday, 9:45, cocoa and donuts; 10 a.m. Wesley class with Joel Savell, teacher; 10 a.m. Young Adult Class, with Dr. Frank Hanft, teacher; 4:30 p.m., Wesley Chorus; 5:30 p.m. fun and fellowship, and 6 p.m. supper and program.

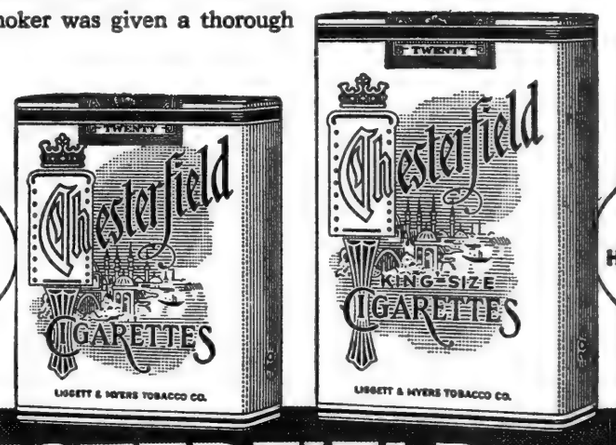
NOSE, THROAT, and Accessory Organs not Adversely Affected by Smoking Chesterfields

FIRST SUCH REPORT EVER PUBLISHED ABOUT ANY CIGARETTE



A responsible consulting organization has reported the results of a continuing study by a competent medical specialist and his staff on the effects of smoking Chesterfield cigarettes.

A group of people from various walks of life was organized to smoke only Chesterfields. For six months this group of men and women smoked their normal amount of Chesterfields—10 to 40 a day. 45% of the group have smoked Chesterfields continually from one to thirty years for an average of 10 years each.

At the beginning and at the end of the six-months period each smoker was given a thorough examination, including X-ray pictures, by the medical specialist and his assistants. The examination covered the sinuses as well as the nose, ears and throat.

The medical specialist, after a thorough examination of every member of the group, stated: "It is my opinion that the ears, nose, throat and accessory organs of all participating subjects examined by me were not adversely affected in the six-months period by smoking the cigarettes provided."

NEWS IN BRIEF

SEOUL—Chinese Communists threw back three South Korean and Jane Russell hills yesterday. All three times the South Koreans attempts to recapture Triangle came within 50 yards of the tops of the two peaks, only to retreat under Chinese mortar fire.

COLUMBUS, Ohio—A rioting convict at Ohio Penitentiary was killed yesterday by state highway patrolmen during a steady shotgun barrage that wounded three other convicts and held 1,600 prisoners in four battered cellblocks. There was no indication when prison guards, state highway patrolmen and 400 Ohio National Guard soldiers will be able to end the 60-hour, million-dollar food riot that began Friday afternoon.

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia—Premier Marshal Tito accused the Soviet Union yesterday of promoting a third world war and pledged Yugoslavia's cooperation with the West in preserving peace. In a speech to the sixth Congress of the Yugoslav Communist Party, Tito said co-existence is not only possible between communistic and capitalistic countries but that experience has shown in concrete ways that such cooperation may prove mutually useful.

RALEIGH—At least 21 people lost their lives on North Carolina highways over the weekend, a United Press survey showed yesterday. The state highway patrol reported 147 persons injured since 4 p.m. Friday in addition to the 21 killed in automobile accidents. The weekend death toll brings the 1952 total to 907, compared to 864 for last year.

ASHEVILLE — Rising winds last night were expected to increase fire danger in western North Carolina forests. Although all fires were either out or under control, the danger of fire increased as the area passed its 25th day without rain.

Nursing Head Will Address Y Committee

Miss Lucille Spaulding, director of the nursing service at the North Carolina Memorial Hospital, will speak to YWCA Hospital Service Committee members this afternoon on "The Roll of the Volunteer in the Hospital."

Members of the committee and those interested in joining it are asked to attend the meeting which will be held in the lecture room of the library at 4 o'clock.

This program is one in a series planned for the group by Alice Jane Hinds, schedule chairman, and Rosemary Scovil, Hospital Committee chairman. Other meetings will include discussions by a psychiatrist, a hospital chaplain and a worker in hospital recreation.

Reservations

Students are asked to check with their dormitory managers in order to reserve rooms for next quarter.

J. S. Wadsworth, housing officer, said students who wish to change dormitories or rooms should check with their managers, then come by the housing office.

Wadsworth also requested students moving during the present quarter to check with the office on all changes.

Demos Say Never So Good; Time For A Change—GOP came to an end yesterday with last minute efforts on the part

Millions of voting Americans make the supreme choice today between Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for President of the United States.

The maddening drive of the political campaign officially of both candidates to sway the undecided voter.

Stevenson, Democratic presidential hopeful, ended his campaigning in Chicago with a nationwide television - radio program. The Illinois Governor appeared with his running mate, Sen. John J. Sparkman of Alabama.

Gen. Eisenhower ended his tour of the nation in Boston where he, like Stevenson, made a last minute appeal in a nationwide television-radio program.

Registration throughout the United States hit an all-time high as more than 75 million people made themselves eligible to vote. The vote today is expected to surpass the old record of 49,820,000 set in 1940 when Franklin D. Roosevelt opposed Wendel Wilkie.

The Democrats say a heavy turnout always favors the Democrats, and this time it will mean the people are going down the line for continuation of policies and programs that have brought the nation to unprecedented heights of production and accompanying prosperity.

The Republicans say a big vote will be a protest vote against a party they contend has grown corrupt by being too long in power, that it will be a vote for a change.

In one way or another, most of the issues distill down to those two positions—the Democratic cry that people "never had it so good" against the Republican clamor that "it's time for a change,"

Political leaders in North Carolina yesterday were looking forward to a record vote with Democratic leaders confident Gov. Stevenson will win in the traditionally Democratic state.

State Republican Chairman J. M. Baley, however, asserted the Stevenson - Eisenhower "race is close in North Carolina." Harking back to 1928 when Herbert Hoover swept the state and two Republican congressmen were elected, Baley added "we have an excellent chance to elect two or three Republican congressmen."

The question is before the American people now and the answers will be more apparent after the outpouring of ballots today goes through the tabulating machines.

Party Tonight Will Feature Vote Returns

There's going to be a party tonight in the main lounge of Graham Memorial—an election party from 9 o'clock until a definite trend in the presidential race is established, according to SUAB President Ken Penegar.

"We shall fight it out if it takes all night," Penegar said yesterday. "If you cannot stay the entire time, run in for a moment for the latest results. Both TV and radios will be going full blast."

Television-radio results will be coordinated and posted on a blackboard in the lounge. The blackboard will show the number of electoral votes, the number of voting units and the up-to-the-minute results of each state as they come in.

The party is not sponsored by any political group and everyone is welcome, Penegar said. Free refreshments will be served by coeds.

'Beat Va.' Is Homecoming Display Note

Homecoming displays will be judged Saturday morning in the annual competition, John Seely, University Club president, said yesterday.

The theme of the displays will be "Beat Virginia" and the displays will be judged on neatness and originality. Any kind of display is permitted with no expense limit, Seely said.

Cups will be awarded in four divisions: fraternity, sorority, men's dorm and women's dorm. Entrance fee will be $1.

A homecoming display contest was not held last year due to "unfortunate scheduling," Seely said. "However this year we are looking forward to its being bigger and better than ever before," he said.

Student Wives Invited To Meet

The Student Wives' Association, formed as a YWCA committee, will have its first meeting tonight at the Y at 8 o'clock.

Student wives are invited to join the organization which was formed to enable them to take a more active part in campus affairs. A recent poll conducted by Mrs. James J. Zeller showed a need for such a group on campus and Y Cabinet members voted in favor of it at their last meeting.

Members of the association will meet once or twice monthly at the Y. Their programs will be mostly educational with faculty members as speakers, but plans for social activities also are being made.

Sigma Nu Fraternity will give anyone a free ride to the polls to vote today. Those interested call 4071.

Yack Beauty Contest Deadline Set Friday

Friday is the deadline for entries for the 1952 Yackety Yack beauty contest.

Interested organizations on campus are invited to turn in as many entries as they wish. Each entry should be accompanied by a $5 fee. Any coed is eligible to be entered, however, the Yack staff would prefer that no girl be entered in the contest who has previously been in the Yack beauty section.

This year's contest will be held Nov. 20 in Memorial Hall. Judges will be members of the North Carolina Professional Photographers Association. They are Chairman of the Board of Judges, F. Lavergne Johnson, Chapel Hill; Robert Hodgkin, Jr., president of the NCPPA and director of publicity for Seaboard Railway, Wilmington; Ben J. Stimson, former president of the NCPPA and a prominent salon judge, and F. Leon Joyner, secretary of the NCPPA, Henderson.

Judging will be on the basis of photogenic beauty entirely, with special emphasis on symetry of features, carriage, gracefulness, hands, hair, and complexion.

Phi Debates Tonight On Church And State

The Phi Assembly will take a breather from politics tonight with a bill on whether the church or the state demands the first loyalty of the individual.

Early election returns will be announced from the chair as they come in and interested students are invited to attend and join in the debate. The meeting will begin at 8 o'clock and will be held in the Phi Hall, fourth floor, New East building.

UC Now Accepting Trip Reservations

Train and hotel reservations for students wishing to attend the Carolina-Miami game Nov. 28 will be made by the University Club beginning this week.

John Seely, UC president, said yesterday the advantages of traveling by train seem to outweigh those of chartering buses.

"The Seaboard Railroad has offered us a wonderful rate of $39.-62," Seely said. "This includes chartered bus service from Chapel Hill to Raleigh and back, breakfast on the train going down and dinner in the evening coming back. These rates are almost half of what we thought they would be."

Chartered buses will still be offered if enough people are interested, Seely said. These persons may sign up at the booth in the Y from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. every day this week.

The trains will leave Raleigh about 7 Wednesday night and arrive in Miami at 11 o'clock Thursday morning. The passengers will be asked to decide when they purchase tickets whether they wish to return on Saturday night or on Sunday night. The return trains will leave Miami around noon on either Saturday or Sunday.

"The train cars will be the latest model reclining chairs and will be private," Seely said.

The University Club will make reservations for students at the best hotels available in Miami Beach. Rooms will cost $3 per person per night with two persons in each room. "These rooms during the tourist season would rent for not less than $20 a night," Seely said. The hotel will be complete with swimming pool and cocktail lounges.

What Goes On Here

Concerning Death of Rameses

Duke University Legislature Sends Letter Of Condolence

"An appropriate note of sympathy" concerning the death of Rameses VII was received here yesterday from the Student Legislature of Duke University.

The resolution, written by Rowe Fesperman and recently passed by the legislature, includes a special condolence to "Bushy Cook, the trusted and revered keeper of the ram."

"Be it further resolved," the resolution continues, "That a proptious wish be included stating our fervent desire that the reign of Rameses VIII will be an eminently happier and more successful one than that of his predecessor."

The text of the resolution follows:

"Whereas: The student body of the Greater University of North Carolina has been beset by many misfortunes in the past three weeks;

"Whereas: During the summer one of the symbols of Carolina Campus life was elevated to still greater heights; and

"Whereas: The more spirited half of the Duke University student body has been mentioned as a contributing factor to his early and tragic death;

"Therefore be it resolved by the legislature of the Duke University Men's Student Government Association that an appropriate note of sympathy concerning the death of one Rameses VII be sent to our good neighbors in Chapel Hill, and an especial condolence be included stating our fervent desire that the reign of Rameses VII will be an eminently happier and more successful one than that of his predecessor."

An added note from Secretary Bob Bradshaw "To the students of the University of North Carolina," stated, "The enclosed resolution, recently passed by our legislature, is another expression of the friendly rivalry existing between our two universities. Good luck up to, but not including, Nov. 22."

Faculty Gives Adlai Majority By 52-19 Count

Students Endorse Illinois Governor By 631 To 615

By Tom Parramore

The campus chose Gov. Adlai Stevenson for president yesterday by a margin of 49 votes. The vote was 683 for Stevenson and 634 for Gen. Dwight Eisenhower.

That part of the University's faculty voting, went for Stevenson 52 to 19, with the students voting 631-615.

The straw vote was conducted by the Y in balloting booths set up all yesterday morning and part of the afternoon. The only requirement for voting was an ID card. Twenty-three per cent of the student body voted in the mock election.

Percentage wise, Stevenson garnered 51.2 per cent and Eisenhower took 47.1 per cent. The remaining twenty-two votes constituted write-ins for Sen. Richard B. Russell of Georgia.

Of the total group voting for Eisenhower, 190 were democrats, 104 of whom are eligible to vote. Seventy - five of these already have voted in the national elections.

Two hundred Republicans voted for Eisenhower and out of these 90 are eligible to vote, while 34 already have voted.

Independents for Eisenhower numbered 172, with 63 eligible, and 34 already having voted.

Among the Stevenson supporters, 453 were Democrats, 203 of whom were eligible to vote and 144 of whom already had voted. Only six Republicans voted for Stevenson, but 128 Independents named the governor as their choice. Thirty-two of these Independents have voted.

Out of those who already have voted in the national election, 172 were for Eisenhower and 179 for Stevenson.

Ike Wins At DU, Beats Adlai 2-1

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

DURHAM, Nov. 3 — Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower scored a two-to-one victory over Governor Adlai Stevenson in a recent campus-wide election at Duke University.

A total of 1,858 students voted in the mock election, staged to provide a yardstick of campus political opinion and to arouse student interest in the presidential race. Eisenhower collected a total of 1,266 votes from undergraduate men and women, graduate students and student nurses. The total for Stevenson was 592 votes.

A total of 497 voters are also qualified to vote in the national election tomorrow. These cast 321 ballots for Ike and 176 for Adlai.

Of the 701 students who registered as Democrats in the election 421 voted for Eisenhower and 280 for Stevenson. Stevenson captured only 25 of 717 Republican cast votes.

Preregistration

General College students may make appointments for preregistration conferences with their deans beginning tomorrow.

Appointment books will be available in the General College office, Room 308 South Building. The books will be closed next Monday.

We Like...

For many months THE DAILY TAR HEEL has been publishing the cartoons of Mr. Herbert Block of The Washington Post. We have been publishing his work not because of its political leanings, which are obviously pro-Stevenson, but because we believe he is the finest editorial cartoonist in the country.

As to our political views, we have remained silent. Now that Election Day has arrived, we feel it is our duty to reveal our own stand in the campaign.

". . . There are epochs in human affairs when novelty even is useful. If a general opinion prevails that the old way is bad, whether true or false, and this obstructs or relaxes the operations of the public service, a change is necessary, if it be but for the sake of change. This is exactly the case now. 'Tis a universal sentiment that our present system is a bad one, and that things do not go right on this account . . ."

Alexander Hamilton made that statement in a letter written on September 3, 1780. We agree with him.

Anything Can Happen

We hope this campus has something to do with whatever happens today—even if it rains.

And we hope whoever happens to win will do something about what has been happening and what might happen in several areas.

An editor of the magazine, Forecast, says the stars indicate victory for the Five-Star General.

Physicist Albert Einstein supports Stevenson because he trusts his "integrity, judgment, and intelligence."

Dorothy Parker thinks there are others besides Katie Hepburn who have run the gamut from A to B. She will vote for Eisenhower "against Truman and Trumanism."

Investigator-In-Chief Joe McCarthy says Stevenson's in the Red, that Eisenhower will be the new Commander-In-Chief.

A psychology professor says Stevenson will win because he's an introvert, the type Americans favor in times of crisis.

We're not making any predictions except to say that we don't need an introvert or an extrovert. We need an expert.

THE GREEKS
Had Words For It—

Someone (he has, understandably, asked that his name be kept secret, but he can be found in a certain dilapidated bookshop hereabouts) has said "From Homer to the Acropolis, the Greeks were topodopolis."

While deploring the levity, your friends in the Intimate Bookshop find themselves in hearty accord with this sentiment.

Our supply of Loeb Classics is as complete as their somewhat eratic publishing schedule will allow. When we go out to buy old books, we keep our eyes peeled for old books in Greek.

Among the books in English — which many of our customers also speak —— you'll find such books as Livingstone's "Legacy of Greece," Taylor's "Socrates," Hamiltons "The Greek Way" and "Greek Poetry for Everyman," translated by Lucas. We've been making quite a hit with our $1.98 edition of Hyde's "Ancient Greek Mariners."

AND WE'RE BATTIN' FOR LATIN

Beside the ever-present Loeb editions, our stock includes translations ranging from the inexpensive Penguin edition of Tacitus to the C. Day Lewis translation of The Aeneid, and on to certain editions more famed for utility than beauty.

Whatever your interest, the big broad stock of The Intimate Bookshop has a book for you!

Young Democrats

Election Day, U. S. A. The hopes and hearts and faith of half a nation rest with either candidate. Tomorrow will be for many a day of elation; for almost an equal number, it will be a day of depression. But for all, tomorrow will be welcome, for the tension and partisanship of an intense campaign will begin to melt away and the nation will soon unite behind its new president. The winning candidate and party will gird itself to face the complex problems of tomorrow. The loser will resolve itself to help face those same problems and will exercise a close check on the victorious party.

Election day, U. S. A. It could be exceedingly close; it could be won by a landslide. A few key votes in a few key states could swing the pendulum either way. Each party exudes confidence and privately prays it will be knighted by the fortuitous touch. There is a certain tenseness that only the closing days of an American presidential ccampaign can effect. So many elections have been won, it seems, by a single chance remark "Rum Romanism, and Rebellion") or an unthinking act (a slight of a governor of a key state) which changed the course of the entire election. The press points out that had 62,000 votes been cast differently in a certain six states in 1948 the election would have gone the other way. Less than that number of votes could turn a close result into a landslide this time. Many states are doubtful, very few seem sure. Our own state might feel the disaffection that so many have endeavored to stimulate. The importance of every vote is increasingly evident.

For many the choice of candidates and party have been most difficult. They have seen in Dwight D. Eisenhower the greatest general of our times, a man of integrity and personal magnetism who commands the admiration and respect of all our people. They have seen him win the battles of a world war and unify Europe in behalf of the free world. They believe that his lack of experience in domestic policy and problems will be compensated for by his personal integrity, popularity and by the confidence that millions repose in him. Many were saddened by his endorsement of all the elements of his party, but believe that it was the only course dictated by political expediency, and that if he is elected he will divorce himself from those men. Americans can find in Eisenhower a military stateman whose call for civil leadership is being determined today.

The inspiring moral and intellectual courage of Adlai E. Stevenson have won for him the devotion of millions of Americans who look for great leaders in trying times. With an impeccable record of statesmanship and dedication to public service, this man symbolizes the very best qualities which Jefferson would call to execute leadership. His experience with the Departments of Agriculture, Navy and State, and his record as governor of Illinois are admired and respected by Democrats and Republicans alike. His perspective is both Jeffersonian and Lincolnian; his methods are strongly remniscent of Woodrow Wilson. Americans can find in Adlai Stevenson an experienced leader of strong moral and mental force who has dedicated his life to the service of all the people.

Great men, true, but it is their party which tempers their greatness and determines their course of action. The Democratic party stands upon its twenty years of progress, of a determined effort to meet twentieth century problems with twentieth century solutions in the quest for social justice for free men everywhere. The Republican party demands that it is time for a change, that it is best equipped to meet the problems of the day, and that it can reduce spending and bureaucracy in the process. The parties are not static, and between the two drift many who try to reconcile their beliefs as they contemplate an era of change.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON—As one of the hottest presidential campaigns in years comes to a close, here is the confidential survey prepared for General Eisenhower, Governor Dewey, and the top echelon of the Republican party. It shows the Republicans confident of winning 213 "certain" electoral votes, plus 128 "probable" votes, or a total of 341. It requires 266 to win.

The GOP survey puts the two key states of New York and California in the "probable" column, though the Democrats claim they will carry both. Illinois, Stevenson's home state, is placed in the "certain" GOP column, while Massachusetts is placed in the "possible" column.

The border states of Kentucky, West Virginia and Oklahoma are conceded to the Democrats, according to the secret GOP survey, though Maryland is chalked up as "certain" for the Republicans. Another border state, Tennessee, is marked "not too hopeful" though Missouri, home state of President Truman, is listed as "probable" for the GOP.

Texas, on the other hand, where Ike spent so much time and effort is conceded to the Democrats. Michigan, though considered "probable," is listed as "slipping during the past week," while Minnesota, also listed as "probable," carries the notation "removed from sure column because of effectiveness of Democratic speaking campaigns in Minnesota." Truman, Kefauver and Sparkman, besides Stevenson, have toured Minnesota recently.

Massachusetts is marked with the notation: "Even if Lodge beaten, it's hoped Ike will run enough ahead of ticket to win." This refers to Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., who has a tough race against Congressman Jack Kennedy, who is generally predicted the winner.

New York is tabbed: "Expect to win if upstate organizations get the vote out."

The GOP survey has been gathered from local state leaders and members of the General's party aboard his train. Here is the breakdown state-by-state.

Conceded to the Democrats—Alabama 11 electoral votes; Arkansas 8; Georgia 12; Kentucky 10; Louisiana 10; Mississippi 8; North Carolina 14; Oklahoma 8; Rhode Island 4; South Carolina 8; Texas 24; West Virginia 8; Total 125.

Certain for the Republicans—Colorado 6; Connecticut 8; Delaware 3; Idaho 4; Illinois 27; Indiana 13; Iowa 10; Kansas 8; Maine 5; Maryland 9; Nebraska 6; New Hampshire 4; New Jersey 16; North Dakota 4; Ohio 25; Oregon 6; Pennsylvania 32; South Dakota 4; Utah 4; Vermont 3; Wisconsin 12; Wyoming 3; Total 212.

Probable for the Republicans—California 32; Michigan 20; Minnesota 11; Missouri 13; Montana 4; Nevada 3; New York 45; Total 128.

Possible for the Republicans—Arizona 4; Florida 10; Massachusetts 16; New Mexico 4; Tennessee 11; Virginia 12 (considered even money); Washington 9; Total 66.

While President Truman was escorting his new-found friend, John L. Lewis, on a personal tour of the White House the other night, he let drop the following:

"Did you realize, John, that if the Republicans should be elected and Taft should die, Eisenhower would be president?"

Harry Moses, representing the coal operators, who was with the two men, did not join in the ensuing laughter.

Mr. Truman's wisecrack followed a relatively brief but extremely important conference, the results of which are the subject of further negotiations probably resulting in an increase in the eventual cost of coal.

Those who attend the White House meeting insist that there was no deal between Truman and Lewis to increase wages. Harry Moses of the operators was with them throughout. As far as can be ascertained, here is a play-by-play account of what happened.

David Cole, the federal mediator, opened the meeting with a plea that the Wage Stabilization Board, which ruled against the $1.90 wage increase, had overlooked certain facts and had been unfair to the miners.

Cole pointed out that the miner worked only 200 days a year, had no fringe benefits such as paid holidays or paid vacation; and finally that they had greatly increased production. The bureau of labor statistics, he pointed out, showed that production had been increased 14 per cent in two years, that the industry was at its highest peak, and that this was a tribute to John L. Lewis and the operators for pushing mechanization.

Cole also dwelt upon the hazards of mining and the heavy accident rate in the mines.

The President then turned to Harry Moses. "Let's hear from the operators," he said.

Moses, who represents H. C. Frick & Co. and some of the biggest mines in the nation, said that the miners and mine operators had been working for several months to draw up a contract and that their agreement was an excellent example of free and open bargaining. He said they had dismissed fringe benefits because Lewis didn't want them. He preferred cash, instead.

The steelworkers and other labor groups, he argued, had received fringe benefits which were the equivalent of the 40 cents the wage board had denied the miners.

John L. was then called upon. He gave a brief sermon on economic production, pointing out that the U. S. is the greatest coal producer in the world and the American miner the most efficient. He produces 7½ tons per man daily compared with the British production of 1 ton per man per day.

"Britain can't mine enough coal to heat itself well, let alone the rest of Europe," opined Lewis. "We can supply the world, all as a result of our genius and know-how."

Lewis went on to say that some of his men will not live long enough to get fringe benefits and they would rather have their cash now.

"Four miners are killed every day in the year," said Lewis. "There were more paraplegics resulting from coal-mine accidents during the war than there were from combat action."

Moses produced a 3½ page memo giving new evidence on wages, and handed it to Economic Stabilizer Roger Putnam, who will probably make the final decision on wages.

"I don't know what the results of our analysis will show, Mr. President," Putnam said.

"I only ask that you get it as quickly as possible," replied Truman.

Express Yourself

Editor:

Spring has sprung, and fall has fell, Fall Germans are coming, and we're disgusted as Hell! Our complaint is as follows: Wanted: dates for seven hundred U.N.C. Coeds for the Germans week-end!

It's a bad situation when 90% of the coeds on a campus where they're outnumbered five to one find it impossible to obtain dates for one of the biggest week-ends of the year. It appears to us that practically every girl involved in this issue, imports as well as coeds, would be insulted if she thought through the facts. It has been admitted that the main objection the boys have against dating coeds on big week-ends is that they can't drink in the frat houses. Some of the fraternities are even going as far as closing their doors on the coeds next week-end. As for the insult—an import should be insulted because she is invited so her date can take her to his frat house and get sloppy drunk: the coeds should be insulted because the boys don't respect them enough to date them and willingly adhere to the coed restrictions.

There is nothing the coeds can do about the rules of this institution, and the boys are truly showing how weak their constitutions are by not being willing to help them comply with these rules.

Oh well, there's still a chance for us to get in on the show—perhaps Mr. Spivak will be kind enough to play Lonesome Gal and dedicate it to the coeds that night. Surely he'll play Come Onna My House for the imports.

Keller And Seawell Injured

The Volunteers of Tennessee administered more than a 41-14 licking to the Tar Heels Saturday as evidenced by the long injury list which presented itself yesterday afternoon as Carolina began unlimbering for Virginia this coming weekend.

The players most seriously injured are Junior Seawell, first string linebacker, and Ken Keller, freshman halfback.

Seawell suffered a neck injury while Keller had his knee hurt. The question as to whether they will be ready for Virginia or not is still in doubt.

Also in the sideline yesterday was Tom Higgins, stalwart tackle in the defensive line, who was out with a leg injury. Higgins is one of the best players on the squad and his loss to the team would seriously threaten the chances of Carolina beating Virginia.

However, the trainers expressed the belief that he would be ready for action Saturday.

Also on the injured list was Sonny Ridenhour, little safety man, who is suffering from an ankle injury. He too is expected to be in shape for Virginia.

Rounding out the list of injured is Ed Patterson, offensive guard, who was shaken up in the Tennessee game. However, his injury is not serious and he will probably participate in the practices this week.

Leonard Bullock, freshman safety man, was back in uniform yesterday. He suffered a shoulder

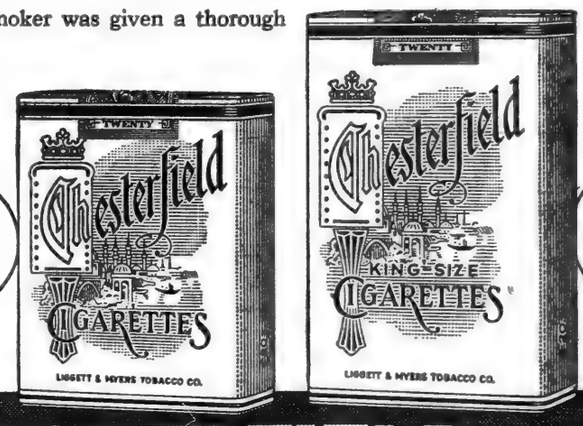
NOSE, THROAT,

and Accessory Organs not Adversely Affected by Smoking Chesterfields

FIRST SUCH REPORT EVER PUBLISHED ABOUT ANY CIGARETTE



A responsible consulting organization has reported the results of a continuing study by a competent medical specialist and his staff on the effects of smoking Chesterfield cigarettes.

A group of people from various walks of life was organized to smoke only Chesterfields. For six months this group of men and women smoked their normal amount of Chesterfields—10 to 40 a day. 45% of the group have smoked Chesterfields continually from one to thirty years for an average of 10 years each.

At the beginning and at the end of the six-months period each smoker was given a thorough examination, including X-ray pictures, by the medical specialist and his assistants. The examination covered the sinuses as well as the nose, ears and throat.

The medical specialist, after a thorough examination of every member of the group, stated: "It is my opinion that the ears, nose, throat and accessory organs of all participating subjects examined by me were not adversely affected in the six-months period by smoking the cigarettes provided."

DR. ROBERT L. HUMBER

BSU Officer Here Slates State Speech

John Colson, local BSU president, is one of 10 discussion group leaders at the 23rd annual BSU Convention, which will be in session from 7:30 Friday night to noon on Sunday at the Tabernacle Baptist Church in Raleigh.

Approximately 15 Carolina BSU members will be among the 1,000 Baptist students representing 40-odd colleges and universities, business colleges and nurse training schools of North Carolina.

"Christ Must Reign," the program theme, will be expanded under several key speakers. They include Dr. Robert L. Humber, Greencille lawyer and founder of the movement for World Federation; Dr. Edward A. McDowell, professor of New Testament interpretation at Southeastern Seminary in Wake Forest; Dr. J. Ned Hughley, professor of economics at North Carolina College, Durham, and Miss Emily Lansdell, president of the Woman's Missionary Training School, Louisville, Ky.

Honor Councils Need Candidates

The Bi-Partisan Selection Board will meet today at 4 o'clock in the Men's Council Room, Graham Memorial, to continue selection of candidates to run in the fall elections for Men's and Women's Councils.

Only seven coeds and seven men students have notified the board of interest in the positions. Students wishing to run independently should gather a petition of 25 backers.

Positions open are three junior seats on Women's Council and two junior, one sophomore, one freshman and one graduate seat on Men's Council.

Opens Today

General College students may make appointments for preregistration conferences with their deans beginning today.

Appointment books will be available in the General College office, Room 308 South Building. The books will be closed Monday.

Charlie's Recipe

Get Ahead By Trying —Spivak

By Sally Schindel

"Don't take yourself seriously," advises the man who plays the sweetest trumpet in the world, Charlie Spivak.

Spivak will play Fall Germans this weekend with a Friday afternoon concert from 4:30 to 6 o'clock in Memorial Hall and a 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. dance that night in Woollen Gym.

This mild-mannered, soft spoken band leader, who still blushes at a compliment, has a definite formula for success: "Success is something you work for — and when it comes, you work harder."

From all indications, it looks like Charlie's recipe had worked for him from the day in grade school he played on his first trumpet (it was so small the first valve was practically on top of his nose) up through the day he organized his first band eight years ago. In between those times he played in the Benny Pollack Band, in the Dorsey Orchestra alongside such notables as Glen Miller and Bob Crosby and in the Ray Noble band.

Spivak, whose trumpet playing has been described as "honey in the horn," has appeared in every large city in the country and has an annual engagament at the Statler Hotel. He played at the Debutante Ball in Raliegh this year where he proved to be one of the few name bands which makes for equal listening and dancing pleasure. Why? Because he places more emphasis on soft, danceable melodies than ever before. (Downbeat even named him winner in their annual poll in the smooth 'n' sweet category.)

Notches in Spivak's musical belt are 20th Century Fox's "Pin-Up Girl," starring Betty Grable and "Follow The Boys" for Universal and a flock of box-office records created at the Paramount in New York, the Hotel Statler in New York, the Palladium in Hollywood and other top spots. Charlie's music-making is so solidly established for its individuality that it can be identified whenever and wherever it is played as "indubitably Charlie's.

Born in New Haven, Conn., Spivak went to Hill House School in New Haven, studying the trumpet on his own time with George Hyer, who is a member of the New Haven Symphony Orchestra.

Maybe this close association with a "long hair" influenced Charlie in recording an album of Kreisler compositions. Called "Kreisler Favorites," the records were unusual in that it was the first time that the virtuoso, who is an eminent classical violinist and soloist, had approved having his compositions played in dance tempo.

Two In One Up For Sale

People buying tickets to the second art film series will be able to attend the showing of the "Dance Film Festival" tomorrow night free of charge, the Student Union Activities Board said yesterday.

The second series consists of two foreign films, "Paison," and "Orpheus." "Paison," an Italian motion picture directed by Roberto Rosellini, is scheduled for Nov. 19. "Orpheus," a French modern version of the Greek legend, will be shown Dec. 11. Membership tickets cost 60 cents.

The "Dance Film Festival," the final presentation in the first series, will be shown Thursday night in Memorial Hall at 8 o'clock. It consists of five films on classical ballet and folk dances.

ONE PRISONER WAS SHOT TO DEATH, and three others wounded, when they tried to escape from the riot-ridden Ohio State Penitentiary at Columbus, Ohio. Nineteen hundred convicts roamed their cellblocks, smashing locks, ripping screens and turning the cells into a shambles that has resulted in hundreds of thousands of dollars in damage. NEWS IN BRIEF

SEOUL—Hundreds of screaming Reds stormed Heartbreak and Sniper ridges yesterday in a futile attempt to dislodge United Nations forces. The Allies beat off the twin battalion-sized assaults on the eastern and central fronts with heavy Red losses. Then a lull settled over the entire 155-mile Korean battleline.

Troops were ordered out to fight forest fires crackling through woodlands in southern Illinois and northeastern Tennessee yesterday. But a general nationwide rash of damaging forest and brush were either snuffed out or under control.

Army Raises Draft Quota By 1,000

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—The Army today upped its monthly call from 47,000 to 48,000 for January, making it the largest number of men drafted since last February.

The October, November and December calls each totalled 47,000.

A Selective Service spokesman said the January call would be filled primarily with men in the 20 and 21-year-old age groups. He emphasized that Draft Director Lewis B. Hershey's order temporarily barring draft of 19-year-olds still stands and therefore no men below the age of 20 can be called in January.

The January quota was designed to maintain the Army's approved strength after allowances for enlistments and reenlistments. The armed forces' approved strength is 3,620,000 of which 1,600,000 is for the Army. The Navy is authorized for 820,000, the Marines Corps 230,000 and the Air Force 70,000.

SSL Delegates Asked To Meet Tonight At 9

Gene Cook of Fayetteville recently was elected permanent chairman of the Carolina delegation to the State Student Legislature.

Nancy Horne of Norton, Va., was chosen secretary.

The Legislature will meet in Raleigh, Nov. 20-22. Carolina will be represented by three delegates to the Senate and 15 to the House.

The delegation will meet tonight at 9 o'clock in the Grail Room. Delegates absent without an excuse will be placed at the bottom of the alternate list.

Deltas Voted Into IFC; Will Affiliate

The Inter-Fraternity Council has accepted Delta Fraternity into its membership.

The Deltas, well on their way to becoming affiliated with Delta Upsilon, the national social fraternity, were originally organized in February of 1949, with a starting membership of thirteen. They became a colony of Delta Upsilon in 1950.

In preparation for getting their charter, the group has been visited by the national traveling representative of DU four times in the past two years. H. Norris Harrison, Philadelphia insurance executive, and chairman of the Delta Upsilon petitioning societies, spent two days in Chapel Hill this summer with the Deltas.

DU opened the way for a new chapter of its fraternity here when the 118th annual convention of undergraduates and the Assembly of Trustees voted to give the Board of Directors of Delta Upsilon the power to grant a charter to UNC.

Delta Upsilon is primarily a mid-western and eastern fraternity, but it does have chapters in the state universities of Virginia, Texas, Kentucky and Oklahoma. When DU is installed here, it will become the third oldest national to be represented here. The DKE's were formed in 1814, Chi Phi in 1824 and DU in 1834.

Officers of the fraternity are President Herman Husbands; Vice-President Jim Finch; Recording Secretary Jim Rollins; Corresponding Secretary Ed Johnson; Treasurer Gene Cain and Social Chairman Harry Phillips.

Chapel Hill's Citizens Vote 4 Per Minute

Heavy balloting was reported in Chapel Hill yesterday morning with voters beginning to jam one of this community's two precincts three hours after the polls opened.

The North Precinct, located in the Town Hall, began piling up at 9:30 a.m. As the long line of voters began to form, many persons, tiring of waiting for a voting booth, began marking their ballots wherever they could find a place to do so.

Mrs. Adelaide Walters, North Precinct registrar, said people were voting at the rate of four per minute. She said this rate had to be maintained throughout the day if all of the princinct's 3,100 registered voters were to vote.

Voting was not as heavy at the South Precinct, located at Chapel Hill High School.

Civil Defense Meet Invites All Groups

Col. Thomas F. Taylor, Chapel Hill director of the Federal Civil Defense Administration, asks all organizations to send a representative to a meeting at the Town Hall at 8 o'clock tomorrow night in preparation for a nationwide campaign for registering civil defense volunteers.

Contest For Editor Gets Strange Twist

By Louis Kraar

Two candidates lined up at the starting post last night in the race for editor of THE DAILY TAR HEEL.

Biff Roberts won the University Party nomination by a vote of 14-6, beating Walt Dear.

Dear, who was expected to get the Student Party nomination tonight, appeared before the UP delegates and asked for their approval.

Dear filed a petition to run independently immediately after Roberts' victory was announce Dear said, "I am running as an independent candidate because the campus deserves an independent approach to campus problems, an approach that can't flavored by partisan politics." He said he was seeking the UP nomination in an attempt to get a double endorsement.

The Student Party will meet tonight at 9 o'clock in the Roland Parker Lounges of Graham Memorial to nominate its candidate for editor of the campus daily newspaper.

BIFF ROBERTS

President Ham Horton spoke for Roberts, saying, "Roberts assured me if elected he will bend over backwards to be impartial. He would not by swayed by too great loyalty to the party." Horton added that he felt Roberts wouldn't go independent if he wasn't nominated. At that time it was not known, but speculated, that Dear would go independent.

Roberts was not present at the nominating session because it was necessary for him to meet relatives in Durham, according to Horton.

"I would like to serve as the UP candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel," said Dear in his bid for the party's backing. "And I hope they will consider a fellow who is not necessarily attached to any political party."

UP nominee Roberts is a longtime member of this paper's sports staff, becoming sports editor following the election of Barry Farber last spring. He served as chairman of the UP last year. Although stricken with polio, the amiable sports writer plays a below-par golf game, his favorite sport. During the summer he works on the staff of the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Now chairman of the Publications Board, Dear has been closely asociated since 1950 with the paper he seeks to edit. During the 1951-52 school year, Dear was a reporter, and in the spring elections ran as the SP editorial candidate. Defeated, he became Glenn Harden's associate editor and later feature editor. He has had professional newspaper experience on the Trenton Times.

The Student Party, which meets tonight to choose its standard bearer, apparently was caught flat by Dear's switch to an independent status. However, SP Chairman Ken Barton who was present at the UP nominating session last night had no comment to make on the strange twist.

Snook Won't Seek DTH Job, Has Moved

Harry Snook, hard-hitting DAILY TAR HEEL columnist and frequently mentioned as a candidate for the paper's editorship, will not run for the job.

The reason? Snook and his wife Pat have moved to Miami where they will return to the radio field. The pair left Chapel Hill Sunday. Both of the Snooks have had extensive experience in radio and they expect to work for a Miami radio station or else go into television.

Snook wrote the controversial "Nonplus" as a daily feature for this newspaper during the 1950-51 school year. Since that time, he has written several columns weekly. He and his wife originally are from Charlotte.

Job Bureau Is Successful In Placement

"Seniors—men and women, veterans and non-veterans can simplify job-hunting when they're ready to go to work," says Joe Galloway, Director of Placement, "if they will register with our office early and take advantage of campus interviews."

Last year the Placement Service arranged 1,811 interviews for the 237 representatives of business, industry and government who visited the campus to talk with students about employment after graduation or military service. Judging from inquiries already received, more interviewers will come to the University this year than ever before, Galloway predicted.

In addition to arranging employer interviews on the compus, the Placement Service handled 562 job opportunities reported by mail or telephone. Over 1,200 personnel folders of seniors, graduate students and alumni were mailed to prospective employers.

In order of greatest demand, employer requests, numbering 25 or more, were for salesmen, general business trainees and office

We Can Never Really Leave

Dr. Frank Graham Back Home After Peace Mission In India

By John Jamison

Dr. Frank came back home Friday night.

Dr. Frank Porter Graham, former president of the University, now a United Nations mediator, was in Chapel Hill for dinner and a brief visit with his sister, Mrs. Shipp Sanders.

In a sense the visit was a fulfillment of the promise Dr. Graham made in March, 1949, when he was appointed to the United States Senate by Governor Scott. At that time he told a crowd of 1,500 well-wishing students, "We will be back. We can never really leave this place."

In an interview with THE DAILY TAR HEEL, Dr. Graham explained that he had intended to be in Orange County on election day, but that the unexpected death last Wednesday of James A. Gray, longtime University Trustee and benefactor, brought him home several days earlier.

Dr. Graham has been in the United States for several weeks. Last week he made a report to the Security Council concerning his progress toward settling the four-year-old India - Pakistan dispute over possession of the old princely state of Kashmir. The state adjoins Red-ruled parts of Central Asia. He will return to New York this week.

The 66-year-old educator-statesman became president of the University of North Carolina in 1930. While holding this office, he was asked by the UN to serve as Chairman of the Good Offices Committee. U. S. Delegate Warren R. Austin praised the committee for its work in effecting a truce in the Dutch-Indonesian war.

Dr. Graham said in December, 1950, "The free peoples must stand resolutely together against appeasement of aggression and any surrender to the universal dominion of a world polict state." This was in a recommendation to the General Assembly of the UN.

Always Changing

This editorial is written on election eve. By the time you read this the final balloting will have been completed, the volcanic fury of the campaign will have simmered down to a dim echo, and the raucous party banners relegated to the systematic obliteration of the city disposal authorities.

One of the presidential candidates will bask in the mellow afterglow of victory. The other will watch his once-vibrant aspirations settle into the limbo of defeat. One party will feel as though the nation is theirs. The other will think America is lost. Fortunately, both will be wrong.

Regardless whether the next occupant of the White House is a beaming General from Kansas or a proven administrator from Illinois, the United States of America will continue as one of the few remaining places on earth where a man can choose his own occupation, succeed or fail by dint of his own perspiration, sleep undisturbed by the hobnail boot or the midnight knock on the door, and shout his unpopular convictions into the eardrums of the masses.

The foundations of our civilization are not likely to be rent asunder by a simple change of executives. We reject the glandular ravings which warn us that Adlai will lead us through "galloping socialism" and Ike will hurl us into war. A bi-partisan Congress will continue to debate the same issues with the final say-so resting ultimately with the people. The President with his veto, the Supreme Court with its rulings, and Congress with legislation will continue to eye one another vigilantly always ready to throw a body block when one branch steps out of bounds.

We believe that no matter how the election went last night, America will be the winner. Why? Perhaps the best explanation came from the lips of a newly-arrived Russian immigrant in New York who, when asked his opinion of our system of government, solemnly replied with a shrug, "What difference does it make? Any system would work over here."

Reviews & Previews

There is only one great movie coming up this week, but there are a number of films which also demand students' attention. Two of the latter will be showing today.

At the Carolina "Spanish Serenade" will be on display. It would be worth seeing if only because it is a Spanish picture with English sub-titles, a rarity in Chapel Hill. But there is much more to it than mere curiosity value. It is the life story of the famous Spanish composer Albeniz and is filled with his glorious music. The splendor of ancient Spain is portrayed in many elaborate scenes, and the acting, done by a cast unknown in America, is excellent. For a tremendous emotional experience this movie is highly recommended.

Playing at the Varsity on Wednesday is a wonderfully wacky film entitled "We're Not Married." In it are portrayed the reaction of five couples, who discover suddenly that due to a legal technicality, they are not actually married. Some of the episodes are touching; some are hysterically funny. But the best is the one in which Ginger Rogers and Fred Allen play a husband and wife radio team who can't stand each other, but are heard over the ether every morning billing and cooing over cups of well-advertised coffee. Miss Rogers and Allen play their parts to the hilt, as do the rest of the all-star cast, which includes Victor Moore, Paul Douglas, and Mitzi Gaynor. Oh, yes, for the Marilyn Monroe addicts—and who isn't these days—she's in there too.

Tar Heel At Large

FORT BRAGG—We've got an interesting innovation down here at this sand hills Army post. Elsewhere around the North State, young male citizens sweat out a slip of paper which comes through the mails bearing greetings from their friends and neighbors.

Here we sweat out a slip of paper which isn't nearly so cozy. It comes through the mails with greetings from the Secretary of the Army, and its essence is that the addressee is shortly to embark on a pleasure cruise by boat or airplane, departing from the west coast, and landing at the port of Pusan.

My slip came late last week.

Maybe I sound crazy to you, but in a way I'm glad that I am going. The job of the United States Army is to defend freedom, on the shores of the North American continent or in a foreign land, depending on where an aggressor strikes at the free peoples of the world.

At present the aggressor is waging war on a once-beautiful peninsula in the eastern hemisphere, which its age-old people call Chosen, the "Land of the Morning Calm."

The Kingdom of Chosen, known to the modern world as Korea, was founded in the north part of the peninsula by the Chinese in the 12th Century, B.C. Through the centuries, the little country has seen many a war, but not until the 20th Century did one appear as devastating as the present conflict, which has raged up and down the peninsula, laying waste the land that once was known as one of the most beautiful in the world.

Korea is no longer beautiful. It is bleak, barren and burned out. It is scarred both physically and psychologically, but the Korean people, in their patient, Oriental way, know that they will come through this war as they have come through all the others.

Our job as American soldiers is to help them come through the war—help them regain their battle-scarred land from the Red aggressors who have overrun it. That is why I am glad to be going to the Land of the Morning Calm.

CHAPEL HILL—Back in the "Land of the Morning Hangover" for the weekend, I begin to realize that what I will miss most when I hit the dusty trail for the Far East Command will be Chapel Hill.

The government, happily, gives us plenty of advance notice these days on overseas shipment. My orders tell me to report to the west coast for shipment early in February, which gives me three months to fight the War of Fort Bragg before I depart.

The schedule will place me on Sniper Ridge just about the middle of the winter, but at least I can look forward to the spring, and think of the azaleas blooming on the Hill, and I'm speaking of Chapel, not White Horse.

A tip to the draft-agers in the audience: Don't take Chapel Hill for granted. It is the most wonderful spot in the world, and you won't begin to realize that fact until you are forced to leave it.

Don't let the books slide, as I did when I was in school. You have plenty of time for extra-curriculars, partying, dating and studying, too, if you'll just use it properly.

You'll probably have more fun in college than at any other time in your life, but don't let it take over the entire 24 hours in each day. Save some of that time out for the work which will mean something to you after you leave school.

It's a helluva note to preach one thing after practicing another, according to the old saying, but there's another adage which tells us that hindsight is better than foresight. And I'm looking back.

BRIEF ONES: Has anyone heard the Republicans bragging about the Hoover administration? . . . Three cheers for Herbert Block, the Washington Post (and DAILY TAR HEEL) cartoonist whose marvelous, if definitely one-sided, sketches have been displaying the best sense of humor on politics so far . . . And I defy you to try to tell which side of the political fence he's sitting on. . .

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON—As the U. S. A. emerges from the hottest political campaign in 20 years some people may be rubbing their heads and wondering whether we can ever get back to an even keel and pull together as a united nation.

The answer is that, although feelings have run high, the current bitterness hasn't anywhere near approached the mud-slinging of many other notable elections. And out of all of these, with the exception of Lincoln's election, the nation emerged United and proceeded to forget the name-calling of the campaign.

Take one of the lesser elections of the past—the 1880 campaign when James A. Garfield, Republican, defeated Gen. Winfield Hancock, Republican. Garfield got smeared for supposedly receiving a $329 dividend from the ill-fated credit mobilier, was accused of stealing bedding from a Southern widow and of refusing to pay a tailor's bill in Troy, N. Y.

The Democrats even forged Garfield's name on a letter proposing the immigration of Chinese to California, while Hancock, in turn, was described by the Chicago Tribune as doing nothing "but eat, drink and enjoy himself sensually."

Garfield and the Republicans won by a small margin.

Hottest campaign of all followed four years later, by which time the Democrats had been out for 24 years, and put up Grover Cleveland in an all-out effort to recapture power. The GOP candidate, James G. Blaine, was immediately attacked as tainted by corruption and having "wallowed in spoils like a rhinoceros in an African pool."

Specifically the Democrats charged that he had accepted bribes from the Little Rock and Fort Smith railroad in Arkansas, and they also unearthed a letter to a business associate, Warren Fisher, which closed with "kind regards to Mr. Fisher. Burn this letter."

From this came the Democratic campaign chant:

"Burn this letter! Burn this letter Kind regards to Mrs. Fisher."

Also: "Blaine! Blaine! James G. Blaine!

The Con-ti-nen-tal liar from the state of Maine."

The Republicans countered with the charge that Cleveland had carried on illicit relations with a 36-year-old widow, Maria Halpin, who bore him an illegitimate child." Cleveland admitted this, countered by stating that he had paid for the child's support. Whereupon the Republicans chanted:

"Ma! Ma! Where's my Pa?

Gone to the White House. Ha! Ha! Ha!"

At the height of this mud-slinging which far surpassed any modern campaign, a group of clergymen called on Blaine and accused the Democrats of "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion." Blaine was imimediately charged with being anti-Catholici; this tipped the scale and cost him the election.

Nearest approach to the attitude of some people toward President Truman today was during the midterm of Andrew Johnson, who took office after Lincoln's assassination. There again, however, the American public was far more vindictive, more intolerant and more bitter than it is today.

Touring the country during the Congressional elections in 1866, Johnson was called a "traitor," "renegade," "great apostate." Unlike the children which have heckled Truman, his crowds meant business, and in Indianapolis, Johnson was driven from the platform by an angry mob yelling "we want nothing to do with traitors!" and which tore down his banners and killed several people.

Hatred of Johnson was at white heat because he, a former Democrat, proposed that southern civil war leaders be forgiven.

Bitterness against Lincoln during his election campaign was of course worst of all. The Charleston, S. C. Mercury described him as "a horrid looking wretch . . . sooty, scoundrelly in aspect, a cross between the horse swapper and the night man . . . He is a lanksided Yankee of the uncleanliest visage and of the dirtiest complexion. Faugh! After him what decent white man would be President."

Louis Kraar

Party Line

"What does the Legislature ever do anyway?" someone asked the other day with a frown.

Campus politicians gave him some answers filled with polysyllabic words and political doubletalk, and he slinked off just as confused.

The truth of the matter is: Legislature does have some definite powers which are usually exercised. The main things they actually do are appropriate the student budget, set up penalties for offenses by students, advise other groups, and PQLITIC.

The latter seems to be the main preoccupation of both parties about ninety-five percent of the time. Most legislators will admit this when cornered. But they are always careful to add, "don't quote me though."

BACK ROOM BOYS: Here's how one party nominates: the aspiring statesman talks to the head of the party. The party head arranges for the right people to talk for him at the party meeting—and brother he's in!

Another party is all but begging freshmen to attend nominations because of lack of prospective nominees. The yearlings should learn their XYZ's of political manuevering young that way.

POUNDING THE BEAT: Parliamentarian Joel Fleishman's (SP) Democratic campaign button with his own picture beside Adlai's . . . Legislature Clerk Wanda Philpot thanking this reporter for dubbing her a "pert majorette" in a featuré . . . Prexy Ham Horton (UP) explaining party politics that are "not to be quoted" . . . Ken Penegar's (SP) easy going talks explaining "my opinion" . . . Attorney-General Phin Horton (UP)—Ham's cozin—lending a helping hand to explain Legislature bills . . . Jerry Cook's "extremely technical" explanations that we sometimes wonder whether he understands himself . . .

Our Best Friends Won't Tell Us

CAROLINA'S FOOTBALL team is getting the unenviable reputation of just being half safe.

The Tar Heels, losers of their only four games have looked good during the first halves of their past two games, with Notre Dame and Tennessee, trailing by a single touchdown at the rest period in both cases. But in both games they came out on the wish-bone end of two long score, losing to the Fighting Irish, 34-14, and to the Volunteers, 41-14.

Last Saturday's first half against the Vols was cheering for the few Tar Heel fans who made the trip, and after Carolina had scored on a 65-yard pass play just 30 seconds before the half ended, there were those who had hope that we might take the Volunteers for the first time in four years.

The Carolina line had stopped the Tennessee running game pretty well—that is except for fullback Andy Kozar, who gained 60 yards on 11 tries in the first quarter. But he wasn't imposing the scoring threat that comes when you have to watch one man wide and another up the middle. The Volunteers had scored two touchdowns and one extra point but both were on passes and the Vols weren't expected to desert their much cussed and discussed running game to take to the air in the second half. The situation seemed fairly well in hand.

The Same Old Story

BUT THEN THAT THIRD quarter opened and, as had happened in the Notre Dame game, the Tennessee team started scoring, we started missing, and before you could say Bob Neyland, they had us, 34-7. A fumble on the first play from scrimmage set up one score, a sustained drive another, and an intercepted pass still another. The same thing had happened the weekend before at Notre Dame when the Irish scored two quick ones in the third quarter to jump a half-time score of 14-7 up to 27-7.

It's hard to say just exactly what it is that hits the Tar Heels in the second half and brings discredit to a well-played first half. Not only does the other team start scoring, but our offense starts bogging down and in attempts to get going our statistics take a beating when our passer gets smeared trying long pass plays. Of course, statistics never won a ball game, but that six point print telling who ran how far is usually one of the first things a sports page reader consults.

But whatever it is that jinxes us in the second half will have to be shaken off by Saturday when we run into Virginia. The Cavaliers have lost two straight games after riding a national ranking for the early weeks of the season and there's Carolina blue in their eyes. They lost an expected one to Duke two weeks ago, but last Saturday they surprised everybody including themselves by bowing to South Carolina, which scored three times in the final minute and 45 seconds to win, 21-14.

Weather—Still Cloudy

THE OUTLOOK DOESN'T look too bright either, for the Tar Heels are still shackled with the same injuries (plus others) that maimed them in the Tennessee game. Linebacked Junior Seawell, who has been one of the most dependable players all year, will probably miss the game along with speedy Ken Keller, the little freshman halfback who has scored twice this year. The safety position will be short with Billy Williams, T. Dil Bullock and Sonny Ridenhour nursing intermittent injuries.

The return of John Gaylord will give the backfield a little extra strength, however, something it has sorely needed since Bob White was hurt at Notre Dame and Keller at Tennessee. Gaylord suffered a finger injury against Texas and hasn't seen action since that game. There is an outside chance that Seawell will be able to play, too, but his action will certainly be curtailed.

Any way you look at it, though, the road ahead seems just as rocky as the mountain path we've already been over. But if the injuries don't weaken our reserve strength too much then Saturday's game with Virginia ought to be interesting, to say the least.

Gaylord Returns At Halfback; Seawell Ready For UVa. Game

By Tom Peacock

Junior Seawell and John Gaylord, injured players on Carolina's football team whose condition has been doubtful, will definitely be ready for Saturday's game with Virginia.

Seawell was hurt in the Tennessee game after playing an important role in holding the Vols to a 13-7 lead at halftime from his linebacker position. His loss was considered the most damaging of all to the Tar Heels.

Gaylord had a finger broken in the Texas game, and has missed games and practice since. He was a sophomore sensation last season, and played an outstanding game at fullback against Texas before he was hurt.

Gaylord has practiced all this week, stepping into the first string right halfback post, and Seawell is expected to be ready today.

The addition of Gaylord and Seawell leaves Carolina with only two men on the injured list, halfbacks Ken Keller and Bob White. Keller will be out for an indefinite length of time, but cannot see action against the Cavaliers, and White is also lost this week. Keller injured his knee in the Tennessee game, and White suffered a broken cheek against Notre Dame.

Carolina Coach Carl Snavely, put the team through contact work and light scrimmage yesterday for the first time this week. The Tar Heels are in good shape after meeting three first rate teams in the past three weeks, and Snavely doesn't expect to stress rought stuff as long as the team stays in condition.

With the injury situation in as good a shape as could be hoped for, and the team in high spirits for Saturday's homecoming game, prospects for the Tar Heels' making the win column rose considerably.

The Carolina offense has improved steadily, and will be about at its peak by the end of the week. Until injuries literally riddled the Tar Heel line against Tennessee, the Vols had a hard time moving the ball. In addition to Seawell and Gaylord, Ed Patterson, Tom Higgins, Sonny Ridenhour, and all the players who were forced to leave the Tennessee game are all back in uniform.

The team ran through a large majority of its plays yesterday, and then had a light touch of scrimmage in a secret practice. Pass defense was stressed, as the Vols did well on aerials against Carolina, and Virginia has a top-notch passer in quarterback Mel Roach. Virginia is the fourth T team to meet Carolina this year.

The jayvees ran Virginia's plays, against the first string defense.

The Cavaliers have lost but two games this year, last week to South Carolina and the week before against Duke. Duke was too powerful for coach Art Guepe's charges, but South Carolina won on a fluke, scoring three touchdowns in the last minute and 46 seconds of the game to win 21-14.

Hockey Team Plays Today

Carolina coeds clash with the Meredith hockey team this afternoon in Kenan Stadium at 4:30 p.m.

Playing for Carolina this afternoon will be Carolyn Johnson, Evelyn Oettinger, Dot Lowenstein, Diana Bourne, Pepper Stetson, Grace Gordon, Sue Buchanan, Mary Lu Mercer, Jeanie Williamson, Margaret Dickinson, Betsy Norwood, Liz Cooley, Mary Davis, Barbara Hulse, Pat Noah and Roz Brown.

The hockey club is coached by Miss Elizabeth Collett, faculty advisor and Miss Doris Hutchinson.

The team will play Guilford on November 12, and Woman's College on November 19. The schedule for ohter games will be released later.

Last year the hockey club played six games, winning three, losing two and tieing one.

Five Statistics Leaders Are Displaced In Conference

All five Southern Conference individual statistics leaders last week were displaced as a result of Saturday's play, with VMI's Bill Brehany pulling the biggest surprises by taking over first place in passing and total yardage.

Although the Keydets were trounced at West Point, Brehany gained 217 yards by passing alone and rushed for five more. His total-offense yardage of 983 for seven games surpassed the 926 of the season long leader, Ed Mioduszewski, whose William and Mary team did not play, and his 17 completions made 55 altogether—far ahead of Richmond's Bobby Tyler, who was limited to two by Virginia Tech.

THE GREEKS Had Words For It—

Someone (he has, understandably, asked that his name be kept secret, but he can be found in a certain dilapidated bookshop hereabouts) has said "From Homer to the Acropolis, the Greeks were topodopolis."

While deploring the levity, your friends in the Intimate Bookshop find themselves in hearty accord with this sentiment.

Our supply of Loeb Classics is as complete as their somewhat eratic publishing schedule will allow. When we go out to buy old books, we keep our eyes peeled for old books in Greek.

Among the books in English — which many of our customers also speak — you'll find such books as Livingstone's "Legacy of Greece," Taylor's "Socrates," Hamiltons "The Greek Way" and "Greek Poetry for Everyman," translated by Lucas. We've been making quite a hit with our $1.98 edition of Hyde's "Ancient Greek Mariners."

AND WE'RE BATTIN' FOR LATIN

Beside the ever-present Loeb editions, our stock includes translations ranging from the inexpensive Penguin edition of Tacitus to the C. Day Lewis translation of The Aeneid, and on to certain editions more famed for utility than beauty.

Whatever your interest, the big broad stock of The Intimate Bookshop has a book for you!

CONFERENCE IN THE CLOUDS

Among the undergraduates on any college campus, you'll find the talk reaching up to the clouds. And once in a while—in a classroom, around a study table, or even in a bull session—a really big idea is born.

Big ideas come, too, from the men and women in laboratories, business offices, shops. But often these professionals are exploring a path first glimpsed in college.

How do we know? Because of the many college people who have come into the Bell System, where big ideas and a lot of dreams have taken their place in progress. The human voice, carried along a wire, first across a town, then a state, a nation, and now the world. Music and pictures and things happening delivered into cities and hamlets all across the land by radio and television networks.

We're always looking for the men and women who get big ideas—whether they're about people, or machines, or ways of doing things. Your Placement Officer can give you details about opportunities for employment in the Bell System.

Topflight Marine Band Will Play Here Soon

By Walt Ernst

The United States Marine Band, foremost symphonic military concert band in the world, will make its first appearance in the Chapel Hill area Tuesday, Nov. 18, with performance in Memorial Hall at 8 p.m.

Presented under the auspices of the Student Entertainment Committee, students will be admitted free upon presentation of their ID cards.

Conducted by Lt. Col. William F. Santelmann, the Marine Band is known to millions of Americans through its three weekly coast-to-coast radio broadcasts, its frequent television appearances, and its concerts in the nation's capital. The annual tours, which started under the direction of John Philip Sousa in 1891, have afforded Americans living outside the Washington area an opportunity to see and hear the world-famous Marine Band, whose history goes back further than that of the Capital City itself.

Familiarly known as "The President's Own", the Marine Band has played for every inauguration since Thomas Jefferson's. Founded in 1798 by an Act of Congress, the band has played for all official functions in the Nation's Capital and all important history-making events in this country since that date.

This 154-year-old musical organization, which has been a part of White House social life since 1801, was the first band in the U.S. military service and the first to receive Congressional recognition. Now on its annual fall tour, the United States Marine Band steps directly from its White House engagements into the cities and towns of America.

The United States Marine Band will be the first presentation brought to the campus this year by the Student Entertainment Committee. Other performances now under contract for the winter and spring are Nadine Connor, Fred Waring's Chorus, and Ogden Nash.

The members of the SEC are Chairman Bob Simmons, Bill Watt, Walt Ernst, and Bill Brain. Profs. Samuel Selden of the Dramatic Art Department, William Newman of the Music Department and Olin Moujon of the Commerce Department are the faculty advisers.

Baby Makes 3 For Kay And Georgia

Singer-Actresss Georgia Carroll made it a family of three girls Monday for husband Kay Kyser.

Mrs. Kyser gave birth to a seven-pound, eight-ounce girl at Duke Hospital in Durham. The baby has not yet been named.

The Kysers now are residents of Chapel Hill, where Kyser went to school and began his band-leading career. He retired from the entertainment world several years ago after gaining national radio and screen fame. Mrs. Kyser was featured vocalist with her husband's band and appeared in several motion pictures.

The couple already had two children—both girls.

Although both were bottled up by Vanderbilt, Randy Broyles regained his rushing lead from Washington and Lee teammate Wes Abrams, 553 to 544. William and Mary's terrific backfield quartet of Tommy Koller, Bruce Sturgess, Bill Bowman and Ed Mioduszewski held four of the next six places despite their idleness.

Jimmy Byron of VMI enjoyed his best day of the season at West Point with eight catches, giving him 24 for the season, two more than Bob Thomas of W & L last week's leader.

Paul Chapman of The Citadel displaced Carolina's Bud Wallace for the first time in punting, holding his 41.6 average per kick as Wallace faded to 41.3.

In other passing categories besides completions, Tyler of Richmond is the Conference's busiest passer with 225 throws, Johnny Dean of Virginia Tech has had the most interceptions, 15; Brehany of VMI is far ahead in yardage with 961.

West Virginia overtook Duke in one Southern Conference statistical department this week, regained another first place and held onto a third to continue its statistical domination of the Conference. Duke still leads two phases.

The Mountaineers, an offensive leader all season, partially blocked Duke's stranglehold on defensive honors by slipping into the rushing defense lead after holding George Washington to 42 yards. Duke, losing heavily to Georgia Tech, dropped to third behind Wake Forest and West Virginia, which leads with a 109.7-yard allowance per game.

The Blue Devils managed to hang onto their overall defense and pass-defense advantages, 198.6 and 54.7 yards respectively.

West Virginia held its total-offense lead at 368 yards per game and regained first place in rushing with a 250.7, a scant two yards ahead of Duke. Virginia Military, despite losing to Army, raised its passing-yardage average by 16 yards to 143.1, well ahead of West Virginia.

Trustee Praised

By Dr. Frank P. Graham

In the death of James A. Gray the University has lost a most devoted and generous son, the state a foremost citizen, industry a national leader and the church a devout member and generous benefactor.

I recall that during my first week in the University he enlisted me as a member of the YMCA. He was an active worker in the religious life of the campus and treasurer of the Y. In fact he was treasurer or manager of many campus organizations. The students, in appreciation of his efficiency, punctuality, thoroughness and high sense of responsibility for every task undertaken, gave him the nickname of "Manager Gray." He made a record as manager of the varsity baseball team remembered by the old timers to this day.

Upon graduation in the class of 1908, he became a clerk in the Wachovia Bank. By dint of hard work, which was a constant part of his life, he rose on his merits to be the second officer of one of the largest banking and trust institutions in the South and then to be the president and chairman of the board of one of the largest industrial enterprises in the world.

With all his absorption in large business affairs his three great loves were his family, his church and his University. He shared a beautiful home life with his devoted wife who, like the noble Roman matron, found their jewels in their children.

As churchman he was regular in attendance, modest but generous in benefactions to the Methodist Churches in Winston-Salem and Chapel Hill and for orphaned children and old people. He provided endowments for Methodist colleges in North Carolina and Japan.

At the time of his death he was in point of service the senior member of the University Board of Trustees. He long gave conscientious service as chairman of the finance committee of the Board and had a large part in the development of the Kenan Endowment. He himself provided the endowment for three chairs in the University Department of Religion. His love of the University was unpretentious and deep. He never failed a call of alma mater. He inculcated this love in his sons and helped to inculcate it in his nephews. One of these nephews carries on with high devotion and ability as president of the Threefold University of North Carolina.

One of the joys of the old Carolina-Virginia football series on Thanksgiving Day was to see Jim Gray teaching his sons a loyalty, win or lose, to something bigger than the game which was ever associated in his life with Chapel Hill.

—Phi Delts—

Lambda Chi's were knocking on the Phi Delt goal line when the game ended.

Chi Psi-2 took advantage of two offensive lapses by the Phi Delt-2 club in taking their 8-0 win. Bradshaw ran through the Phi Delt line early in the first half to tag the Phi Delt runner, automatically scoring a safety and two points for the winners. The Chi Psi's came back in the second half to score their only touchdown of the contest as Osborne blocked a Phi Delt kick and took it in the end zone.

DKE-2 took to the air in tossing their way to a lop-sided 38-6 win over the hapless Sig Nu-1 club. Maddry and Lee were the offensive leaders in the winner's attack, each scoring two touchdowns during the contest.

Maddry pulled in his first scoring pass from Wilson, and then another aerial from the same fellow late in the second half. Lee hauled in passes from Wilson and Hood to score his goals. Maddry also passed to Lidly for a touchdown and an extra point. The only other point after touchdown compiled in the game came on a pass from Hood to Lidly. Beeker scored the Sig Nu goal on an interception.

The DKE-1 squad started playing too late in their contest as Delt Sig Pi won, 13-0. Harold Rhodes was the leader in the Delt Sig attack, scoring one touchdown and adding the only extra point after the first TD. Loftin Fouks went over for the second Delt Sig score.

workers, accountants, chemists, production and personnel trainees, physicists, banking and retailing trainees.

Beginning salaries in business, industry, and government (excluding teaching) reported during 1951-52 by persons registered with the Placement Service, ranged from $150 to $595 per month. Fourteen students began working for less than $175 a month, while 9 Ph.D.'s listed salaries in excess of $500. The model salary range was $250-$274, with other salaries varying up or down.

Galloway urged liberal arts majors, as well as mathematics, science, and business students, to explore opportunities for college graduates. Of the liberal arts majors who registered for placement assistance last year, 159 reported jobs in business, industry and government.

Approximately 40 per cent of the jobs accepted last year by placement registrants were out of state. In some cases, however, the men will be transferred to North Carolina after training. According to Galloway, generally higher salaries often attract persons out of state for their first jobs; but if history repeats itself this year.

500 Scouts Will Pitch Tents In Emerson Today

Program Here To Center On Boys' Futures

Three-Day Meet Features Tests By UNC Agency

The University is host today to 500 Explorer Scouts from all over the state who arrive for a three-day Explorer Vocational Conference.

Under the guidance of Conference Chief Roy Armstrong, UNC Director of Admissions and President of the Occoneechee Council of the Boy Scouts, the young men will follow a program designed to help them select their life's work.

After pitching tents on Emerson Field and having supper at adjoining Lenoir Hall, the Explorers will gather at Hill Hall for the kick-off meeting with Jim Wallace, Scoutmaster, Troop 9, Chapel Hill, presiding. Ham Horton, president of the student body, will welcome the group on behalf of the University. Herman Husbands, Chapel Hill, Explorer chairman for the meet, will introduce Dr. Ike Greer, executive vice-president of the Business Foundation of North Carolina who will address the Scouts on "Making the Most of Opportunities."

At 8:30 p.m. the Explorers will take vocational tests given by the University Testing Service. After this, many of the boys will take in the movie, "Room for One More," at the Carolina Theatre. E. Carrington Smith of the theatre obtained this Cary Grant movie with a Scouting flavor especially for the conference, he said.

Tomorrow will be devoted to a look-see into some 14 different vocations. The Explorers will each take a choice of a total of four of the fields which they would like to hear more about from an expert in the field. At 9 a.m. they will choose between hearing from Dr. E. McG. Hedgpeth, Infirmary director, and Dr. Bill Morgan tell about medicine; Law School Dean Henry Brandis speaking on the opportunities in law; Dr. Richard Beard describing the possibilities in teaching and the education world; Dr. J. H. Lampe, dean of State's School of Engineering, forecast the future in engineering; Dr. O. K. Cornwell, chairman of the Department of Physical Education, tell the athletic story, and Associate Dean Jim Parrish of the School of Business Administration talk on the business world.

At 11 a.m. the Scouts will rotate, choosing one of the following: law, education, business administration, engineering, physical education, and the added topic, social work and recreation. It will be handled by Dean Arthur E. Fink of social work and Dr. Harold D. Meyer, consultant to the N. C. Recreation Commission.

Afternoon subjects will be chemistry, radio, agriculture, forestry and conservation, archaeology and history, chemistry and physics, all with faculty members.

The Explorers will lend their voices to the student pep rally tomorrow night. The final vocational session will be Saturday morning with a challenge from

NEWS IN BRIEF

SEOUL—Bloody fighting flared yesterday for Triangle Hill and Sniper Ridge as the 23-day struggle for the Korean Central Front heights reached its heaviest action. Chinese Communists, behind tremendous artillery fire from their Osong Mountain stronghold, dented the South Korean line on the crest of Sniper Ridge but the South Koreans counterattacked and hand-to-hand fighting flared there at last report.

WASHINGTON—Dwight D. Eisenhower's aides indicated that the new president-elect will fly to Korea in late November or early December for a personal appraisal of the battlefront situation and the long stalemated truce negotiations. The General is committed to finding a "speedy and honorable" settlement of the Korean war, and other critical foreign policy problems confronting him.

Dorms Given Visiting Rules For Weekend

Members of the Inter-dormitory Council in a recent meeting approved campus-wide visiting in men's dormitories for the Virginia-Carolina homecoming game Saturday.

Parents, friends, and dates of the dormitory residents will be permitted to visit in the social rooms of the dormitories immediately following the football game until 6:30 p.m. Parents may also visit in the rooms of the dormitory.

The dormitory president or his appointed representative will be present in the dormitory during the visiting hours.

The following regulations are in effect: (1) The Campus Code will be strictly observed in regard to language and personal conduct during these hours. (2) During visiting hours all residents of dormitories will appear

Midnight Is Deadline For Nominations

Independent nominations for fall elections must be in by 12 o'clock tonight, Elections Board Chairman Jerry Cook reminded yesterday.

Grade qualifications certified by the Dean of Students office must accompany a petition of 25 names and must be signed by the candidate. Petitions should be turned in at the vice-president's office in Graham Memorial between 4 p.m. and midnight.

A compulsory meeting of all candidates and party chairmen will be held Monday night at 7:30 in Gerrard Hall. A candidate having an unexcused absence will not be able to run in the fall elections.

The Elections Board will meet this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the vice-president's office in Graham Memorial. All members are required to attend.

Ike's 442 Electoral Votes Record; Both Houses GOP

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower Tuesday broke all voting records in his landslide of 442 electoral votes. Stevenson got 89.

The 62-year-old war hero sat back tired and happy yesterday with his bid to become the 34th president of the United States a whopping success. Wildly cheered when he appeared in a New York hotel ballroom, Eisenhower said it was a "day of dedication rather than triumph" and pledged that he never will give "short weight" to his responsibilities in Washington.

Republicans captured control of the Senate by a 49-47 majority. However, the key figure among the 49 GOP members is Sen. Wayne Morse of Oregon, political maverick who hasn't said how he'll stand in the new Congress. He voted against Ike in Tuesday's election. The GOP also had the necessary 218 seats in the House for a majority and appeared likely to get at least five more when the final count is in.

Eisenhower carried his party to the most smashing victory ever given a presidential candidate. Out of the more than 56,000,000 who voted, Ike has 31,000,000 to Adlai Stevenson's 25,000,000 with 15,000 precincts still unreported.

The magnitude of Eisenhower's personal popularity was demonstrated when he not only won the northern states but carried Florida, Tennessee and Virginia as well. He was leading yesterday in Texas and had captured the border states of Oklahoma and Maryland.

GOP Sen. Kem of Missouri lost to Stuart Symington but Sens. McCarthy (Wisc.) and Jenner of Indiana both were re-elected. Sen. Blair Moody (D-Mich) lost to Charles Potter.

Yesterday, Ike turned down President Truman's offer of his personal plane for the general's trip to Korea, "if you still want to make it." The president-elect said he would go "in any military plane" and planned the trip before his inauguration Jan. 20.

Adlai Edges Ike By 324 In Chapel Hill

A complete count of local voting in Tuesday general elections showed the Democrats passed their slate as expected in Chapel Hill.

A totaling of the vote for the Chapel Hill north and south and the Carrboro precincts gave Stevenson a 324 vote edge on Eisenhower—2,479 to 2,155. The Democratic nominee captured the Chapel Hill precincts and lost in Carrboro. On all tickets the Republican nominee got higher votes percentagewise in Carrboro than in Chapel Hill.

An all-time record-breaking total of 4,711 persons cast their ballots in the three local precincts. In Chapel Hill this represented about 70 percent of the 5,520 registered voters.

A further examination of the local balloting showed William B. Umstead received better than a three to one edge over Republican nominee Seawell for governor. The total for this race was Umstead, 3,154, Seawell, 970. However, in Chapel Hill's North Precinct, Umstead was running about 500 votes behind almost all other Democratic nominees on the state ticket. Carl Durham, Democratic nominee for re-election to Congress swept in with 3,516 votes to a light 931 for Republican Louis

Folk Dance Clinic Slated Next Week

Gene Gowing, considered the leading authority on the history and traditions of folk dancing in English-speaking nations, will conduct a free clinic here all next week.

Gowing, operator of a folk dancing school in the midst of New Hampshire's White Mountains, will direct his campus course in the Women's Gymnasium. Students and townspeople alike are invited to participate.

Parties will be held at 8 p.m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday of next week. Caller's clinics will convene at 8 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday of that week. Gowing also will instruct the Folk Dance Club at its meeting at 4 p.m. next Thursday. The club will hold an open session that day.

For the past 15 years Gowing has collected and taught English folk dances and American square dancing. During the summer he operates the Folkways Foundation, which offers courses to those who wish to introduce folk dancing into schools and community programs.

He has studied at the Sharp House in London.

D. C. DeJong Will Teach Writing Class

David Carnel DeJong, well-known Dutch-American novelist, will be a visiting lecturer for the English Department during the Winter Quarter.

He will teach English 54, the department's course in advanced creative writing, which wil be limited to a group of young writers who already have given indication of talent.

Students who wish to register for DeJong's class should apply this week to Miss Jessie Rehder in the department. The class is scheduled for 11 o'clock and will be limited to 15 people.

Born in the Netherlands, DeJong came to the United States at the age of 13 and settled in Grand Rapids, Mich. After taking an A.B. degree at Calvin College in 1929, he went to Duke University on a fellowship and received an M.A. in 1933. While in residence at Calvin and at Duke, he had short stories and poetry accepted by several leading literary publications.

State Bands Will Produce Game Music

Fifteen hundred band members from all over the state will take to the field Saturday in a mammoth musical program for the Carolina-Virginia game.

Twenty-two visiting high school bands will join the Virginia and Carolina bands in the halftime demonstration at the Homecoming game, Earl Slocum, director of the University band, said yesterday.

Visiting high school bands and their directors are Kernersville - Walkerton, Charles Ballance; Morganton, M. T. Cousins; Wadesboro, Harold Grant; Lenoir, James Harper; Albemarle, Spencer Hatley; Kings Mountain, Joe Hedden; Mooresville, Robert Klepfer; Hamlet, E. W. Litaker; Farmville, Newton Maenhant; Jamestown, Robert Ingram; Wilkes Central, Claude Jarrett; Lincolnton, James Moore; Lumberton, Harry Grasser; Concord, George Peck; Lewisville, John Rae; Smithfield, Lee Rogers; Kinston, Harry Shipman; Rockingham, Mrs. Theo Smith; Chapel Hill, Joseph Fields; Scotland, William Webster; Roanoke Rapids, George Baird, and Fairmont, L. D. Atkins.

Honor Councils Seek Additional Candidates

The Bi-Partisan Selection Board will continue its meetings today at 3:30 in the Men's Council room, Graham Memorial, to nominate candidates for the campus honor councils in the Nov. 18 election.

Interested students should apply. Those who plan to run independently must have a petition of 25 names filed by tonight with the Elections Board.

Vote Is 10 To 7 Over Jamison For DTH Post

Loyalty Question Provokes Members During Nomination

By Louis Kraar

"Is Walt Dear's running as an independent candidate a repudiation of the Student Party?"

The Student Party last night answered no to this question posed by Gene Cook, and endorsed Walt Dear, Publications Board chairman and independent candidate, for the editor of The Daily Tar Heel by 10 to 7.

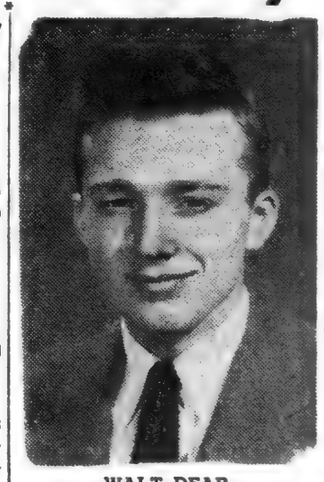
John Jamison, veteran staff member, polled the seven votes even after stating, "I don't intend to be a candidate."

In supporting Dear, the SP is giving its endorsement, but not its nomination. Dear will remain an independent. Dear's experience in newspapering includes work on the Trenton Times, summer editor and other positions on The Daily Tar Heel is present chairman of the Publications Board.

Dear made a bid for the University Party nomination Tuesday night in an effort to gain double endorsement. After losing the UP nomination to Biff Roberts, Daily Tar Heel sports editor, Dear announced that he would run as an independent.

Henry Lowett, speaking for Dear, said, "Although Walt has decided to run as an independent, he is still the best qualified for the job. It is up to the party to nominate the best qualified man." He praised Dear for his independency from partisan politics.

Julian Mason countered, "I am not condemning Walt for trying for the UP nomination. This is a political race. But I do feel that he is afraid to express his own convictions." He cited Jamison, as "just as good" and added, "I think we'll probably lose the election, but how can we support one who is afraid to express himself?"



Jody Levey, Daily Tar Heel news editor, praised Jamison for "his outstanding ability as a journalist."

Cook spoke for Dear saying, "I don't care if a man is even nominated by the University Party. We should pick the best man regardless of party." He added, "Dear has promised us nothing politically, so we can expect impartial coverage. We all know Roberts wrote the worst slop during last year's election. We can't have that happen again."

Dave Buckner, former Daily Tar Heel managing editor and one of the leading supporters of Dear, said that selection of another candidate would be a "human sacrifice." This hinted that some party members were trying to insert a third candidate in order to make a run off vote necessary. Other prominent party members supported the move for a third candidate. Since a majority is necessary in the election of editor, there would be a strong possibility of a runoff.

At the suggestion of Lowett, an official resolution of endorsement was made. It read:

"The Student Party, in accordance with its beliefs and principles to nominate or endorse the best possible candidate for a given job, endorses Walt Dear for the editorship of The Daily Tar Heel. His superior experience and superior journalism qualify Mr. Dear to receive the SP endorsement even though he promises nothing to the party in return except to wage a vigorous campaign and if elected, maintain an unbiased student newspaper."

4 From Asia To Speak On Panel Forum

"Japan and Okinawa Today" will be under discussion tonight when the YMCA world supper forum is held at 5:30 in the second floor dining room of Lenoir.

Four Oriental students will take part in the panel discussion sponsored by the Y World Relatedness Commission.

Taeko Fujita, an English major from Tokyo, will speak on life and cultural aspects in Japan from the feminine view point. Sadao Morita, also an English major from Tokyo, will discuss student life in universities in Japan. Hiroshi Takano, a radio and economics major from Tokyo, will cover the political situation in Japan and Heikichi Urasaki, a freshman from Okinawa, will discuss Okinawa's attitude toward the United States.

Panel chairman will be Y Vice-president Jack Becker who was stationed in Okinawa and Japan during the war. An exhibit of pictures, maps and literature will be displayed at the forum.

'Man's Faith' Panel Topic Friday Night

"What Is the Faith of Modern Man?" will be the topic of a panel discussion Friday night at 8 o'clock in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

The panel will be composed of Dr. E. Maynard Adams of the Philosophy Department, Dr. Arnold Nash of the Department of Religion, Dr. Joseph Straley of the Physics Department and Dr. William Poteat, moderator, from the Philosophy Department.

The discussion will be sponsored by the forum committee of the Student Union Activities Board.

The pattern of the forum will be a statement of each panel member's opinion on the subject, followed by a brief rebuttal, and concluded by a question and answer session between the audience and the panel. A reception will be given after the forum.

Another forum will be held Dec. 5, with the expected topic to be concerned with the so-called mistakes in foreign policy since the first Franklin Roosevelt administration.

Members of the forum committee include Caroline Traynham, Bruce Marger, Charles Yarborough and Henry Lowet, chairman.

Rally Tomorrow

There will be a pep rally tomorrow at 6 o'clock following Charlie Spivak's Memorial Hall concert.

Those not attending the concert are asked to meet at Memorial Hall at 6 o'clock to join in the rally. It will be short, cheerleaders said.

The Coed Boycott

We were very much disturbed by a letter published in THE DAILY TAR HEEL the other day from several frustrated coeds.

We seriously doubt the fact that 90 per cent of the girls don't have dates for the Germans this week end, but we are sure that a very large number are without dance partners.

This is a campus-shaking situation.

The coeds are the girls who make themselves attractive from 8 o'clock in the morning until 11 o'clock at night. They are the girls who lend you their Political Science notes, who are available at the last minute for a date any night in the week. They are always around when you need them. But when a big week comes along, they are boycotted.

Now we are the first to admit that the boys are not entirely to blame for the Fall of the Coed. Various factors interrupt social liaison on the campus. And since the coeds are unable to abide by the rule, "When in fraternity houses, do as the Greeks do," the Greeks don't have the word for welcome.

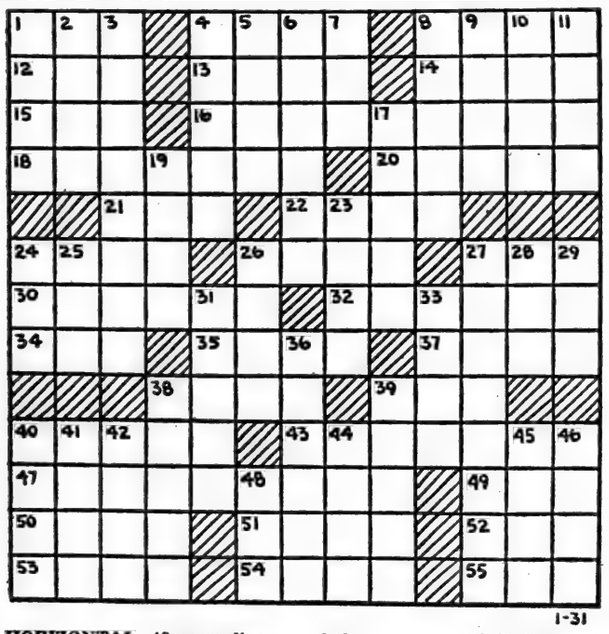
Although much improvement has been made by the dorms and various organizations on the campus, the non-fraternity man-coed relationship is obviously still a problem. Because the fraternity house serves as a good meeting place, this segment has a greater opportunity to know the girls. In this way, the dorm men are at a disadvantage; hence, they don't date the coeds.

We hope that by Midwinters, at least one of three things will have happened:

1. The fraternity men will stand by the girls who stand by them Monday through Friday.
2. Better arrangements will be made for the non-fraternity men to meet the coeds.
3. The University will cure the coed of Fraternity House Plague.

NOW IS THE TIME FOR SOMEBODY TO COME TO THE AID OF THE COED.

Welcome Explorers



Five hundred explorer scouts from all over North Carolina will shake hands with the University today through Saturday.

The three-day Explorer Vocational Conference will take the boys on a vocational expedition which will include interest tests and lecture demonstrations in medicine, law, education, business administration, engineering, physical education, social work and recreation, chemistry, radio, agriculture, forestry and conservation, archaeology, and history.

Big game for the explorers will be provided by the Carolina and Virginia football teams Satudray afternoon in Kenan Stadium. Following the game, a dance in the Naval Armory will conclude the week end's activities.

We hope the boys like what they see in three days, and will pitch their tents at Carolina for four years. Happy hunting!

Editor:

This is in answer to a complaint about Carolina coeds not being invited to the Fall Germans this weekend.

Let me say that I can indeed feel for you because, you see, I'm confronted with a similar situation. That is—I can't seem to get a coed to go to the dance with me. My situation is typical of the majority of the male populace at Carolina.

Let's dispense with the worn-out assertion that our coeds are not wanted at social functions simply because they are not allowed to drink in fraternity houses. I've listened to this complaint for three years now. To begin with, no more than 20% of the student body are fraternity members. What about the other 80% that are not? The latter is in reference to the ordinary Joe Blow dorm resident and boys that live in town. How can he be included in or blamed for the fact that coeds can't drink in fraternity houses? But yet he must be blamed if you want to say that coeds are not wanted at social functions simply because they can't drink in fraternity houses." This isn't quite fair. The fact is that most dorm residents are willing and able to escort coeds to social functions, but they never get a chance! And I think it's true that "coeds should be insulted because the boys don't respect them enough to date them and willingly adhere to coed restrictions." Again I point to the percentage of the student body which is fraternity and ask you whether dorm men are to be included in this?

Come now, aren't you complaining simply that you don't like the rule about coeds drinking in fraternity houses? Do something about it if you don't like it. And if you can't then you should forget about it. Drinking in fraternity houses is here to stay. That's all there is to it!

Let's take a look at the real reasons why our oeds are shunned from such social functions as the Fall Germans. It's time someone gave it to you gals straight. You asked for it and now you'll get it! It's a sad case indeed that "90% of the coeds on this campus, outnumbered by men five to one, find it impossible to obtain dates for one of the biggest weekends of the year." If I were a woman under these circumstances I would hide my head in shame. The awful truth is that you have no one to blame but yourselves. As a whole, you're the most conceited, pampered, and spoiled bunch of women I've ever seen.

Why don't you girls try coming down to earth. Get your head out of he clouds. Try treating all the boys nice once in a while. You seem to think that you are God's gift to man.

There are some 3,000 plus boys in the dorms that would jump at the chance to go to a dance with our coeds if they thought they had a chance in Hell of doing so. The general concensus of opinion is that it's a 100 to one shot that the ordinary man can get a date with a Carolina coed. Whose fault is this?

Face the facts, girls. Clean up your own house before you try to blame someone else. I leave you with the following thought: "The pleasures of life are all about you. One has but to open her eyes and see and reach out to take them."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON — With the hectic election period over, the United States will have to give some attention to our badly neglected field of foreign affairs, particularly to the wave of anti-American propaganda now sweeping the various parts of the world.

For some time, due to the charges and countercharges of the candidates, positive policy by the State Department has been pretty much suspended. So, likewise, with some of our most important allies. Both Foreign Secretary Eden and Foreign Minister Schuman have delayed any important pronouncements on foreign affairs until after elections; in fact, even urged other United Nations members to postpone the General Assembly meeting until after November 4.

One of the most shocking developments which the United States will have to do something about is the barrage of scurrilous propaganda in Korea, charging us with atrocities against Korean women. The details in some cases are almost too revolting to be printed in family newspapers, but Russian and satellite publications are spewing this poison every day.

While the Voice of America is trying to counteract it, its budget, thanks to the pruning of irascible Sen. Pat McCarran, has been drastically cut.

Here are illustrations of what the North Koreans are telling Asia about us.

North Korean newspaper Minchu chosen reports this eerie account of U.N. troops in the district of Echu:

"American soldiers picked all the young women out of the crowd (of natives) and locked them in empty warehouses. All the women were then raped. The American butchers began to brand patches on the women's bodies with heated irons and nails.

"All the women who resisted the ravishers had a wire put through their nose by the Americans and they were led by this wire through the village. The monsters gouged out the eyes of many women and hacked lumps of flesh out of their bodies.

"The butchers disembowled several pregnant women who fell into their hands during the temporary occupation of the town of Sariwen."

The journal New Korea also reported in a recent issue that Americans "tortured more than 700 patriots near Mount Mirosan." This lying article, obviously dictated by a higher communist echelon, went on to say:

"The murderers seared them with heated irons, knocked out their teeth, cut off their noses, and gouged out their eyes. They led the women naked through the streets and then shot them. In the village of Duchen, Pyonyang district, the American bandits arranged a so-called 'exhibition of reds.' After tying the hands and feet of 130 patriots, they bound them to trees and for a long time gave them no food. All the 130 people died.

"Once," the communist article continued, "The American butchers led out more than 30 young women and girls on the street in this village. Many of the women had children. The American monsters brought this group to the Nekyagor gorge, where a pit several meters long was already dug.

"The women were placed at the edge of the pit. One of the escorts went up to a woman with a child in her arms and bayoneted her from behind and then kicked the body into the pit. Seeing this, the remaining women attempted to save themselves by flight, but the enemy bullets overtook them. All the women were killed and their bodies thrown into the gorge."

With typical Communist relish for mixing gore and lies, the New Korea added: "In the village of Saphenni, Senen rural district, about 200 women were subjected to mockery. Outraging the defenseless women, the butchers stripped them naked and tied them up in groups of five and ten. The butchers used these women as live targets for pistol shooting.

"During the withdrawal from the district of Yanyan, the occupiers took with them a large group of the inhabitants of the district. These exhausted people were told by the Americans that they were being evacuated to a safe place. The Americans then called up aircraft by radio.

"Fighter planes dived on the defenseless people and brutally began to machine-gun them. In this way more than 300 guiltless people died."

Editor:

I should like to take this opportunity to answer some of the so-called liberals on this campus who have been attacking Senator Joseph McCarthy with such reckless abandon this year.

They assert that McCarthy is more dangerous than any communist; that his methods are Gestapo-like. Yet they offer no alternative solution to the problem of ferreting communists out of government. Perhaps these pseudo-liberals do not think that this is a serious problem. I invite them to take a closer look at the foreign policy pursued by the present administration for the last eight years and then tell me that there has been no communist influence exerted in the State Department during this period.

In a column several weeks ago, Barry Farber applauded Senator McCarthy's ultimate goal but deplored his methods. I challenge Mr. Farber or anyone else to name a single innocent person who has been "irresponsibly charged" by Senator McCarthy. In his column entitled "Young Democrats" of October 29, John Sanders identifies McCarthy as "the man who recklessly accused over two hundred government employees of being communists under Congressional immunity and then did not probe a single case." May I respectfully suggest to Mr. Sanders that several persons named by McCarthy before the Tydings Committee in March 1950, and whitewashed by that committee, have since been dismissed from the government on the grounds that they were either disloyal or bad security risks.

A partial list of these persons includes John Stewart Service, Edward Posniak, Esther Brunauer, Stephen Brunauer, Peveril Meigs, Hans Lansberg, Oliver Edmund Clubb, William Remington, V. Torevin, and William T. Stone. I further challenge the accuracy of Mr. Sander's statement that McCarthy has "accused over two hundred government employees of being communists under Congressional immunity." On February 9, 1950, McCarthy stated in a speech at Wheeling, West Virginia (and not covered by Congressional immunity) that had the names of fifty-seven persons in the State Department who were either members of or loyal to the Communist Party. In the same speech at Wheeling, McCarthy used the number 205 to indicate the number of State Department employees, referred to in a letter of Secretary of State Byrnes, who remained in the State Department despite the fact that Truman's own security officers had declared them unfit to serve. The truth of these figures was ascertained after many interviews with persons who heard the speech, by Daniel Buckley, an investigator for the Gillette-Monroney Committee which is investigating Senator Benton's charges that McCarthy is unfit to serve in the Senate. Mr. Buckley was promptly fired for his efforts. I challenge you, Mr. Sanders, to name the time and place in which McCarthy made the above statement that you attribute to him.

Costly Mistakes And Injuries

NORTH CAROLINA' wide open game, a few costly mistakes, and a host of injuries were the principle reasons for Tennessee's seemingly easy, 41-14, rout of the Tar Heels last Saturday.

Carolina head coach Carl Snavely thought his team could have held the score down if it had played a conservative game in the second half instead of an all-out passing attempt to beat the Vols.

Snavely also thought Carolina might have won if injuries hadn't ruined his defense.

"We had a good defense," said Snavely. "A new defense that was holding Tennessee to a 13-7 lead in the first half. The key men got hurt, though, and we had to abandon it and even went as far as playing offensive linemen on defense."

"The two halfbacks were on Tennessee's ends, the tackles were way out, and (Paul) Hursh was backing up in the middle. Then Junior Seawell got hurt, and Ed Patterson, an offensive guard, took his place. Gregory got hurt, and then Will Alexander, who played a good game, was thrown out. We couldn't use the defense any longer with those key men out."

The Lame Help The Lame

SEAWELL IS THE TOP-FLIGHT Tar Heel linebacker, and Gregory and Alexander are both guards.

"Higgins got hurt, too," continued Snavely. "Our two top safetymen, Billy Williams and Leonard Bullock, were both out with injuries, and then their replacement, Ridenhour, was limping for a while, too.

"Bob White was out, of course, and then Ken Keller got hurt to put us in a terrific hole at halfback. I switched Parker to left half for awhile, but he thinks he can do better at right half. Port wasn't wasn't running too well against the Tennessee line."

At the end of the game the Tar Heels were without the services of nearly a whole team.

Coach Snavely was proud of the way his team played. Breaking the game down, Snavely saw it like this:

"Their ground game wasn't doing anything against our original defense. Kozar was making a little yardage on the weak side, but we expected that. Tennessee hadn't looked too good on that side this year, so we largely ignored it.

"They seemed to pass us to death, but actually they were making phenomenal catches. It wasn't the fault of our pass defense. One time Lackey batted the ball down, and it fell into the hands of a Tennessee man lieing on the ground. Only one of their passes caught us with our guards down, and I don't know just what happened to our defense that time.

Breaks And Ability

"TENNESSEE GOT TWO of our fumbles, and went on to score on both of them. The split-T is the tricky sort of offense that is supposed to make enough yardage to make up for a few expected fumbles.

"They blocked a punt, the first Carolina punt completely blocked since 1946. Wallace was a little slow getting it off, and they had extra men charging because they knew we had to kick."

Carolina's offense looked better against the Vols than it has all year, and freshman quarterback Marshall Newman threw two more touchdown passes for Carolina's scores.

Snavely said, "Newman looked better, but he is still a freshman. He only made one real bad mistake, and that was when he tried to throw a pass to a Carolina man who was covered by three Vols. One of them stepped out and grabbed it, and then ran for a touchdown.

"Not that I'm making any excuses. They were a stronger, tougher team than us. We had to be at our best to beat them, and even then only with a few breaks. When a team scores twice to start the second half, the dam breaks, and its hard to stop.

"Tennessee was about as good as Texas and Notre Dame. The General, that is, General Bob Neyland, the Tennessee coach, told me at the game that he would like to play the Duke game over. He was sure he could beat Duke if they did."

A Few To Go

CAROLINA'S FATE this Saturday against Virginia depends on how last week's injuries progress.

Snavely thought the team, taken as a unit, was progressing well. "Our offensive line is a problem. They aren't quite experienced enough to contain the caliber team they have been playing. It's green, but it's all we've got, and we have to go along with it. They are improving with every game, and that is what is important."

Considering statistics, Tennessee seemed to completely annihilate the Tar Heels, but Snavely didn't think that was the case.

"We were in a hole, and the only way to get out of it was to go for the big gains through passing. All those attempted passes helped make the statistics look one-sided, and the quarterback being thrown for losses detracted from our rushing average.

"The option play ran rather well, and Newman looked good on occasion when he kept the ball. We have a lot to learn, but the season isn't over."

Tar Babies To Meet State

The Carolina junior varsity football eleven meets its third Southern Conference foe of the season Friday night when the Tar Babies journey to Raleigh for a game with the State College Wolfpack at Riddick Stadium.

In two previous Conference contests Carolina owns a victory over Wake Forest while suffering its only loss of the season at the hands of William and Mary.

Coach Ted Hazelwood will probably field the same team which has earned a season's record of four victories and one defeat.

The offensive line will have Van Weatherspoon and Bob Lee at ends, Ralph Beaver and Ray Crahen at tackle, Bill Giles and Tom Maultsby at guards, and Bill Koman at center. Ernie Liberati and Ed Laughlin will share the important quarterback spot. Vince Murray, and Charlie Poindexter will see service at halfback. Billy Joe Johnson will probably be a fullback.

The defensive line-up will have Bill Leary and Norman Lane at the end posts, Don McCormick and Dick Frucci at the tackles, Barry Pruss and Bill Prothero at guards, and Paul Reeves and Baxter Mangum backing up the line. Terry Lawrence and Poindexter will be at the halfback stations.

Team Works On Drills This Week

Tackle Ken Yarborough and linebacker Junior Seawell have been elected by the Carolina football team as offensive and defensive co-captains respectively for Carolina's game with Virginia here Saturday.

Seawell was injured last week, and although he has worked out during practice this week, he has missed all contact.

Yarborough has played consistantly superior ball for the Tar Heels at right tackle this year without a serious injury.

Carolina Coach Carl Snavely continued to work the team on drills yesterday, but he ended most of the rough play, a day early compared with his usual schedule. The Tar Heels have done little scrimmaging this week because of the exceedingly tough schedule they have played in the past three weeks.

Smooth operation of the split-T formation continued to be the main goal of all the Carolina coaches, with Snavely and assistant George Barkley experimenting at halfbacks and quarterbacks. Two halfbacks, first-stringer Bob White and freshman Ken Keller, are the only injured Carolina players.

Carolina fullback Bull Davidson, who was stricken with polio and considered lost for the rest of the season, may play in next week's game with South Carolina if the infirmary releases him. Davidson has been working out all week in light clothes to get in shape.

Carolina had a serious problem at safety last week with all three leading candidates injured, but all are ready to go plus Al Long from the jayvee squad who has been brought up to the varsity. The starting berth will go to Leonard Bullock, Billy Williams, or Sonny Ridenhour.

Virginia has beaten Carolina for the past three years, and the Cavalier seniors will be trying to make it a perfect college career for themselves against Carolina. Virginia has lost its past two games and is out to make the win column at the Tar Heels expense.

WOMEN'S VOLLEYBALL

Pi Phi's and Town girls will play for the Women's volley ball championship tonight in the Women's gym at 7:30 p.m. Each team is going into the finals undefeated.

Town girls will hold a meeting at the gym at 7 o'clock.

TRACK PRACTICE

Track coach Dale Ranson called for all trackmen, varsity and freshman, to report to Navy Field today between 3:30 and 5 o'clock to start practice.

MANAGERS NEEDED

Varsity football manager Bob Lingerfelt issued a cry for assistant managers yesterday. All students interested should contact him at the practice field today at 4:00.

Date Tickets

Only 250 date tickets remain for Saturday's football game between Carolina and Virginia, ticket director Vernon Crook said yesterday.

Students who want them may apply at the Woollen Gym ticket office today and tomorrow between nine and 4:30 o'clock.

No applications will be taken Saturday morning.

Tar Heels Play Penn State Soccer Team As Harriers Meet Virginia

Carolina will stage a double-threat athletic program Saturday morning as its soccer and cross country teams meet strong intersectional foes here.

Coach Al Moore's victory-bound booters will go up against Penn State in an attempt to take their fifth consecutive victory. The soccer squads meet on Fetzer Field at 9 a.m. to get the sports calendar rolling for the day. The University of Virginia will take on the Tar Heels Harriers at 10:30.

After dropping a 1-0 upset to N. C. State College in its opening match, Carolina's soccer team has beaten Virginia, Washington and Lee, Roanoke College, and the Cherry Point Marines in rapid fire order. Penn State is expected to provide the strongest opposition that the Tar Heels have faced this season.

The powerful Pennsylvanians have taken wins over Bucknell, Colgate, Army and Maryland, while dropping a bitterly contested 3-2 match to Navy. They slugged the defending Southern Conference champs, Maryland's Terps, to the one-sided tune of 11-0 during the early stages of the season. Penn State is coached by Bill Jeffrey.

Carolina has been paced thus far this season by Renny Randolph and Gerry Russell, both of whom are Tar Heel candidates for All-American honors. Other standouts who are expected to see a lot of action for the locals are Harry Pawlik, Barry Kalb, Tommy Hopkins, and Ben Tison.

Morris Osborne and Bob Webb are expected to pace the Tar Heel cross country play as the Tar Heels make their third attempt to break into the win column. In previous meetings, Carolina dropped a 15-55 match to Maryland and was beaten by Tennessee, 15-41.

The Tar Heel cross country runners have shown a lot of improvement since they were forced into a long period of inactivity a few weeks ago due to the polio situation. Saturday's match will get underway at Fetzer Field, and will probably have its feature events there.

Netters End Fall Practice Soon, Play Virginia Friday

By Vardy Buckalew

Fall practice for the 1953 edition of the Carolina tennis team will come to a climax Friday when the team meets Virginia in their annual fall match.

Coach John Kenfield has been working with the boys since the beginning of school and they will continue to practice until the weather makes it impossible. However, this will be the only match of the fall.

The prospects for the spring are very bright. Coach Kenfield has his entire team of last year returning plus a bumper crop of bright freshmen who may outshine the veterans before it is all over.

The intra-squad matches played so far this fall have produced a probable starting lineup for Virginia which will be somewhat different from the one which played the final match last season.

The first three men in the line-up have retained their positions but the last three have been taken over by freshmen—all left-handers, and any one of these three is capable of moving higher.

Probable starter in the fourth spot will be Tom Bradford of Washington, D. C. Bradford appears to be the best of the first year men and is capable on occasions of beating anyone on the team.

The fifth singles position will probably be filled by Don Thompson of Jackson Heights, N. Y., a very promising performer. Thompson at present is Eastern Junior Singles title holder.

Rounding out the singles line-up will probably be Bruce Gustafson, another boy from Washington, D. C. Bruce is small but makes up for it in precision.

Returning to the first three positions will be Del Sylvia, present Southern Conference singles champ, Herb Browne, and Bob Payne. Browne and Payne are current doubles title holders in the Southern Conference.

Coach Kenfield says that he expects this year's team to be at least 20 per cent better than last year's. The reason for his optimism is the freshmen who are expected to add strength to the last three singles positions and the last two doubles.

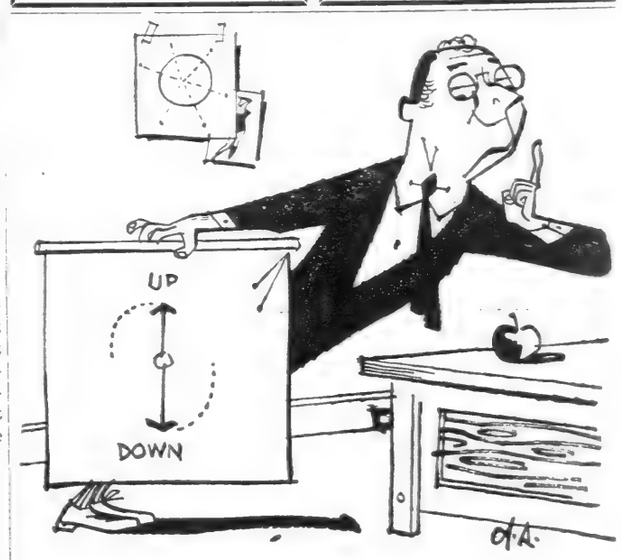
Soccer Team Loses Second Game



Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

DURHAM, Nov. 5—The Carolina soccer team lost its second match of the season this afternoon, bowing to a strong Duke team, 3-1. Carolina played one of its better games but were just outclassed by the Blue Devils.

Carolina led in the first quarter on the strength of a goal by Gerry Russell with three minutes remaining in the period. However, Duke scored two goals in the second quarter, and one in the last to win going away.

Dr. A. P. Davies, Outstanding Liberal Minister, Here Soon

By Harriet Doar

Dr. A. Powell Davies, minister of all Souls Church, Unitarian, Washington, who will speak in Chapel Hill next Thursday night, is one of the outstanding liberal ministers in the country today.

Dr. Davies will speak at Hill Hall at 8:30 on the subject, "The Danger of Preaching from the Bible." There will be special music. Dr. Davies will be introduced by Dr. Everett W. Hall, chairman of the Department of Philosophy, and Maurice Cobb, chairman of the Unitarian Fellowship here, will preside.

A dinner will be given by the fellowship before the meeting, honoring Dr. Davies. Dr. Raymond Adams will preside at the informal dinner.

Dr. Davies calls himself a "thelogical radical." As pastor of the active Washington church, founded in 1821 by such figures as John Quincy Adams, John C. Calhoun and Charles Bulfinch, Capitol architect, his sermons exert an influence out of all proportion to the size of his congregation, which includes a Supreme Court Justice as well as Senators, Congressmen, and Government officials.

Dr. Davies himself is active in many fields. He has served as chairman of the Emergency Conference on Civilian Control of Atomic Energy and president of Food For Freedom, a director of Federal Union and on the executive committee of the National Committee on Atomic Information.

He is a trustee of Meadville Theological School at the University of Chicago, a director of the Unitarian Service Committee, and of the Washington Federation of Churches. He is a council member for the Planned Parenthood Federation and the National Committee on Mental Hygiene.

His books include "The Faith of an Unrepentant Liberal," "Man's Vast Future," and the recent "The Temptation to Be Good." He was educated at London University and Meadville. Born in England of Welsh parentage, he has been a U. S. citizen since 1935.

Dr. Davies is speaking here here in connection with the Unitarian Institute being held Sunday-Thursday, with Dr. Frederick May Eliot of Boston, president of the American Unitarian Association, and Dr. Davies as speakers. Dr. Davies speaks in Raleigh at the State College Y.M.C.A. at 8 p.m. Tuesday night on "What Is a Religious Person?"

In Durham, meetings are to be held in Clyde Kelly Chapel, 1105 Broad Street, as follows: Nov. 9—The Great Tradition, Dr. Eliot; America's Real Religiou, Dr. Davies; Nov. 10—The Religion We Find in the Bible, Dr. Davies; Nov. 11, The Positive Substance of Unitarian Belief, Dr. Eliot; Nov. 12, What Is a Religious Person? Dr. Davies, and Nov. 13, the Liberating and Creative Power of Unitarian Faith, Dr. Eliot.

There will be a student meeting Thursday at 3 p.m. in the Men's Union, with a panel composed of Dr. Davies, Dr. Eliot and faculty members of the Duke Divinity School. The public is invited to all meetings.

Law Alumni To Meet Here This Weekend

University Law School alumni from throughout the State will meet in Chapel Hill this week end to report on plans for organizing a law school alumni association.

Alumni decided to organize last June when a group meeting here authorized Dean Henry P. Brandis to set up a committee consisting of one alumnus from each judicial district in the State to study the proposal and make recommendations.

A special committee headed by Armistead W. Sapp, Greensboro, will meet Saturday, at 10 a.m. in Room 306, Manning Hall, after which there will be a general meeting of all the representatives. Luther Hartsell Jr., Concord, chairman of a subcommittee drafting a proposed organization set-up, will report on the work of the committee which met earlier.

Friday night at 7 p.m. there will be a dinner meeting in the Pine Room of the Carolina Inn of former and present editors of the North Carolina Law Review. A reception and open house will be given in Manning Hall following the Carolina-Virginia football game Saturday afternoon.

Ferree of High Point.

In the General Assembly race, veteran Legislator John Umstead, the Democratic nominee, captured almost exactly three times as many votes as his GOP opponent, W. Geddie Field Jr. The vote Umstead, 3,323; Fields, 1,139.

Following is a breakdown of the voting by precincts for top races:

Chapel Hill, North-total vote, 2,233; Stevenson, 287; Eisenhower, 919; (governor) Umstead, 401, Seawell, 351; (Congress) Durham, 1,778, Ferree, 335; (General Assembly) Umstead, 1,763, Fields 380.

Chapel Hill, South—total vote, 1,583; Stevenson, 801; Eisenhower, 779; (governor) Umstead, 1,203, Seawell, 343; (Congress) Durham, 1,208, Ferree, 333; (General Assembly) Umstead, 1,120, Fields, 404.

Carrboro—total vote, 852; Eisenhower, 457; Stevenson, 391; (governor) Umstead, 545, Seawell, 276; (Congress) Durham, 540, Ferere, 263; (General Assembly) Umstead, 441, Fields, 335.

Democratic candidates for County Commissioner—Slim L. Efland, R. O. Forrest, and R.J.M. Hobbs—also carried by overwhelming margins in all three precincts, as did the three proposed state constitutional amendments.

One's Beliefs Topic Tonight

Cobb Dorm's second in a series of dorm discussions gets under way tonight at 7:30 in the west wing social room.

Leading the discussion, entitled "Reasons for My Personal Beliefs," will be Father Weidinger, local Catholic minister, Rabbi Rossenswag, local Jewish Rabbi and William Howard, Methodist Church minister.

In the first of this series in Cobb, Mrs. Arnold Nash lead a discussion on "From Courtship to Marriage." She is leading another Dorm Discussion on this topic in Joyner Dorm Tuesday as they begin their series of discussions. Aycock Dorm has planned a Discussion on "The Ethics of Sex" for Tuesday night.

These Discussions, planned and sponsored by the YMCA, although primarily planned for the members of the individual dormitories, are open to the campus and visitors are always welcome.

At Columbia

Sophomore Kidnapers Nab Frosh

NEW YORK, Nov 6—A very surprised and indignant Columbia University freshman turned up at the Chango Police Headquarters recently.

According to his story, he was abducted by 10 sophomores during "legal kidnaping week" and shipped out to Chicago on a United Airlines plane.

"Legal kidnaping week" is an institution at Columbia that permits sophomores to work their will on any freshmen available. This particular time the sophomores outdid themselves.

The kidnaped freshman was first taken to an apartment where his abductors bound his head with gauze leaving only a slit for his eyes. After taping his hands and putting a overcoat over him, they drove their victim to LaGuardia Field.

The abductors got their freshman on the plane by telling the steward that he was going to Chicago to see a specialist for his severely burned hands and face. After the takeoff the frosh made a big stir for a "severely burned" young man. The stewardess extricated him from the gauze as he shouted, "Stop the airplane." The surprised stewardess replied, "I can't budge this airplane."

After the plane landed in Chicago, the police telephoned Columbia and were assured that a return trip would be payed for.

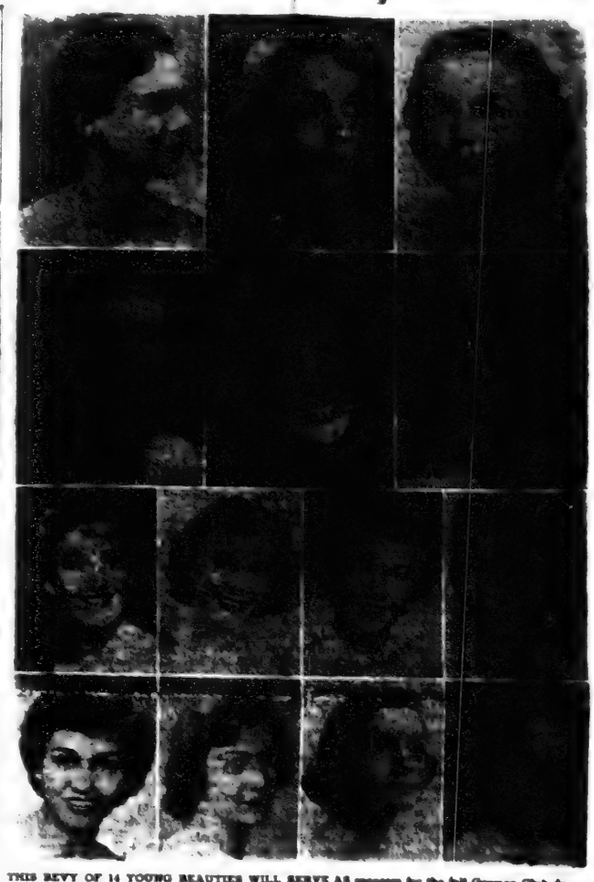
Take the "sweetest trumpet in the world" and throw in a concert, pep rally, Germans dance and homecoming game and the result should be one of Carolina's most gala weekends in years.

It will be Charlie Spivak on the horn from 4:30 until 6 o'clock this afternoon in Memorial Hall. Immediately following will be a Beat Virginia pep rally in the hall.

Approximately 1400 are expected at tonight's formal dance, to be held from 9 o'clock to 1 in Woollen Gymnasium. All coeds have been granted 2 o'clock permission on Friday night with regular hours to be observed Saturday night.

"Interest in this dance soars over previous years probably due to the fact that this is also Homecoming weekend," said Jim Schenck, German Club treasurer. "Spivak has an excellent reputation for college dances and his concert promises to be highly entertaining."



Featured in the orchestra will be Eileen Rogers, lovely song stylist, Joe Tucker, baritone, and Buddy Tanson, the "gentleman from New Jersey." Spivak and his orchestra have been a regular fall attraction at the Statler Hotel in New York. His music is of the style which seems to appeal to Carolina audiences, Schenck said.

The traditional Germans figure, which will take place at 11 o'clock, will be led by German committee members and their dates. Campus housemothers will serve as chaperones for the affair.

Kickoff for the Homecoming game tomorrow will be at 2 o'clock. The homecoming queen will be crowned at half-time.

Homecoming decorations will be judged at 11 o'clock Saturday morning and trophies for winning displays will be awarded before the game. Mrs W H Branch, Ray Jefferies and Claude Shotts will judge displays on the basis of originality and workmanship.

Tarnation editor Tom Alexander said yesterday Tarnation will be published at the end of next week instead of this weekend as planned.

Tough New Code Adopted For Rush

A revamped sorority rushing code, meting out stiff punishment for violators, was released yesterday.

The stringent new rules are a result of several charges brought this fall for dirty rushing against several UNC sororities. The rules were released yesterday by the Pan-Hellenic Council.

Two sororities, charged with "dirty rushing" and brought before the Pan-Hel Court during rush, were cleared by the court. Another sorority, suspected of issuing verbal bids at rush parties, did not appear before the court as charges were dropped after discussion.

Under the new code, a sorority found guilty of verbal or written bidding during formal rush will automatically be docked five pledges. If verbal or written bidding is discovered after rush week is over, the guilty sorority will be deprived of social privileges for fall and winter quarters.

Interpreting this rule, Pan-Hel President Peggy Jean Goode said yesterday, "This shall mean that the sorority can do no entertaining nor accept social invitations from a fraternity as a group."

The new rules adopted by the council Wednesday afternoon call for a workshop for both old and new sorority officers to be held in the spring to discuss rushing rules. The code also requires that the period between the time sorority girls arrive at school and the beginning of rush shall be used by each chapter to "indoctrinate its members in constructive and ethical rushing."

Under the ruling new coeds will be given a talk about rushing rules before formal rush opens. They will also be given written information before rush about "unethical rushing as well as the Pan-Hellenic rush rules as given in the handbook."

The Pan-Hel Council also stated all cases of illegal rushing during formal rush must be brought up within two weeks of the close of rush.

Five Undergraduates Awarded Scholarships

Five undergraduates have been awarded scholarships by the Order of the Grail, Chairman Al House announced yesterday.

Receivers of the $150 scholarships are William Richard Rhyne, Morganton; Max H. Bogle, Albemarle; James G. Babb, Charlotte; Gene Cook, Fayetteville; and James S. Capps, Rocky Mount.

Gray Leaves Huge Estate To Family

Special to The Daily Tar Heel

WINSTON-SALEM, Nov. 6—James A. Gray left an estate valued at $2,716,289.86 to his wife and six children, according to a will filed for probate yesterday.

In the will, executed December 21, 1946, Gray, long-time University of North Carolina trustee and benefactor, explained why he was leaving none of his estate to charity or other benevolent causes:

"During my lifetime I have made contributions to religious, educational, charitable and other benevolent causes in amounts totalling a sum in excess of the value (at the time of the will's execution) of my estate available for the use and benefit of my wife and children. In view of these earlier gifts, I make no provision in this will for such causes."

Gray, 63, died Oct. 29. He was chairman of the board of R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

Book Exhibit Will Display Jewish Texts

The Hillel Foundation here is sponsoring a book exhibit at the Library in honor of Jewish Book Month.

The materials on display (first floor, right wing) offer a fairly comprehensive review of various types of Judaica, ranging from a beautiful reproduction of a 15th century illuminated manuscript to contemporary books.

One group shows prayerbooks, while another is devoted to the Haggadah (story text used at ritual dinner on first evening of Passover).

Several books reveal the traditional manner of presenting text and commentaries. Thus, the text is centered on the page, while the commentaries surround it, left, right, and below. This type of page format is customary in virtually all manuscripts and books where textual commentaries are involved.

NEWS IN BRIEF

AUGUSTA, Ga. — President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower agreed yesterday to meet with President Truman at the White House the week of Nov. 17. Eisenhower took time out from a post-election golf-and-rest vacation here to reply to an invitation he received during the night from Truman. The president proposed the meeting in Washington "to facilitate the orderly transfer of the executive branch of the government to a new administration."

WASHINGTON — President elect Dwight D. Eisenhower probably could count yesterday on a friendly Congress to underwrite the domestic and foreign policy changes mandated by the volcanic eruption of votes that gave him the presidency. It was not so much that the Republicans had gained practical control of both houses as a result of the general's landslide victory.

SEOUL—The Eighth Army yesterday called off costly South Korean attempts to recapture Triangle Hill and Gen. James A. Van Fleet flew to the scene to determine whether anything could be salvaged from the Allied setback there. To the west, Chinese Reds, blowing horns and howling "kill! kill!" snatched Jackson Heights from Allied troops, but abandoned it a few hours later.

WASHINGTON — Dwight D. Eisenhower's "house-cleaning" in Washington will sweep some 2,000 Democrats out of top-bracket federal jobs. But government personnel experts said yesterday the average "little fellow" on the payroll need not worry about losing his job when the new administration takes office next Jan. 20.

WASHINGTON — President Truman indicated yesterday that he will not make any more major decisions as the nation's chief executive, unless they are absolutely necessary. If world events should force a major presidential decision before Jan. 20, indications are that Truman will not act without approval of President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Dr. Getsinger Back In Town

Dr. D. M. Getsinger has returned to Chapel Hill to resume private practice of dentistry at his former location in the Strowd Building over Sutton's Drug Store.

For the past two years, Dr. Getsinger has been with the U. S. Air Force stationed at Scott Air Force Base in Illinois. Dr. Getsinger took his pre-dental work at Mars Hill College and Wake Forest College. He was graduated from the Medical College of Virginia School of Dentistry in 1947 with the degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery. He served one year on the teaching staff of the Medical College of Virginia in the department of Oral Surgery. In 1949 he began practice of general dentistry in Chapel Hill and remained here for two years. In January, 1951 he entered the U. S. Air Force, and since that time has been stationed at Scott Air Force Base, Ill.

Need A Good Head

Pogo's Walt Kelly Gets Tulane's Newest Honor

Special to The Daily Tar Heel

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 6—Walt Kelly, Pogo's daddy, recently was honored by the Tulane Pogo Club with an LLD—Doctor of Lighthearted Letters.

Kelly appeared here on his nationwide tour of college campuses — advocating "Pogo for President."

"One thing in Pogo's favor is that he has more hair than the other candidates. Since there are so many hairs to split in Washington these days, we need a man with a good head on him," Kelly said in his campaign speech.

According to Kelly, Pogo is even more qualified than most candidates for office. Although Pogo wasn't born in a log cabin like most White House residents, he can go one better —"he was born in a log."

As to Pogo's stand on the Swampland oil question, Kelly said that the "big debate is whether or not the swamp is really part of the United States. If the government tries to interfere too much, the Swamp will secede."

Kelly and Pogo never "mess around" with the FEPC because "if it don't spell nothing, it don't mean nothing, and we're not too good at spellin' anyway."

Pogo doesn't "mess around" with civil liberties in his campaign either "What we object to is people taking unsivil liberties with us and with other people. As for our foreign relations—Pogo has none. He's 100 per cent pure American possum."

Cosmos Will Discuss Politics At GM Sunday

The Cosmopolitan Club will meet Sunday in the Rendezvous Room in Graham Memorial at 4 p.m.

A panel discussion on impressions of the political campaign will be moderated by a member of the Political Science Department.

A special guest will be Mrs. Harold Walters of the League of Women voters. Members of the club taking part will be representatives from England, Pakistan, India, Germany and Finland.

Modern Man Talk Tonight

A panel discussion, "What Is The Faith of Modern Man?" will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

The panel, sponsored by the forum committee of the Student Union Activities Board, will be composed of Dr. R. Maynard Adams, Dr. Arnold Nash, Dr. Joseph Straley and Dr. William Poteat, moderator.

The pattern of the forum will be a statement of each panel member's opinion on the subject, followed by a brief rebuttal, and concluded by a question and answer session between the audience and the panel. A reception will be given after the forum.

Coed Has Polio

Carol Covington, coed from Troy, N. C., was stricken with polio late Wednesday night.

She is in the University Hospital, where her condition was described last night as "satisfactory." Miss Covington's is the sixth case of polio on the campus since the beginning of the fall quarter. She is a resident of Mclver Dormitory.

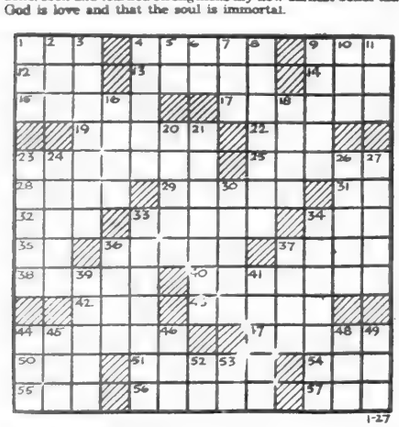
I Believe

I believe the Greeks were right in saying the unpardonable sin is "hybris"—man's excessive pride in his abilities and strength.

I believe this century is prone to that sin. The expansion of scientific knowledge and the enormous power resulting from its application make us drunk with imminent self-deification.

I believe college students are particularly vulnerable to the half-truths—"knowledge is power." Many are so consumed by the urge to acquire power through knowledge that they omit the corollary questions, "Knowledge of what?," "Power to do what for what goals?"

I believe the axioms "God is love" and "the soul of man is immortal" are of crucial importance to everyone. The first affirms that there is an ultimate whence and whither and that this source and goal is not only spiritual, but benevolent. The second includes each individual actively within that spiritual totality. It affirms there are things other and greater than being alive. "What would I give my life for?" Is there any thing or concept more valuable for oneself or for others than living and keeping busy? If not, the process of being alive has become the greatest value. Belief in the immortality of the soul completely changes one's "frame of reference" for values.



I believe that western democracy is the still clumsily evolving attempt to translate these amioms (and the Christian religion built upon them) into political and, today, into economic terms.

I believe that scientific methodology is invalid as basic proof of the existence of values of art, human emotions, or religion. The human systems of numerical measurement and of logic cannot assume final authority in such areas. If totality is love, it includes the human power of reason; there is no basis for thinking that such a totality should be bounded by human reason.

I believe in the inescapable responsibility of the individual continually to exercise free moral choice. I have little sympathy for those who complain they lack 100% freedom of will or choice. I know I am often afraid, or unwilling, or too lazy to exercise that percentage of moral choice I do control.

I believe that sin is the choice, by any person, of what he knows to be the lesser good.

I have worked for twenty-five years in hospitals, ghettoes, prisons, insane asylums, tent-hospitals during World War II across France and Germany; among Alaskan Indians, Kentucky mountaineers, the Bowery, and the wreckage in German prison-camps: I have studied in several universities both here and abroad. Mostly alone but at one time with guidance, I have travelled rather widely within myself. I am familiar with death, with the medical application of science, with many problems of social welfare. And I have seen and done and read nothing in science or the humanities leading me to expect that man can lift himself up by the bootstraps of his intellect and of his will-power, alone. Everything that I have done, seen and learned strengthens my now earnest belief that God is love and that the soul is immortal.

The You In UN

Is it a success or failure? What has it achieved? What will it be able to do in the future? Each of us must seriously consider these questions, for its ultimate success or failure may mean the scourge of another world war or eventual peace between nations. The main concern is that we must not be indifferent to the United Nations. Every American as well as citizens of all nationalities must today be thinking about the welfare of the United Nations. Why? Because it is the only instrument which rises above the rivalries of different nations and systems of government. In it is embodied the machinery for the preservation of world peace, in an age which is grasping desperately for a means of preventing misery and deprivation from coming to future generations.

Just seven years ago the United Nations was created in San Francisco, with its prime goal of preventing future fratricidal wars such as those which have twice nearly leveled our society. Fortunately America has escaped the total effects of war in the sense of the destruction which has taken place in Europe. But another war will be different. To avoid future wars, the United Nations was created.

How well has it worked? Are you one of those people who sits back and says the United Nations has already had its golden opportunity and failed? Are you one of those individuals who says it is doing the best it can but that it cannot succeed due to the shortcomings of its basic structure? Or do you believe that an adequate job is being done, and that if the United Nations continues as it is doing now that world peace will be achieved?

The important thing is that we do think about the United Nations, and that if we feel that the United Nations is worth preserving that we begin doing something about it. Are we being fair to our children and future generations if we ignore the means by which they may be saved from the horrors our generation has faced and is facing today?

If you accept this challenge then the thing to do is act. Actively support the program of the United Nations. Even though you may feel it is inadequate, it is still the greatest instrument we have today for the prevention of another war. If we feel the United Nations must be strengthened, then the thing to do is to be disgussing and thinking about how it can be made better and more effective. Every instrument of law and order must grow and improve. Today the United Nations is a great step forward from the League of Nations.

In 1955 there is to be an international conference to evaluate and meet the new needs of the United Nations, issues will be voted upon by the General Assembly. Such a conference will be held automatically, providing one nation so moves to bring it about, according to the Charter of the United Nations.

There is no doubt that world peace is the great concern of our age. Also there is no doubt that we can only achieve it through international understanding. Furthermore, it is through the United Nations that this all-important objective may be realized. The time to act is now. Think about the United Nations. Think about its problems. Think how it can be improved. Join the United Nations Club here on campus to discuss the issues which we face today, and learn how they can be met in order to achieve a just and lasting peace. If millions of lives are to be saved, the time to act is now, not ten years or fifty years from now.

Editor:

Perhaps the only credit we may give these seemingly "frustrated coeds" for their journalistic effort in approaching their important problem, is a pseudo-poetic genius.

Actually, the primary reason why "90 percent" of the coeds are "left high and dry" on a German week end is the time element. Generally, after a dance, dates will come back to a fraternity house for breakfast lasting from 1 a.m. until 1:30 a.m. Coeds must be placed under lock and key at 2 a.m., thus creating quite some friction.

Furthermore, the parties at the respective fraternity houses do not begin until two or after, thereby placing a damper on any aspirant who desires to date the "frustrated 90 percent."

The drinking element, contrary to the opinion of our coed friends, remains as a secondary problem.

We cannot change the University's ruling so the supposed "90 percent" will have to bear with us this week end. We'll see you around the Y Court on Monday.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON—President Truman has fairly definite ideas as to what he wants to do when he leaves the White House, but they may be hampered by problems at home.

The chief thing he hankers for after January 20 is a leisurely trip around the world. He wants to go to Europe and return the visit of the heads of states who have called on him; also attend the coronation of Britain's new Queen Elizabeth on June 2.

However, there are a couple of complications. One is the health of his 90-year-old mother-in-law, Mrs. David Wallace. The public hasn't generally realized it, but Mrs. Wallace has been living with the President and Mrs. Truman during most of their sojourn in the White House, and Mrs. Truman has been quite firm that she would not leave her mother for a long trip out of the United States as long as she is in poor health.

Another, though lesser, complication is finances. The President has not been able to acquire any monetary backlog during his seven years in office, and some way will have to be found to finance the trip.

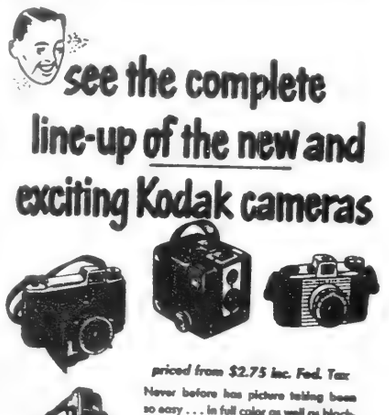
One or two embassies have already discussed whether he could be entertained as an official visitor at the expense of their governments, even though by that time he will have lost his official status.

Mr. Truman wants to visit India, Japan, and various Asiatic countries and some consideration has been given to the idea of his making a series of speeches on the peaceful goals of the American people.

There has been so much Russian propaganda to the contrary, abetted in part by rash statements by American generals, that a good part of the world is sold on the idea that the United States wants war. State Department officials believe that a man of Mr. Truman's simplicity and directness might carry considerable impact in nullifying this propaganda. They have even been considering the idea of his making a whistle-stop tour abroad in favor of peace.

The President has also told friends that after his trip he would like to do some lecturing at a university and some writing on history. If so, he would follow the precedent of William Howard Taft, who became professor of law at Yale after he left the White House.

Hints have also been dropped around the capital that Truman should be appointed a delegate to the United Nations.



Here's what some of the Truman cabinet members are going to do, come January 20.

Dean Acheson will go back to his law firm. Financially hard up, he might have retired earlier except that he was under fire.

President Truman has promised his Secretary of the Treasury, John Snyder, to help find him a job. Snyder was offered a job with the Bank of America four years ago, but turned it down. . . . Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin will return to his Boston law practice, perhaps enter politics again.

Defense Robert Lovett will return to his Wall Street firm. Lovett has been in government now ever since the war days, as Assistant Secretary of War, Undersecretary of State, Undersecretary of Defense, and now Secretary of Defense. A Republican, he has served steadily in Democratic cabinets. . . . Postmaster General Jesse Donaldson is looking for something in private industry. The first nonpolitical career Postmaster General, thousands of postal employees will celebrate his exit.

Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer is returning to Cincinnati. He had planned some time ago to resign from the cabinet come what may. . . . Secretary of

The You In UN

—John Faust—

Is it a success or failure? What has it achieved? What will it be able to do in the future? Each of us must seriously consider these questions, for its ultimate success or failure may mean the scourge of another world war or eventual peace between nations. The main concern is that we must not be indifferent to the United Nations. Every American as well as citizens of all nationalities must today be thinking about the welfare of the United Nations. Why? Because it is the only instrument which rises above the rivalries of different nations and systems of government. In it is embodied the machinery for the preservation of world peace, in an age which is grasping desperately for a means of preventing misery and deprivation from coming to future generations.

Just seven years ago the United Nations was created in San Francisco, with its prime goal of preventing future fratricidal wars such as those which have twice nearly leveled our society. Fortunately America has escaped the total effects of war in the sense of the destruction which has taken place in Europe. But another war will be different. To avoid future wars, the United Nations was created.

How well has it worked? Are you one of those people who sits back and says the United Nations has already had its golden opportunity and failed? Are you one of those individuals who says it is doing the best it can but that it cannot succeed due to the shortcomings of its basic structure? Or do you believe that an adequate job is being done, and that if the United Nations continues as it is doing now that world peace will be achieved?

The important thing is that we do think about the United Nations, and that if we feel that the United Nations is worth preserving that we begin doing something about it. Are we being fair to our children and future generations if we ignore the means by which they may be saved from the horrors our generation has faced and is facing today?

If you accept this challenge then the thing to do is act. Actively support the program of the United Nations. Even though you may feel it is inadequate, it is still the greatest instrument we have today for the prevention of another war. If we feel the United Nations must be strengthened, then the thing to do is to be disgussing and thinking about how it can be made better and more effective. Every instrument of law and order must grow and improve. Today the United Nations is a great step forward from the League of Nations.

In 1955 there is to be an international conference to evaluate and meet the new needs of the United Nations, issues will be voted upon by the General Assembly. Such a conference will be held automatically, providing one nation so moves to bring it about, according to the Charter of the United Nations.

There is no doubt that world peace is the great concern of our age. Also there is no doubt that we can only achieve it through international understanding. Furthermore, it is through the United Nations that this all-important objective may be realized. The time to act is now. Think about the United Nations. Think about its problems. Think how it can be improved. Join the United Nations Club here on campus to discuss the issues which we face today, and learn how they can be met in order to achieve a just and lasting peace. If millions of lives are to be saved, the time to act is now, not ten years or fifty years from now.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON—President Truman has fairly definite ideas as to what he wants to do when he leaves the White House, but they may be hampered by problems at home.

The chief thing he hankers for after January 20 is a leisurely trip around the world. He wants to go to Europe and return the visit of the heads of states who have called on him, also attend the coronation of Britain's new Queen Elizabeth on June 2.

However, there are a couple of complications. One is the health of his 90-year-old mother-in-law, Mrs. David Wallace. The public hasn't generally realized it, but Mrs. Wallace has been living with the President and Mrs. Truman during most of their sojourn in the White House, and Mrs. Truman has been quite firm that she would not leave her mother for a long trip out of the United States as long as she is in poor health.

Another, though lesser, complication is finances. The President has not been able to acquire any monetary backlog during his seven years in office, and some way will have to be found to finance the trip.

One or two embassies have already discussed whether he could be entertained as an official visitor at the expense of their governments, even though by that time he will have lost his official status.

Mr. Truman wants to visit India, Japan, and various Asiatic countries and some consideration has been given to the idea of his making a series of speeches on the peaceful goals of the American people.

There has been so much Russian propaganda to the contrary, abetted in part by rash statements by American generals, that a good part of the world is sold on the idea that the United States wants war. State Department officials believe that a man of Mr. Truman's simplicity and directness might carry considerable impact in nullifying this propaganda. They have even been considering the idea of his making a whistle-stop tour abroad in favor of peace.

The President has also told friends that after his trip he would like to do some lecturing at a university and some writing on history. If so, he would follow the precedent of William Howard Taft, who became professor of law at Yale after he left the White House.

Hints have also been dropped around the capital that Truman should be appointed a delegate to the United Nations.

Here's what some of the Truman cabinet members are going to do, come January 20.

Dean Acheson will go back to his law firm. Financially hard up, he might have retired earlier except that he was under fire.

President Truman has promised his Secretary of the Treasury, John Snyder, to help find him a job. Snyder was offered a job with the Bank of America four years ago, but turned it down. . . Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin will return to his Boston law practice, perhaps enter politics again. Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer is returning to Cincinnati. He had planned some time ago to resign from the cabinet come what may . . . Secretary of Defense Robert Lovett will return to his Wall Street firm. Lovett has been in government now ever since the war days, as Assistant Secretary of War, Undersecretary of State, Undersecretary of Defense, and now Secretary of Defense. A Republican, he has served steadily in Democratic cabinets . . . Postmaster General Jesse Donaldson is looking for something in private industry. The first nonpolitical career Postmaster General, thousands of postal employees will celebrate his exit.

Editor:

Perhaps the only credit we may give these seemingly "frustrated coeds" for their journalistic effort in approaching their important problem, is a pseudo-poetic genius.

Actually, the primary reason why "90 percent" of the coeds are "left high and dry" on a German week end is the time element. Generally, after a dance, dates will come back to a fraternity house for breakfast lasting from 1 a.m. until 1:30 a.m. Coeds must be placed under lock and key at 2 a.m., thus creating quite some friction.

Furthermore, the parties at the respective fraternity houses do not begin until two or after, thereby placing a damper on any aspirant who desires to date the "frustrated 90 percent."

The drinking element, contrary to the opinion of our coed friends, remains as a secondary problem.

We cannot change the University's ruling so the supposed "90 percent" will have to bear with us this week end. We'll see you around the Y Court on Monday.

Tar Babies Meet 'Pack At Raleigh This Afternoon

Local Squad Looking For Fourth Win

By Paul Cheney

Carolina's once [illegible] freshman varsity football [illegible] meet the North Carolina State Wolfpack in Raleigh's Riddick Stadium at 3:00 this afternoon.

This will be the Tar Babies fifth game of the season. They have won over Fort Bragg, Virginia and Wake Forest, while losing to a strong William and Mary squad.

Julian King, who is acting as coach in the place of regular mentor Ted Hazelwood, will field virtually the same starting lineups that have appeared in previous games.

The offensive line will have Van Weatherspoon, a Durham junior, and Bobby Lee at ends. Don McCormick and Ray Crahen will be at the tackle positions, with Tom Maultsby and Bill Prothero are the starting guards. Bill Koman will be the center.

The Tar Baby split T attack will be quarterbacked by Ed Laughlin, with senior Ernie Liberati also expected to see action at this post. Liberati was the star in Carolina's impressive victory over Virginia.

Johnny Lamoreaux and Vince Murray will be the starting halfbacks. This is the first time either boy has been a starter. Flo Worrel and Billy Hawkes have now been moved up to the varsity. Billy Joe Johnson, who starred against Wake Forest, will be the fullback.

The defensive forward wall will have Harry Anderson and Norman Lane at the ends. Veteran Barry Prum and Dick Fucci will fill the tackle spots, while Bill Gilles and Roland Perdue are the guards. Backing up the line will be Baxter Mangum on the right side and Bill Reeves to his left.

Carey Lawrence and Charlie Poindexter will defend against State aerials from the halfback posts. Liberati is at safety.

Very little is known about the State team. All of their competition has come from Southern Conference foes. The little Wolfpack has met both Duke and Wake Forest this season.

Reserve guard Sid Hardisty is the only Carolina player who will be sidelined with an injury. Hardisty has an injured ankle.

Netters Meet Virginia This Afternoon At 2

By Varty Buckalew

The Carolina tennis team will play the University of Virginia tennis team this afternoon at 2 o'clock in a match which has become an annual affair.

The match is always held on the weekend of the football game between the two schools and was won last year by Virginia when Carolina had to go without the services of their ace Del Sylvia who was out with a pulled muscle

However, in the regular season Carolina won the match between the two schools.

Coach John Kenfield expects the Virginia team to be very strong this year as they lost only one man from last year's squad. Coach Kenfield can go this record one better as he lost no one from last year's lineup.

The singles lineup for Carolina will not be the same as last year's, due to the fact that three of last year's performers have been beaten out by freshmen.

The number four position, held down last year by Sam Handel, will probably be filled today by Tom Bradford, a very good prospect who may move higher in the lineup in the spring.

Bill Izlar played in the number five position last year but his place has been taken by Don Thompson of Jackson Heights, N. Y.

The number six position, which was by far the weakest on the team last year, will be filled today by Bruce Gustafson of Washington, D. C.

Another promising freshman, Pete Green of West Palm Beach, Florida, will probably be given a try in the number one doubles today with Del Sylvia.

The first three positions will be the same as last year. Del Sylvia, Southern Conference singles champ, will be in the number one spot. The two and three positions will have Herb Browne and Bob Payne, who won the Southern Conference doubles crown together last spring.

Halfback Larry Spencer has probably the best individual record in the nation on kick-off returns this fall. The speedy 175-pound senior has returned seven kick-offs for a total of 283 yards —an average return of 40.4 yards. Spencer is expected to be one of the leaders for the Deacons in their important Conference and Big Four game with N. C. State here Saturday.

The team has been engaging in a fall practice since the beginning of school but this is the only match scheduled for this period. They will continue to practice until the weather makes it impossible.

The schedule for the spring has been completed but will probably [illegible] about 24 matches including Harvard, Yale, Michigan State, and possibly Princeton.

Halfback Bruce Hillenbrand is the leading ground gainer on the Wake Forest football team this fall. The Arlington, Va., junior has gained 214 yards in 43 rushes for an average gain per play of five yards. Fullback Joe Koch is second with 202 yards in 50 carries for a four-yard average per play. Wake Forest plays N. C. State here Saturday at 2 o'clock in Groves Stadium.

Changes In Starting Lineup Head Carolina's Last Serious Practice Before Virginia Game

By Tom Peacock

Outstanding changes in the probable starting lineup in tomorrow's game with Virginia marked Carolina's football practice yesterday, the last serious drill the Tar Heels will go through before the game.

Changes at halfback to increase power and speed and make up for injured players will be made by Carolina coach Carl Snavely and his assistant on offense, George Barclay.

Sophomore Larry Parker, who switched from right to left half for the first time last week, is scheduled to start at left half. Either Chal Port or John Gayford, a former fullback who has been injured since the opening game, will start at right half.

Coach Snavely has made three changes in the offensive line, Carolina's weakest point so far this season. Bill Kirkman will start at center in place of Dave Mullens, Jim Neville is at right guard in Ed Patterson's old spot, and freshman Jim Lambert starts for the ailing Steve Opitz at tackle. The changes are designed to add more blocking power in the line.

Patterson is switching from his guard spot to Junior Seawell's position at left linebacker on defense. Seawell is one of Carolina's co-captains for the game, but has been injured and will see only limited action against Virginia.

Carolina hasn't scored a win over Virginia since 1949 when Charley Justice and company sweated out a 14-7 victory here in Kenan Stadium. The Tar Heels think that's a good sign, however, as tomorrow's game is the first time the two teams have met here since the Carolina win. The Cavaliers racked up wins in Charlottesville in 1950 and 51.

Carolina is definitely out for this one. If the Tar Heels don't win, the seniors will never see victory over Virginia while they are here, and Carolina will drop its eleventh straight contest.

Virginia is equally up for the game, as it was knocked off the unbeaten 11st week-before-last by Duke, and had a sure win snatched away by South Carolina in the last two minutes of the game last week.

'Dad's' Day At Duke University

Sponsored by the Duke YMCA, the program will give fathers a special opportunity to visit the University and take part in campus activities with their sons.

This year, for the first time since World War II, Dads' Day will honor fathers of men in all four undergraduate classes. Formerly, Dads' Day was limited to the fathers of freshmen and sophomore men.

High lights of the program will be the Duke-Navy football game, which visiting fathers will attend with their sons; the Dads' Day banquet Saturday evening in the West Campus Old Gymnasium; and a worship service in Duke Chapel Sunday morning.

Pick The Winner

The Student Union Activities Board continues its weekly pick the winning teams football contest and students have until tomorrow at noon to get their entries in.

Entry blanks can be picked up in the main hall of Graham Memorial.

Hockey Tourney

Hockey tournament entries are due in at the Women's gym today by 4 o'clock. Two or more groups may combine to make a team this year. Tournament play begins the week of the 10th. Entry blanks may be obtained at the gym.

WINLESS TAR HEELS TO FACE VIRGINIA TODAY

Ballot Rhubarb: 45 Candidates Seeking 8 Posts

Chairman Daniels Suggests Minor Change In System

By Louis Kraar

Campus politicians — not to mention the voters—were puzzled yesterday.

The announcement of an unusually large number of candidates for the eight positions open on the Men's and Women's Councils—45 candidates in all—provided the quandry.

The Bi-Partisan Selection Board which picks students to run for honor council seats by interviews, was originally set up to take the nominations out of party politics.

Frank Daniels, chairman of the Bi-Partisan Selection Board, said yesterday, "I don't thing it is the right of the board to disqualify students who are capable no matter how many are running." In answer to whether he was against the system of choosing candidates by the board he said, "I am not against the board. I only suggest that a minor revision be made in the method of selecting candidates."

Jerry Cook (UP), chairman of the Elections Board, stated, "The Selection Board should use more discretion in the selection of candidates. The number chosen is ridiculous."

He pointed out that a run-off on Nov. 25 would probably be necessary.

President Ham Horton (UP) had no comment.

GI's Should Reinstate Insurance

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

WINSTON-SALEM, Nov. 7—More than $10 billion in lapsed GI term life insurance will be lost forever under present laws unless the 1,200,000 veterans who have permitted their policies to lapse reinstate them before the terms expire during the next 14 months.

The Veterans Administration today said the policies involved are lapsed term National Service Life Insurance (NSLI) that were issued to two groups of World War II and post-World War II veterans.

The two groups are:

1. The 1,100,00 World War II veterans who took out term NSLI policies while they were in service during the last two months of 1944 and all of 1945; and,

2. The 100,000 World War II and post-World War II veterans who took out term NSLI policies while they were in service during the last two months of 1947 and all of 1948.

The first group of 1,100,00 veterans shave 8-year term policies and the second group of 100,00 veterans have 5-year term policies. Both terms expire sometime during the last two months of this year or during next year, depending on the anniversary date of each policy.

If veterans in either group do not wish to lose this coverage altogether, they must reinstate their policies before the terms expire. Otherwise, they will not be eligible for further GI life insurance coverage.

Alumni Meet

The annual fall meeting of the officers and directors of the General Alumni Association will be held in the Morehead Building at 10:30 this morning.

R. Arthur Spaugh Jr., Winston-Salem, president of the association, will preside.

Collegians Are Not Adults?

Germans Explore U.S. Way, Claim Education Inconsistent

By John Jamison

"Why is it necessary to place restrictions on college students? Are they not responsible adults?"

These and other questions were verbally kicked around Thursday night at the Carolina Inn for the benefit of UNC's six German students. As it turned out though, a considerable amount of the benefit rubbed off on the Americans leading the discussion.

Dr. W. Carson Ryan, Kenan professor of education here, was the principal speaker. He explained the American position: "I think the restrictions we place here on students are absurd, frankly. However, we do not believe that a young person 'jumps' into maturity at age 18 or any other age. We depend upon the total effect of the home life and the education to adjust the person to conducting his own life."

Hans-Jurgen Lambers, one of the exchange students, adroitly worded his view of the matter: "I don't understand why, after this education toward self-responsibility, and in spite of it, these restrictions are placed on a student with the effect of preventing his practice of self-responsibility. It seems to me a certain inconsistency."

The Germans explained that in European families a child is taught to be responsible from an early age. This training equips the person to live in society by the time he reaches age 18, at which time he generally leaves home. After this, no rules are necessary for he is an adult.

Another of the questions answered by Dr. Ryan was, "What educational philosophy underlies American instruction?"

He said the early American motive for establishing schools was a religious one. "It was said that a person easily fell victim to the 'old deluder Devil' if he was not able to read the Bible," Dr. Ryan said. "Today the idea is to make some educational provision for all the youth. Over the years we have turned from advocating the mere mastery of certain skills to a general education to help a person solve his social problems."

Other German students participating were Otto Vehrenkamp, Martha Shaefer, Dr. Fritz Hartmann, Eberhard Kindiger and Helmuth Deicher.

Dear Outlines Paper Policy For Campaign

The campus got its first promise yesterday from a candidate in the coming fall elections.

Walt Dear, independent and Student Party-endorsed for The Daily Tar Heel editorship, outlined his campaign plans. They include a campus canvass to see "what's wrong with The Daily Tar Heel; what's right with it and how we can improve it."

"If you want door-to-door delivery for your paper, I'd like to know," Dear said. "If you're not getting your paper, I'd like to know." He emphasized he would seek to solve the circulation problems if elected.

On the editorial side, Dear said the newspaper should discuss thoroughly the major problems confronting the campus. Coed visiting in dormitory social rooms and revisions in the fraternity visiting agreement were among the questions he specified.

Dear is being opposed for the job by Biff Roberts, Daily Tar Heel sports editor and nominee of the University Party.

Dear ran for editor of The Daily Tar Heel his sophomore year on the SP ticket but was defeated by older and more experienced candidates.

Cavaliers Favored By Seven Points

By Tom Peacock

DAILY TAR HEEL Assistant Sports Editor

North Carolina and Virginia renew their football rivalry for the 47th time in Kenan Stadium today at 2 o'clock with the Cavaliers rated slight seven point favorites over the Tar Heels in the Homecoming Day game.

But odds are usually meaningless for this traditional game and Carolina is determined to beat Virginia to snap a two-year losing streak with the Cavaliers.

Once more the play of two quarterbacks will feature a Carolina game, with Virginia Sophomore Mel Roach and Carolina Freshman Marshall Newman directing their teams in the T formation.

North Carolina is hampered by injuries, and Coach Carl Snavely has been forced to make numerous changes in the starting lineup. Only two Tar Heels are definitely out for the game, halfbacks Bob White and Ken Keller, but a host of other men, including co-captain Junior Seawell, will see limited action.

VIRGINIA	Pos.	CAROLINA
Scott	LE	Kocornik
Mehalick	LT	Lambert
Turner	LG	Foti
Harris	C	Mullens
Stallings	RG	Neville
Phipps	RT	Yarborough
Chisholm	RE	Walker
Roach	QB	Newman
Tata	FH	Port
Pate	LH	Parker
Furst	FB	Wallace

Carolina is looking for its first win in 11 games, and the feeling in the Tar Heel camp is that today's contest with the Cavaliers is the one to put it back in the win column.

Virginia is equally eager for a win, since it has lost its past two games to Southern Conference schools after previously going undefeated. Duke and South Carolina have scored victories over Virginia.

Carolina will depend largely on the passing arm of Newman, plus the hard running of backs Larry Parker, Chal Port, John Gaylord and Bud Wallace, and a strong defensive team. The defensive team has proven to be the Tar Heels' best offense this year, and Newman has passed for five of the six touchdowns Carolina has scored in its first four games.

In addition to Roach, Virginia has a high-scoring backfield headed by Bib Tata, Bobby Pate and Gerry Furst. Tata has scored six times for 36 points, and has picked up 319 yards, while averaging 4.9 yards per rush. Furst has averaged 5 yards per try this season to pace the team.

Virginia has been impressive in wins over powerful Vanderbilt, Virginia Tech, V.M.I. and George Washington. The Cavaliers routing all those teams by one-sided scores. Duke knocked Virginia off the unbeaten list week-before-last with a 21-7 victory, and South Carolina beat the Cavaliers, 21-14, on a fluke last week.

The Tar Heels have lost four games this season to some of the most powerful teams in the country. After losing its opener to Texas, Carolina was edged out by Wake Forest, and then defeated by Notre Dame and Tennessee.

Virginia coach Art Guepe has a defensive team that is a match for the Carolina agregation. The experienced Virginia line and secondary ranks among the best in the nation on opponents' scoring and rushing yardage.

North Carolina has a slight edge in its series with Virginia, winning 27 while losing 25 and tieing three.

Tickets for the game are still available and may be purchased at the satdium. A crowd of 25,000 is expected for the contest.

JAMES MARTINDALE

Comic Opera To Be Given On Monday

The comic opera "Don Pasquale" will be presented in Chapel Hill Monday by the Grass Roots Opera Company.

The cast includes James Martindale as Don Pasquale, Virginia Hudnall as Norina, Norris Greer as Ernesto and Alec Dantre as Dr. Malatesta. The opera will be sung in English.

The Opera Company was formed in 1949 by A. J. Fletcher, a Raleigh attorney, to give aspiring singers a chance to appear in operatic productions and at the same time give the public an opportunity to hear opera in English.

The company is administered by the Extension Division of the University and presented 79 performances throughout North Carolina and Virginia last season. The fact that North Carolina is the only state where students of singing can sing from 10 to 20 performances of several different operas in one season has attracted young vocalists from all over the country. This season, singers from Texas, Michigan, Virginia, New York, Arkansas and North Carolina are represented.

Bar Negroes, Eight Quit

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

SEWANEE, Tenn., Nov. 7 — Eight faculty members of the University of the South have resigned in protest over a decision by the trustees not to admit Negroes to the theological school.

When the controversy first became public, Chancellor R. Bland Mitchell of Little Rock said there was no university ordinance excluding Negroes, but that he had been advised that such enrollments would be in violation of Tennessee law. No Negroes have ever applied for admission to Sewanee, he added.

Signers of the letter of resignation were the Rev. F Craighill Brown, dean of the Theology School; the Rev. Claude E. Guthrie, the Rev. Robert Lansing Hicks, the Rev. Robert Malcolm McNair, the Rev. Howard A. Johnson, James A. Reddick, the Rev. Frederick Quentin Shafter, all professors, and the Rev. Richard Hooker Wilmer, school chaplain.

Last Day

Monday is the last day General College students may make appointments for pre-registration conferences with their deans.

Appointment books are available in the General College office, Room 308 South Building.

NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON—The shattering impact of the Republican election victory yesterday almost immobilized American diplomacy. The atmosphere at the State Department was one of indecision pending word from the new signal-caller, President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower, or his foreign policy advisers. President Truman asked Eisenhower to send representatives to the Defense and State Departments and Budget Bureau "at the earliest possible moment."

ASHEVILLE—Forest fires, which have blackened thousands of acres of woodlands in the Carolinas during the past 10 days, blazed anew yesterday and the danger of still more fires was termed "extremely critical." Brisk winds fanned the destructive blazes which already were feeding on powder-dy timberland as a result of a record-breaking drought. More than 100 men were rushed into the Tennessee Gap section near Rosman to battle a blaze which had swept over 700 acres by mid-morning.

SEOUL—United Nations forces smashed a Chinese attack between Triangle Hill and Sniper Ridge early yesterday in the first snowstorm of the season. The Chinese swarmed through rocky valleys separating the two bitterly-contested heights on the west-central front at 3:40 a. m. A shattering Allied artillery and mortar bombardment forced the Reds to retreat an hour later. The enemy apparantly was trying to move into position for a new attack on Sniper Ridge, about one mile east of Triangle.

WASHINGTON—Congressional Republicans bickered over the spoils of the Eisenhower landslide victory yesterday as the President-elect prepared to send his first invasion wave into Washington. Senate GOP members found themselves embroiled in a possibly bitter fight over their party floor leadership. Sen. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire spread the word he would rather be temporary president of that body—and third in the line of succession for the presidiency —than keep the job he now holds.

WASHINGTON—The United States may have exploded the world's first full-scale hydrogen bomb—and be keeping it secret. This year's nuclear weapons tests at Eniwetok, announced for the "autumn months," are either completed or nearing an end. They generally were expected to include use of a standard atomic bomb to touch off enough hydrogen to produce a super-sized blast.

Japanese Blending West With Orient

By Tom Parramore

"Japan Today" got a thorough airing at Thursday night's YMCA supper forum in Lenoir Hall when three Japanese students compared life in their native land with that in America.

In discusing and comparing education in Japan with that of the United States, Sadao Morita said that before World War II the Japanese system included six years of primary school, six years of middle, and six years of university education. Now, however, he explained, after primary school follows three years of junior high, three of senior high, and four years in one of Japan's 96 national and 105 private universitiees.

According to Morita, the Japanese school year is very different from that of their western ally. In Japan the school year begins in April and ends in February or March, with exams coming in October at the end of the first semester and again in January or February at the end of the second. Interesting to the gathering was the fact that the Japanese student gets two months vacation in the summer, another around Christmas, and two more months in the spring.

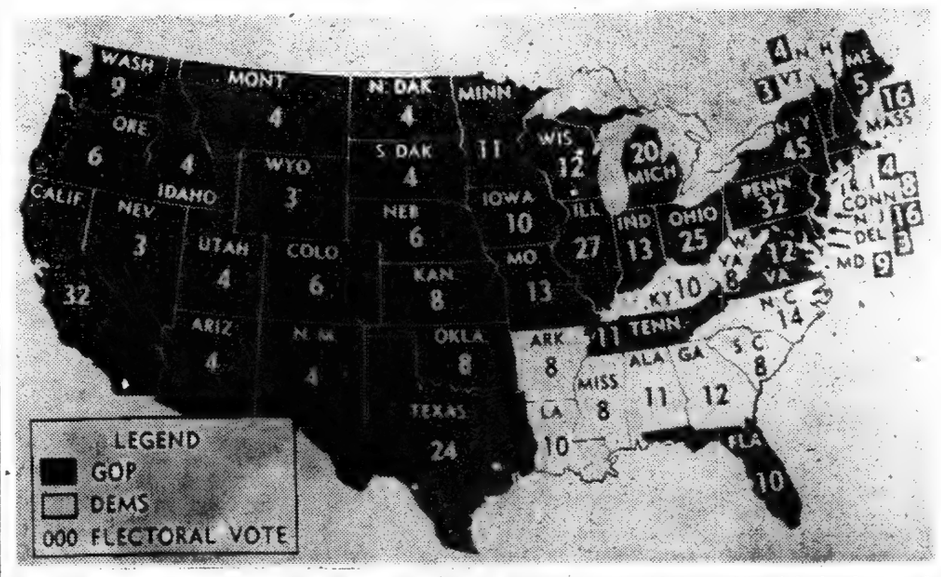
The topic went to Japanese culture as Miss Taeko Fujita told of some of the aspects of her country's unusual society. Many cultures meet in Japan which has a strong tendency to cling to its own traditions, she said. One would be surprised, she added, to find Japan as efficient industrially as many nations of the western world.

Miss Taeko said most of the famous books and plays of the world have been translated into Japanese, and the average citizen of Japan reads a great deal. Especially popular with her countrymen are Somerset Maughm and Oscar Wilde, she said.

"It is very regrettable, she said, that Japanese literature is not widely introduced to the rest of the world due to the difficulty of translation."

The program was concluded by Hiroshi Takano, a radio and economics major here. He described Japan's present-day political structure.

Japan, he explained, has two Legislative bodies roughly comparable to our Congress.



Candidates

There will be a compulsory meeting Monday night at 7:30 in Gerrard Hall for candidates running in the fall election Nov. 18.

Passages from the newly revised election laws will be read and candidates will be told about expense limits. Those failing to attend must notify the Elections Board within 48 hours or be disqualified.

ALTERNATELY SMILING AND serious, Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson, the Democratic nominee, reads his statement conceding the victory to Dwight Eisenhower, from his election headquarters in the Leland Hotel in Springfield, Ill. In his speech to his Democratic supporters he said he felt as Lincoln once did after losing an election—"Too old to cry, and too hurt to laugh."—NEA Telephoto.

Time For A Change

Ike took Virginia, why can't we?

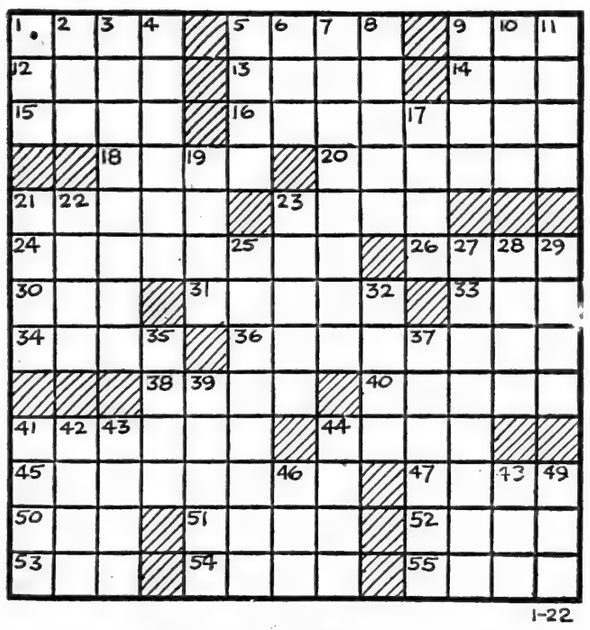
It's time we got some wins in our sails, but whether or not we deal the U. Va. a blow, we want to hear some good, loud rebuttals to Wahoo-Wa!

The weatherman predicts a blue-and-white-colored sky, and we predict the Blue and Whites will come through with flying colors. One request: Let's all be on hand at the end of the game when the band plays "Hark the Sound."

Come on Carolina, let's have a goal rush!

Express Yourself

Editor:



It appears to me that the time is long overdue for someone to stand up for the coeds around here. The Carolina gentleman whose letter was printed in the November 6th issue of the Tar Heel, and whose name I can't seem to recall for some reason, mentions the fact that the coeds are the "most conceited, pampered, and spoiled bunch of women" he's ever seen. He goes on to say that he feels that they ought to try being nice to the boys once in a while, and furthermore that they seem to think that they are God's gift to man.

My attitude on this subject is very definitely partisan. I have no use for the birds who wander around low-rating the coeds simply because they can't get a date. If I were a coed, I wouldn't date them either, especially when they take such obnoxious forms of expressing their distaste for the coeds. They are usually men who are impolite, uncouth, unlettered to the degree that they can't get three words out of their mouth without saying something offensive, and just generally, all-around not worth a damn, tinker's or otherwise.

Let's face it, boy. The coeds around here are tops. They are better than any women I have ever seen anywhere at any time. I have, on occasion, dated on a dime, with never a squawk from the gal, which to me indicates character. You mention that the general concensus of opinion says that it's a 100-to-one shot for the ordinary man to get a date with a Carolina coed. Who are the men who make up this concensus of opinion, which is so far from true that it's ludicrous? Jokers like you, who haven't even got a conviction, far less the courage of it to sign your name to your statement. Drop around to the women's dorm lounges or the sorority living rooms some night and see all these extraordinary men you speak of by insinuation. They put on their pants one leg at a time and have seven holes in their head, just like most other people.

In fine, I refer you to your own closing paragraph: "Face the facts, boy. Clean up your own house before you try to blame someone else . . . 'The pleasures of life are all around you. One has but to open his eyes and see and reach out to take them'."

John Taylor — REVIEWS

This department is always very happy to be able to report on any new theatrical activities going on around Chapel Hill. And when these new undertakings are of a particularly worthwhile nature, they seem to be worth much more than merely a cursory recommendation.

A case in point that fills the qualifications listed above is a group of Carolina students, sponsored by the Red Cross, who at present are organizing a variety show to be presented next Wednesday at the Veterans' Hospital at Fort Bragg. Headed by Jerry Reece, Harriett Eliason, and Jody Desmond, this unsung organization has been working diligently for the past week, and from all indications it seems as though they have gotten together a bang-up show for the servicemen. It has been extremely gratifying to see the cooperation that they have been given from student entertainers.

The cast for the show consists of the following people: Nancy Green, well - known singing-comedienne; Hartwell Conklin, pantomimist, who will also work as master of ceremonies; Carl Vipperman, popular singer; Mardi Boyle, dancer; Arno Stahle, accordionist; Fran McColl, torch singer; Wyatt Dixon, guitarist; Tish House, Jane Yearley, and Celia Brown, singing trio; and Bill Collins, who will serve as accompanist.

This will be the second show to be presented by the Red Cross at Fort Bragg. If this year's presentation is received as well as the one last year—and it certainly seems as though it will be—plans will be set in motion to form other units and to send them around to various hospitals and worthy organizations. From all appearances this seems to be a project that students and townspeople should get firmly behind and to which they should lend their support. In a community of this size there is a vast amount of talent that should be happy not only to lend their services to such a cause, but also to have an opportunity to try out acts that they can use here at later times.

Joe Raff — Riff by Raff

What is often good for the majority of the people is often blocked by a few who have power invested in them. Organization is power and nowhere has it been better illustrated than here on the Carolina campus. I refer specifically to last spring's campus election where the University Party (usually considered to represent the fraternities which in turn include only about twenty-five per cent of the total enrollment) ran away with the vote and gained a majority in the legislature. The efficient and questionable organization of that party (though representing the smaller segment of campus life) holds the reins to our local government.

I suspect that what would be beneficial to the campus as a whole will be blocked. The presentation of a bill in the legislature to postpone fraternity rushing until the winter quarter would collide with University Party wishes. The only recognizable objection to this that I can see is that it would throw a financial burden on the fraternities for an additional uarter and would shorten the pledging period.

This, however, I believe is heavily outweighed by the points in favor of such legislation. In the first place the fraternities would help themselves by this action for the reason that they would have an opportunity after the winter quarter to see the grades of a prospective pledge and thereby eliminate the possibility of carrying poor students as pledges in the fraternity.

Secondly, when a freshman first comes into this bird sanctuary he is immediately blanketed by the orientation program, the gridiron fever, extra-curricular work, and the necessity of learning to live away from home. During those first weeks he must be given the time to form some study habits and if he does not get them during that period it is very likely that he will never have them. Such a postponement would also afford the freshman an opportunity to look further into the proposition of choosing a fraternity which best meets his interests and fulfills his wishes.

Nuclear Subs

Cost of the power plant for a nuclear submarine should approximate that of the highspeed subs presently being considered. Power for the latter would cost the Navy $1.50 per kilowatt hour, compared to two cents kwh for a cruiser or battleship and eight cents for a conventional slow sub.

Editor:

Abraham Lincoln was, with little doubt, one of the greatest leaders this nation has had. At the same time, he was, with even less doubt, a master of the English language. Many of his speeches and letters are familiar to us now more for their beautiful pharseology and simplicity than for their subject matter as such.

Were it not for this unique ability of Lincoln's, his Gettysburg Address would have been forgotten the day after it was delivered. But today, it stands before all as an example of incomparable sincerity.

Mr. Creuser's "Letter" of last Friday was, in direct contrast, an example of complete insincerity. His distortion of Lincoln's words is nothing less than historical sacriledge.

I am a Republican; but neither Republican nor Democrat of mature mind could stomach the "cuteness" which Mr. Creuser has attempted in his completely immature way of thinking. A little sober thought is all that is necessary to see the complete worthlessness of such an attempt.

Clay Johnson

Editor:

Mr. Yates , I agree with you concerning profanity on the stage a great deal more than you probably think, and it was not without some hesitation that I finally let the text of "Death of a Salesman" stand as the author wrote it. My thinking on this matter was something as follows: There is a terrifying spiritual vacuum in the Loman family, and that, more than any other thing, is the basis of the Loman's tragedy. I think I see in Uncle Ben Willy Loman's groping for a god—a materialistic god of cheap success, a dingy father-image to back his own feeble judgments, and finally a death symbol leading him on into blind self-destruction. And to me, at least, the profanity emphasizes the Lomans' spiritual vacuum and points up their complete demoralization.

I think "Death of a Salesman" is one of the great sermons of our time. Its whole purpose is to take us to task for cheapening our lives, for not having standards, for turning toward false gods. True enough the dramatist's method is negative, but he implies values, I think, by demonstrating the inevitable tragedy of life without values. Perhaps I was wrong in not deleting some of the language of the play. My reason for not doing so, however, was not for the sake of realism (the play is far from being realistic) but simply that the language seemed so much a part of Miller's moving and terrifying Phillippic.

Spring has sprung
Fall has fell
Germans is here
An' thash jus' shwell.

Say you're having a few parties? Not more than a hundred or so.

Zete's will have their party tonight at Crabtree Creek and had one at the house last night.

KA's shipwreck party tonight will be at the Shriners' Club in Durham . . . they'll also have an informal cocktail party for their alums before the game today.

Costumes and a combo ought to make a pretty good party at the Beta house tonight. They're starting things off with a cocktail party this a.m.

TEP's say they're having "all kinds of alums" visiting them this weekend . . . parties started last night and will continue tonight.

KD's will serve brunch this morning for all their visiting alums.

Theta Chi's will have general cocktail partying before and after today's fame . . . tonight they are having a pipe party(?) and combo.

AND once more the ZBT's would like to mention their all-campus cocktail party after the game today . . . more yet—they are having a shipwreck party tonight and buffet lunch tomorrow.

Chi Psi's had li'l cabin party last nite at the Legion Hut and tonight will have a formal dance at the house.

AKPsi's had their pledge banquet and dance last night at the Country Club. 'Nother party tonight at the house.

Lambda Chi's partied last night at the house and will again tonight only this time it's a cabin party.

Champagne yesterday for the Kappa Sigs at their pre-concert party. The party will continue tonight at the house (but will the champagne?)

Pi Kappa Phi's will party at the house after the game . . . Pi Lams have had just one big party, combo tonite and cocktails after the game.

Sigma Chi's will have a Legion Hut party tonite.

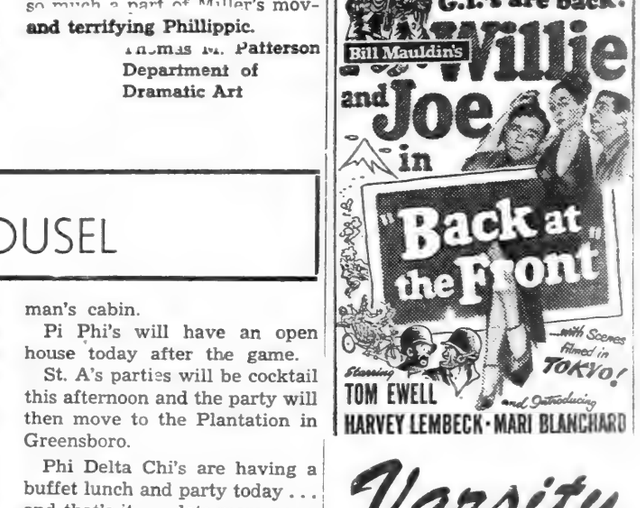
Delta Sigma Pi's will honor their new pledges with an after-the-game party . . . cabin party tonite at brother Fred Cash's cabin at Apex.

Sigma Nu's are partying around the house all weekend. . . . SPE's are having an alumni luncheon and party at the house.

Phi Delts will be out at Lloyd's tonight for a barn party.

Deke's are having all kinds of little functions this weekend including midnight breakfasts, an after the game party, and supper and a "social" at Fireman's cabin.

Pi Phi's will have an open house today after the game.



St. A's parties will be cocktail this afternoon and the party will then move to the Plantation in Greensboro.

Phi Delta Chi's are having a buffet lunch and party today . . . and that's it . . . lots more news but no more space. Big weekend to you.

Tar Babies Downed By State, 6-0

Long Aerial Game's Only Scoring Play

Carolina's Junior Varsity football eleven dropped a 6-0 decision to the North Carolina State Jaycees at Raleigh yesterday afternoon in a see-saw battle which was highlighted by a spectacular pass play on the part of the Wolfpack. A very small crowd was on hand to watch the game at Riddick Stadium on the chilly afternoon.

Fleet-footed Bill Keever managed to work his way in behind the Carolina defense to catch an arching pass from quarterback Eddie Frantz for the game's lone tally. The play covered 30 yards, and occurred late in the second period.

Both teams demonstrated good attacks and threatened often. Carolina was within scoring distance several times only to be set back by fumbles, penalties, and a stiffened State defense. State also lost several other scoring opportunities.

Sophomore Frantz, who was slated to be the Wolfpack's number one varsity quarterback until freshman Carl Wyles was given the nod, sparked the State offense. He aided the rushing attack with clever ball handling, while passing very well. Frantz was the quarterback of the great Charlotte Central elevens which included Larry Parker.

The Carolina offense was inconsistant for the most part. Fullback Billy Joe Johnson was the leading ball carrier for the losers, with quarterbacks Ed Laughlin and Ernie Liberati also contributing to the attack. Liberati and Laughlin were hindered in their passing by a hard charging State line. Both were thrown for huge losses several times.

State had a large edge in statistics. The Wolfpack outgained the Tar Babies both on the ground and in the air, while accumulating several more first downs.

This is Carolina's second loss of the season, against three victories. The Tar Babies won over Fort Bragg, Virginia and Wake Forest, while losing to William and Mary.

Harriers Meet Virginia Today

Carolina's cross country team, winless in two starts, will try to pick up its first victory of the day this morning at 10:30 when it meets the runners from the University of Virginia.

The Tar Heels bowed to Maryland's strong team in the polio-delayed season opener, 15-55, and dropped their second meet to Tennessee at Knoxville, 15-41, last weekend.

But despite the two losses the Carolina runners have continued to show improvement. The polio cancellation definitely hurt them but they seem to be rounding into shape now.

Co-captains Bob Webb and Morris Osbourne will lead the team in its quest of its first victory. They tied for sixth place against Tennessee, the Southeastern Conference champs, after being shut out against Maryland.

Tennis Team Beats Virginia, 7-2; Del Sylvia Reinjures Leg Muscle

By Vardy Buckalew

The Carolina tennis team set a hoped-for precedent for the football team this weekend by beating a good University of Virginia team, 7-2, yesterday afternoon on the wind-swept varsity courts.

Coach John Kenfield gave the small crowd a glimpse of a team which should prove to be the best in this section next spring during the regular season.

In the singles lineup were three freshmen, all of whom came through with victories. The only matches lost by the team was the number one singles and the number two doubles.

Del Sylvia was playing in the number one singles and was beaten by Dick Rutledge, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5. Rutledge had Sylvia off his game all afternoon with his deliberate, consistent type of playing.

Sylvia won the first set in fairly easy fashion but after that he lost control of his game. Time after time he returned easy shots into the net.

Rutledge, on the other hand, was playing slow and deliberate and without trying to overpower Sylvia, returned most everything Sylvia could get across the net.

The three freshmen all had a fairly easy time of winning. Tom Bradford started in the number three position ahead of Bob Payne, last year's number three man, and beat Echols 6-1, 6-1.

Don Thompson played the number five position and beat Jett 6-2, 5-7, 6-2.

Bruce Gustafson took over in the number six position and won over Stoever 6-3, 6-1.

Sylvia played in the number two doubles match with Pete Green, another freshman, and in the second set reinjured his leg and had to be carried off the court. It was the same injury that kept him from playing against Virginia last fall and which bothered him at the Southern Conference this spring.

Sylvia and Green had won the first set 6-3, and were behind in the second 1-2 when the injury occurred.

Thompson and Bradford teamed up in the number one doubles to beat Jett and Berkley 6-2, 5-3.

The very strong doubles lineup was rounded out by Browne and Payne who beat Horsley and Sierra 10-8, 1-6, 6-2.

Penn State Soccer Team Here Today

Although victors in four out of its six games this fall, Carolina's soccer team will be the decided underdog this morning at nine o'clock when it meets Penn State on Fetzer Field.

Carolina has collected victories over Virginia, Roanoke, Washington and Lee and the Cherry Point Marines, but dropped an upset to N. C. State, 1-0, and its last match to Duke, 3-1.

Penn State is regarded as one of the outstanding collegiate teams in the country and has lost but one match, that one, 3-2, to Navy. The Pennsylvanians have defeated Army, Bucknell, Colgate and Maryland. They defeated the Terrapins, last year's Southern Conference champions, 11-0.

The Tar Heels will rely on the same boys who have led them to their 4-2 mark and will put special emphasis on the scoring of Gerry Russell, high point man last year who is leading the team in scoring this season.

Russell will count on most of his help from Renny Randolph, Harry Pawlik, Barry Kalb, Tommy Hopkins, Ben Tison and Drew Patterson.

Fast Virginians Out-Maneuver Hopeful 'Heels

Carolina Tallies Early But Fails On Passing Game

By Jack Claiborne

Right in the face of Homecoming Day optimism built up by alumni, visitors and die-hard students, the University of Virginia Cavaliers rocked the North Carolina Tar Heels, 34-7, in Kenan Stadium yesterday.

While the Tar Heels were seeking their first win in five starts and an end to an 11-game losing streak over a two-year span, the Cavaliers were wanting a victory after setbacks by Duke and South Carolin on the two preceding Saturdays.

And they got it by out-running and out-passing the Tar Heels in the most workmanlike fashion. Coach Art Guepe's men were lightning and powerful on land and absolutely mystifying through the air. They gained 254 yards over the land route and passed 21 times with 10 completions for 146 more , totaling 400 yards on offense.

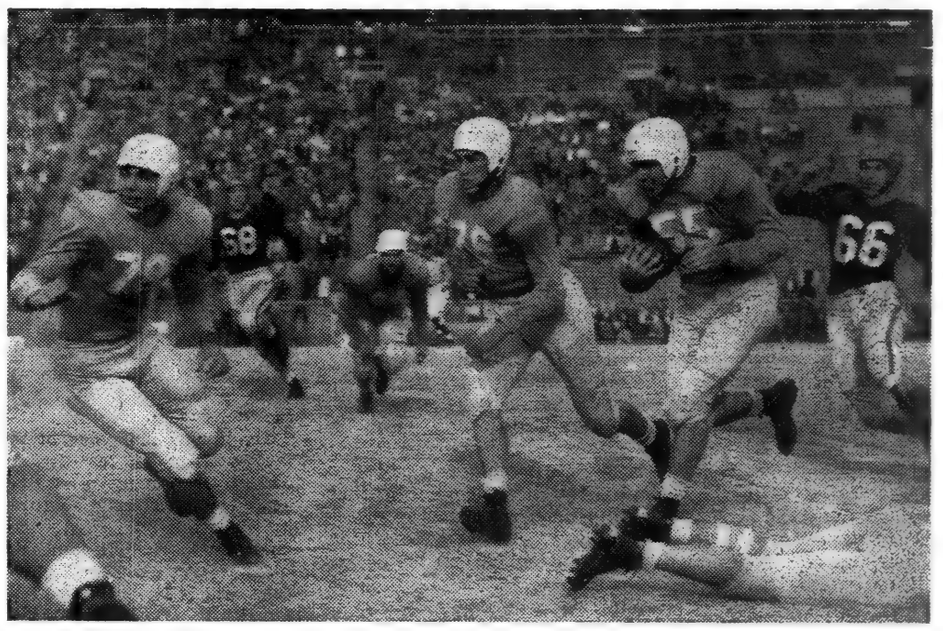
For the Tar Heels, who for the third straight week put in a fine first half showing only to lose grip after the intermission, the defeat was bitter, coming right in their own backyard with friends, alumni and stoutest supporters counting on them to come out of their ignominy of defeat.

Hopes were high as the Tar Heels tallied an early touchdown, but they dwindle and died into despair as the dashing Cavaliers began their brand of split-T lightning, backed up by the passing arm of Quarterback Charlie Harding.

Carolina had possibly its best day on the ground with its still-faltering split-T offense, gaining 144 yards to bypass any previous productions. But the loss of the air arm, heretofore Carolina's only threat and the means by which they had scored five of six previous touchdowns, cost mightily.

Quarterback Marshall Newman's bullets were as accurate as always, but his receivers were being batted around by the Virginia defenders as so many volleyballs, resulting in costly bobbles on important passes.

Carolina waited until late in the third period to complete their first aerial, and then for a loss of three yards, when a completion in the closing moments of the first half might have meant a tie score at intermission and some new confidence for the second portion.



With hopes riding high and alumni looking on for the promised win, Carolina kicked off to Virginia to start the first quarter. It was a good move, for it resulted in a quick Tar Heel tally.

The Virginians received, took three cracks at the then-stout Carolina line and then resorted to punting. Harold Hoak stuck his mighty foot into from the Va. 28 and Safetyman Len Bullock, a fine freshman from Ayden gathered it in on the Tar Heel 31.

Bullock neatly sidestepped the down quickly under the boot, picked up some rare blocking—one body slam by Jim McCreedy, another freshman, at the Carolina 45 which took out two Cavaliers—to go 69 yards for the touchdown.

Tom Adler kicked his seventh straight extra point (The Tar Heels have scored seven touchdowns this season) and carolina had a handsome seven-point lead and were beginning to count on the first win.

CAROLINA'S BUD WALLACE gets good interference here as he makes one of the Tar Heels' few offensive gains during yesterday's rout by Virginia. Giving him the blocking power are John Lambert (78) and Ken Yarborough (76). The Cavaliers took their third straight game from Carolina,34-7.

SPEBSQSA Will Colonize This Tuesday

SPEBSQSA is coming to campus.

That's short for the society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America. An organizational meeting is planned for 8:30 Tuesday night on the second floor of the Y. Bob Minteer, 305 Lewis Dormitory, is leading the organizational effort and yesterday asked anyone interested to contact him at his room or at the meeting Tuesday night.

"Plenty of students and townspeople who have a bent for close harmony should be happy to hear this," Minteer said. He emphasized he wanted it a community affair and to include townspeople as well as students.

Going back over SPEBSQSA's history, Miteer said the group now is organized on an international scale and has more than 650 chapters in the United States and Canada. SPEBSQSA was formed in 1938 by a Tulsa, Okla attorney, Owen C. Cash. Since that time it has grown rapidly to its present roll of 650 local groups.

Minteer said further meetings will be held later. He asked those interested to attend Tuesday "to get in on the ground floor."

Book Decision

Dr. Frank W. Hanft, professor of law here, will discuss his new book, "You Can Believe," at a Bull's Head tea in the Assembly-Exhibition Room of the Library Wednesday afternoon at 4o'clock.

The public is invited. Numerous demands for his lectures on Christianity in printed form led to the writing of his book, "You Can Believe," recently off the press.

School In Folk Dance Opens Here Tomorrow

A week-long free folk dance clinic opens tomorrow, led by Gene Gowing, considered the leading authority on the traditions and history of this type of dancing.

The clinic will be held in the Women's Gymnasium. Townspeople have been invited to attend along with students. Coeds particularly are needed, officials said yesterday.

The schedule:

Monday — 8 p.m., Square dance party.

Tuesday—8 p.m., Callers clinic.

Wednesday—8 p.m. Square dance party.

Thursday—4 p.m., Instructions and party.

Thursday—8 p.m., Callers clinic.

The social dance usually held Thursdays at 8 p.m. will be held instead at 6:45 p.m., Wednesday, for this week.

Gowing is operator of a folk dancing school located in the midst of New Hampshire's White Mountains. During the summer, he conducts the Folkways Foundation, which offers courses to those wishing to institute folk dancing in schools, community programs and the like. For the past 15 years he has collected and taught English folk dances and American square dancing.

Boston Prof To Lecture

Dr. Eddie Asivatham, professor of missios and Christian international relations at Boston University School of Theology, will be a guest lecturer here Nov. 14-17.

He will lecture on "Religion's Part in International Relations" as part of a conference at Camp New Hope. Dr. Asirvatham and Paul Green, will moderate the conference at New Hope.

Green has just completed a world trip under sponsorship of the Rockefeller Foundation and UNESCO. He visited some 25 nations and lectured in many universities and civic groups.

Dr. Asirvatham, of Madras India, was educated in this country, in India, England and Scotland. He received his Ph.D. from Edinburgh University.

Coed Dean's Office

The staff of the Dean of Women's office will be in Raleigh tomorrow and Tuesday during the entire day to attend a meeting of the Southern College Personnel Association.

Students desiring to consult with the dean's office on these days are asked not to come.

Official Of NAM Speaks Tuesday

Earl Bunting, managing director of the National Association of Maufacturers, will address the University Faculty Club at a uncheon meeting Tuesday.

He will speak on the subject of "Partners in Understanding."

Bunting also will speak to a student group at 8 p.m. in the Faculty Room of the Morehead Building. His topic is "A Blue Print for Freedom."

Bunting is the former president of the O'Sullivan Rubber Company. He is an honorary member of Delta Sigma Pi. The evening meeting will be sponsored by the School of Busiess Administration and business administration professional fraternities Delta Sigma Pi and Alpha Kappa Psi. The public is invited to attend.

C. S. MARTIN

Canon Martin Will Talk On Worship, Life

The Rev. Canon Charles S. Martin, canon of the Washington Cathedral, will preach a mission at the Chapel of the Cross, the Episcopal Church, today through Tuesday. The topic for this mission is worship and life.

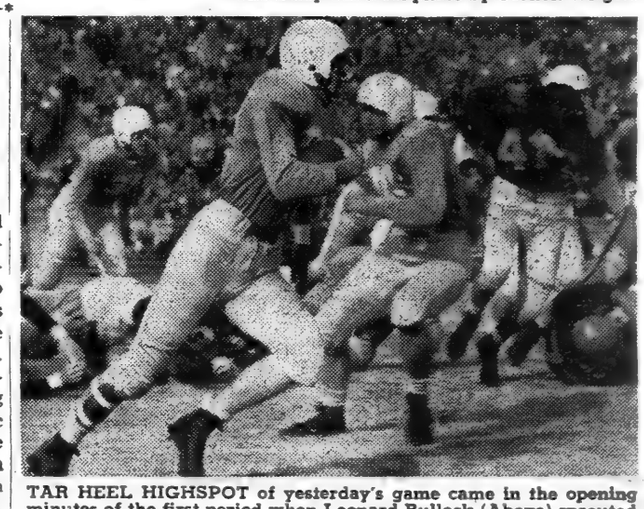
Canon Martin will preach at the 11 a.m. service today, tonight at 7:30 on "Offering and Work." On Monday at 7.30 p.m. he will preach on "Consecration and Life," and will finish the mission on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. with a topic of "Community and Communion."

Canon Martin, before becoming canon at the Washington Cathedral was rector of St. Paul's Church in Burlington, Vt.,

Guests View Homecoming Celebration

Perfect fall weather enhanced the appeal of a colorful Homecoming Day and the general festivity with the meeting of two such long-time traditional rivals as Carolina and Virginia on the gridiron at Chapel Hill yesterday.

Thousands of returning alumni, hundreds of pretty visiting college girls, plus an enthusistic student body and guests from the University of Virginia joined in a gala weekend, beginning with a German Club dance last night, and continuing through many "rehashes" of the football game into the late hours last night.



Highlaigh of the Homecoming program was the crowning at halftime of a Queen for the day — Miss Grace Gordon, attractive brunette Carolina senior from Spray, who was chosen to reign over the festivities by members of the University Club, sponsors of the Homecoming activities.

She was presented in mid-field ceremonies at halftime by John Seely of Winston-Salem, president of the Club. Members of the organization had sent her an orchid corsage which she wore at her shoulder.

Also a feature at half-time was the mammoth display of 22 visiting high school bands which joined with the Carolina and Virginia bands in presenting a program of music and figures in which 1500 musicians participated.

Special guests at the game were some 500 Explorer Scouts attending the Occoneechee Council vocational conference here during the weekend and 75 outstanding high school football players who were guests of the Athletic Association.

A number of alumni groups held meetings here on the campus here today. Among them were the Medical Foundation, the General Alumni Association, and an organizational meeting of thelaw school alumni.

Graham And Peace

"One infinite God, good, unifies men and nations; constitutes the brotherhood of man; ends wars; fulfills the Scripture, "Love thy neighbor as thyself"; annihilates pagan and Christian idolatry,—whatever is wrong in social, civil, criminal, political, and religious codes; equalizes the sexes; annuls the curse on man, and leaves nothing that can sin, suffer, be punished or destroyed."—Mary Baker Eddy

"Because we see that the mechanical framework of steel rails . . . and of motors . . . has not brought peace and brotherhood—nor has the economic system—nor even has the United Nations yet brought peace, so there is a need of reinforcement (a spiritual reinforcement) of the mechanical, economic and political realms of life."

So spoke Dr. Frank P. Graham, "international statesman," and former president of the University of North Carolina. He spoke to a group of Y students concerning the current program launched to obtain contributions for Y activities. But he spoke, in a sense, to a larger group—to a troubled world.

The subject of Dr. Graham's informal talk was in no means bound by limitations concerning the "kick-off" meeting for the annual YMCA faculty visitation and finance campaign. His emphasis appeared to be on international peace, rather than on financial fund-raising. However, he doubtlessly recognized that the Y appeal for funds was only a means for contributing to world peace (through Y activity).

During the early part of teh Y dinner meeting last week, the Rev. Maurice Kidder presented a copy of the Revised Standard Version of the Bible to Dr. Graham. Dr. Graham leafed through the pages, and seriously commented: "This book is the core of our existence in a Christian community."

He went on to say that in a state institution such as the University, a great need is felt for what he termed "voluntary religious association."

"Football, books, extra curricular activities—all have a place in our lives at Carolina." Dr. Graham continued, "but it is necessary to keep religion at the center of our activities."

The realm of power and power-personality was denounced by the great educator. He referred to the "Man of the New Testament," and pointed out how Jesus of Nazareth repudiated material power, and how eh found the spiritual, refreshing personality of his disciples.

Dr. Graham concluded, "The great unseen world reaches across oceans and continents. The sacredness of personality (individual personality) is over everything regardless of race, religion, region."

Tar On My Heels

The next motion on the floor of the Student Legislature might well be, "Mr. Chairman, I move Student Government be abolished."

There is only one reason why this motion will not be necessitated—or else admit SG is all a joke—and that lone reason is the increasing interest in Student Government.

The recent actions of the Student Legislature and particularly the Student Council and the Election Board certainly make S.G. seem like a toy which is being played with very dangerously.

The particular actions I'm thinking of right now are, first, the actions of the Student Council last Fall when the UP candidates failed to comply with Elections Rules in filing their candidates. The Council allowed them to file several days after the deadline.

The second indication of the incompetency of the Student Council was seen just a few days ago when the Council approved a redistricting bill passed by the Legislature. The bill does not comply with Elections Rules—rules which Jerry Cook (Chm. Election Board) and the Council decided to throw out the window.

In both cases the Council admitted their decisions smelled of unconstitutionality. In the first case the Council simply made things "right" by saying all Election's Rules would be void for the Fall Elections. In the latter case the Council asked the Legislature to pass a bill to make their decisions constitutional.

Is the Council interpreting the Constitution or writing one of its own adding and subtracting when it sees fit and when it is politically advantageous?

I do feel comfortable however because I believe that a halt is going to be put to such shoddy tactics.

The students proved their increased interest last spring when a record crowd turned to the polls to select representatives. I believe such a crowd will turn out again this fall.

Whether the students made a mistake last spring I would not say. That is a question that can only be answered in time and by each individual student.

He will partially have to answer that question this fall because some of the same old names will be on the ballot. Some of these names are the names of good, working representatives; others are the names of the same old cronies that have plagued Student Government for some time with their own political desires and a "students be damned" theory.

It will be up to 5,300 students to weed the good from the bad. A fair choice can be made by 1,000 students; a good choice by 2,000; the best choice by 5,300 students.

Much to some peoples dismay, Student Government is not playing tiddlewinks. They can do anyhting from securing benches to put in the Arboretum to having you kicked out of school. Are you willing to let the other students pick your representatives when the polls are open to you too?

Anyone for tidddlewinks?

Express Yourself-

To all of you who worked so hard and so loyally on behalf of Governor Stevenson, I offer my warmest thanks. You did a grand job.

We fought hard and fought cleanly for a great man and for a great cause. Defeat will never diminish our deep pride in having striven honestly and energetically for the advancement of those high principles which are no less valid today than yesterday. This is a fight which will never cease, so long as there are men and women who have grasped the greatness of America.

The American voters have brought in their verdict. From that verdict, there is no appeal, save to the high court of history. It is now time for all of us to join sincerely with our recent opponents in the long labor for a united land in a world at peace

WASHINGTON— Washington cliff - dwellers are twittering, twerking, and titillating. There is nothing they love more than a change of administrations, and since most of the mare Republicans anyway, they are preening their social feathers, whetting their social axes, and getting ready for the Eisenhower administration as if it was to be the first rain after a 20-year drought on the social Sahara of Washington.

Especially they are looking forward to Mamie. Frankly tehre are some misgivings about Mamie. For some of the cliff-dwellers remember, a little regretfully, how Mamie lived here all during the war with hardly a soul giving her a mere farethee-well.

Mamie lived in an apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel with Ruth Butcher, wife of Commander Harry Butcher, Naval Aide to Eisenhower. They had a common sitting room, separate bedrooms, and lived as unobtrusively as hundreds of other Army wives, of which the capital had a wartime surfeit.

As far as the elite along Massachusetts Avenue and the cozy snuggeries of Georgetown were concerned, Mamie didn't exist. Even when her husband climbed the pinnacle of military fame, no one bothered much, if any, about Mamie.

Now, some of them are wondering if Mamie will remember. Will she remember and resent? Washington society has heard tales that Mamie has changed since those war years. At Versailles, when she gave cocktail parties, so the ladies whisper, she tolerated no guest lower than the rank of Lieutenant General. Will she be uppity in the White House or will she hold out the olive branch to the Republican socialites so long starved during the era of those hard - drinking, poker - playing "How-are-ya-honey" Democrats?

That is one of the big questions worrying Washington. The Korean war may absorb the new President-Elect. European potentates may be planning new discussions of loans and aid. Atomic energy may be crucial. But none of these is anywhere near as absorbing to those who indulge in Washington's second greatest industry, "Socialitis," as the question of what will Mamie do in the White House.

One of the first things General Eisenhower and Congress will have to decide after Jan. 20 is a question which a few years ago would have been considered a 21st-century, Buck Rogers problem—whether to let private industry in on atomic research and know-how.

Eisenhower doesn't know it yet, but a secret vote was taken by the Atomic Energy Commission while teh rest of the country was worrying about who was to be President, that the government's monopoly on atomic research should be abandoned and its long-treasured information shared with private industry.

This means that private utilities, such as gas and electric companies, would be given the secrets of government research, in order to develop their own atomic energy eventually to replace coal, gas, oil, and water power.

There is no intention to open up the secrets of the atomic bomb, though with the Russians having developed a bomb of their own, and with the British reputedly well caught up with us, even this may not be much of a secret.

However, a majority of AEC members, after prolonged and solemn debate, voted that atomic industrial secrets should be developed in cooperation with private industry. They also agreed, however, that private research must be carefully regulated by the government. And Gene Zuckert, newest commissioner, pointed out that billions ed in developing atomic energy; of U. S. dollars had been investtherefore he urged that the public be reimbursed for its heavy expenditure, and that further improvements by private industry must be made available to the public on a reciprocal basis.

Commissioner Henry Smyth raised the most objections to relinquishing the government's atomic monopoly. He has argued that the AEC could pay its own way, rather than being a drain on the taxpayers, by developing its own atomic power. He also pointed out the hazards of atomic experimenting. However, he finally agreed to go along with the recommendation.

Of all the commissioners, probably Chairman Gordon Dean was most insistent upon opening the atomic door to private industry.

Note—When this recommendation is passed on to President Eisenhower and Congress in January, it will run up against varying reactions from some of Ike's staunchest supporters, such as Sen. Bourke Hickenlooper of Iowa, who has repeatedly claimed that we were already too loose with our atomic information.

The man who gave up hardest regarding Eisenhower's election was his old commander, Douglas MacArthur.

No less than the ex-President of the United States, Herbert Hoover, begged him to endorse Ike. Even right up to the Madison Square Garden meeting it was hoped and expected that MacArthur would show up at the last minute to give at least nominal support to his old aide But Mac woudn't go to see Ike and Ike in turn wouldn't go to see Mac.

A plea to all graduate students:

In my position as Chairman of the Graduate Club, I have been beseiged lately by a number of complaints from graduate students about the recent chance in policy regarding the payment of tuition for assistants, fellows, etc. Up until now I have been unable to do much of anything except offer my sympathies, since the real fy in the ointment is an old state law, rather than a sadistic desire on the part of anyone in south building to make things rough for grad students.

However, I have succeeded in making an appointment with the of trustees which will be here visiting committee of the board on campus this Friday. Therefore, I would appreciate it very who feel strongly about this much if all graduate students matter would write me a letter about their feelings and ideas in relation to the problem. If you feel that your special case is noteworthy, and that the new policy is causing you difficulty, write me all about it, and I will see what can be done. Send your letters as soon as possible, to: John Gibson, Box 711, Chapel Hill. Remember your letters will be my ammunition, so let's get it going.

Virginia Hands Tar Heels Fifth Straight Loss Here

Down In Front

By Biff Roberts

Fairy Tales

GRIMMS FAIRY TALES get grimmer for Carolina's Tar Heels.

As has been the case in the past two games, the boys of the blue and white looked good during yesterday's first half. But with dreams of winning their first game of the season the Tar Heels became awe-struck by a little Virginia voodoo and came off the field thoroughly beaten and bewitched, 34-7.

The small homecoming crowd of 25,000, the players, and the Carolina coaches all anticipated a Carolina victory—and for a few brief moments it seemed that the Tar Heels might get just that. But that fairy tale had the same ending as the four previous games and contrary to popular belief, the wolves of Virginia got the best of the Red Riding Hoods of Carolina and we ended up getting the blood beat out of us, for the fifth straight time.

Not since the Wake Forest game had the Tar Heels been out front, but Len Bullock gave them that advantage yesterday. After taking the opening kickoffthe Cavaliers took three cracks at the Carolina line. They gained little. On fourth down Harold Hoak stepped back and booted the ball to Bullock on the Carolina 31 and the freshman safety man was off and running. He sidestepped the first would-be Virginia tacklers to get a little breathing room, gathered some good blocking, including one king-sized smash from Jim McCreedy, and raced 69 yards for the Carolina score. Tom Adler's extra point try made it 7-0 and Carolina pipe dreams started to flare.

Pure Fiction

BUT THE CAROLINA victory story turned out to be pure fiction. The Wahoos, set back for just a few moments by Bullock's run, blasted out, piled up two touchdowns and took a first-half lead of 14-7. That lead was sweet music compared to the second-half fiasco, however, and by the time that the full 60 minutes of football had run out we were thoroughly dogged, 34-7.

The game was discouraging from the stand-point of having lost, but it was even more disheartening in that we lost by such a score. With our in-experience, plus the polio cancellation, we were expected to lose to such teams as Texas, Notre Dame, and Tennessee, but this loss to Virginia, although predicted by most people, wasn't supposed to go by such a score.

What had carried us to our few touchdowns of the year, the passing arm of Marshall Newman, went completely astray yesterday. Newman heaved the ball 18 times and completed on only two of his tosses, netting meager 12 yards. He threw 10 times in the first half and missed on all of them. But, to Newman's personal credit, quite a few of his tosses hit the mark only to be dropped by Carolina receivers.

Statistics Prove

THE STATISTICS WERE solidly in favor of Virginia although they did indicate an improvement in our rushing offense. We got 144 yards running, a comparatively good mark, but the Wahoos hit for 254. They got 146 yards passing to our 12.

It was a case of being outclassed by a good team. Even though we kept the score tenaciously close in the first half, we still didn't seem to be in the ball game. Against Notre Dame and Tennessee the first halves were close not only in the score but in the play. But yesterday, excluding Bullock's fine punt-returned touchdown, we didn't seem to be in the game. The boys played hard, but we just didn't seem to have it.

There were exceptions, of course, with little Will Alexander proving that he should have been moved up from the junior varsity long ago. The Winston-Salem sophomore was one of the most effective Carolina linemen all day long. But even his play wasn't enough to stop the inspired Cavaliers. They had dropped two straight games, after being highly ranked nationally, and weren't going to lose a third one.

As Carolina coach Carl Snavely put it: "We were badly beaten by a fine team. We didn't have the ball on offense enough to get going. They capitalized on our mistakes and even cashed in on theirs. I thought they looke very fine. We . . . didn't look so good."

Len Bullock's Punt Return Gives Only Tar Heel Tally

They counted too soon. For three punt exchanges and eight minutes and 57 seconds later, the Cavaliers had tied the mark and were tugging at the leash for more.

They scored when Newman and an unidentified Carolina halfback clashed on a signal mixup resulting in a fumble with Bob Gut recovering for Virginia on the Carolina 16.

Flying Bobby Pate, who gained 24 yards in seven carries today, moved it to the 12 on a sweep to the right. Will Alexander upset Pete Potter on a line buck to momentarily stall the drive at the 11, but on the next play Quarterback Charlie Harding, who contributed a bang up job in the Cavalier cause, tossed to Halfback Pate just beyond the Carolin left end for the touchdown. This particular play, used to combat crashing Carolina end play, was called on all day for large Virginia gains. Mel Roach converted after the score to tie the margin.

Punt exchanges between the long-kicking Bud Wallace of the Tar Heels and Harold Hoak of the Cavaliers featured the play until 6:57 deep in the second period, when Virginia took the lead for good with another score.

Carolina had punted to the Cavalier 22. Furst, Ttat got a first down at the 33. A penalty set them back, however, to the 15. where Harding moved it back to the 28 on a well-executed option. But he was swarmed under trying to pass by the still- alert Carolina defense and the Virginians were forced to punt.

Harold Hoak went deep with all intentions to put his foot into it, but the Carolina defense outdid themselves with a rushing job, forcing the hurrying Hoak to run. He did—all the way to the Carolina 11-yard-line where Dick Lackey knocked him out of bounds. Hoak caught the Carolina defense flat-footed as they were still blocking Virginia tacklers as Hoak crossed the 50.

Lackey might as well have conceded Hoak his glory then, for on the next play Harding came through with that pesky little flip behind the defensive end to Bob Tata for another touchdown. Roach converted again, and it became 14-7.

The rest of the half found Carolina throwing desperately to tie up the score. But Marshall Newman's accurate bullets were flubbed by Carolina defenders who were being harassed by Virginia defenders. Larry Parker, Jeff Newton, Dick Kocornik and then Parker again failed to hold would-be touchdown tosses.

The second time the Cavaliers got the ball in the second half they did it again. Following a pair of punt exchanges Carolina was trying to pass again, throwing from deep in their own territory in a move to open up the Virginia defense.

A Newman to Adler pass was intercepted by Virginia's Bill King and returned to the Carolina 20. Tata moved it to the 18. A Harding to Tata flip behind the end was good to the seven for a first down. Alexander again stalled the threat, but only for a moment, as Harding again tossed behind the end to Pate for a touchdown. The Carolina ends were assigned to drop off the line and follow the receiver on the play, but they were always just out of reach of the receiver. Roach missed the EP and the score moved to 20-7 with 6:14 left in the third period.

Guepe's boys did it again a few minutes later, driving from their own 36 after a Carolina punt following the kickoff. Tata and Furst, the latter a bulldozer up the middle. got a first down from the Carolina 36. Harding then passed to Pate on that same slippery little flat-pass play and the hustling Pate moved down to the Carolina five where Lackey knocked him out of bounds. A holding penalty moved the ball back to the Carolina 30, however, to nullify most of the gain. It was futile, though, for Harding did the same thing, passed to Pate, to put it back on the eight. From there, Furst banged to the two, and Harding slipped over on the option to the left. Roach converted, score: Va. 27, UNC 7.

The finale came on a Virginia recovery of a Newman fumble on the Carolina 23 midway in the fourth period. Tom Scott ate up Newman's miscue on the snay from center to set the stage.

Pate Potter moved it to the 20. Bullock got wise and broke up the pet Virginia pass, but Furst flew up the middle to the 13 for a first down. He moved it to the three on the next play for another first, and then Gordon Granger dived over left tackle for the score. Roach was again good on the conversion for the 34th point.

For the Virginians, Center Jim Pugh, End Tom Scott, and Guard Don Alexander were the defensive standouts, along with the entire Cavalier pass defense which plastered Carolina receivers.

Len Bullock, Dick Lackey, Will Alexander, Dan Mainer, and Doug Bruton led the oft-times terrific Carolina defense. Bruton, though, retired in the third period with shoulder injury, to add to the what looked to be a serious Carolina ailing list.

Next week the Tar Heels take on their only victim of 1951—the Gamecocks of South Carolina—at Columbia, S. C. Their hopes are still up.

Carolina Harriers Edge Virginia In Close Meet

Led by Co-captains Morris Osborne and Bob Webb, UNC's Cross Country team won its first meet of the year, defeating the University of Virginia, 28-29, in a close contest.

The losers placed the first two runners in the three and seven tenths mile race only to lose the match to the Carolina harriers who placed six in the top nine coming in. Coming in first for Virginia was Byrnes, with Greer also of Virginia taking second.

At the halfway point of the meet Bob Webb was leading the runners with a timing of nnie minutes and 36 seconds only to weaken in the back stretch and come in third for the winners. Morris Osborne placed fourth for the Tar Heels.

Lack of depth on the Virginia squad helped Carolina to win as the Tar Heels placed four men in five scoring places after Morris Osborne came in. The losers although taking first and second place could only take but two more places in the top 10.

Coach Dale Ranson stated that his team had shown a great deal of improvement since the Tennessee match and expects them to show well in the State championship meet on Monday in Raleigh. Teams participating in the meet will be State, Duke, Davidson and Carolina.

The victory gives the Tar Heel harriers a record of one win and two defeats with one meet to play after Monday. To close out the season, UNC will play in the Southern Conference Championship meet in Richmond on Monday, Nov. 17.

The runners placed as follows: 1, Byrnes of Virginia with the winning time of 20 minutes and nine seconds; 2, Greer (V); 3, Webb (UNC); 4, Osborne (UNC); 5, Ljunquist (V); 6, Marx (V); 7, Wright (UNC); 8, Vogel (UNC); 9, Newnam (UNC); 10, Arbruster (V); 11, Young (V); 12, Platt (V); 13, Stack (V).

The Carolina tennis team did not lose a regular from last year's team. All regulars from the squad which won 24 and lost two have at least one more season of play.

Jack Pinezich Leads Penn State To 7-0 Victory Over UNC Booters

By Everette Parker

Penn State's top ranking team led by Center Jack Pinezich soundly defeated the Carolina booters, 7-0, in an offensive show yesterday morning. The defeat was the third for the home team.

Ranked in the top three nationally, Penn showed a great offense to the Tar Heel booters by scoring one goil in the first quarter, three in the second, one in the third, and two in the last while holding Carolina scoreless. The Tar Heels never got a serious offensive drive going as the strong Penn club stopped every threat.

The winners were led on defense by Guard Harris and Center half Dierks. Experience was the edge as the strong State club took advantage of numerous Carolina errors in the second and fourth periods. With the exception of these scoring sprees, the Tar Heels played the visitors on even terms.

Leading Carolina in defeat were Left full Barry Kalk and Goalie Ben Tison who made several good saves during the first and third periods. While the winners were taking 33 shots at the goal, 12 by Pinezich the Penn defense held the Tar Heels to only two. Thus giving an indication of the State team's strength defensively.

The Carolina booters, whose record now stands at four won and three lost, travel to Raleigh next Wednesday to play a strong N. C. State club. N. C. State defeated the Tar Heels earlier in the season, 1-0, in a close game.

T-O-D-A-Y—Monday Varsity

In Your Church

By Tom Neal Jr.

Baptist

Many people contend that Christianity is a wonderful ideal, but thatits principles cannot be applied in life. The local BSU program holds that Christianity can assuredly be applied in every realm of life, and the local Baptist student group is doing something to prove it.

Through its Applied Christianity Committee, the BSU, is cooperating with other student religious groups in project aimed at aiding youthful offenders at Camp Butner to re-adjust to society.

Last Wednesday representatives of several organizations journeyed to Camp Butner Youth Center to confer with officials there. It is hoped that 50 or 60 of the 80 youths, who range from 17-21 years of age, will be able to come to UNC as guests of student religious groups.

At supper forum tonight, Dr. Bernard Boyd of the Religion Department, will continue the series of programs on "Christian Faith and Life's Decisions." His topic is "War and Pacifism." Supper is served at 6 p.m.

Christian Science

The topic of the lesson-sermon today in all Christian Science churches is "Adam and Fallen Man." Local services are held in New West Lecture Hall at 11 a.m.

Congregational Christian

The United Student Fellowship will continue its discussion on 'What Is Faith?" this morning.

Tonight the regular supper meeting will be followed by a program presented by Tom Largett, president of the North Carolina United Student Fellowship, and other representatives from the Elon College Student Christian Association. D. J. Bowden, dean of Elon College, will be key-note speaker for the occasion.

Episcopal

worship and life series of program is being held at the Chapel of the Cross Nov. 9, 10 and 11. Caon Charles Martin, canon of the National Cathedral in Washington, D. C., is guest lecturer. Canon Martin will conduct the 11 o'clock service this morning, with a program of morning prayer and sermon; this evening at 7:30, he will speak on "Offering and Work."

Methodist

The Wesley Foundation will have the first in its series of deputation programs tonight at 6 o'clock. A group of 15 girls from Greensboro College will present the program. This program will open at 5:30 p.m. with fellowship, and at 6 o'clock with supper and will be concluded with recreation and the friendship circle. All students are invited to attend.

The Wesley Foundation program for this week follows: Tuesday, 8 p.m., young adults; Thursday, 5:45 p.m., vespers; Friday, 7:30 p.m. fireside; Sunday, 9:45 a.m., cocoa and donuts; 10 a.m., Wesley class with Joel Savell, teacher; 10 a.m., Young Adult Class with Dr. Frak Hamft, teacher; 4:30 p.m., Wesley Chorus; 5:30 p.m., fun and fellowship; 6 p.m., supper and program.

Presbyterian

The Rev. Charles M. Jones, pastor of the local Presbyterian Church, on leave of absence, will conduct both worship services at the Presbyterian Church this morning. These two services are held at 9:45 a.m. and 11 a.m. each Sunday with the same sermon preached at both hours.

The Presbyterian student group is in the middle of a series of programs on the Christian and social problems. Tonight following supper at 6 o'clock in the annex, Dr. Lee Brooks will lead the group in a consideration of the Christian approach to criminals and prisons. Future programs in this series will consider the general welfare and the race question.

Students also are invited to a series of family suppers and studies held for the congregation at 6:15 p.m. each Sunday in November. After supper, Dr. Robert J. McMullen, acting pastor, is leading a study of Westminister Confession of Faith. This Sunday evening the study will deal with the sections concerning the will of God, election, predestination, free will and the like.

YMCA

Prasong Rangisdrvandhana, visiting educator from Thailand, who is touring the United States as a UNESCO fellowship winner, is spending a week here as guest of the School of Education. Rangisdrvadhana will tell of the work of the YMCA in Bangkok. He will speak Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. in the YMCA Cabinet Room.

The Professor Who Couldn't Say "No"
OR
WHAT TO DO WHEN YOU CAN'T AFFORD TO FLUNK

Once there was a Professor who was reluctant to Flunk the Team's Top Muscle-Man . . . a fullback named Printwhistle, of impressive Physical Proportions but intellectually a Lump. The Professor sought a Loophole. "Printwhistle," he said, "I am no pedant who believes that the sole purpose of education is to cram the Mind with Facts. Rather is its aim to broaden the Mind and make it more Productive. If you can come to me within 24 hours with one—just one—original and worthwhile Idea, I shall not Flunk you."

The dejected Printwhistle explained his Dilemma to his roommate. "Relax," said the latter. "Simplest thing in the world" . . . and he expounded a Stratagem.

Next morning the evidence was in. Telegrams . . . hundreds of 'em . . . on the Professor's desk, from practically everybody on the Campus. All bearing the same message: "Printwhistle must not Flunk. Old Blackstrap needs him. This Approach is his Idea."

Did it work? Well, there's a certain All-American named Printwhistle whose voice shakes with grateful Emotion when anyone mentions Western Union in his Presence.

When you want to Swing a Deal . . . Telegrams work wonders. They're grade-A Date Bait, great for coaxing cash from home, practical for arranging anything from a Weekend to a Job Interview. When you want to get inside the Opponent's ten-yard line . . . let Western Union carry the ball.

SATURDAY CLASSES OK'D

Bitter Reaction Is Immediate With Students

Horton Suggests Counter-Action Via 7-Point Plan

By Louis Kraar

The first group of students to hear that they would have to attend Saturday classes next fall raised their voices in angry protest.

President Ham Horton appeared before the mass meeting of nominees of both parties last night in Gerrard Hall and read the Executive Committee's decision. He asked students interested in "aiding this long, hard fight" to remain after the meeting. Most remained and sounded off loudly against the move.

"The men on the Executive Committee are powerful men. They have shown their utter contempt. They have shown it by ignoring the students and faculty of this University," said Horton. He said no student or faculty member was at the meeting of the executive committee.

Boo's and surprised gasps greeted the first announcement of the move. But as the meeting progressed, students talked in more rational terms. Hand after hand went up to volunteer to sit at desks in Lenoir Hall and the YMCA to gather petitions. Other possible moves to gather student opinion were discussed.

The nominees passed a resolution to fight the proposal of Saturday classes and other campus organizations followed suit in a wave of support that appeared to be growing by the meeting.

Horton, speaking in terse, serious tones, outlined a possible program of attack. The program was discussed and accepted by the group.

The program was: 1. All students sign petitions starting today. 2. All students write home and tell parents of move that would not allow them to come home weekends 3. The case against Saturday classes is to be printed up and widely distributed 4. Faculty opinion is to be gathered 5. A mass meeting of students protesting Saturday classes is to be held Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock 6. Individual protests would be made to the Visiting Committee of the Board of Trustees this Friday and 7. Students who work on Saturday make special protests.

Other organizations that joined in the move protesting Saturday classes were the Student party, IFC, University Party and Publications Board.

Joel Fleishman (SP) stated, "The idea of Saturday classes is repulsive to the liberal and progressive theories of education which the University has exemplified since its inception."

Not There

Candidates who missed the compulsory meeting last night in Gerrard Hall must submit an excuse to the Elections Board within 48 hours after the meeting or be disqualified from running in the fall elections.

Excuses can be turned in to Jerry Cook at 26 Steele Dormitory, the Sigma Chi House or the student government office in Graham Memorial or to any member of the Elections Board.

Carolina Physicists Believe H-Bomb Test Is Probable

By Tom Parramore

Physicists here are in agreement that the United States may have set off a hydrogen bomb during recent experiments in the Pacific.

A survey conducted yesterday at Phillips Hall posed the question, "Do you thing that a hydrogen bomb has been detonated by the United States?" The query stemmed from an 'eyewitness' account in the Los Angeles Examiner on Saturday.

Dr. M. S. Davis' answer to this was, "According to what I read in the papers, it seems reasonable to assume that the H-bomb has been set off."

Dr. J. W. Straley said, "It's just a matter of time. It is well known that the H-bomb is feasible. It wouldn't make much difference whether it has happened yet or not. It do believe we will have developed the bomb within a year if we have not already developed it."

Dr. E. D. Palmatier would go no further than "If it's true it certainly comes as a surprise."

Asked his opinion, Dr. W. A. Bowers replied, "If the letter quoted in the newspapers is reliable, it seems reasonable that such a bomb has been set off, since the mushroom cloud and the fireball described seem to be much greater than the ordinary A-bomb." Dr. Bowers once worked at Los Alamos.

Dr. Merzbacher's opinion was, "From the description of the eyewitness' it sounds rather plausible. I think it is possible that an H-bomb has been exploded."

Valkyrie Sing Slated For Winter This Year

For the first time in its history the Valkyrie Sing will be held this year in winter quarter.

The annual competition is slated for Feb. 24, Chairman Tish Coley said yesterday. Explaining the shift from the traditional spring date, Miss Coley said, "Spring quarter is filled with activities for entertainment while winter quarter seems a little shy on these functions." She said that organizations which had entered the contest before had recommended that the date be moved.

Entry deadline has been set for Dec. 7. Themes and music must be turned in by that date.

Trophies will be awarded to winners in five divisions: sorority, fraternity, women's dorm, men's dorm and special clubs. In judging, three points will be giving for originality, three points for presentation and four points for musical ability.

Rules for the sing were released yesterday.

1. Each group may spend $10 for costumes.
2. A $5 dollar entry fee must be paid at dress rehearsal.
3. Maximum practice time is 15 hours. One rehearsal and one dress rehearsal in Memorial Hall are not included in the 15 hour practice limit.
4. Performance time for each act will be seven minutes.
5. No less than eight people may participate in each act.
6. Students participating in any way must be active members of the organization. There can be no outside help.
7. Soloists are allowed, but they must have a choral background.
8. The group may move about during the act and hand props may be used.

Plans for the annual tapping of the Order of the Golden Fleece will be announced later. Previously, the Fleece has held its spring tapping in conjunction with the Valkyrie Sing.

Security Council To Be Discussed

The Security Council will be discussed today when the United Nations committee meets at 1 p.m. in the second floor dining room of Lenoir Hall.

The main function of this newly organized group is to familiarize students with the United Nations, Susan Fink said yesterday. Interested students are invited to attend the luncheon meeting today. Fulbright Scholar John Faust will lead the discussion on the Security Council.

Di To Discuss Bill

A resolution in support of the "cloistered life" will be debated tonight by the Dialectic Senate at 8 o'clock in the Di Hall in New West.

NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON — Railroads may no longer require colored passengers to travel in separate "Jim Crow" coaches as a result of Supreme Court action yesterday. The high bench rejected an appeal from the lower court ruling that separation of white and colored passengers is an unconstitutinal burden on interstate commerce. The issue was appealed by the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad. The court acted in a brief order, with no opinion.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y.—Russia's Andrei Y. Vishinsky yesterday demanded the appointment of an 11-nation commission by the United Nations to supervise the repatriation of all prisoners of war. Vishinsky declared that the Korean war is a "military fiasco" for the United States. Speaking in the United Nations main political committee, Vishinsky accused Secretary of State Dean Acheson, and Western spokesmen supporting him, of ignoring facts and directing attention to only one issue in the truce talks—the voluntary repatriation of war prisoners.

PITTSBURGH — The body of CIO President Philip Murray was flown yesterday toward Pittsburgh, where union leaders gathered to pay final tribute to one of the labor movement's most powerful figures. Murray, 66, died Sunday of a heart ailment in the Mark Hopkins Hotel atop San Francisco's Nob Hill. He had been ill for more than a year but only last Tuesday joked about a rumor that he had died.

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts and Joseph M. Dodge, a Detroit banker, took over yesterday the preliminary details of easing the Truman administration out of Washington and replacing it with that of Dwight D. Eisenhower. President - elect Eisenhower named the two men Sunday—Lodge as his chief liaison man with the outgoing administration and Dodge as his personal envoy to confer with budget officials.

NAM Official Here Today For Talks

Earl Bunting, managing director of the National Association of Manufacturers, will address the Faculty Club at a luncheon meeting today at 1 p.m.

The former president of the O'Sullivan Rubber Company will address graduate students of the School of Education at 2:30 today and at 4:15 will address a seminar in the School of Business Administration.

Bunting will also speak to business administration students tonight at 8 o'clock in the Faculty Lounge of the Morehead Building. The talk is sponsored by the School of Business Administration and local chapters of Delta Sigma Pi and Alpha Kappa Psi, professional business fraternities.

Investigation Continues In Knifing Case

The Polic Department yesterday still was investigating the stabbing of a 15-year-old Chapel Hill high school youth.

James Charles Blake was stabbed Thursday night in front of Morehead Planetarium at 8:15. Blake received three wounds, one in the back, neck and side, police said.

Police Capt. William Blake said young Blake (distant cousin) with five companions, was walking along the sidewalk in front of the Planetarium when he met three unidentified boys.

Neither group would yield the right of way and one of the three knocked Blake to the ground. He then fell upon Blake and stabbed him before the other boys could help him.

The Chapel Hill Police Department yesterday had no clues to the stabbing except that the boys "appeared to be of scout age."

It was at first believed that one of the 500 scouts might be involved but the Explorers were attending a meeting in Hill Hall at the time and all were accounted for by their scout masters.

"There is a possibility that one of the boys with Blake can identify the person," Captain Blake said. "He was of scout age and may have had on part of a scout uniform."

When asked if there was a possibility that University students were involved, Captain Blake said, "I don't think so. From the description the boys gave us, the three appeared to be about the age of sophomores in high school.

Extra Class Day Is Likely To Start Next Fall Quarter

By Rolfe Neill

Saturday classes—probably by September—are the ultimate result of a resolution passed yesterday by the University Trustees' Executive Committee.

The committee passed the resolution by a majority even after two top academic officials reported that a recent inquiry at UNC indicated the predominant sentiment among faculty, students and administrative officers was against any change. Consolidated President Gordon Gray and Chancellor Robert B. House spoke for the University.

The resolution does not specify a date for the institution of Saturday classes, but directs the Administration to present at the next committee meeting or at a called meeting a recommended plan for use of Saturday morning time.

Officials here speculated it would be at least September before the plan could be effected because of the multiplicity of changes involved.

The committee's resolution said it favored the principle of Saturday classes for undergraduates as well as graduate and professional students at each of the three institutions of the University. Carolina now has Saturday classes for law, medical and public health students. Both Woman's College and State College, the Consolidated University's other branches, have Saturday classes for all students.

Carolina could be expected to maintain its quarter system under a six-day plan, UNC officials explained, just add an extra half day of class each week.

It was not reported who introduced the resolution, but it is known that Trustee Victor Bryant Sr. of Durham has been one of the leading protaganists of six day classes here. When contacted by THE DAILY TAR HEEL by phone at his home last night, Bryant said he thought it better for an individual not to comment on an action by the entire Executive Committee.

Petitions will be in the Y Court every day until noon for students to sign protesting Saturday classes. There has been no provision made for those in favor of them.

When Chancellor House was asked to comment, he said: "I have no comment now. I must wait until I contact my faculty and others affected."

The full Board of Trustees usually endorses actions by its Executive Committee with a formal vote. However, in such an area as the Saturday class resolution, the committee is empowered to act on its own and is not subject to board approval. It must, as a matter of form, submit to the board a report of all its activities.

Student Body President Ham Horton said when told of the Saturday class action:

"We are stunned to hear the summary decision of the Executive Committee, a decision made without warning or consultation of faculty and students and in direct controvention to the decision made by the Trustees only recently.

"Student government is opposed to the Executive Committee's decision. We can make no further comment at this time."

The Executive Committee met in Raleigh yesterday in the office of Gov. Kerr Scott. Ironically, it was Governor Scott's last meeting of the group of which he is chairman ex-officio. The committee meets regularly four times yearly—in February, May, September and November.

The issue of Saturday classes, long a teaser for student bristle-raising, was dead for several years then came to life last spring. However, it was put off by the Executive Committee until September then carried over from that meeting to yesterday's meeting.

Many Trustees have argued that students leave Chapel Hill on the weekends to the neglect of their studies and campus activities. The Carolina "mass exodus" was reported to be a myth by a Dean of Woman's Office survey released last May. The survey was conducted in dormitories, sororities and fraternities to find out just why students go home on the weekends.

"Going home to rest" was given by both coeds and men as the "most important" single reason for leaving Chapel Hill. Men students rated "attending a football game" highest on the list of out-of-town trips.

Both men and coeds again agreed studying ranked highest in importance of the weekend activities at Chapel Hill. Athletics, fraternity and University events were chosen next in importance.

"The weekend seems to be a catching-up time with many students dependent on the extra study time to pass. Extra sleeping on each day and socializing a few hours each day round out the weekend," the report asserted.

The report concluded "Our students do not leave the campus each weekend en masse; our students need the weekend for study and relaxing activities."

Symphony Opportunity

One dollar won't buy much these days, but when you join the North Carolina Symphony Society, it buys a lot.

There are many reasons for joining the Symphony Society:

The North Carolina Symphony is a first class professional orchestra. Under the superb direction of Benjamin Swalin, it would be fully at home in any concert hall in the nation. It ably performs the world's finest music, but its programs are planned to appeal to all types of listeners.

Membership entitles the subscriber to admission to any concert of the North Carolina Symphony sponsored by the State Symphony Society. There will be over sixty such concerts this season throughout the state. A complete tour schedule will be supplied each subscriber.

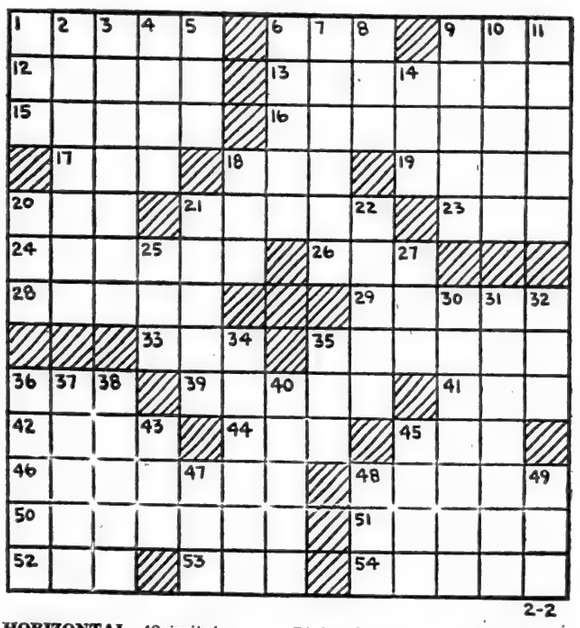
Free concerts for children are made possible by memberships subscribed by the adults of the community. Children are carefully prepared to enjoy and appreciate their concerts by educational materials supplied by the Symphony Society. North Carolina is unique in having a symphony orchestra available for use in its public school music courses.

Opportunities for North Carolina musicians are provided by the Symphony. Talented children, as well as adults, appear as soloists with the Orchestra each season. Instrumentalists may launch or continue an orchestral career in their home state by qualifying for a place in this professional Symphony. Annual auditions are held for composers as well as for soloists and instrumentalists.

The Symphony belongs to North Carolina. It brings music to the people wherever they are in the state. It actually performs in your community at less than cost. A state appropriation and gifts to the Sustaining Fund are required to enable it to operate without a large deficit each year.

North Carolina is being represented by its Symphony to people throughout the United States and in countries abroad as a truly progressive and well balanced state. Coast to coast broadcasts and articles in magazines of nationwide circulation tell the world about North Carolina and its Symphony. This radio time and magazine space last year had a value of over a $100,000.

Membership in the North Carolina Symphony is the biggest bargain and the best investment obtainable anywhere today. These one dollar college memberships will be sold in the Y Court all week, and can be purchased from IDC or IFC members.



The Ram Sees

The New York Stock Exchange and the Wall Street marketeers had nothing on Carolina last Friday.

As date-time for Germans approached, the buying, selling, bidding, and praying for tickets became more and more frantic.

The demand outweighed the supply so greatly that prices swooped to an all time high of $12. The night before the big day, eight anxious Carolina gentlemen were sitting on the same phone like the U.N. on the H-Bomb.

The bankruptcy rate increased as the Spivaking day wore on, and the market operations closed for the fall quarter with the selling faction patting their well packed pocketbooks. The buyers who braved the storm of dollar marks have only the memory of free bargaining as consolation for thin and hungry pocketbooks.

Editor:

I'm only a freshman here. Naturally such a lowly person of college caste isn't heard or taken into consideration as much as his upper classmen. Nevertheless I see, and what I see distresses me. I'd heard much about the Carolina spirit at pep rallies, ball games, and parades. I'd seen it too upon visits to Carolina football games before I became a student here. And I wasn't the only one who sat up and took notice to that wonderful Tar Heel spirit. It was broadcast throughout the country and even to other countries as the greatest school spirit of any school. Remember a few years ago when we stormed New York and made the Yankees take notice? Sure you do, but where is that spirit now? I know we were winning ball games then and of course everyone likes a winning team. However, I like to think of our spirit as something more than that which is enticed by a won game. Ought we not to support the team who are trying their best against getting off to a bad start?

Last night I read an account of an incident that applies to Carolina and her waning spirit I think. It's the story of a French inventor who, while standing on a stepladder in his laboratory, let a glass bottle slip from his hand and fall to the floor. With some annoyance at himself, he bent down to pick up the pieces but his annoyance vanished quickly. For there were no pieces. The bottle, while star-cracked, remained intact. How come? Then he remembered that the bottle, which had been lying on a shelf for years, had once contained a liquid cellulose mixture. The liquid was gone but in the process of evaporating, a thin coat of cellulose - like substance had been laid down all over the inside of the bottle. It was this that had prevented the shattering when the bottle was dropped.

This discovery led to shatterproof glass. But that isn't important to what I want to show. The story has a moral that applies to all Carolina students. Our team, like the bottle has been on top for a number of years, gloried by winning and full of spirit. But, it seems for the last year or so we have been knocked from our winning pedestal and have fallen to the bottom. Now the question is, have we shattered to pieces? I hope that as we go to other oppositions, that we might prove to everyone and to ourselves that though we have fallen, we haven't been broken, and that there is still an inward film of Carolina spirit holding us together to spur our team to victory.

Thanks

To those citizens who supported Eisenhower in the past campaign:

On behalf of the Chapel Hill Citizens for Eisenhower and of the North Carolina Citizens for Eisenhower, I would like to take this opportunity to thank each supporter of the General in the "great crusade" which ended so victoriously just one week ago. The confidence expressed by the American people, South and North, Democrat and Republican, is a magnificent tribute to Mr. Eisenhower, and an even greater tribute to the campaign he conducted for a rebirth of constitutional government, clean government, and courageous government. It is our belief that your confidence will prove to be well placed and that the sincere and conscientious citizens who opposed his election for various reasons will within the next four years be led to admit that his election was a fortunate one.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON—I would like to urge fellow newsmen, radio commentators, and the American public generally to undertake a voluntary news blackout on General Eisenhower's forthcoming trip to Korea. In brief, the time of his departure, arrival in Japan, departure from Japan to Korea, ought not to be published.

While the first lap of the trip across the Pacific to Japan carries no great danger the second lap behind the battle lines of Korea could be one of the most dangerous ever undertaken by a president-elect of the United States.

When President Roosevelt took similar trips to Casablanca, Teheran and Yalta, the time of departure, arrival, and even the fact that he planned such trips were military secrets. No word was published in the press.

Danger to Gen. Eisenhower is not from any deliberate Communist attack. Presumably the men in the Kremlin don't want to plunge the world into war. But the suicidal mania of oriental warriors is all too well known to risk a drunken pilot or group of Chinese kamikazes who, flying only a few miles, could create a crisis leading to demands for World War III.

While Gen. Eisenhower will be meticulously guarded, there is no use taking chances by giving away the details of his itinerary.

It's a lot tougher shifting administrations than it was 20 years ago. As a result, Eisenhower and advisers will have to burn a lot of midnight oil.

Twenty years ago, when Herbert Hoover handed things over to Franklin Roosevelt, there was no atomic energy, no Korean war, no military draft, no threat of Russia, no foreign-aid program, no radar ring defending the U.S.A.

There wasn't even a Pentagon in 1932. The State Department was a fraction of its present size, and the War Department shared the same building. Major Eisenhower had an unobtrusive desk in that building in the outer office of Gen. MacArthur—extreme outer office. He was a ghost-writer for the chief of staff.

The budget was only $4,659,000,000 in 1932, and the government collected only $1,924,000,000 in taxes. Today the budget is $79,000,000,000 and the annual tax take is $68,700,000,000. Labor Unions had only 3,226,000 members then; today they have 16,000,000. There was no television, not much radio, no big commercial airlines, not much air mail, no Tennessee Valley Authority.

But there was a depression. And FDR, facing the same personal tensions with Herbert Hoover that Eisenhower does with Truman, came to Washington for conferences which yielded nothing.

The time elapsing between the Presidential takeover was longer then — November to March. But the economy is now gigantic, dynamic, and delicate. Indecision, crossed-up cooperation, or even such a thing as a small increase in the interest rate on government bonds, could throw our economics off balance.

Sen. Mike Monroney of Oklahoma took a run-out powder on his McCarthy investigating committee by sailing to Europe without even telling fellow members that he was leaving. . . . Langdon West, assistant to Sen. Tom Hennings of Missouri, is begging him to sidestep the McCarthy probe. Hennings is chairman of the elections committee, and West is afraid McCarthy will turn the tables and go after Hennings. Hennings is not buckling. . . . Adlai Stevenson has confessed to friends that his original plan was to run for President in 1956. He figured from the first that 1952 would be a tough year. That was the reason for his reluctance at Chicago. . . . It looks like Republican Senators were much more anxious to probe the election of one of their own number than any Democrat, namely Senator-elect Fred Payne of Maine. Behind this is seen the hand of defeated Sen. Owen Brewster. If Payne is blocked, a Republican Governor would appoint Brewster back to the Senate. . . . Said 6-year-old Nickie Clark, daughter of Reader's Digest Blake Clark: "I didn't know Ike's last name was 'Landslide.'"

Those close to Eisenhower claim one of the most significant things about his campaign was that the last three weeks wound up with Republican moderates and liberals closest to im. The isolationists were on the outside looking in.

And they attribute Ike's big pick-up at the end to the fact that he followed these men, publicly disclaimed McCarthy's tactics, and announced he was "the same old Ike."

Reviews

Aside from a good action picture, "Saramouche," Tuesday at the Carolina, "Because You're Mine," a typical Mario Lanza musical, Wednesday and Thursday at the Carolina, and a very commendable reissue of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," at the Varsity on Thursday, there really aren't any films coming up this week that are worth mentioning, so this is a convenient time fo ra long overdue forecast of the year's activities for the Carolina Playmakers

The next major production will be "The Inspector General" a Russian satiric comedy, by Gogole. Directed by Harry Davis, it will be presented December 3-7, with a cast including Fred Young, Jim Pritchett, Bill Waddell, Charles Hadley, Nancy Green, Janet Carter, Don Wright, Bill Trottman, and Bill and Bob Casstevens. On the 14th Samuel Selden will give his traditional reading of Dickens well-loved "A Christmas Carol

The winter term will begin with the production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Princess Ida," to be directed by Bill Hardy. It will be on display in Memorial Hall from the sixth to the eighth of February. February 25 will mark the opening performance of Kai Jurgensen's production of "The Good Woman of Setzuan," by Bertold Brecht. It will play through the first of March.

The final presentation of the year will be "Lysistrata," the famous Greek comedy of love and life during the Pelopenesian Wars. It will be the annual Forest Theatre production and will be under the direction of Foster Fitz-Simmons.

During the year there will be five more experimental productions of both full-length and one-act plays. The value of these presentations can not be underestimated, because it is by this means that new student talent in playwriting, direction, designing, and acting is discovered and explored. Admission to student shows is free, which makes them attractive to all concerned.

The Playmakers will also sponsor two eagerly awaited professional shows. The first, to be presented on January 9 and 10, will be Charles Laughton's adaptation of Benet's "John Brown's Body," shown under the auspices of Paul Gregory who sponsored the highly successful "Don Juan in Hell," and starring Judith Anderson, Tyrone Power and Raymond Massey. On the seventh of March Emlyn Williams will be appearing as Charles Dickens in a group of the author's readings.

RALEIGH—Light rain showers eased threats of major forest fires in North Carolina yesterday but State Forester Fred Claridge said "we need a real soaker" instead of sprinkles. Claridge canceled deer hunts in the Bladen Lakes State Forest. At mid-morning the rainfall amounts were very light at most localities but the weather bureau said they at least ended a three-week spell of practically no rain at all. Skies were overcast and showers fell as far east as Rocky Mount. The showers had little effect on some forest fires still burning except to slow their advance.

N. C. State Wins Cross-Country Crown

Byrd's-Eye View

By Carlton Byrd

The Chapel Hill Story

Despite what you may have heard, football has hit a new low at the University of North Carolina. The Tar Heels, as I see it, are going to be fortunate to win more than one game this year. They should take South Carolina in tow. But it seems that Carl Snavely's gridders don't have a chance of defeating teams like Tennessee, Virginia, Duke, and Miami.

Yes, it looks like the record will read one victory and seven defeats this season. Maybe you're saying it can't get any worse in the future. Well, I have a startling announcement for you. It can get worse. And it will never get any better as long as teams like Notre Dame, Texas, Tennessee, Georgia and Virginia stay on the schedule, because—and the coaches will agree with this—the flow of incoming football material isn't going to get any better at Carolina.

Now, maybe you are asking yourself, what is wrong with this fellow Byrd today. Is he peeved with Carl Snavely? Is he down on the Tar Heels because they've lost to Texas, Wake Forest and Notre Dame?

My answer is a firm "no." Snavely, I think, has done a remarkable job this season. No, there hasn't been a victory to celebrate, but you have to consider the opposition—and I don't have to remind you the Tar Heels were idle almost two weeks because of the outbreak of polio. Even the great teams can hardly be expected to win when they've just been going through the motions for two weeks.

What I would like to discuss today is the material. Snavely does have a "few good horses" at Chapel Hill this year. But the Tar Heels don't have the material that schools like Duke, Tennessee, Georgia, Texas, and Notre Dame have. It's below average, some of the coaches will tell you, and it's going to get no better. If anything, its going to get worse.

Why is the material not up to average? Well, I'm no authority on the subject, but in those "keep-this-in-the-family" conversations, I hear the entrance requirements are too strict to allow Snavely to get his share of the good talent.

Coach Agrees Requirements Are High

One coach told me it was almost impossible for a high school football prospect from out of state to enter Carolina unless he was in the upper 25 per cent of his class. While certainly rules out a lot of good prospects from the Pennsylvania coal region.

All Tar Heel athletes must average "C" on all of their subjects in order to remain eligible. A few years ago they had only to average "C" on half of their subjects to remain eligible.

Are Carolina's entrance requirements more strict than those at other schools in the Southern Conference? Well, I've never been able to get a definite answer from any member of the athletic staff. Some say the requirements are more strict—others say they don't know. But they tell you it seems strange to see a good football prospect refused entrance at Chapel Hill and then he turns up in the uniform of another Southern Conference school.

Some three years ago Snavely received a letter from a high school senior in Arizona. He had been selected as a back on the all-Arizona team and had made good grades in high school, he said, and he wanted to enroll at Chapel Hill because he had always been a great admirer of University of North Carolina football teams.

The coaches checked on his records and discovered everything he had written in his letter was true In fact, they learned he was one of the most sought players in the Southwest. Texas, Southern Methodist, Texas Christian and others already had made him offers.

Naturally, Snavely was delighted to have such a fine young prospect interested in the university. But there are no exceptions, fine football prospects or otherwise, and Snavely wrote the boy telling his he would have to take the entrance examination. The answer came back quickly.

"Why should I take an examination in order to enroll at the University of North Carolina," the young man said, "when I can enroll at the University of Texas without taking an entrance examination?" Texas got him. His name? Gib Dawson, the Longhorns' present halfback and one of the best runners in the Southwest.

Modzelewski Brothers Visited Campus

There was another time when two brothers came down from Pennsylvania to visit the university campus. There was special care to show the two husky boys a good time — because they were outstanding high school players in Pennsylvania, which probably turns out more good college players than any two or three states combined.

The brothers loved the University and everyone connected with it, they said, and they certainly were going to enroll. But on the final days of their visit—in Snave-

No Practice

Carolina head football coach Carl Snavely gave his team a day of rest yesterday, calling off practice and holding a meeting instead. The team watched movies of Saturday's game with Virginia.

One more Tar Heel, linebacker Doug Bruton, was added to the injury list. Bruton and halfbacks Bob White and Ken Keller will miss Saturday's game with South Carolina.

Vic Seixas Defends Cup In Australia

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

SYDNEY, Australia, Nov. 10—Vic Seixas of Philadelphia appeared to be in good form today as he prepared for the defense of his New South Wales tennis title, but he still will be denied the role of favorite.

The tournament starts Thursday at the White City courts here, marking the opening of Australia's big tennis season that will reach a climax in the Aussies' defense of the Davis Cup in December.

Aussie Frank Sedgman will be the favorite. He and Seixas, No. 1 ranked American player and also captain of the U. S. cup team, have been placed in opposite ends of the draw and so can't possibly meet until the final.

Seixas and Straight Clark of Pasadena, Calif., will comprise the U. S. entry in the New South Wales tournament. Both have been practicing hard since their arrival here after playing in an exibition at New Zealand last Tuesday.

Seixas obviously is hoping that Tony Trabert of Cincinnati, now in the U. S. Navy, will be given permission to come here to compete in the interzone finals against Italy in December. However, the captain says he doesn't know if that permission will be granted and there's a good chance that the young star might be too rusty to step right into a singles berth.

Soccer Team Plays Game Away With State Tomorrow

Carolina's soccer team will be out to avenge an early season defeat at the hands of N. C. State when they journey to Raleigh tomorrow to meet the Wolfpack in a return engagement. State spoiled the Tar Heel opener here a few weeks ago with a 1-0 upset victory.

This is the seventh game of the season for Coach Al Moore's club. The Carolina booters have defeated three Virginia schools, while dropping decisions to two North Carolina foes and Penn State. The Tar Heels won from Virginia, Washington and Lee, and Roanoke, and were defeated by State and Duke.

Paper Published By Law School

The Law School published its first student - alumni newspaper last week, "Tar Heel Barrister".

The paper was circulated to law students and mailed to alumni. The four-page newspaper is edited by second-year law student, Edward N. Post of Winston-Salem. David E. Buckner Jr. and Thomas L. Young are both assistant editors.

The newspaper, publised by the Law School Association, expects to print at least one issue each semester, with the number of publications increasing as the paper matures, the editor said.

THE DU PONT DIGEST

Production for M.E.'s

Du Pont's manufacturing side offers opportunity to mechanical engineers

The young mechanical engineer interested in production finds plenty of opportunity at Du Pont. His skills are in great demand because so many of this Company's products are made in equipment which must operate continuously on automatic controls.

More than half of Du Pont's M.E.'s are currently engaged in some phase of production work. There are three main categories.

1. MAINTENANCE SUPERVISION. Resourcefulness and initiative are needed in men selected for this work. Among their many duties are the scheduling of preventive maintenance and emergency repairs to minimize down time, suggesting equipment improvements to reduce the maintenance load, and estimating costs of changes or major repairs.

Normally, the supervisor establishes maintenance procedures, directs transfer of personnel from one group or area to another, and assigns duties. He sets up office and field work methods and controls the supplies of spare parts and stores.

The importance of this work is emphasized in some Du Pont plants where more men are needed to maintain the equipment than to operate it. At one plant, the division maintenance superintendent, a man with several years experience behind him, is responsible for 1,500 pieces of equipment and 100 miles of pipe. He has 120 men under him, including 10 foremen.

2. PRODUCTION SUPERVISION. Other mechanical engineers at Du Pont use their knowledge of mechanical equipment in solving production problems. They must see that raw materials are on hand, that maximum yields are obtained with minimum loss, and that the products meet rigid specifications. In addition, they must train men in proper equipment operation and maintain good personnel relations.

J. D. McHugh (at right), B.S. in M.E., Rochester '50, and draftsman discuss working drawings for plant equipment improvement.

One area supervisor, also an experienced man, usually has charge of from 125 to 150 people, including 6 to 10 foremen.

Keeping compressors in top running condition is a typical maintenance-group problem.

3. PLANT TECHNICAL. Other M.E.'s at Du Pont are assigned to the teams of plant technical men responsible for process and production improvements. In this work, they help solve problems on machine design, strength of materials, control instruments, packing materials for high-pressure equipment, etc.

Actually—in maintenance, production and development—the possibilities are almost unlimited at Du Pont for the M.E. who likes the manufacturing side of industry.

Billy Graham—'Religious Disaster'

Oft-Quoted Unitarian Minister Warns Against Bible Emphasis

By Harriet Doar

Dr. A. Powell Davies will speak here Thursday night under the sponsorship of the Unitarian Fellowship of Chapel Hill.

Dr. Davies, minister of All Souls Unitarian Church in Washington, will speak at Hill Hall at 8:30 on "The Danger of Preaching from the Bible."

Beginning at 8:15, there will be a program of music played by Melvin Bernstein. Dr. Everett Hall, head of the Department of Philosophy, will introduce Dr. Davies, and Maurice Cobb, chairman of the fellowship, will preside.

A dinner will be given in honor of Dr. Davies at 6:30 at the Ranch House.

Dr. Davies, an outspoken and much-quoted minister, has often made headlines with his sermons and with liberal action. Currently, he is raising defense funds to appeal the case of the Rev. Ross Weston, found guilty of contempt of court for criticizing a court decision from the pulpit.

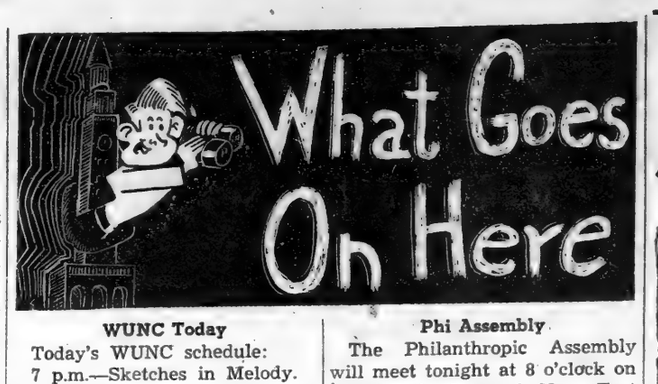
Dr. Davies has been a strong advocate of freedom of speech and all civil rights. All activities in his own church are conducted on a non-segregated basis.

When Billy Graham conducted his evangelistic campaign in Washington, Dr. Davies was one of two ministers who spoke against the emotional appeal of "old-time religion." He tagged Graham a "religious disaster." "The hell that we must try to avoid is the one that will rain down on us from the skies if we are not wise enough, strong enough, and benevolent enough to win the struggle for freedom, justice and brotherhood without involving the world in limitless calamity," he said.

Dr. Davies was an early critic of Soviet imperialism and was much criticized himself for reporting the Communist coup in Czechoslovakia as Soviet-dominated. Dr. Davies was a guest of Jan Masaryk at the time, as an official representative in Prague of the Unitarian Service Committee. He favors military preparedness, international cooperation and civilian control of atomic energy.

Humanitarian activities of the Washington church have been outstanding under Dr. Davies' pastorate, particularly in overseas relief. The congregation pioneered in sending school shipments for the bombed-out children of Hiroshima; raised thousands of dollars for hungry students in Paris and Vienna; got the first Education & Child Care Institute in Germany started and contributed food and money on a large scale to various international relief programs.

Dr. Davies is the author of a number of books and articles and takes an active part in public affairs and social organizations. He is a trustee of Meadville Theological School of Chicago and a director of the Service Committee.



Dr. Davies and Dr. Frederick May Eliot of Boston, president of the American Unitarian Association, are jointly conducting a Unitarian Institute this week, with nightly meetings through Thursday in Durham. The public is invited to all meetings.

Law Award Set Up By '28 Alumnus

An annual law improvement award of $300 has been established here by Greensboro attorney, Norman Block, in honor of his father, the late Max Edward Block.

The "Block Improvement Award" will be made to the first year law student "who makes the most progress in his academic work from the date of his enrollment to the date the award is made." Presentation of the award will be made at the annual Law School Award Day each spring. The first award will be given in 1955.

Block graduated from the University in 1928 and took his law degree at Harvard.

Adlai's Funds Here Totaled

A total of $1,578 was raised for the Stevenson fund campaign in Chapel Hill, Treasurer Julian Mason said yesterday.

The money was given to the National Democratic Committee in memory of Louis Harris who died of a heart attack a few days before the election. He had been working in the National Democratic financial headquarters. His son, John Harris, was president of the Chapel Hill for Stevenson fund campaign.

"I want to thank those who contributed," Mason said yesterday, "as John Sanders so ably put it, it was not in vain."

Douglas Cancels Appearance Here

The Carolina Political Union has received a letter from Justice William O. Douglas stating that due to the great amount of work before the Supreme Court he will be unable to come to Chapel Hill this fall as tentatively scheduled.

Justice Douglas recently returned from a trip to Korea and Formosa, and the CPU is currently trying to schedule him for an address during the Spring Quarter.

Sunday night, the CPU passed the following resolution: "The Carolina Political Union does wholeheartedly endorse the action of President Gordon Gray, Chancellor Robert House and the entire administration for the interest shown in an effort exerted for the obtaining of an adequate student union building at UNC. We offer to them our complete support in this."

Next week's discussion will be on the Repatriation of United Nations prisoners of war captured in Korea.

Plan Offers Foreign Jobs To Students

American students with a yen to see the world and have a paying job at the same time may have their problems solved by the International Development Placement Association.

David McCallum, area representative for the association, told Cosmopolitan Club members Sunday that the association is placing over 200 young Americans in jobs abroad. Most openings are in India and Africa, with the emphasis on teaching, engineering, stenographic and agricultural fields.

The NSA endorsed placement service is a non-profit organization financed by contributions, McCallum said. "Its main function is to act as a clearing house between the foreign employer and the American prospective employee. It is trying to fill in the gaps between government civil service jobs and high paid specialists' positions abroad," he said.

Language proficiency is not always required, according to McCallum. Young people with a year or two of working experience are preferred for these jobs.

Deadline Is Thursday On Aptitude Test

The Civil Service Commission is searching for qualified students to fill government positions designated as junior management assistants.

The deadline for applications to the CSS is Thursday. Applications must be in the hands of the U. S. Civil Service Commission, Washington 25, D. C., by this date.

The program is directed primarily to college seniors and graduate students with interest in and aptitude for public administration. Persons who qualify in the examination will be eligible for appointment to positions which are essentially trainee positions in various specialized administrative fields such as organizational and procedural studies; budget preparation, analysis and review; personnel activities such as recruitment, placement and position classification; or other management operations.

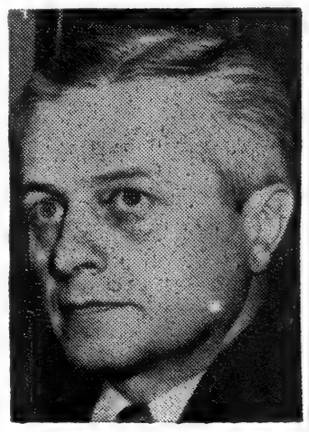
Applicants will undergo a series of tests or selection devices designed to determine their aptitudes and abilities for administrative work.

Further information about this and other Civil Service opportunities can be obtained from Joe Galloway, placement service, South Building.

Piano-String Quartet Will Present Program

A quartet of piano and string instruments will present a program in Hill Hall Friday night at 8:30.

Performers will be Dorothy Alden, violin; Edgar Alder, viola; Ernst Peschel, violoncello and Thomas Nichols, piano.



The program will include the Mozart Divertimento in E-flat, the Quartet for Piano and Strings by Aaron Copland and Brahm's Quartet in G Minor. There will be no admission charge.

Semper Fidelis Taps Four With Initiation

The Semper Fidelis Society initiated four members including one honorary Thursday night.

The honorary member is Clyde Dukes. The other three are W. T. Porter, Earle Litzenberger and Charles T. Johnston.

Social chairman Charles Seabrook presented plans for a Christmas social. The next meeting is planned for Thursday, Nov. 20.

ly's home, in fact—they were told they could not enroll because they did not have the necessary credits and qualifications.

The two Pennsylvanians returned home, disappointed and broken-hearted. But, strange to say, they were playing football at another Southern Conference school a couple of years later, at the University of Maryland. One graduated last year and was a unanimous All-America selection at fullback. The other is still at Maryland and I'd bet my bottom dollar he's an All-American lineman this year.

Oh, yes, the names of those brothers? Big Mo and Dick Modzelewski, fullback and lineman, respectively, and the finest pair of football brothers to play in quite a long while.

There have been many others turned down at Chapel Hill. There are boys making headlines at other colleges today who actually wept when they were told it was impossible for them to enroll at the university, because they did not meet the entrance requirements — and I imagine Snavely felt like sitting down with them and crying, too.

The pressure was really applied by alumni to get a brilliant back on Wilmington High's 1950 team to join Snavely's football school. The youngster had the time of his life while alumni members were "courting" him. There was nothing too good for him, which prompted Charlie Niven to decide he did want to enroll at Carolina.

But that old Carolina bugaboo of high school gridders—credits and good grades — kept Niven away. Not only was it impossible for him to enroll at Carolina, but school officials figured it was impossible for him to enroll at any other school in the Southern Conference. But Niven was in college next fall, at Duke University, where he "busted out" after his freshman football season. He did not return.

The two biggest names in University of North Carolina football during the last 15 years undoubtedly Charlie (Choo Choo) Justice and Art Weiner. They were an All-America combination from 1946 through 1949. Their accomplishments can be recalled with crystal clarity by every University of North Carolina alumnus—and they will be remembered as long as football is played at Chapel Hill.

UMSTEAD SAYS CHANGE HERE CAN BE LICKED

House, Umstead Verify

Merchants Had No Part In New Ruling

The Merchants Association here has not in any way influenced the Executive Committee's controversial decision ordering Saturday classes.

This was emphasized yesterday by John W. Umstead, for 12 years a member of the merchants' Board of Directors and also a member of the UNC Trustee Executive Committee. Umstead added that he had missed only three merchant board meetings during 12 years.

". . . I know that such a thing (merchant Saturday class support) has never been mentioned by the association. Of this I am sure."

The Orange County legislator made the statements yesterday while conferring with student leaders about the recent Saturday class decision. Rumors were well circulated yesterday—as well as in years past—that the merchants were the real motive for Saturday classes here.

Chancellor Robert B. House joined in denouncement of this rumor, saying: "I take pleasure in assuring all concerned that I have been closely connected with these discussions over a period of 26 years and that the Merchants Association has never had anything to do with it at all."

NEWS IN BRIEF

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y.—British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden yesterday rejected Russia's latest Korean proposal and declared that no war prisoner may be either forcibly repatriated or forcibly detained. Eden also called upon Secretary-General Trygve Lie to reconsider "at this critical time," his decision to resign the world organization's top post.

WASHINGTON—President Truman will seek Dwight D. Eisenhower's advice on foreign policy during the next two months, but will not ask the President-elect to share responsibility for any decisions, administration officials said yesterday. They said Truman will ask Eisenhower's suggestions on how to handle urgent problems in Korea, Iran and Indo-China when the two meet at the White House next week. There have been reports that Eisenhower may be unwilling to make any recommendations before he actually takes over as President and fully briefed on the issues involved.

SEOUL — Fifteen - hundred screaming Chinese Communist soldiers captured Pinpoint Hill on Sniper Ridge yesterday, storming the crest behind a thundering artillery barrage. Communist big guns fired 4,000 rounds into allied positions during the first two hours of the attack, which began at 5 a.m. It was the 13th time Chinese troops have re-taken the vital central front position since its capture by the South Koreans on Oct. 14.

He said the ship was 35 miles away from the explosion which "was just like someone putting a hot iron on your back for a split second."

AUGUSTA, Ga. — President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower probably will spend Thanksgiving with American troops on the front line. Members of Eisenhower's growing staff here did not want to talk about the Korean trip for security reasons, but there were indications he would leave shortly after his talks with President Truman in Washington next week.

WE'VE JUST BEGUN TO FIGHT WAS THE attitude most students displayed yesterday over the Saturday class issue. Trustee Joins With Students In Big Fight

Member of Group To Ask Another Committee Meet

By Rolfe Neill and Louis Kraar

Despite the oft-applied label, students yesterday were anything but "apathetic."

The Trustees' Executive Committee had ordered up Saturday classes for the University and immediately things began to happen here. Campus reaction had the chain links of a hydrogen bomb explosion and in rapid-fire order yesterday:

1. Executive Committee Member John W. Umstead of Chapel Hill said he opposed Saturday classes and had no doubt "we can eventually beat this thing."

Students who work on weekends, in their home towns or in Chapel Hill, are asked to contact the student government office in Graham Memorial today or tomorrow. President Ham Horton said it is urgent.

2. Students expressed their protest with yards of petitions (see bold face box in column seven).

3. President Ham Horton of the student body made a statement lauding the UNC administartion for its stand.

4. The campus consolidated plans to fight the institution of an extra half day of classes.

Umstead jumped feet first into the fray when he met with student government leaders and urged a "sane, not too vigorous campaign." He further said, "I have no doubt that we can eventually beat this thing." He said he would demand a special meeting of the Executive Committee at an "opportune time" to rescind its action.

Umstead also clarified the position of local merchants in the fracas (see story in columns one and two). A brother of the governor-elect and a veteran state legislator from Orange County, Umstead was present at the Executive Committee meeting in Raleigh Monday when the decision was made. The vote was 5-1 with two abstaining, he said. Four of the 12 members were absent. Umstead said his was the only vote opposing the extra half day of classes.

Students, as their campus government swung into action, resorted to a number of plans to retain their weekend freedom. President Horton announced the office of the vice-president on the second floor of Graham Memorial will serve as campaign headquarters. Student leaders continued to circulate petitions and a mass meeting of the student body was called for tomorrow at 3 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

Horton's statement:

"The bombshell of Saturday classes which dropped into the breakfast plates of the faculty and student body Tuesday served to remind us of two staunch friends—friends who stood up to defend the best interests of the University at Chapel Hill.

DR. EDDY ASIRVATHAM

Faith Camp Registration Ends At Noon

Noon today is the registration deadline for the interfaith conference scheduled for Friday and Saturday at Camp New Hope.

"Religion's Part in International Relations" will be the topic of the conference led by Dr. Eddy Asirvatham, professor of Missions and Christian International Religions at Boston University. Dr. Asirvatham, who is past vice-president of the Indian Political Science Association, is visiting the campus under the auspices of the YMCA and the Inter-faith Council. He will visit political science classes and will speak at a Social Science luncheon meeting Monday.

Dr. Asirvatham is the author of several books including "Political Theory," "A New Social Order," and "Christianity in the Indian Crucible."

Dr. Asirvatham will speak on religion and international relations from the Indian view point. He has been head of the Department of Political Science and public administration at the University of Madras. Dr. Asirvatham has lectured widely under the auspices of the American Friends Service Committee, the East and West Association, the Foreign Policy Association and the American Academy of Social and Political Sciences.

Author and lecturer Paul Green will assist Dr. Asirvatham in the leadership of the conference.

Registration for the conference may be made in the YMCA office. Full-time registration of $2.50 covers lodging and three meals. Part time registration is also accepted.

Your Ideas

Students may give their reasons for or against the issue of Saturday classes by depositing them in a special complaint box in the Y today.

This will give student government leaders more concrete opinions for use in the battle being waged against Saturday classes, said Roger Kingsbury, chairman of the Student Complaint Board.

Three University students were bound over to Orange County Superior Court yesterday after waiving preliminary hearing in Chapel Hill Recorder's Court on charges of larceny and breaking and entering.

The students are Thomas Richardson, 19, Boone; John Norman III, 19, Cherry Lane; and John Woodruff, 20, Laurel Springs. Each of the defendants was released after posting $1,500 bonds for appearance in the next term of Superior Court.

They were captured about 6 a.m. Friday by Chapel Hill policemen, who said the three boys admitted stealing $80 worth of medicine, candy and cosmetics from in front of McCrimmon Drug Company in Pittsboro.

A passerby saw three boys take the merchandise after it had been delivered to the drug store. He notified Pittsboro police after the car had left.

Pittsboro police called the Chapel Hill Police Department and the car was stopped near Morgan Creek just outside Chapel Hill. Police said the boys admitted breaking and entering other business establishments here and in Carrboro.

The boys were quoted by officers as saying they entered Village Service Station on West Franklin Street where they took a large quantity of auto accessories and cigarettes. This breaking allegedly happened last Thursday night.

The youths also confessed the robberies of the Highway Service Station in Carrboro, Police said. The Carrboro station was robbed of cigarettes, tools and three gallons of anti-freeze.

Parents of some of the offenders appeared in court. Woodruff posted $1500 bond as soon as Judge William S. Stewart announced the amount. Bond for the other boys was posted later in the day.

Quaker Film Here Thursday

The Quaker film, "A Time for Greatness", will be shown Thursday night at 8 o'clock in Swain Hall under the sponsorship of the Chapel Hill capter of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

The film is based on the pamphlet published in 1951 by the American Friends Service Committee and entitled "Steps to Peace—a Quaker View of U. S. Foreign Policy".

Purpose of the pamphlet is to express moral concern over present dependence on military force; to share with others what Quakers have learned of other peoples in working among them for many years, and to stimulate discussion of American foreign policy.

11 O'Clock Classes No Longer Bugaboo

Students Not Victims Of Exam Conspiracy; Rotation Is Ogre

By Sally Schindel

So you think the University's conspired to keep you here through the last day of exams?

And you're sure that for the past several quarters you've had a last-day exam because of an 11 o'clock class?

Cheer up. You can have as many 11 o'clocks as you want for the next couple of years and take off before the final exam period. And neither is there a conspiracy to keep you here—unless it's mathematical chance.

According to the law of rotation and E. S. Lanier of Central Records Office, if you want to take off early in coming exam seasons, Winter Quarter you should beware of required language courses (next in line to be last), and 3 o'clock classes Spring Quarter.

Contrary to popular opinion, the schedule is not made to keep students as long as possible. Instead, it's made up by a rotation system. Here's a sample:

Winter, 1952—8 o'clock last exam given.

Spring, 1952—8 o'clock second exam given.

Fall, 1952—8 o'clock fourth exam given.

It's not a straight rotation, Lanier explained, but skipping by twos. Hence, in the Winter Quarter of 1953, 8 o'clock should be the sixth exam given.

Another general misconception is that Lanier is the cause of all exam schedule evils. In answer to the question of "Who is?" Lanier stated that he was "just clerk" to the Schedule Planning Committee consisting of the deans of the undergraduate school—Deans Spruill of General College; Lyons of Arts and Sciences, Carroll of Business Administration and Phillips of Education.

First step toward the exam constructing this fall took place when Lanier rotated last Spring Quarter's schedule and sent it to the deans to be approved. About a week later the deans met to give their ayes or nays on the proposed plan. (If the nays are too loud, then a compromise must be reached.)

Why couldn't the schedules rotate without disagreement? "The deans are trying to avoid piling up exams on someone," explained Lanier, since so many students have straight 9, 10, and 11 o'clock classes. After all, he added, "deans are not devilish or mean. Dean Spruill will argue like mad to keep his freshmen from having three exams together. I think everyone can see the sense to that."

As to why the committee just doesn't make an afternoon class last on the exam schedule all the time, Lanier had a reason for that, too. If 1 o'clock classes had the reputation of being the last exam every quarter; "Gosh, you'll never get students in a 1 o'clock then," chuckled the committee clerk.

In conclusion Lanier said, 'No student is willing to keep a record of his exam schedule for two years and see the favorable schedules he did have. When he gets a bad one, he squawks and forgets the good ones. In other words most of us are interested in the present—not what has happened in the past or what favorable will happen in the future."

Guest Deans Are Honored

Miss Dorothy Gebauer, Dean of Women at the University of Texas, and Miss Adele Stamp, Dean of Women at the University of Maryland, were honored by members of Women's Residence Council and Women's Council last night at a dinner in Lenoir Hall.

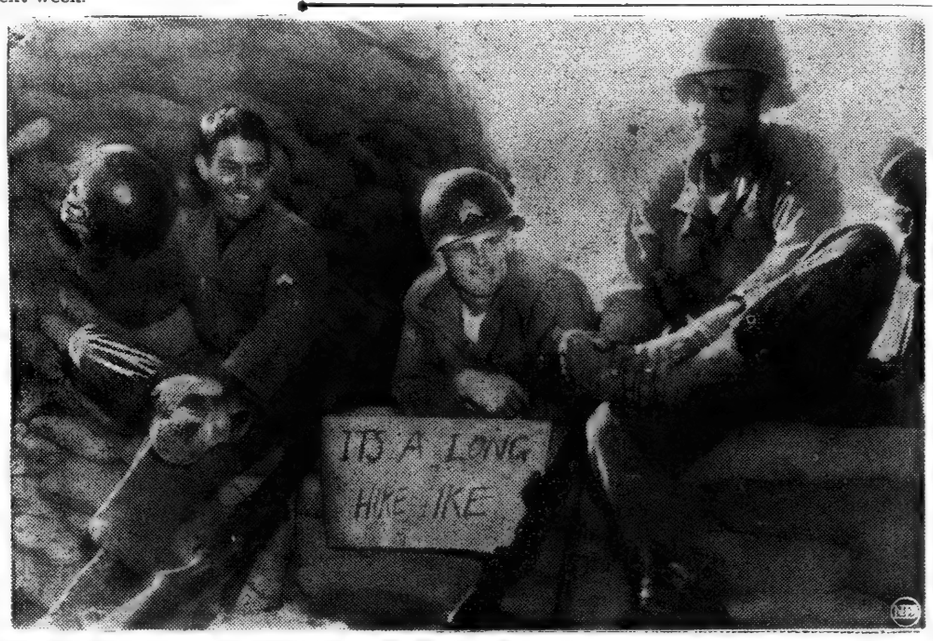
Bridge Tournament Winners Announced

The Weekly Duplicate Bridge Tournament was held in Graham Memorial Lounge on Monday night with 13 tables in play.

Winners were North-South, Dr. and Mrs. H. D. Wolf and (2) Mr. and Mrs H. J. Duerr; East-West. Mr. and Mrs Harry Smith and Mr. Bill Woods and Mr. Henry Gifford, all of Chapel Hill.



All students are invited to join the group every Monday at 7:15 p.m.

Petition

Twenty-five yards of petitions — almost 2,000 names in all — were collected yesterday.

Despite afternoon thundershowers, students streamed into the YMCA and Lenoir Hall to sign the petitions protesting Saturday classes. Over 700 signed petitions in Lenoir and approximately 1,110 inked the ones in the Y.

The petitions are to be continued throughout the week. Special ones are being circulated in dorms, fraternities, sororities and other residence polls.

Saga Of A Court

"Send it to committee! We must reorganize" cried a peer, and 2½ score of perplexed assembly members threw up their papers and madly scrambled to re-organize.

"Unfortunately," said the king shedding a distracted tear, "we have been unable to set up an efficient committee system. Our personnel is totally incapable."

"Send it to committee," shouted the exchequer, stuffing the lecture committee bill into one of the handy pigeon-holes.

A sudden silence fell as the sovereign rose to speak once more.

"We are accused of being 'do nothings,' he said amidst cheers of hearty approval. "This is not so. We have done something. Our public relations is unmatched."

With this, 50 awe-struck legislators prostrated themselves on the ground facing the administration building. "We must continue to represent the populace or else we shall all lose our seats in the next election."

This stern rebuke sobered all present and lords quietly filed back to their places.

"We have before us a bill which needs immediate compromise. Do I have any bids?" queried the prince.

"Strike out the first clause," ventured the queen.

"Rewrite it all. Rewrite it all," put in the first minister.

"I move we table the whole thing until we improve our public relations," said the court jester, well-versed in the ways of government.

"Bravo," chorused the cabinet. ""Tis done, 'Tis done."

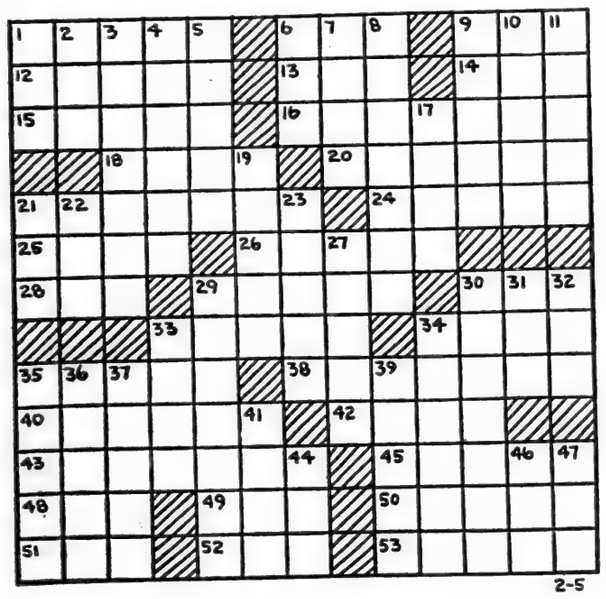
"What is our next piece of business?" the king asked.

A timid soul rose from the assembly. "In my hands I hold a referendum of popular opinion on the question of the L . . ."

"Stop" another peer exclaimed. "Don't you realize if we act on popular referendums now, we will take another beating from the Regents, and we won't be able to act on any referendums in the future."

"Oh," answered the rebuked peer.

"I move we adjourn," demanded a sleepy bailiff.



Everyone approved of this judicious statement and the group danced merrily from the hall singing, "We are going to re-organize."

Louis Kraar — Party Line

The Legislature is at it again. The meeting place for Legislature has been Di Hall for the last few years. Enterprising campus politicos decided it would be a good idea to move the meeting place to Gerrard Hall "to create more interest on the part of the student body."

Evidently interest wasn't up to par. They're moving again. This time the switch is to Phi Hall. Before long it'll take a timetable to find out where the legislators meeting every Thursday. With the number of student visitors most sessions, there won't be any run on the timetable market either.

AT THE STARTING LINE: Walt Dear and Biff Roberts square away or the battle for editorship of The Daily Tar Heel. Both candidates seem to be well trained newspapermen. Let's hope the students can decide for themselves on the man for the job and not the parties.

POLITICAL ECHOES: Ham Horton, using his oratory charm to praise the University Party, "The students know that our party is definitely the young man's party." And turning the other ear . . . "I think the younger students realize which party is the best party," declares Joel Fleishman (SP).

STUDY IN CONTRASTS: Notice how most Student Party members are Democrats and most University Party members Republicans? Ann Mackie (SP) says that there's nothing really surprising about the thing. She explains, "SP is just a liberal group of independents and UP is quite like the old guard Republicans." Wonder what the UP thinks of this?

POUNDING THE BEAT: Ken Penegar (SP) walking out of Graham Memorial as Ike comes on TV . . . Lou Wolfshiemer (UP) hustling for junior class prexy post "cause I'd like the name." . . . Joe Raff (SP) showing that he's still around by backing Walt Dear with a petition of 50 names . . . Ken Barton (SP) at the UP nominations . . . Skip Nelson (SP) busy typifying the freshman candidate for office.

ANSWER OF THE WEEK: When asked why the University Party doesn't have a campaign headquarters like the SP, Sol Cherry replied "Why should we. We're not professionals."

To the Coeds: We certainly agree that it's a bad situation when 90 percent of the coeds on this campus can't get a date for the biggest weekend of the fall quarter. As Carolina Gentlemen we are deeply shocked by this attitude of our fellow students. It appalls us to think that a Carolina Gentleman would rather get sloppy drunk than date a coed; to think that a fraternity house would actually close its doors to coeds, and that the average male on this campus would rather import than date one of our fair coeds. In short, this is a miserable situation, but fortunately for you coeds, we have found the solution.

Not only have we found the solution, but 500 answers to your problem. We have available, on this campus, five hundred loyal, trustworthy, helpful, clean, and reverent young men, who we are sure, would be more than glad to help ease this unfortunate situation created by the outdated drinking rule. These men had much rather date a Carolina coed than get sloppy drunk. They will not close the doors of a fraternity house in your face. Moreover, they will be proud to escort you across any street or to do any errands which you desire.

Be prepared, girls, because on Thursday these fine examples of young American manhood will take the campus by storm. In order to have your pick, be on hand when these Boy Scouts pitch their tents in Emerson stadium. Be sure and take advantage of this opportunity now, before the coed tent visiting agreement goes in to effect.

"They Call This A Change?"

Drew Pearson — The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON — Pentagon planners have held several nervous huddles regarding security for the president-elect on his trip to Korea. They realize that if anything should happen to General Eisenhower on this trip it might prove another Sarajevo.

Less than three months ago, Russian Migs, based on Tsingtao in North China, shot down a Navy patrol plane while over the Japan Sea. This is approximately the route which Eisenhower's plane will have to take from Japan to Korea.

In the North also, the Russians have Migs based in Sakhalin, well within range of traffic across the Japan Sea. Furthermore, Soviet planes from Sakhalin have been picked up on radar as far as 53 miles inland over Northern Japan.

Considering all these factors, the Air Force has come up with several means of guarding the President-elect on his trip. First the Eisenhower route can and will be carefully patrolled by sabre jets. Second Eisenhower could be flown at night. These precautions will be taken.

It is regarding the time, date, and other details of his trip, that this columnist urges other newsmen to maintain a complete news blackout.

However, another aspect of the Eisenhower trip is equally worrying. Ike has promised to ride through the streets of Seoul with President Syngman Rhee. The streets naturally will be packed. And since both North and South Koreans look alike, it would be easy for the Communists to place a fanatic in the crowd willing to make an attempt on Eisenhower's life.

With even the most expert policing, it would be difficult to detect such a fanatic in advance. That is why the trip of the President-elect is so dangerous.

Note—It was a trip by Archduke Franz Ferdinand to the Bosnian city of Sarajevo in 1914 where he was killed that touched off World War I. It was also the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia and Premier Barthou of France when riding in a parade through Marseilles that helped pave the way for World War II.

Gen. Eisenhower is being urged by Bernie Baruch to appoint Charles E. Wilson, former head of General Electric, as Secretary of Defense. This puts him in a tough spot with his old friend, Senator Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, who hitherto was considered a sure bet for the defense post.

Wilson resigned as Defense Mobilizer during a row with Truman over increased steel wages. In the recent war he was vice chairman of the War Production Board under Roosevelt. As such he has always leaned toward the military, and during the bitter wartime battle when the military wanted to take over civilian controls, Wilson threw his weight against his chief, Donald Nelson, and with the brass hats.

Some businessmen feel that with Wilson as Secretary of Defense, the Generals would have too much power; that Army-Navy orders would gravitate completely to big business, with little business left out in the cold.

FDR made it a practice to confer frequently with Bill Green, the late Phil Murray, other labor leaders. This will not happen so much in the GOP. First the Republicans feel no obligation to labor, second Ike doesn't want any suggestions as to who should be his new Secretary of Labor before he's appointed. This job is slated for Harold Stassen, ex-governor of Minnesota, now President of the University of Pennsylvania. Ike doesn't want him blackballed by labor in advance. . . . It was Stassen who wrote Ike's Labor Day speech. . . . Another reason the new President will do less conferring is that he believes in delegating responsibility, understands labor problems himself. . . . One of Ike's Washington problems is going to be a golf course. He can't play on an ordinary course—too many sightseers, autograph hunters, job hunters. There's a beautiful public course just below the White House run by the National Parks, but it's too public. And exclusive Burning Tree is far away. Perhaps the solution is for ex-Ambassador Joe Davies to lend Ike his private golf course only ten minutes from the White House. . . . Joe and Ike used to be bosom friends—at Potsdam — though they've differed vigorously of late. . . . There hasn't been a golfing President in the White House since Harding. Coolidge fished. Hoover didn't exercise. FDR swam. Truman walks.

Being affiliated with neither campus political organization, and considering myself an average "college Joe" who doesn't get too excited about campus politics at any time, I would like to tell you how the Student Party's recent endorsement of a candidate for the DAILY TAR HEEL Editorship affected me.

In these times of high-pressure party politics complete with mud-slinging, character assassination, log-rolling, back-slapping, baby - kissing, etc., when loyalty to the party has always been the primary requisite in selecting a person to carry the party banner, the action of the Student Party in endorsing an independent candidate, one from whom they cannot demand nor expect anything politically, strictly on the basis of what they consider to be outstanding ability and the best qualifications for the job, comes as a breath of fresh air to me which I will inhale deeply and accept gratefully.

Especially after observing the campaigns of the Republican and Democratic parties during the last month or so, probably the dirtiest campaign in our nation's history, I never expected to see again the time when any political organization no matter how small, would rise above the petty considerations of party loyalty and party ties in order to endorse a non-party candidate whom they honestly believe to be the best man for the job.

My congratulations to the Student Party for their public-spirited attitude. One caution, however: if the Student Party continues in the future to select their candidates on the basis of an honest appraisal of "the best man for the job" people may no longer refer to the S-P as a "political party." "A political party" ain't supposed to be that honest—they tell me.

Now that this 20th century Peter-the-Hermit, this leader of the first great crusade to save Eastern Europe from slavery, is to be our next president by virtue of the overwhelming majority of votes piled up in the late election. I must ask that all those who endorsed him remember their calamitous decision when millions of our young men are thrown into the gaping, bloody distances of Russia and China to provide one more triumph for this deluded would-be Alexander the Great, who is even now weeping because there are no more worlds to conquer.

When our cities and hamlets are smouldering, radioactive ruins and our armies are swallowed up by the human seas of Asia, these people who betrayed reason and their country must bless the kindly simple man who will surely lead up to the greatest blood bath in history.

The people of our great country perhaps the supreme example of good fortune and a harmonious way of life since the world began, have made their choice. I wash my hands and shudder at the prospect, await the inevitable armaggedon and Gotterdamerung.

Tar Heel Booters Will Meet State This Afternoon

Tar Heel Sports

By Tom Peacock

Track Trouble

CAROLINA HEAD TRACK Coach Dale Ransom's cross country team was beaten before the season ever started according to the training and conditioning experts.

The team had just about reached its physical peak in late September when two cases of polio forced the cancellation of three weeks of practice and sidelined two outstanding team members. Bob Barden, who led the team last year, and Dick Bostian were lost for the year.

The Tar Heel track men could do nothing but sit around and fret for those three weeks, while Carolina's first four cross-country runs were cancelled. The infirmary finally gave Ransom the green light to start practice again when the season was exactly half over, and other teams were in top shape.

Ransom virtually left the decision up to the team. He told the boys they could cancel the remainder of the schedule, or just the run with Maryland coming up in the next few days. The team decided to fulfill the rest of the schedule, including powerful Maryland, runner up in the Conference Championships the year before.

Shut Out By Terps

CAROLINA OPENED with the Terps, and Maryland shut out the cross country team in a 15-55 rout. Mo Osborne was the first Tar Heel to finish, and he was behind the last Terp.

The team worked feverishly at getting back in shape, but a week later, Tennessee, the perennial Southeastern Conference champions, handed Carolina another resounding defeat. No one on the Carolina team was sorry he decided to run in those meets, though, and Ransom put the boys to work preparing for Virginia the following week.

Hard work paid off at last when the Tar Heels met Virginia, and Osborne and Bob Webb paced Carolina to its first win of the delayed season.

Team Beats Duke, Davidson

ON MONDAY THE team went to Raleigh to participate in the North Carolina State Championship with N. C. State, Davidson, and Duke, Osborne and Webb tied for fifth place, leading Carolina's second place finish behind State, the defending champs. Other Tar Heel runners turned in fine performances at Raleigh, surprising even the ever-hopeful Ransom. Besides senior co-captains Webb and Osborne, sophomore Al Marx, junior Bill Higgins, and sophomores Ed Vogel and Don Wright all turned in creditable performances.

Carolina finishes its season next Monday in Richmond at the Southern Conference Championships. While Ransom isn't expecting the team to seriously threaten State or Maryland, he feels that it may decide who wins the meet by taking a number of places down the line.

"We're finally in shape," said Ransom. "We are reaching the physical condition now that other teams have been in since early October.

"I'm proud of my boys. They are an inexperienced bunch, but they gave all they had, and did better than anyone suspected. Osborne and Webb are only in their second year of competition, and besides Higgins, the rest of the team is sophomores or freshmen."

Local Squad Looking For Revenge Win

By Paul Cheney

Carolina's revenge-minded soccer eleven travels to Raleigh this afternoon to meet the North Carolina State booters in a Southern Conference contest. The Wolfpack took a 1-0 decision from the locals in the season's opener here.

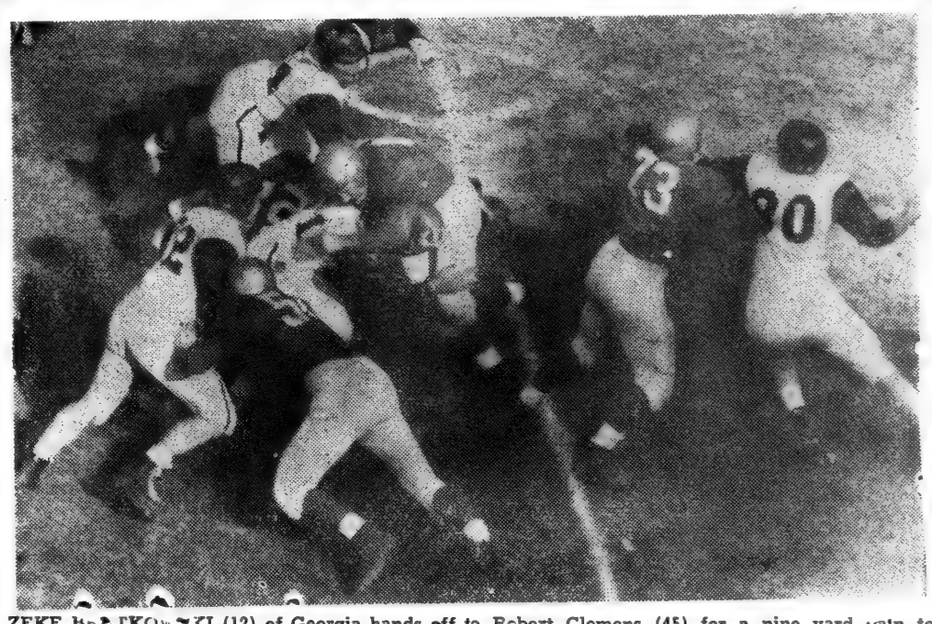
Going by the record the two teams are very evenly matched. Both have beaten Washington and Lee and both have lost to Duke. The Blue Devils' margin of victory was greater over State than over the Tar Heels.



This is Carolina's seventh game of the season. The Tar Heels have three wins and three loses to show for six previous contests. Carolina has defeated Virginia, Roanoke, and Washington and Lee, while losing to Penn State, N. C. State, and Duke.

Goalie Tison and fullback Kalb have been outstanding defensive performers for Carolina this year, while the offense has been sparked by Russell, Randolph, and Pawlik.

Georgia Tech Second, Maryland Third In Poll

NEW YORK—Michigan State, Georgia Tech, and Maryland, regarded as the "class" of college football after Oklahoma's resounding crash last Saturday, came about as near as possible to landing in a three-way tie for first place in this week's Associated Press football poll.

Michigan State still held the lead today after 138 ballots from sportswriters and broadcasters had been counted, but for the second straight week the Spartans' point total dropped. Georgia Tech's impressive 45-6 victory over Army boosted the Engineers into second place, a shade ahead of Maryland, which took third.

ZEKE BRATKOWSKI (12) of Georgia hands off to Robert Clemens (45) for a nine yard gain to Penn's 40-yard line in the first period of the Georgia-Penn game in Philadelphia last Saturday. Georgia went on to hand favored Penn a stunning 34-27 defeat. Other Georgia players are John Carson 50) and Bruce Wimberly (73).—NEA Telephoto.

Doug Bruton To Miss South Carolina Game

The Carolina football squad returned to the practice field yesterday afternoon after a one-day layofff to prepare for their game against South Carolina Friday.

Of the several injuries that cropped up in the Virginia game only that of Doug Bruton seems to be very serious. Bruton has a dislocated shoulder and will definitely miss the game Saturday.

That may leave Carolina without either of its first string linebackers as Junior Seawell is on the doubtful list for the South Carolina game. Seawell was originally injured against Tennessee and was hurt again in the Virginia game.

Halfbacks Ken Keller and Bob White are still out and they are doubtful starters Saturday. Filling in for them is Connie Gravitte, a letterman last year who has not seen much action this year.

Practice was held yesterday between slow drizzles of rain and in bitter cold.

Offensive practice was led by Marshall Newman and Charlie Motta and some of the backs reeled off some long runs. Special emphasis was placed on the blocking of the guards and center.

Coach Jim Gill ran the defensive team through a practice against the South Carolina version of the "T."

Miss Gilson Will Address Coed Meeting

Carolina independent coeds will hold their only mass meeting of the fall quarter today at 8 p.m. in Roland Parker Lounges of Graham Memorial.

Miss Mary Gilson will highlight the meeting with a talk about her experiences at Wellesly College, her trip abroad last summer, and the economic conditions in England and Finland. At present a Chapel Hill resident she is considered an authority in the industrial relations field.

The speaker received her education at Wellesly, Columbia, and London School of Economics. Her experiences include conducting a survey of labor conditions on sugar plantations in Hawaii, teaching in the University there, and participating on the War Labor Board. She is author of several publications in her field and is now retired.

Sara Wood, vice-president, will conduct the program.

Globetrotters Will Appear In Coliseum This Month

RALEIGH — Abe Saperstein's Harlem Globetrotters, the all-time wonder team of basketball, comes to the William Neal Reynolds Coliseum on Saturday night, Nov. 22, to headline a doubleheader against the Boston Whirlwinds. The program will start at 8:30 p.m. and also includes the Philadelphia Warriors vs the Baltimore Bullets of the N.B.A. in the opening game.

In their 26th season of cage heroics, the fabulous magicians of the court are out to surpass their silver anniversary exploits which took them almost to the start of the current 1952-53 campaign.

Always one to strive for bigger and better things, owner-Coach Saperstein has assembled what he regards as his finest aggregation of players and showmen for the year-long schedule arranged to keep his cagers busy until next October.

Last season, their 25th in succession, saw them make the first around-the-world tour ever undertaken by a basketball team. As America's ambassadors of good will, they took their show to Mexico, all through South America, England, France, Belgium, Germany, Holland, Switzerland, Spain, Portugal, North Africa, Italy, Greece, Turkey, Lebanon, Egypt, Thailand, Japan, China, the Philippines, and Hawaii. In Italy they were granted an audience by the Pope and made newspaper headlines throughout the world by acquiescing to His Holiness' request that they perform for him.

189 AWARDS LAST YEAR!

Write a Lucky Strike jingle!

No box tops! NO ENTRY BLANKS! It's easy!

Just write a 4-line jingle based on the fact that

LUCKIES ARE MADE BETTER TO TASTE BETTER!*

I've heard the same in every class—
In history, psych, and ec—
For cleaner, fresher, smoother smokes,
It's Lucky Strike, by heck!

Here's your chance to make yourself $25. Just write a 4-line Lucky Strike jingle, based on the fact that Luckies are made better to *taste better.

Then, if we select your jingle, we'll pay you for the right to use it, together with your name, in Lucky Strike advertising . . . probably in this paper.

Read the sample jingles on this page. Then get the gang together, break out the rhyming dictionary, and start writing. It's fun! And we're buying jingles by the bushel!

Hint—if you can sing your jingle, it's a good one!

Hint—the more jingles you write, the more money you have a chance of making.

Hint—be sure to read all the instructions!

I like a better-tasting smoke
And mildness counts with me.
So when I buy I keep in mind
That L.S./M.F.T.!

HERE ARE THE INSTRUCTIONS

1. Write your Lucky Strike jingle on a plain piece of paper or post card and send it to Happy-Go-Lucky, P. O. Box 67, New York 46, N. Y. Be sure that your name, address, college and class are included—and that they are legible.

2. Base your jingle on any qualities of Luckies. "Luckies are made better to taste better," is only one. (See "Tips to money-makers.")

3. Every student of any college, university or post-graduate school may submit jingles.

4. You may submit as many jingles as you like. Remember, you are eligible to win more than one $25 award.

*TIPS TO MONEY-MAKERS

To write a winning Lucky Strike jingle, you're not limited to "Luckies are made better to taste better." Use any other sales points on Lucky Strike such as the following:

Lucky Strike Means Fine Tobacco
Luckies' cigarette-tearing demonstration
Luckies taste cleaner, fresher, smoother
Be Happy—Go Lucky
So round, so firm, so fully packed
So free and easy on the draw
Buy Luckies by the carton
Luckies give you deep-down smoking enjoyment

21 Missing At Candidates Required Meet

Twenty-one candidates out of a field of 147 failed to attend the compulsory candidates meeting Monday night.

The missing 21 may be reinstated if they give an acceptable excuse or if they pay the $1 fine by 7:30 tonight, Elections Board Chairman Jerry Cook said yesterday.

Those not present at the required meeting were Bob McQueen, Jimmy Adams, T. R. Wynne, Archie Croxton, Al Short, Stuart Jones, Biff Roberts, Marilyn Habel, Al Savitz, David Young, David Spencer, George Phillips, Tommy Osborne, Jack Parks, John Ammons, Vardy Buckalew, Bill Slack, All Salley, Fred Hutchins, Ken Barton and Jack Skinner.

Cook reminded all candidates yesterday that expense accounts for their campaigns must be turned into the Elections Board by 6 p.m. Monday. Failing to submit an itemized statement of expenses will result in disqualification of the candidate or the payment of a $1 fine.

Unopposed in the election are John Gibson, running for the graduate seat on Men's Council, and Gordon Battle, Bob Grimes and Fred Hutchins, who are running for legislature in Town Men's District Two.

The election laws and procedure were explained to the 126 candidates at the meeting Monday night.

"Both Gordon Gray and our Chancellor Robert House stood and explained to the Executive Committee that an inquiry made only a few months ago indicated that the predominating sentiment among faculty, students and administrative officers favored not making any change in the schedule of classes.

"For the first time in long years the advice of the Administration officers concerning their own bailiwick has been ignored.

"The same people who in 1949 said: 'We have heretofore made no recommendation to the full board on this subject, partially due to the feeling that the value and effectiveness of the Visiting Committee would be impaired were we constantly to try to handle in detail matters which should be left to the sound discretion of the University administration and faculty,' said in effect yesterday 'we know your business better than you do.'

"They said this to R. B. House who has given 29 years of his life, and what is more, his heart, to Chapel Hill.

"We knew before this that House and Gray were the students' best friends; their action in Monday's meeting is only more proof of that fact."

Dear Pledges To Fight Extra Class; Roberts Says Reasons 'Not Political'

BIFF ROBERTS

"My reasons for entering the race for editor of THE DAILY TAR HEEL are taken purely from a newspaperman's standpoint and are not political," Biff Roberts, UP candidate said yesterday.

Roberts praised former editor Barry Farber for "taking the paper out of near-chaos, organizing a staff, and returning a full-size daily to the students."

"We had one of the best editors the paper has ever had in Barry Farber and it is unfortunate that we lost him to a higher power," Roberts said. Farber was drafted and enters the armed services today.

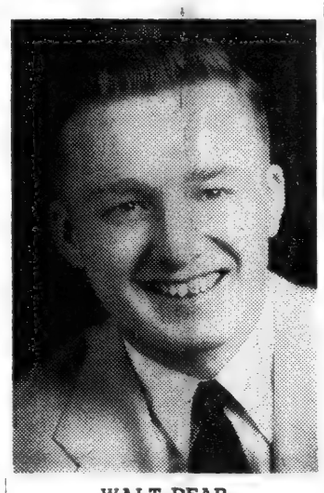
He promised to carry on where Farber left off. "The only campaign promise that I can make is that, if elected, I will try to carry on where he left off," Roberts stated. "Right now the paper is sound, the staff is a good one, and I can see no need for any drastic changes."

"Of course, we had circulation problems at the beginning of the year, but most of these have been solved now and I can see no reason to base a campaign on an error that is being corrected," the Sports Editor said.

Roberts said he was basing his hopes for election on what newspaper experience he has had. He listed four years on THE DAILY TAR HEEL, two years desk work on the Louisville Courier-Journal, three years correspondence for the same paper and a year as Sports Editor of the Yackety Yack.

"I can only promise to answer the problems confronting the paper as each one arises and to handle the paper's business in a conservative manner," he concluded.

"I can guarantee a stand such that the paper won't groom well with Gromwell — and that we don't go to Saturday classes."



Walt Dear, independent candidate for THE DAILY TAR HEEL editor's post, yesterday pledged all out editorial support in the move to stop Saturday classes.

Dear has been endorsed and is being backed by the Student Party, but said the day before his endorsement that he would run for the post as an independent.

"I am opposed to the idea of Saturday classes," he said. "I feel that administration, faculty and student opinion have been disregarded, and I will make every effort possible now and later to see that the weekend classes are not instituted."

Dear appealed to all students for expression of their ideas and complaints through THE DAILY TAR HEEL, through petitions, and through letters to parents, trustees and to Gov. Scott.

In an effort to make a campus-wide survey to find out what students like and dislike about the newspaper, Dear plans to attend dormitory meetings.

WALT DEAR

Phi Rebukes Trustee Unit For Action

The Trustee Executive Committee was censured for its Saturday class proposal by a campus group almost as old as the Board of Trustees itself, when the Phi Assembly met Tuesday night.

By an overwhelming vote, the 159-year old debating society adopted a resolution "favoring any honorable action leading to the rejection" of the committee's proposal.

Chief argument in support of the Phi bill was that the action represented another in a series of trespasses by the Trustees upon functions that should properly be left up to the faculty and students. The Executive Committee adopted the Saturday class proposal despite strong objections from the University student body, faculty and administration, the Phi pointed out.

The bill termed the move "obnoxious to the liberal, progressive principles of education which the University has fostered since its inception."

"No reason has been given for this action," the bill continued, "except to prevent the students and faculty from receiving much needed rest and relaxation."

Marine Band Will Be Here Tuesday Nite

The 154-year-old United States Marine Band will give a concert in Memorial Hall Tuesday night at 8 o'clock.

On its annual fall tour, the Marine Band will appear here under the auspi s of the Student Entertainment Committee.

The Marine Band was the first band in the United States military service and the first to receive congressional recognition. John Philip Sousa became leader of the Band in 1880 and it was under Sousa that the Band made its first trans-continental tour in 1891.

The Band now makes an annual nine-week tour. It also plays three weekly radio broadcasts, makes frequent television appearances, and attends all White House social functions. In keeping with its century-and-a-half custom, it plays winter and summer concerts for the Washington public.

Ring Sale

There will be a Senior Class ring sale today in the Y Lobby from 2 p.m. until 4:30.

The orders will be taken by a Grail representative. Delivery dates and prices will be available from the representative.

Village Poll For Nursery

A poll will be made of Victory Village this week to find out whether there is a need for a nursery in the Village and whether such a nursery, if available, would be supported.

A mass meeting of villagers was held at the end of October. At that time the problems of nursery, playground and clubhouse facilities were presented to the group by W. A. Scott. Villagers from each street volunteered to work together to make plans for acquiring these facilities for Victory Village.

Since then the committee has met together to study and discuss possible locations, ways of securing financial aid, polling the village and health and legal requirements. Another mass meeting will be held after the results of the canvass have been compiled to report back to the villagers.

Mrs William Waddell and Ed Best of 150 Daniels Road and 111 Johnson Street respectively were elected co-chairmen. Mrs. Robin Wingfield of 202-A Jackson Circle was elected secretary.

Other volunteers working on the village committee are Mrs. Val Bissett, 119 Polk Street; J. D. Hurst, 243 Jackson Circle; Mrs. W. J. Latham, 245 Jackson Circle; W. A. Scott, 233 Jackson Circle; Bill Stovall, 206 Jackson Circle; Albert Lovejoy, 107 Johnson Street; Clinton Cameron, 183 Daniels Road; Henry Dellinger, 182 Daniels Road; Mrs. Sue Gilchrist, 163 Daniels Road; Harold Parrish, 180 Daniels Road; Mrs. Joy Taylor, 160 Daniels Road, and Mr. Jack Wolley, 61 Daniels Road.

DR. A. POWELL DAVIES, minister of All Souls Unitarian Church in Washington, will speak at Hill Hall tonight at 8:30. The public is invited to hear one of the nation's outstanding liberal preachers. His subject will be "The Danger of Preaching from the Bible."

Extra Day To Register

The registration deadline for the international relations conference at Camp New Hope this weekend has been extended until 3:30 p.m. today. The fee is $2.50 and includes lodging and meals.

"Religion's Part in International Relations" will be the theme of the conference. Dr. Eddy Asirvatham, professor of missions and Christian international religions at Boston University, will lead conference sessions. Dr. Asirvatham is past vice-president of the Indian Political Science Association and is visiting the campus under the auspices of the YMCA and the Inter-faith Council. He will visit political science classes and will speak at a social science luncheon Monday.

Paul Green, author and lecturer, will assist Dr. Asirvatham in the leadership of the conference.

AK Psi Offers Library Show

A public display of professional activities of Alpha Kappa Psi, national professional fraternity in business administration, opened recently at the University Library.

The display, located in the east foyer of the main floor of the library, includes coverage of the Alpha Kappa Psi Business Fair, forum speakers and alumni newsletters.

A featured attraction is a complete map of the United States, showing various active college chapters and alumni associations. The map was drawn by William Hubbell of the Graphic Arts Division of the Institute of Social Sciences. L. R. Jordan is president of Alpha Kappa Psi.

Glee Club Will Sing At State Sunday

The UNC Women's Glee Club, directed by Joel Carter, and the N. C. State Men's Glee Club will give a joint concert in Raleigh Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The concert will be held in Pullen Hall on the State campus and will be divided into five groups

The first group consists of two Bach chorales sung by both groups and a unison song, "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men." The second part of the program is made up of arrangements by the State Glee Club and the third part consists of folk songs sung by the UNC Women's Glee Club. The State College Orchestra will present an instrumental number and in conclusion the combined groups will sing "For Us a Child is Born" by Bach.

The program will be the second joint concert given by the UNC Women's Glee Club and the State Glee Club. The first was in 1950 at President Gordon Gray's inauguration when the University Glee Clubs, the WC Chorus and the State Glee Club joined together in presenting several numbers in the Coliseum in Raleigh.

Sculptor To Give Modern Art Talk

"Modern Art: An Expression of Our Age?" will be the topic of a lecture to be presented this afternoon at 4 o'clock by sculptor Robert A. Howard of the Art Department.

The lecture is the second in a series of programs provided by the Y Lazy Literates committee to enable students to discuss contemporary culture in our society. An exhibit of modern American paintings now on display in Person Hall Art Gallery will be the basis of Howard's talk.

Umstead Explains; Special Rally At 3

Wire Recording, Printed Material To Spark Battle

By Louis Kraar

Students will voice their opinions against Saturday classes this afternoon at a special rally in Memorial Hall at 3 o'clock.

Tape recordings, petitions, hand bills and other mediums will be the sounding board for student opinion at this mass meeting. President Ham Horton urged all students to be present in order that the meeting "will fully represent student opinion. Let's keep this on a sane, mature basis so that we can win this battle," he said.

"A good turnout is one of the most important weapons we have in combatting this thing," said Horton in stressing the importance of the meeting.

Meanwhile Attorney-General Phin Horton was busy at work in the Vice-President's office in Graham Memorial, clearing house for all plans in the campus-wide campaign.

Every fraternity, sorority, and campus organization was contacted and asked to pass resolutions protesting Saturday classes.

Tape recordings of this afternoon's meeting will be made by a technician from Swain Hall. Following the meeting those who have definite reasons against Saturday classes and want to air their views may make individual recordings.

Thirty yards of petitions containing close to 3,000 names were measured yesterday evening with still more expected from various organizations. Those students who haven't signed may do so in the student government of THE DAILY TAR HEEL office. All petitions and resolutions are to be given to Phin Horton at the campaign headquarters in the vice-president's office before the meeting.

"What You Can Do To Fight Saturday Classes," a special printed sheet stating the case against the dreaded sixth day of class, will be distributed at the meeting. It is to be mailed to parents and trustees.

Copies of the Trustee's report from a previous meeting at which they opposed Saturday classes are also to be distributed.

Victor Bryant, chairman of the Visiting Committee, is one of the leading proponents of Saturday classes on the Executive Committee. The long rolls of student petitions, wire recordings, and other things representing campus sentiment over this controversy will be presented to Bryant and his committee tomorrow.

The agenda for today's rally is a presentation of the facts by President Horton; open forum discussion; reading of resolutions

Trustee's Switch Came As Result Of Opinion Study

By John Jamison

University Trustee John W. Umstead Jr., yesterday explained he switched from a position favoring Saturday classes to his present position against them after discovering "there were facts pertaining to the question that I had not considered."

Simultaneously Chancellor Robert B. House observed that the Executive Committee has "returned to the position expressed in the action of the Board of Trustees on June 2, 1948," ordering a plan looking toward the resumption of Saturday classes as early as practicable.

In a letter to THE DAILY TAR HEEL explaining his reversal Umstead said, "In 1948 when the matter of Saturday classes came before the Board of Trustees I seconded the motion that was passed calling for the resumption of Saturday classes as soon as practicable."

He continued, "Several members of the faculty and several students talked with me about the matter and I found that there were facts pertaining to the question that I had not considered. Wishing to strengthen my position favoring the motion that had been passed I decided to go into the matter thoroughly and with each group that were interested.

"Over a period of two years I talked with administrative officers of the University, faculty members, students and both fathers and mothers of students. I tried get all the facts to the end that after thorough consideration I might make up my mind as to what would be best for the University.

"As a result of this investigation I came to the conclusion that I was wrong in favoring the original motion. When the matter was again brought up on Monday I opposed and shall continue to offer all the opposition that I can. The arguments against Saturday classes too many to carry them in this statement but I will be delighted to defend my position before any group and at any time."

Chancellor House issued the following statement (abridged):

"Subsequent to this action of the Board (ordering the study of a plan for Saturday classes), a faculty committee and the Visiting Committee of the Board of Trustees studied the five-day class week matter thoroughly. The Visiting Committee in its report to the Board on February 28, 1949, gave a complete analysis of the problem. The committee concluded that the advantages of the five-day class week out-weighed the disadvantages.

"The report of the Visiting Committee was approved by the Board of Trustees, and the University Administration considered this to mean that no change in the five-day class week was desired by the Board.

"From time to time since 1949, the question has been raised again.

"On Monday, November 10, 1952, the Executive Committee returned to the position expressed

Tar Heel At Large

FORT BRAGG—I'm having car trouble. Again.

The heap I'm driving now is the third I have owned, and up until last Friday night it had never given me any cause for cussin'. All it did the other night was refuse to start when I was ready to take off for Chapel Hill. I finally borrowed a car, and arrived in time to pick up my date at 10:30 for the German Club dance which started at 9 o'clock.

The first jet I ever owned was a 1939 Ford which had already lost its virility when my folks turned it over to me shortly after the end of World War II.

It carried me through my freshman year at Carolina, and also carried me on several football trips in the fall, to New York for a long weekend in the winter, and to the beach a number of times spring quarter. But it was costing me more money than I had, and at that time never having heard of the Nixon Plan for Living Over Your Income, I sold it.

The next year was rough. I had to walk all the way from the ATO House on Franklin Street up to Davie Hall for botany. Walking wasn't so bad, and there was always room in someone else's car for football trips, but when spring and beach weather returned, I longed for a lovemobile of my own.

So I bought another '39 Ford in that late spring of 1948. This one had two more doors, a different color of paint, and seemed to have a few years of potency left in it.

That little white Ford traveled from Washington, D. C., to Crescent Beach, from Knoxville to Myrtle, from Athens to Ocean Drive, and from Charlottesville and Columbia to Wrightsville.

One fateful Friday in May of 1951 we started out on our last beach trip, the little car and I. Along as passengers were Daily Tar Heel Managing Editor Rolfe Neill and two very attractive females from Woman's College at Greensboro.

Everything was just peachy keen until we got about 35 miles this side of Wilmington. Then the bottom dropped out, almost literally. The fuel pump pumped its last, the engine coughed, let out a death rattle, and collapsed, and we coasted to a stop in the middle of some country that could give the Great Dismal Swamp competition in the desolation department.

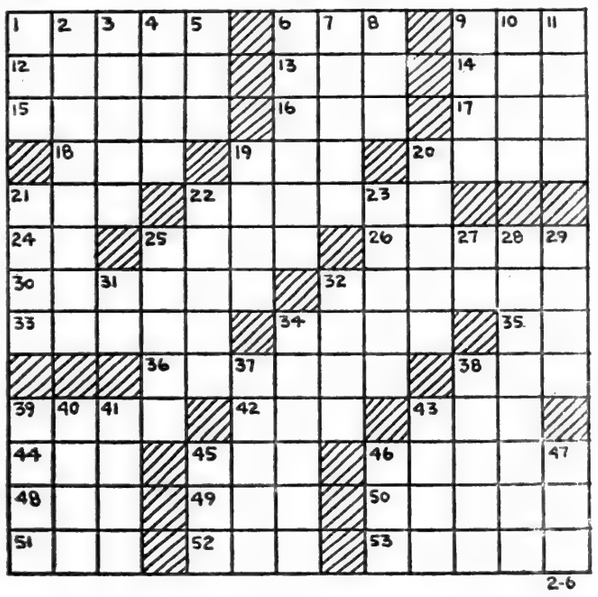
"My God, what are we going to do?" I cried out in anguish.

"Well, you might be able to get under the hood and fix it," one of the girls volunteered.

"I wasn't talking about the car, stupid," I snapped at her. "We're out of chasers, and we've conked out in a place that looks like Death Valley's twin brother."

That revelation galvanized everyone to action, and they all promised to do anything to the best of my ability to correct the situation. Rolfe magnanimously promised to take care of the women, and I started walking.

On the top of the next rise I stopped and squinted down the road. Sure enough, about a quarter of a mile down was a country store. As quick as you can say "I like Ike" backwards 679 times, I sprinted down to the store and put a call through to the Landis at Wrightsville Beach, where I got hold of Andy Taylor, a former Daily Tar Heeler now with a Marine rocket battery near Panmunjom.



Then back to the car I went, with Andy's promise to come get us. This news cheered my thirsty traveling companions, but I was roundly cursed for forgetting to bring any chasers back with me.

"Let's all go up to the store and get some chasers," I suggested, refusing to set off alone again. But the side of the road not being an ideal place to leave a car parked, all four of us put our shoulders to the wheel, or the Ford if you prefer, and began pushing it slowly up the hill. For the first time I really appreciated the fact that Henry made his heaps light back in '39.

The rest of the story is anticlimatic. Andy and Punchy Grimes, a Daily Tar Heel staffer then and now, finally arrived and towed us to Wilmington behind Punchy's car. The rope only broke six or seven times on the way.

I had to leave the car in Wilmington until the following week to get it fixed. When I went back the next weekend to pick it up the garage offered me $25 for the scrap metal.

I was glad to get it.

Guidin' Bizness

T'uther day I wuz settin' out on the front porch of that there fraternity club I belong to—jest sorta settin' there and takin' it easylike—when I got to thinkin' a little bit.

Now that I is in my last year up here at the state university, it's interestin' to look back on them three hell-raisin' years and decide jest what's handed me the most trouble in this here book learnin' other then that there hell-raisin' which I done mentioned previously.

Well, sir, right quick I comes up with the answer. I ain't been guided right!

'Course everybody's always moanin' 'bout them dumb professors theys got or the pitiful subjects theys takin' and all that stuff, but that's jest natural anyways. When you git right down to it, I reckon you can git 'bout as good a dose of book learnin' right here at the university as you can git anywheres.

But gittin' back to this here guidin' business—I feels I been gyped!

What us students needs is somebody to take us over in the corner soon's we comes here our first year and tell us all 'bout the subjects we can git. Some kinda system so's we could look at the whole dang set-up and git advised as to what's best. Sorta like the discussions we usta git into back home at the general store—with our feet propped up on the wood stove and all.

The only advisin' I got my first two years here wuz five minutes each quarter with some man up in South Buildin'; and I had to wait in line plumb near a hour to git that! And then he never told me nuthin'. Why, hell-fire, I flunked freshman math two times before I finally found out I coulda taken that there language the Romans usta talk and git the same credit. I'm purty good at that foreign talk, too, even though I don't git this here American too easy.

'Course once you gits around to your third year here and gits into what you're gonna major in, you sometimes git a little down-to-earth advisin' — but then it's too late. And half the time you ain't learin' what you started out to learn anyways.

Jest yesterday I wuz talkin' to Ernie Hawfield. Ernie first came to the university to learn to be a doctor. He startin' his sixth year now and he's takin' a overload this quarter: Commerce 31, geography 38, English 2, embryology 103, and phys. ed. 5. Ernie's hopin' to git his degree in meterology in March. Now you know damn well that boy ain't been guided right!

I been told theys got 'bout 700 professors learnin' us students here. Why not give each one of them professors some advisin' to do, instead of jest a few like theys got now? That way each one would only have 'bout ten of us students to guide and could take the time to guide 'em right.

Sorta neighborly advisin', you know. So's you could set down and find out real easy about all this book learnin' you gotta git without gittin' upset and all. Kinda slow-like, you know—maybe 'bout two tobaccy chaws worth!

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON—It's an ironic twist of fate that the first Supreme Court vacancy President Eisenhower will have to fill will probably be that of an ardent new dealer, Justice Felix Frankfurter.

Day after tomorrow, Frankfurter has the right to retire on full salary, having then reached the age of 70. And since Frankfurter was one of the early Roosevelt men who proposed that Supreme Court justices should get off the bench at that age, it would be consistent for him to do so.

However, a strange thing has happened to Justice Frankfurter. Though he's accused by Republican critics of being an architect of the new deal and the man who's inspired the Acheson policies, actually he's become a strong Eisenhower man.

Gradually he's drifted away from the Truman administration, now has few friends left high up in government except the Secretary of State. Meanwhile, some of his old friends, such as Jack HcCloy, former High Commissioner for Germany, and Kenneth Royall, former Secretary of War, have become Ike's strongest backers.

And with McCloy slated high on the list to be Secretary of State, Frankfurter may end up being just as close to the State Department under the Eisenhower administration as during the Truman administration.

Though Frankfurter could retire from the Supreme Court this week, private betting among the jurists is that he won't. Probably he'll remain on until after Jan. 20, when Eisenhower could appoint his successor—unless he wants to make a vacancy for his old friend and student, Dean Acheson. If so, he'll resign before January, giving Truman a chance to give Acheson an interim appointment.

Those who have talked to the President-elect about cabinet posts come away with the distinct impression that he is not going to appoint John Foster Dulles as Secretary of State, and that this all-important post is more likely to go to Paul Hoffman, the Marshall Plan administrator, or John J. McCloy, former High Commissioner to Germany. Both are extremely able, with competent know-how in foreign affairs.

While Dulles also has a rich foreign-affairs background, Eisenhower doesn't seem quite comfortable with him. Their relationship is similar to that of Truman and Jimmie Byrnes, who was so aggressive and had so much know-how that he sometimes overshadowed his boss.

Paul Hoffman, on the other hand, has been taken back into the full favor of the Eisenhower smile. For a time Hoffman was on the outs. One of the original Ike-rooters and chairman of the citizens for Eisenhower committee, Hoffman soured a bit when the General embraced McCarthy and all the other isolationists. But toward the end he flew back from California and came out strong for Eisenhower.

Jack McCloy probably has the best of all backgrounds to be Secretary of State. He served as assistant Secretary of War under FDR, then head of the world bank, then took over the tough job of administering Germany, knows his European onions thoroughly.

Express Yourself

Editor:

I take it upon myself to point out one of the places where the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees has considered the wrong question in regard to Saturday classes.

First: Let us, in theory, concede that they are right in their assumption that a goodly number of Carolina students are immaturely galavanting around the country on weekends wasting both their time and money and states'. (Although I personally refuse to concede to such an assumption.)

If this is true, how can the Executive Committee conclude that keeping this infantile student group an extra half a day in class per week will mature them to the point that they will spend a fruitful weekend in Chapel Hill studying? My opinion (for what little it is worth) is that this measure instead of producing gratifying work on the part of the misfits will, at best, simply contain their infantile carousings to a smaller area and probably just delay them 24 hours.

In contrast to this consider the injustice done to the much greater number of serious, hard working, mature students who use this time on the week ends to a profitable end—studying, pursuing serious extra-curriculars, or visiting home once or twice a quarter to relieve the tension of their studies.

The greatest injustice will be done to those students struggling to get through school on limited finances who count heavily on the weekends for the time to earn all or part of their way. These students, who may also work through the week and use the weekends to study, are the ones who will receive the worst beating because of this Saturday class ruling. The one full day which has been theirs to earn their way will be taken away from them. Some will be unable to continue in school—I won't say all because these are the type of students and men who can rise to meet most difficulties.

Now we see the question that the Executive Committee should have considered. Is it fair to make the road more difficult for some worthwhile students just to ensure that a few worthless ones will get to sit a few extra hours in class with dubious returns for the time expended?

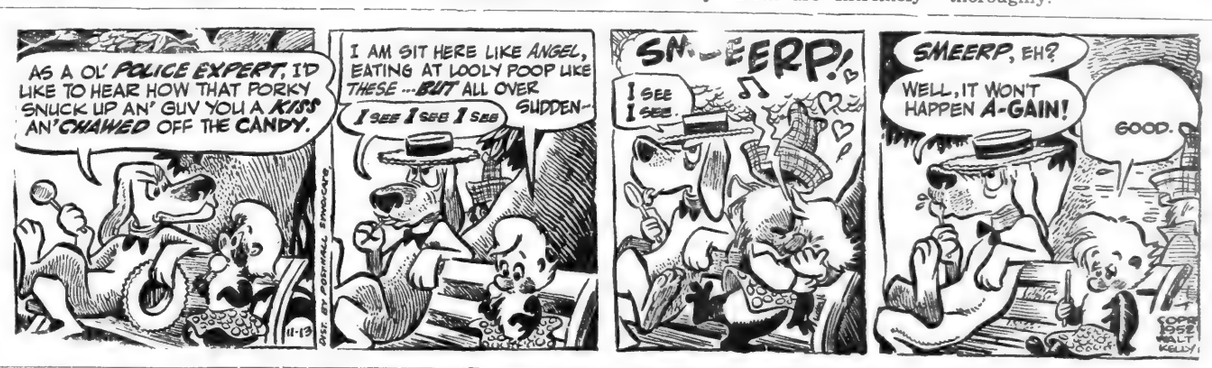
Over The Hill

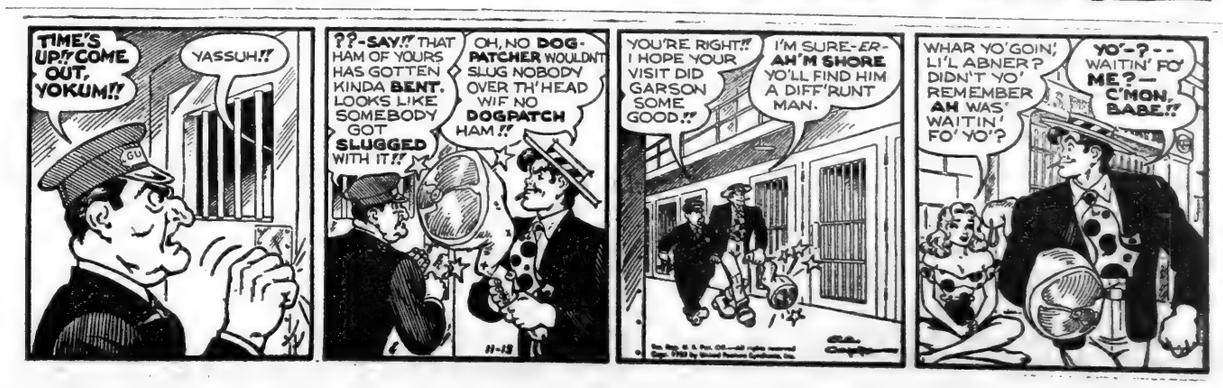
Do students count? Do faculty count? Do the considered opinions of our Consolidated University president and our energetic Chancellor count?

I guess not, but why not? I don't know. In spite of a survey showing that we do stick around on weekends and that we use our weekends to good advantage, despite known and intelligent dissent from everyone involved, the trustee executive committee has decided for Saturday classes. This is power, strict and unadulterated—legal, but is it fair, is it constructive? Will it be the best way of making us thinkers and citizens? Shall we be better students, men and women with more well-rounded personalities because of a one-shot three hour extra?

No. It won't and can't. It may decrease enrollment, it may make Saturday night a real hell, it may cramp studying, and it may ruin the essence of the quarter system—concentrated instruction with a weekend for absorption.



You're mad. I'm mad. We're concerned. But gripes at the house, in Lenoir, or in the social room won't take away Saturday classes. Strong-willed, immediate action of the constructive variety will make a difference. Do this if you don't want weekend classes:



1. Write to your parents. Ask them to write trustees.
2. Wire Gov. Scott. He is chairman of the Board of Trustees.
3. Sign the petitions circulated.
4. Attend mass meetings.
5. Express yourself to the faculty, administration, and others concerned.

I'm a senior. I'm not going to be here in September, 1953. But I sense with indignation what Saturday classes will mean. Seniors as well as other students should voice their complaints.

The big thing about this school has been that student and faculty opinion have always rated. Right now, our opinion and the opinion of our teachers is nothing.

Make your say count now.

Carolina Booters Get 2-1 Revenge Over N.C. State

Down In Front

By Biff Roberts

Air Raid Wardens

THINGS WILL GET worse before they get better for Carolina's pass defense. Too often this season opposing passers have caught the Tar Heel air-raid wardens with their helmets off and have reaked irreparable damage to the Carolina end zone. Saturday's game with South Carolina at Columbia will be just as tough, too, for the Gamecocks have one of the best passers in the Southern Conference in Johnny Gramling, and you can expect a real aerial blitz.

The Gamecocks have a fairly respectable record with five wins and two losses, and three of those victories came in the past three games, against Clemson, Virginia, and The Citadel. Passing has accounted for nine of the 20 touchdowns they have scored, and set up countless others.

Gramling has hit on 42 out of 95 throws for 507 yards and seven of the TD's, more than an average mark. But on top of his good passing, the Tar Heel defenders will also have to watch Dick Balka, a senior, who has a better average than Gramling with 17 completions out of 39 tosses for 239 yards and the other two aerial scores.

Outstanding Player

IT WAS BALKA WHO led South Carolina to its amazing victory over Virginia the week before the Cavaliers hit Chapel Hill. In that game, with only 1:40 left in the game, Virginia led, 14-0. But the Gamecocks, led by Balka at quarterback, scored three times befcre the clock ran out and the South Carolinians won, 21-14. In the press box, in order to expedite releases to the various newspapers covering the game, a third-quarter poll had been taken to choose the most outstanding player in the game, an annual honor given in the Oyster Bowl game, and Virginia's Bob Tata had gotten the nod. But when Balka started moving the Gamecocks those ballots were torn up, a new poll was taken, and Balka was the big man in a walk away.

The South Carolina running attack isn't too potent but still has to be watched. Gene Wilson, Bobby Drawdy, and Hootie Johnson are Coach Rex Enright's top runners with Drawdy probably being the most spectacular of the three. Wilson is tied with end Clyde Bennett for scoring honors on the team with four touchdowns apiece. To illustrate just exactly how much the Gamecocks rely on their passing game—Bennett has scored all of his TD's on passes caught while Wilson has scored two running and two passing.

Running And Passing

SO IT SEEMS THAT if we are to beat the Gamecocks Saturday, some improvement will have to be made. The Tar Heel air defense has granted an apalling 47.9% completion average in its five games. That just won't go against South Carolina.

But one thing in our favor is the fact that their running game doesn't compare to that of Texas, Wake Forest, Notre Dame, Tennessee, or Virginia. Those five strong teams were able to throw fast ground attacks at us to weaken us and pull the linebackers in. Then when they had us like that, it wasn't hard to make their passing games reap the scores. The Carolina line ought to be able to hold the South Carolina running. If it can do that well enough then the pass defenders can stay back, Coach Carl Snavely can switch to a stronger pass defense, and—we might come home with that first victory.

So even if that South Carolina passing attack doesn't paint a pretty picture, just remember—a few quick erasures can change any scene completely.

Russell Scores In Second Overtime For Tar Heel Win

A goal by center forward Gerry Russell in the second overtime period gave the Carolina soccer eleven a 2-1 victory over the N .C. State team at Raleigh yesterday afternoon. Russell was assisted in his game-winning goal by inside left Rennie Randolph.

State jumped into an early lead in the contest when center forward Norris scored in the closing seconds of the first period. Carolina came back to tie things up in the second stanza. Substitute forward Drew Patterson tallied for the Tar Heels. The two teams then settled down to a defensive duel until Russell scored his decisive marker.

Russell and Randolph were both outstanding for the winners yesterday. Also meriting special mention were outside left forward Louie Patseavouras, right halfback Dave Cole, and left fullback co-captain Barry Kalb.

This evens the season's series with the State eleven at one victory apiece. The Wolfpack captured a 1-0 decision here in the season's opener on Adrian Castro's goal. Castro was held scoreless in yesterday's game.

This is Carolina's fourth victory of the season, as against three defeats. Besides yesterday's win, Coach Al Moore's club has won over Virginia, Washington and Lee, and Roanoke. The Tar Heels have met defeat at the hands of Duke, Penn State, and the Wolfpack.

The Tar Heels are slated to meet the booters from Maryland at College Park this coming Saturday, and will return home to meet Duke next Wednesday afternoon at Fetzer Field.

Med School Tops Lawyers In Overtime

The Med School took probably its greatest stride toward defending its dormitory tag football championship yesterday by defeating the Law School, 25-13, in an overtime.

The two teams had come off the field at the regulation ending tied, 13-13, thanks to a final minute score by the lawyers. But in the overtime, which was supposed to give each team four tries at running the ball to see who could advance it the furtherest, the Med School broke its offense loose for two touchdowns to win the opening round game.

It was the running and passing of Bo Roddy and Rodney McKnight that carried the doctors to the victory. McKnight figured in all four Med School scores and Rodney in three.

The doctors had a 13-6 halftime lead after Roddy had run 60 yards and passed to McKnight, who in turn had hit Bo Jenkins in the end zone for a score. Adam Thorp kicked the extra point.

Then, still in the first half, Thorp passed to McKnight for 20 yards and another touchdown.

The Law School stayed in the game when John Culbertson passed to Jerry Nall for a 20-yard touchdown. The extra point try was blocked.

In the second half neither team was able to score until the final minutes of play. Then the lawyers took the ball downfield. With the ball on the 10 yard line Culbertson passed to Jim Strickland in the end zone.

The extra point kick was good and with only a few plays left in the game, the two teams went into the overtime.

With each team getting four offensive plays, the Med School broke the game wide open. On their third play the overtime Roddy ran to his left, passed to McKnight, then ran 20 yards to catch a return pass from McKnight and then heaved to Smitty Lineburger who stepped into the end zone.

The Law School seemed demoralized then and fumbled on its next play. Roddy came back with his same razzle-dazzle the next time he got the ball. Again running to his left he hit McKnight on a short one, got a return pass and again caught Lineburger in the end zone.

Davidson Back At Football Practice As Team Prepares For Gamecocks

By Vardy Buckalew

The Carolina football team went through a lengthy drill yesterday, practicing everything from punting to kicking off in the last scrimmage before the South Carolina game Saturday.

Protecting the punter was emphasized in the kicking drill while in the kick-off drill, getting down field under the kick was practiced.

Marshall Newman and Charlie Motta alternated the direction of the offense with two different teams. Newman's passing looked good and the running of Larry Parker and Bull Davidson was exceptional.

Davidson spent his second day in heavy uniform since recovering from the attack of polio which had sidelined him since the Texas game. He will definitely play in the game Saturday.

The important players who will be missing from the lineup Saturday are backs Ken Keller, Bob White, and linebacker Doug Bruton. For Keller and White it will be their second week of inactivity. This will be the first game Bruton has missed as he was hurt last week against Virginia.

Ed Patterson, offensive guard, will probably fill in for Bruton Saturday. It was Patterson who last week took the place of the other injured linebacker, Junior Seawell. Seawell is expected to be ready for this game.

The defense spent the afternoon preparing itself for the varied offense of South Carolina which include the split-T, the single wing and the double wing.

The most dangerous man in the Gamecock offense is Johnny Gramling, quarterback and outstanding passer. The Carolina pass defense, which has been very weak on occasions this year will get a real test from Gramling and the coaches are doing everything they can to strengthen it.

The game will be played in Columbia and for the first time in many years South Carolina will be the favorite — by seven points. It will be homecoming for the South Carolinians.

by Phin Horton; the seven-point-plan (an organized system to combat the move for Saturday classes) by Bob Gorham, and "Hark The Sound" by the University Band.

Lists of trustee's names will be available so that anyone may write or visit the trustee in his locality to protest Saturday classes.

All formal plans for the campaign, which is expected to continue indefinitely, are being handled through student government workers in the Vice-President's office.

Plans Ready For Crusade For Freedom

Plans for the 1952 Crusade for Freedom fund campaign were released here yesterday by University President Gordon Gray, state chairman for the drive.

Gray said the campaign in North Carolina will begin Dec. 7 and continue through Dec. 15. Purpose of the drive is to enlist popular support for 'the continued vigorous operation and expansion of Radio Free Europe and Radio Free Asia as a means of attacking Communism behind the Iron Curtain."

The nation-wide campaign was opened last night when President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower and Governor Adlai Stevenson made a joint appeal for support of the drive over four radio networks.

Elections Board

The Elections Board will meet today at 4 p.m. in the vice-president's office in Graham Memorial. All members are asked to attend.

Poll tenders and ballot counters are needed by the board for the campus-wide election next Tuesday. Coeds will be granted late permission until midnight. Those interested in this phase should come to the board meeting at 4 p.m. today.

Person Hall Art Exhibit Ends Tuesday

The art exhibition, "Young Painters, USA," currently showing at the Person Hall Art Gallery, will close next Tuesday afternoon.

Each of the 30 paintings in the show, which is touring the country under the auspices of the American Federation of Arts, represents a different selection of elements from past ages of art used to form a new and personal vision.

Some of the artists whose work is being shown are Stephen Greene, a member of the faculty of New York's Parsons School of Design; Worden Day, art instructor at the University of Wyoming, and Bernard Chaet.

The Art Gallery is open Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7 to 9 o'clock. It is open also between the hours of 9 o'clock and 4:30 p.m. on weekdays and on Sunday from 2 o'clock to 5 p.m.

Fete Tonight For Orientation Group

A banquet in honor of those who worked with the orientation program this fall will be held tonight at 6:30 in the Carolina Inn Ball Room.

All men orientation counselors and committee members and all women advisers will be guests of the University administration, Orientation Chairman Bob Gorham said yesterday.

Dogpatch Doings On Campus Friday

It all began in 1937 in Al Capp's mythical town of Dogpatch—but next Friday Sadie Hawkins' day is coming to the University.

Plans released yesterday by the Sadie Hawkins' Day committee call for a foot race, a mass marriage ceremony and a dance in the Naval Armory.

Committee Chairman Jim Wilkinson said yesterday that Capp, creator of the Lil' Abner comic strip, had talked favorably about coming to Chapel Hill for the Sadie Hawkins Day event, but a Friday night television program forced him to decline the offer.

Capp suggested to NBC that they broadcast his television show from the University, but it was deemed impossible because the only outlet to New York is the Greensboro station which is an affiliate of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Wilkinson, in a telephone conversation with Capp on Saturday, suggested that the artist come anyway and then fly back for his program. Capp declined, however, saying that he is allergic to flying and does all his traveling by train.

Co-chairman for the program is Ann Bell. Other committee members are Toni Kelley, publicity, Nancy Horne, entertainment; Manning Muntzing, decorations; Peg Hall refreshments and Tom Watts, music.

Civil Service Posts Open

The U. S. Civil Service Commission yesterday announced an examination for Geologist positions in the Geological Survey of the Department of Interior and other Federal agencies, located in Washington, D. C. and throughout the country.

Applicants for this examination will be required to take a test. In addition, they must have had appropriate education and experience. Maximum age limit for $3,410 jobs is 35; for $4,205 jobs, 62.

Further information and application forms may be obtained from the commission's local secretary at the Chapel Hill Post Office.

ROTC Honor Society Taps Five Seniors

Five NROTC seniors were accepted into the military honor society Scabbard and Blade in tapping ceremonies yesterday on Fetzer Field.

A colorful review which included a performance by the NROTC crack drill team preceded the tapping in which the entire Naval ROTC unit participated.

Those tapped were Earl D. Litzenberger, Bethlehem, Pa.; Joel Smith Watkins Jr., Warren, Ark.; William Duberry Smith, Bethel; Walter Travis Porter, Emerson, and Robert Franklin Teek, Winston-Salem.

The tapping was done by Cadet Lt. Col. Jerry DuBose, Hartsville, S. C., of the Air Force ROTC who is a First Lt. in the Scabbard and Blade, and James A. Eagan of Portsmouth, Va., commanding officer of the Scabbard and Blade and a battalion commander.

Following the tapping, the entire unit passed in review before the group including Capt. J. S. Keating and Cmdr. F. L. Edwards of the regular navy and Cols. Baker and Moorhead of the regular Air Force.

Heavens At Night Topic At Morehead

Twice each year, Morehead Planetarium presents a performance entitled, "The Heavens Tonight."

The winter version of this presentation opened Tuesday, and includes the heavenly objects in the winter skies of North Carolina and neighboring states.

Presentations are given every night throughout the week, at 7:30; matinees on Saturday at 3 and on Sundays at 3 and 4 p.m. Special performances will be given at the convenience of groups composed of 100 or more persons.

"The Heavens Tonight" does not tax the visitors' imagination to visualize the heavenly subjects. Rather, many celestial companions are actually shown superimposed on the Planetarium sky as they appear through large telescopes. Images from great observatories such as Mount Palomar, Lick and Mount Wilson are used in the presentation. These include magnified views of Jupiter, Mars, the dark nebula near the galactic center, the Orion and Andromeda nebulae and "The Royal Family" of constellations: Cepheus; Cassiopeia; Andromeda, and Perseus. All will be visible, weather permitting, in North Carolina skies during the period embraced by this presentation: tonight through December 1st. All will be visible, regardless of weather, in the Planetarium skies for this same period.

Interesting photographs and current data included in this performance are presented for those who are acquainted with our universe. Basic facts of general astronomy are offered those who desire an introduction to the heavens tonight.

Hillel Announces Week's Activities

Rabbi E. M. Rosenzweig, Director of Hillel at the University, announced yesterday that Hillel study groups are open to the public. Classes are held at Hillel House, 410 West Cameron St. and there are no registration fees.

Rabbi Rosenzweig called special attention to the following classes: Basic Judaism (Mondays, 4-5 o'clock); Customs and Ceremonies in Jewish Life (Mondays, 8:30-9:30 o'clock); Religious philosophy of Martin Buber and others (Tuesdays 8:30-9:30 o'clock); Meaning in Jewish History (Thursdays 4-5 o'clock).

DEAN K. CARMICHAEL

Dean Carmichael To Talk Tonight

Dean of Women Katherine Carmichael, who returned this fall from a year's leave of absence to take a Fullbright scholarship in the Philippines, will speak at the YMCA Supper Forum in Lenoir Hall tonight.

She will talk on her experiences, "Around the World with a Fullbright Scholar," illustrated with colored slides.

Those attending are requested to go through the cafeteria line in Lenoir Hall and take their trays to the second floor where the supper forum will get underway at 6 o'clock. Those interested are invited to attend.

STUDENTS DECRY SATURDAY CLASSES AT MEETING

Meager Crowd Hears Horton Outline Plans

President Says University Isn't To Be Baby Sitter

By Rolfe Neill

If the Trustees want to keep students here on the weekend, "it's not the part of the University to play baby sitter to what is essentially a family problem."

This was the problem as President Ham Horton saw it and presented it to a student rally yesterday afternoon at Memorial Hall. However, if students are as lackadaisical about Saturday class attendance as they were about trying to prevent the extra class day, there'll be no need for professors to call roll. Only an estimated 350 attended the meeting yesterday.

Horton deplored the fact that the Executive Committee in its decision ignored the "advice of Administration officers who certainly should know what's best for their school." However, he continued, "it's an honor for students to have such men (Gray and House) as allies."

Consolidated President Gordon Gray and UNC Chancellor R. B. House both told the Trustee committee that sentiment here among students, faculty and administration was against Saturday classes.

Horton held out hope that "if we convince them (Trustees) this thing is not for the best interests of the University, they won't push it any further." He went on to point out that faculty members utilize the long weekend for research; students make use of it for study, while other students need Saturday to work and supplement meager finances.

The student body president drew a laugh when he quoted a woman instructor here as saying "industry and coal miners are driving toward a five-day week, must we regress?"

Horton said he saw no need to take five days' work and spread it over six—which is apparently what the Trustees plan to do, he interpreted. He cited the Trustee Visiting Committee report in 1949 which was against Saturday classes and called attention to the fact that "some of these same men are now for Saturday classes."

Horton concluded that "we can win . . . if we stick together." "Sobriety, logic and restraint" would be necessary to a victory, he said earlier.

Walt Dear, chairman of the Publications Board and editorial candidate for THE DAILY TAR HEEL, also spoke to the assembly although he didn't "pretend to be a speaker." He had the small crowd clapping with his suggestion:

"Instead of Saturday classes, Mr. and Mrs. Trustee, how about a huge student union which will give up something to do over the weekend? How about bowling alleys, skating rinks, University-owned pool tables and dance rooms . . ."

Wallace Hanchey, Carolina Beach freshman, seemed to have the best Saturday-class-protest idea offered from yesterday's audience. He suggested having the high school seniors due to enroll here next fall as freshmen write to the Trustees discouraging lengthening of the school week.

12 Students To Put UNC In The UN

The seminar, sponsored by the National Council of YMCA and YWCA, will begin this morning at 10 o'clock. The students will attend sessions of the General Assembly, meet members of the Secretariat, visit the United States mission to the United Nations and have interviews with United Nations delegates from other countries.

Debate Team Off To S.C. For Tourney

The Debate Council will send eight of its members to Columbia, S. C. today to participate in a debate tournament with schools from over the Southeast.

The topic for debate is "Resolved: That the Federal Government should adopt a compulsory fair employment practices law."

Representatives from here will be Bob Clampitt, Ken Myers, Derith Alexander, Bruce Marger, Al Levine, Beverly Webb, Tom Lloyd and Charlotte Davis.

The tournament will consist of six rounds of debate. The University of South Carolina is host to the participating schools, which include the University of Florida, Clemson College, The Citadel and Emory University. All debaters will be guests at the North Carolina-South Carolina football game tomorrow.

Faith Confab Opens Here At New Hope

The two-day Inter-faith Conference at Camp New Hope will begin this afternoon.

Dr. Eddy Asirvatham, professor of missions and Christian internation relations at Boston University, and Paul Green, who last year made a world tour as a "cultural ambassador" for the Rockefeller Foundation, will share the speaking program.

Dr. Asirvatham will give his first talk on "One Who Knew Gandhi" this afternoon. Tonight he will speak on "Religious Faith in the Atomic Age." Discussion groups will be formed after the talk and he and Green will serve as consultants.

Saturday Dr. Asirvatham will speak on "America Meets Communism in Asia" and "Requisites for World Peace and What Students Can Do About It."

Blood Drive

The Bloodmobile will set up shop in Graham Memorial Tuesday and Wednesday from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Four hundred pints is the quota for the drive.

"With the Korean conflict at its worst, blood donations are more urgently needed than ever before," drive officials said yesterday.

Donors are asked to call 5611 or 9-1881 for an appointment.

NEWS IN BRIEF

CENTRAL FRONT, Korea—South Korean troops charged yesterday that the Reds are using gas on the front lines. The ROK's, driven from Sniper Ridge, charged that Chinese Communist artillery fired gas shells into their positions. American officers began an immediate investigation.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y.—Nationalist China's Foreign Minister charged yesterday that "Stalin and his Communist stooges do not really want a truce" in Korea. George K. C. Yeh called on the UN to declare communism a threat to world peace and security.

BRUSSELS, Belgium—A German-born suspected spy was arrested yesterday in connection with the theft of top-secret plans for North Atlantic Treaty Organization air bases. The plans were allegedly stolen from Nato headquarters at Fontainebleau, France. But a check failed to show any plans missing. Allied officials suggested the air base plans might have leaked from civilian construction companies in Belgium.

AUGUSTA, Ga.—President-elect Eisenhower's trip to Korea may be delayed for about three weeks, it was learned yesterday. Ike is faced with commitments in Washington and New York his press secretary, James C. Hagerty, said yesterday.

NEW YORK—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's files have been removed from a Brooklyn storage vault by the Army, it was disclosed yesterday. The Army will make the files " generally available to anybody with a direct interest." The files, which fill 32 packing cases, presumably contain the General's personal records of his Far Eastern military command and his administration of occupied Japan. Army Secretary Frank Pace said that the move was made "amicably" and with MacArthur's knowledge.

RALEIGH—Dr. William Basil Fox, 37-year-old assistant professor of botany at State College, was fatally wounded in his home yesterday. Sheriff Robert E. Pleasants said Dr. Fox was shot through the back of the head with a 22-caliber rifle. According to the sheriff, preliminary investigations indicated it was an accidental shooting by his 4-year old child.

Open Quiz Files, SP Platform Asks

A 10 plank Student Party platform was announced yesterday by SP officials.

Planks in the platform include pledges to support: 1. Establishment of quiz files open to all students. 2. Opposition to Saturday classes and the semester system. 3. More liberal class cut policy based on individual standings in class. 4. Uniform coed visiting agreement. 5. Sound-proofing all dormitories. 6. Opening all Student Council cases to student body except appeals to Men's or Women's Honor Council. 7. Establishment of check cashing service at Lenoir Hall. 8. Construction of new Student Union Building. 9. Candy and cigarette machines in all dormitories. 10. Improved communications system within men's dormitories.

University Party officials said their platform was not ready for release. It is expected to be basically the same as last spring's UP platform.

UP has a small majority in Legislature at present. The 38 contested seats in Legislature leave a wide margin for either party to gain power.

Duke Denies Having Any Red Faculty

A charge that some teachers at Duke are "making contact with the Communist Party" yesterday was called "without foundation" by Dr. Charles E. Jordan, vice president in charge of public relations at Duke.

Louis Parker of Elizabthtown told a Goldsboro audience Tuesday that he had received information twice about Duke faculty members. Parker, the immediate past State Commander of the American Legion, did not name the teachers or give his source, but said he had confidence in the source of information.

Dr. Jordan said that "Mr. Parker's statement is without foundation. He explained that with 500 or 600 persons on our faculty, "it isn't always possible to know their inner feelings, but their loyalty has never been questioned."

Parker Tuesday night said "I know for a fact that the FBI is investigating Duke faculty members." William Murphy, agent in charge of the North Carolina FBI, said, "No comment."

The Durham Sun said in an editorial yesterday that " any implication that Duke University is encouraging, protecting or nurturing communism is ridiculous."

Philosophers Meet Here Tomorrow

The North Carolina Philosophical Society will meet tomorrow at 10 o'clock in the Faculty Lounge of Morehead Building.

In the morning session William R. Locke of High Point College will speak on "Freedon and Determinism;" David Lowenthal, N. C. State College on "Orwell's '1984' and the Elementary Condition of Human Freedom;" and Ferris E. Reynolds, Elon College on "The Analogy of Dimensions and Varieties of Experience."

Dr. Everett W. Hall, chairman of the Department of Philosophy, and Prof. Charles A. Baylis of Duke will speak in the afternoon session.

What Goes On Here

WC Dance

The IFC is sponsoring a trip to a Woman's College dance Saturday night. Anyone interested should come by the Y office today or tomorrow

Panel on Centralization

The Inter-Collegiate Council of Duke, State, and Carolina will have a panel discussion today at Duke on "Centralization of the U. S. Government." Interested students are requested to meet in front of the Y at 7 p.m. for transportation. The discussion will be moderated by two Duke political science professors.

IVCF

The Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, an inter-denominational student organization, is having a conference at Camp New Hope Saturday and Sunday for students from state colleges. Interested students should contact Bill York, Room 443, Cobb Dormitory.

A set of keys on a silver ring were lost yesterday. Anyone finding them is asked to contact A. J. Goodman Jr., 107 Fraternity Court. A reward is offered.

An Editorial

We Ask Why

Last summer, a group of politicians decided once more that it was time for a change. On Tuesday, November 4, they asked the American public what they thought, and the population of the United States voted in favor of the change. The system was altered as a result of majority approval.

Last Monday, a group of Trustees decided once again that it was time for a change. In years past, they have asked University students and faculty what they thought, and have received negative response, an answer that concluded, "the advantages of the five-day class week out-weigh the disadvantages." Because a majority of those involved have repeatedly protested plans for a six-day class week program, we hope this mass opinion will be upheld.

Whatever happens, we ask the student body to conduct an intelligent campaign against Saturday's heroes, confining your activities to the most direct methods of protest. A successful campaign can be lost in violent rebellion. Petitions, letters to parents, and talks with the Trustees will be much more effective than war dance techniques.

We have one question to ask the Trustees: Why?

Why is it necessary for South Building Bell to ring out the old system every Saturday morning? Our academic budget has managed very well on five days a week. Why tax us with an extra day?

If the weekend exodus is their reason, we wish to remind them of the survey taken last spring quarter which showed the exodus problem to be a myth.

Everybody needs a day to recapitulate, a catch-all day to spend at leisure. Students and faculty need a time to reorganize for the coming week, student instructors need Saturdays to work on how to be better teachers in the future. The reasons for free Saturdays are obvious. The argument for Saturday classes is nebulous. Why, then, should we change a system that already works?

Why?

Small Fire Put Out At Sigma Chi House

The Sigma Chi House was all confusion late yesterday afternoon when painters, scorching paint on the columns in front of the house, accidentally set fire to the insides of one of the columns.

Hayward Washburn, a Sigma Chi, discovered the blaze and put in a call for the Chapel Hill fire Department.

Get Aboard For Miami By Nov. 19

Wednesday, Nov. 19, is the last day for Miami-bound Tar Heels to buy round-trip train tickets at the special rate.

Over 30 students have bought tickets already and the Carolina delegation will set up headquarters in its own car, University Club President John Seely said yesterday.

If 500 students buy tickets on the train by next Wednesday, the Tar Heels will head for Florida in a Carolina Special. University Club officials said yesterday that a special train will be made up for UNC students only if the necessary 500 sign up.

Tickets cost $39.62 at the special rate and bus service will be provided from Graham Memorial to the station in Raleigh.

The Silver Star will leave Raleigh at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 26 and will arrive in Miami at 11 a. m. Thursday. Home-bound Tar Heels can leave either at 12:05 p. m. Saturday or Sunday arriving in Raleigh at 3:43 a. m. the next day. Bus service will be provided from Raleigh back to Graham Memorial.

Visiting Committee

The Trustee Visiting Committee, headed by Victor Bryant Sr., of Durham, will spend an hour and a half with student leaders here this afternoon.

Among other things, the committee will hear student pleas on a new student union, graduate student salaries, the book exchange and Saturday classes.

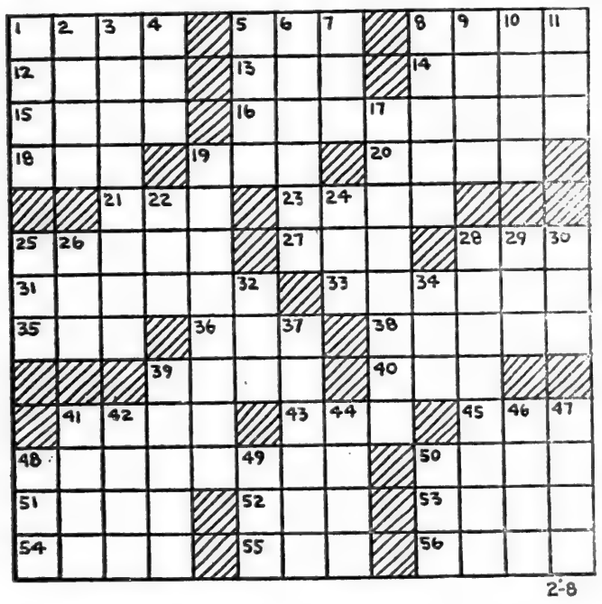
Express Yourself

Editor:

As a student here at the University, I, of course, have been experiencing the current battle with the Trustees over Saturday classes. The student body seems overwhelmingly opposed to them, yet what is the nature of the opposition? To me it appears that the leaders of our student government are resorting entirely to petitions and letters of protest to our parents as means to combat the situation. No one is actually giving sound reasons against Saturday classes, but only opposition. I would like the opportunity to express my views on the subject.



First of all, I am opposed to Saturday classes. I believe the most potent argument against Saturday classes lies not in the students' or faculty's reasons for them. As I see it, we have been given the peculiar position of defending against a change, while the Trustees have not had to move a muscle to support the innovation. It is in this case very difficult to give reasons for continuing a five-day school week; relaxation and study are not effective because other schools with higher academic standing than we are doing well with a six-day week. However, I submit that it would be even more difficult to give adequate reasons for a six-day week. I ask, is there reason for a change?

The University has proved that a five-day week on the quarter system is workable and allows for a sufficient number of class hours. The matter of extra-curricular activities on weekends can be answered by asking whether or not anyone believes that the Dialectic Senate, Student Legislature, or any other such organizations would meet at that time. Of course not! Then, if we can save a day or half a day on the weekend for ourselves, why not take advantage of it?

It has been mentioned to me that one of the major reasons the Trustees have taken their action was to make the University's class schedule conform with those of Woman's College and State. We have little in common with either. W. C. is on a semester system and State is a technological school which makes it mandatory that its undergraduate program be much more intense.

I put no stock in the rumor that the downtown merchants have effected in part the move to increase their sales. Therefore, what is the reason for a change? Or is it a change just for the sake of a change? I am afraid it proposes reaction instead of progress.

Dorman Cordell — Stewpot

Phil M. Upp (no relation to Seven Up) walked quickly across the Y-Court wearing dark glasses. But, as he crossed, the head detective of the Men's Honor Council jumped from behind a trash can, snarling.

"Aha, I've got you, Upp. I caught you in the act of leering at a sorority girl. And you're not a Greek, you know."

Upp was indignant. "You're wrong, Sherlock. I wasn't leering at any girl. I'm near-sighted, and with these new hair-dos the women have, I thought I was looking at an oversized lap dog."

"Don't try to worm out of this. We've had other complaints about you and your friends. Besides, why were you wearing dark glasses, if it wasn't to hide your leering?"

"But the sunshine is bright."

"Let's have no irrelevant facts. We've got the goods on you."

And so Upp came before the Council, charged with "lustful leering at a Greek by a non-Greek," a serious offense in those days, for it was the Dark Ages and prejudice was rampant in the land.

Upp protested vigorously when he saw who was to try him. The head detective of the Council was also the judge, and the jury was completely Greek.

"I want some non-Greeks on the jury," he cried.

"Contempt of court," snapped the judge. "Ten dollars or ten days. Don't talk about this court, Upp. You'll get a fair trial before we find you guilty.

"You are charged with leering. What have you to say in your behalf?"

'Well, I—"

"Enough. What is the verdict of the jury?"

The foreman gravely rose. "We find the defendant guilty as charged, and sentence him to write term papers for the entire jury."

Thus we see that chivalry is not dead in the Old South. We cannot permit the underlings to assert themselves too much. This should set a good example before the non-Greeks of what happens to those who leer at Greek Women. Nobody can leer at a Greek but a Greek. And the Greeks rule the earth. This is the unwritten law of the land.

"Well, It Looks As If We May Be Getting Rid of Him"

Drew Pearson — The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON—Premier Pinay of France has thrown out feelers for an early—if not immediate — visit to the United States for a conference with General Eisenhower and/or President Truman.

At stake in this visit is the entire structure of our carefully built up Western European defense. We have been so busy with our own elections that the public doesn't realize that this now hangs in the balance.

This was the reason why President Truman sent a special courier to Eisenhower last week carrying a secret communication.

Briefly, here are the reasons for Premier Pinay's proposed pilgrimage and the vital factors awaiting decision in West Europe:

1. The French are sore as blazes over our discussion of the Arab demands for North African independence at the U.N. They even threaten to pull out of NATO if we don't back them up against the Arabs.

2. The French feel they have been bled white in Indo-China and are about ready to dump this in our lap in the same way the British dumped Greece.

3. The Pinay government is in danger of being voted out of office. Yet it's one of the most efficient governments France has had and definitely pro-American. It will need political support from the U.S.A. to stay in power, and that political support will have to come either in regard to the Arabs or Indo-China.

4. A huge Chinese Communist army is reported poised on the Indo-China border. If there's peace in Korea, more troops and more materiel can feed the Communist "revolt" against the French.

Perhaps worst of all, and hanging over it all, is the growing anti-Americanism, growing isolationism of the French. In the same way that many Americans are getting more isolationist, so are the French. They are increasingly suspicious of Germany, are bucking the United European army, and it looks as if the great strides toward peace and unity might go down the drain.

Divide and rule is the Kremlin's strategy, and it will take super-human steps by an inspiring leader to weld us together again with our allies.

This is the greatest problem the new President will have to face for, whereas Korea is a very small war, what's happening in Europe is planting the definite seeds of another world war.

Sinclair Weeks, the Boston banker who came out for Eisenhower against Taft at a crucial moment before the Chicago convention, probably wil not fulfill his great ambition to follow in the footsteps of his father — but he is likely to get the No. 1 diplomatic post—Ambassador to the Court of St. James.

Because Eisenhower won't appoint two men to his cabinet from one state (Lodge and Weeks of Massachusetts) Weeks will probably miss the opportunity to be Secretary of Defense, an ambition he has cherished since his father, John W. Weeks, was Secretary of War in the Harding-Coolidge cabinets.

It was the elder Weeks who played an important part in the life of Gen. Douglas McArthur, giving him a promotion at a psychological time.

MacArthur, then a brigadier general in the Philippines, anxiously watched other comrades getting promoted, finally had his then father-in-law, Edward T. Stotesbury, partner of J. P. Morgan, call on Secretary Weeks, remind him of the Stotesbury contributions to the GOP. Weeks promptly made Doug a Major General.

Today, his son, Sinclair, will get first call on the No. 1 ambassadorship — to London — which, in view of Queen Elizabeth's coronation in June, is quite a plum.

Note—Truman's ambassador to London is a Republican, Walter Gifford, head of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., and he has resigned.

Top generals of the Defense Department are expecting a political shake-up.

Politics isn't supposed to enter the military picture. However, everyone in the army and navy plays it—from the generals down to the colonels' wives—and this includes the white house too.

In the present case, Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, is expected to be eased out. "Brad" started being personally for Ike. But as the campaign progressed, he couldn't take Ike's statements about Korea, switched to Stevenson.

Bradley was Eisenhower's top field commander during the European invasion, but nettled Ike a bit with his recent book when he revealed, more frankly than any other military man, the friction with Field Marshal Montgomery during the battle of the bulge and the manner in which Eisenhower had appeased Monty.

Since then Ike and Brad have not been quite so chummy.

Bradley's place as head of the Joint Chiefs probably will be taken by General "Beetle" Smith, now head of Central Intelligence, former Chief of Staff to Eisenhower. General Joe Collins, in turn, probably will be replaced as Army Chief of Staff by General Van Fleet, whose letter re South Korean troops played a part in the election campaign.

In Ecuador, the most intriguing question of the day is: where did Senora Velasco Ibarra, the wife of Ecuador's unpredictable President, get the money to make her present extended pleasure trip to the U.S.A.?

When Velasco returned from exile in Argentina last March, he was so destitute that backers of his candidacy had to put up the money for plane fare. His wife remained in Beunos Aires until after the June election which gave Velasco, twice president and twice overthrown for making himself dictator, a third chance to govern.

The post of chief executive in Ecuador pays 10,000 sucres or about $550 a month. Velasco had held it for less than 60 days when his spouse took off, aboard Pan American-Grace Airways' luxury flight "El Inter-Americano," for a lengthy vacation and shopping tour in New York. Although she is staying with friends there, the trip and incidentals will cost no less than $2,500.

Express Yourself

Editor:

I am sure most people feel as I do, that our country is now facing a great crisis — one in which we all need to join hands and face together, united."

Recently the American people made their choice for a president to lead us through the next four years. As evidenced by the votes, this man is not the first choice of everyone. However, I am appalled at the great number of people, some of my relatives included, who say, "I wash my hands;" who say, "I'm just waiting to see what he'll do." I fear for our safety with such disgruntled people who drag their feet and intend not to co-operate because their choice of the candidates did not win. I "shudder at the prospect" of what can happen to our country if the majority of us become so temperamental or disinterested as to "await the inevitable." Rather let us help this kindly and great man to lead our blessed country on to greater heights by minimizing internal strife, by increasing interest, and by co-operating in an effort to achieve the goal of all freedom-loving people, EVERLASTING PEACE!

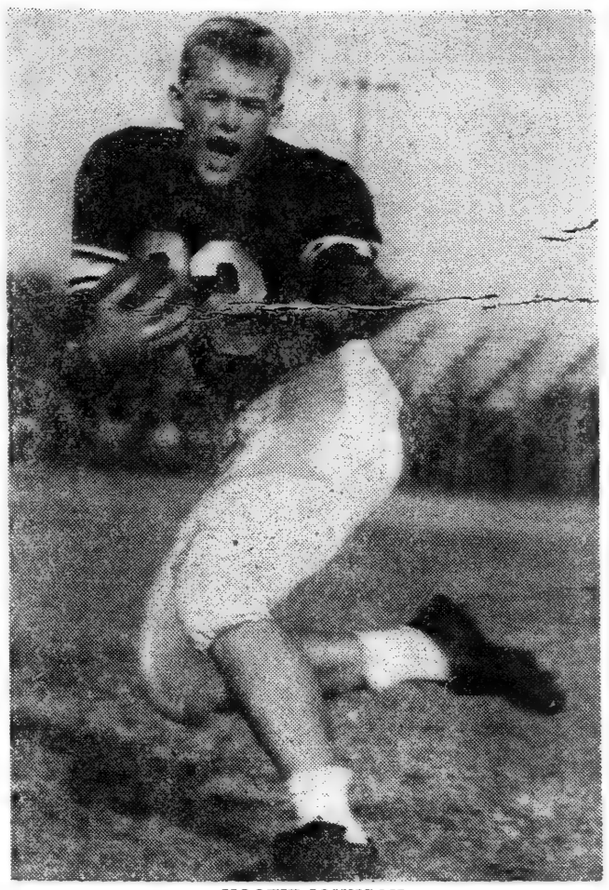
Tar Heels To Work Out This Morning Before Taking Trip

By Tom Peacock

Carolina's football team will run through a short practice this morning on Navy Field to wind up preparations for South Carolina tomorrow, and then leave by bus for Columbia at 1:15.

The Tar Heels worked out yesterday afternoon, stressing pass defense against the accurate throwing of Gamecock quarterback Johnny Gramling, one of the best passers in the Southern Conference.



Carolina will be looking for its first win in 11 games, its last victory coming over South Carolina here last year, 21-6. Carolina holds a commanding lead over the Gamecocks in the 28-year old series between the two schools, winning 18, losing five, and tieing four.

The Gamecocks are strong favorites to score their first win over the Tar Heels since a 6-0 victory in 1944, however. South Carolina has improved greatly after a slow start, and beat powerful Virginia, 21-14, week-before-last. Virginia whipped the Tar Heels last Saturday, 34-7.

Duke and Army are the only schools to score wins over South Carolina this year, and Coach Rex Enright's charges are determined to win the battle of the Carolinas, to avoid smearing their best record in years. The Gamecocks have beaten Wofford, The Citadel, Clemson, and Furman in addition to Virginia.

Carolina is in its poorest physical shape of the year, with the addition of safetyman Teedie Bullock to the injury list dimming the outlook even more. Bullock will miss the game because of an ear infection.

Halfbacks Bob White, Ken Keller, Billy Hawks, and Billy Williams will all be out of action tomorrow from injuries. Doug Bruton, a stalwart defensive linebacker is sidelined to round out the long list of Tar Heel injuries. Fullback Bull Davidson returns to the lineup.

HOOTIE JOHNSON
. . South Carolina fullback

John Gaylord is scheduled to start at right halfback tomorrow in place of Chal Port for the only change in the North Carolina lineup. The rest of the offensive backfield and line remain the same, while head coach Carl Snavely will have to make a replacement for the injured defensive backs, Bruton and Bullock. Snavely switched Bullock to halfback and Albert Long to safety against Virginia after Bruton was injured.

The Carolina pass defense fell apart last week, and Snavely has been working hard on the secondary and going comparatively light on heavy scrimmage. The Tar Heels have taken quite a beating from some of the best teams in the country, and the smooth working of plays is more important now than contact.

Quarterback Marshall Newman continued to work on his passing, while his alternate, Charlie Motta worked on the running game. The Tar Heels will concentrate on passing and running through plays this morning.

Pika's, Beta's Win In Playoff

Beta Theta Pi came from behind in the last half yesterday afternoon to beat the SAE's 12-9 in the fraternity division of the tag football playoffs.

The score at the half was 7-6 in favor of the SAE's on the strength of an intercepted lateral by Jim Whitten which he ran back for a touchdown. Fred Hutchins kicked the extra point which looked for a might would win the game.

The Beta score in the first half came on a sensational pass from John McCollum to Bob Byerly. The extra point try was blocked.

The second half surge by the Beta's was led by McCollum and was climaxed when Hazzard threw to Bucky Barkley for the winning touchdown.

The other two points made by the SAE's came when the Beta's, seeking to protect their lead, downed the ball in their end zone after they had been pushed deep into their territory.

Zeta Psi 1 team scored after 20 minutes of overtime to win over the PiKA's 12 to 6.

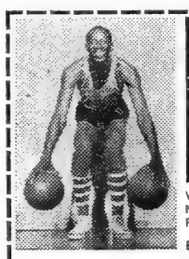
The Zetes scored first when John Dickson intercepted a pass which had been partially blocked and ran 50 yards for the score. The try for the extra point was unsuccessful.

The PiKA's came back to score when Fowler caught a pass from about ten yards out. Their try for the extra point was also unsuccessful.

It looked as though the game would have to be called on account of darkness when the Zetes started a march which carried them to a score on Walton Joyner's catch of a short pass.

In the other fraternity playoff game yesterday the Sigma Chi's and Zeta Psi 2 fought to a 7-7 standoff. The game was called after forty minutes of overtime and will be continued at a later date.

The Zetes scored first on a play which went from Ges, to Van Noppen to Thorp. The extra point came when Ges passed to Chapman.



The Sigma Chi's came right back and scored almost immediately to tie up the game for the rest of the afternoon. Dale took a pass from Bobby Bell and ran about fifty yards before he was caught on the goal line. Bell passed to Dale on the very next play for the score.

Henning's first try for the game-tying point was wide but the Zetes were off side and his second try was good. Neither team threatened to score very seriously in the second half.

Bobby Shantz Named American League's Most Outstanding Star

NEW YORK—The Baseball Writers Association of America yesterday named little Bobby Shantz of the Philadelphia Athletics as the American League's most valuable player. Shantz had a 24-7 record with the fourth-place A's. Allie Reynolds was Shantz' nearest competitor, trailing him by some 100 votes.

NEW ORLEANS—Cliff Wells, basketball coach of Tulane University, planned yesterday to introduce before the National Rules Committee a radical innovation to eliminate stalling tactics from the collegiate sports. He would base the halves on points rather than minutes. When one team had scored 40 points the half would end and when one had scored 80 the game would be over.

NEW YORK—The United Press put six Brooklyn ball players on its National League All-Star team, but, as usual, Stan Musial led the vote casting. Robin Roberts was named on all but one ballot but Musial was a unanimous choice. The Dodger winners were Duke Snider, Joe Black, Gil Hodges, Pee Wee Reese, Billy Cox, and Roy Campanella.

KANSAS CITY—The NCAA yesterday announced plans to increase the number of teams for its basketball tournament and at the same time shorten the season and reduce post-season competition.

SYDNEY, Australia—Vic Seixas, former Carolina tennis star made ready to defend his crown in the New South Wales tennis tournament. He and Straight Clark of Pasadena, Calif. will play singles matches and then team in the doubles.

Gamecocks Aim For 'Heels

Special to The Daily Tar Heel

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 13 — South Carolina's Gamecocks, finding one of the best records in the school's history within grasp, need a victory over North Carolina here Saturday afternoon more than they have ever needed one in the history of the 49-year-old series.

The Gamecocks haven't beaten the Tar Heels often, only four times in 27 attempts, but this year's USC team is determined to do it for Homecoming Day fans, as it would progress them toward a highly successful season. To date South Carolina has won five games against two defeats, including most impressive wins over Clemson, 6-0, and Virginia, 21-14.

Three games remain on the Gamecock schedule, with UNC, West Virginia and Wake Forest, and all of them will find the Gamecocks with excellent chances of either winning or losing.

With 240-pound guard Frank Mincevich sidelined for the "Battle of the Carolinas" this week, Coach Rex Enright's defensive platoon, which presently ranks sixth in the nation on total defense, will suffer. However, if 225-pound Bob King and 220-pound Joe DeFore can hold up against the Tar Heels, the Gamecocks may weather the storm.

To date USC has yielded an average of 204.9 total yards per game to lead the Southern Conference, including but 138 per game rushing and 66.9 per game on passing. Tackle Don Earley, End John Latorre and Linebacker Leon Cunningham, all of whom have had major parts in establishing that record, should be in good shape for Saturday's game, and they will have to be at their best.

As usual, the Gamecocks can be counted on to pass often, with Johnny Gramling, who has completed 42 passes for 507 yards, in the leading role, and End Clyde Bennett and Halfback Gene Wilson furnishing top targets.

To a raindrop, all umbrellas are the same

Yes, the nice part about umbrellas is their similarity. When the need is urgent, any one will work.

When it comes to telephone equipment, however, a general likeness isn't enough. Parts are engineered to be exactly the same no matter where they are used. Only such rigid standardization made possible the smooth and interlocking system that serves you from Penobscot, Maine, to Pescadero, California.

We're reminded of it sharply in times of disaster — from flood, blast or hurricane. Telephone men from other areas can come and pitch right in with the same methods, tools and equipment.

But one Bell System asset isn't standardized. That is its people. It takes able, original minds to keep our business moving ahead. For college graduates qualified for and interested in such widely differing work as research, engineering, operations and administration, we offer many opportunities.

Your college placement people will be glad to tell you more about it.

TAR HEELS TRY AGAIN, TO MEET S. C. TODAY

Horton Is Optimistic Nevertheless

Extra Class Not Question Of Review, Matter Of Time

By Walt Dear

February's Trustee Executive Committee will probably take up the matter of how to institute Saturday classes, The Daily Tar Heel learned yesterday.

Executive Committee member Victor Bryant would not comment on the "why's" of the committee's decision but said that the Trustees defer action on Saturday classes until the full effect of a new student union, dorm social rooms and an enlarged student - faculty program would be felt. Other students, including Graham Memorial Board Chairman Ken Penegar, asked the Trustees to actively support the new student union project, up for legislative discussion in January.

Earlier, Bryant har chaired a Visiting Committee meeting in the Morehead Planetarium Faculty Lounge to hear students present their views on Saturday class decision and other problems. Visiting Committee members Charles Cannon and John Stacy would not indicate whether the Saturday class decision would be revised at the full board's meeting in February. They declined comment on whether they favored such a move.

Student President Ham Horton proposed to the committee

After the meeting, Horton commented optimistically, "The meeting shows that people on their minds if they are given the Board are willing to change the facts." The Visiting Committee meets again in December with other visiting members from State and Woman's College and will present the stu-

UP Platform Almost Same As In Spring

The University Party platform, basically the same as last spring's platform, was announced yesterday by party officials.

The platform will consist of carrying out the promises made last election rather than presenting new ones, said UP officials in making the announcement.

Planks include completion of plans for check cashing service in Lenoir Hall, infirmary dispensary at Woollen Gym, and investigation of tne UNC Book Exchange.

Distribution of copies of the platform is scheduled Monday, said Martin Jordan, UP publicity chairman.

The University Party, mainly made up of organization representations rather than individuals, holds a slight majority over the Student Party in Legislature at present.

Appeal Made Asking Blood For Soldiers

The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be at Graham Memorial Tuesday and Wednesday to collect blood for Korean soldiers.

Junius C. Fox and William Roth, co-chirmen of the Chapel Hill Red Cross blood donation committee, issued an appeal for contributors yesterday.

Persons wishing to donate blood may call Graham Memorial, 5611 or 9-1881, for an appointment. Physicians and nurses will be present from 11 a.m. to 4:40 p.m. each day.

Any person from 21 to 59 may give blood if his health is good. Persons between 18 and 20 must have their parent's consent to give blood.

The Red Cross asked that prospective donors do not eat heavy, fatty foods within four hours before giving blood. Foods to be avoided include eggs, meat, salad dressing, butter and fried foods. Recommended foods are toast with jelly or jam, crackers and milk, cooked vegetables without butter, cottage cheese and vegetable, fruit or jellied salads without dressing.

Farber To Appear On TV Press Panel

Barry Farber, editor of The Daily Tar Heel, will appear on a television panel in Philadelphia Nov. 23.

"Junior Press Conference," the panel, features a number of student editors and a nationally prominent figure. Gen. Omar N. Bradley Joint Chiefs of Staff chairman, will be on the panel. Farber will report for military duty Dec. 3.

Mail Bag

Carolina got a post card yesterday from Raleigh. It said:

"Dear Party Goers,

"We are terribly sorry to hear about you having to have Saturday classes. It's going to really hurt your social life and we feel real sorry for you all."

"The Students at State."

Dear Was Farber's Pick, Backer Says

Barry Farber, former Daily Tar Heel editor, asked Walt Dear, independent editorial candidate, to take over the job when Farber learned he had been drafted, Wiley Kennedy, a Dear supporter, said yesterday.

Dear refused to hold the post on the grounds that it would be unfair to any editorial candidates if he were to run and be editor at the same time. At the time, Dear had not decided whether to try for the post, he said.

Kennedy also pointed out that Dear "was an independent-minded candidate who would have loyalties to none but students if elected."

Kennedy enumerated additional planks in Dear's platform. Dear will ask that a $50 prize be awarded in an essay contest for freshmen students in order to seek out the latent writing talent on campus in its early stages, so that The Daily Tar Heel editor may have a greater source of good writing material.

If elected, Dear would set up an editorial board to act as an advisory group or sounding board. The board would include representatives from both political parties.

Dear said he would seek to solve any circulation problems that beset town students and others. Although from Jersey City, N. J., Dear said he plans to live in North Carolina upon graduation. His parents are connected with the Elizabeth City Daily Advance.

Pace, Lowett, Faust Named As Senators

The Carolina delegation of the State Student Legislature recently elected Wade Matthews floor leader to the House.

Senators chosen were Bob Pace, Henry Lowett and John Faust. The delegation also endorsed chairman Gene Cook for speaker of the House. Other endorsements were John Faust for president pro-tem of the Senate and George Lynch of Duke as president of the Senate.

Bills chosen to go on the Calendar were: (1) A resolution praising President Truman, (2) a resolution calling for 12-month teachers' salaries, and (3) a resolution for compulsory state FEPC.

Cook said, "We are taking a delegation of 26; 15 representatives to the House and three Senators, with the rest alternates."

Sessions begin at the State Capitol next Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock when permanent officers of the House will be elected. The sessions will last through Saturday morning.

Every Man For Himself This Friday

It'll be every man for himself at UNC next Friday as the campus celebrates the 15th annual Sadie Hawkins' Day.

Plans for the gala festival include a foot race, a mass marriage ceremony and a dance at the Naval Armory at 8 o'clock.

Al Capp, who instituted the celebration back in '37, was asked by the Sadie Hawkins' Day committee to attend the doins' here, but was forced to decline due to a television engagement on Friday night.

A "Beat Dook" parade will be stage don Friday afternoon with the ROTC bands and drill teams participating. The parade will end at Y court. A pep rally will be held following this at 6:30.

Chairman of tthe Sadie Hawkins' Day committee is Jim Wilkinson.

Hosts Picked Seven To Ten Point Victors

UNC Must Halt Gramling Passes; Kickoff Is At 2

By Tom Peacock

Daily Tar Heel, Asst. Sports Editor

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 14—North Carolina's football team hopes to take up here where it left off last year in Chapel Hill and beat the South Carolina Gamecocks to snap a 11-game losing streak that started the week after the Tar Heels whipped South Carolina, 21-6.

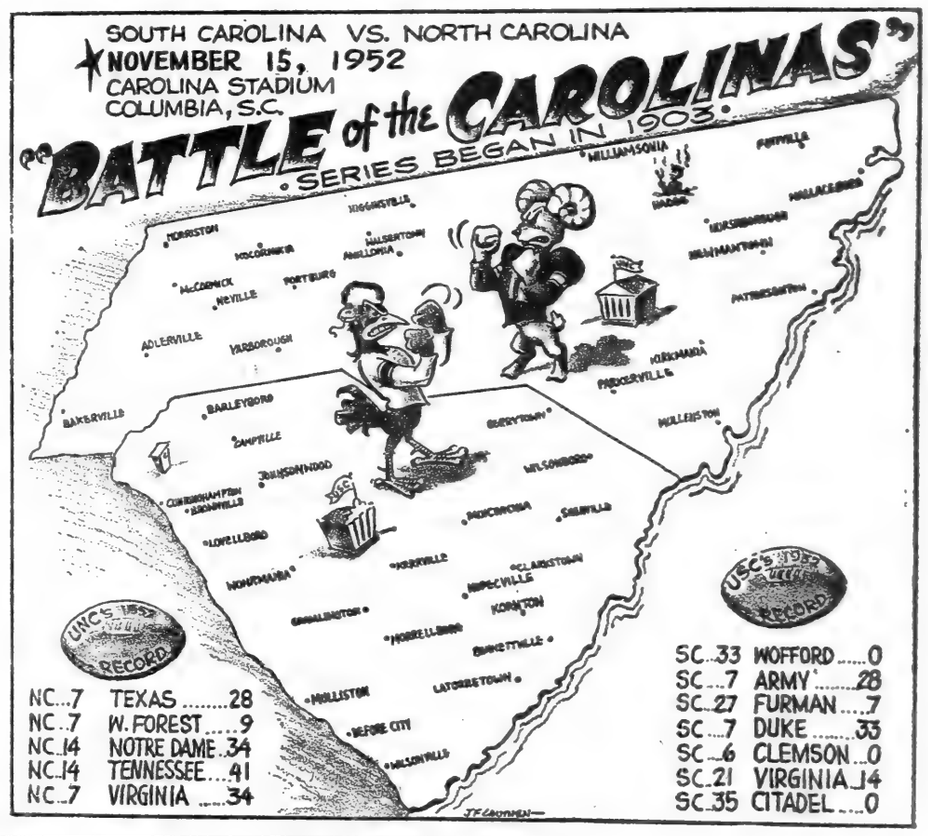
North Carolina is underdog, for the first time against South Carolina since 1944, the year the Gamecocks beat Carolina, 6-0. South Carolina hasn't won a game in the series since. The bookies give the Gamecocks and seven to 10 points.

A partisan crowd of 20,000 is expected to fill Carolina Stadium to watch Coach Rex Enrights Gamecocks try for their fourth straight win. Carl Snavely of the Tar Heels hopes to ruin the South Carolina Homecoming Day by taking his first win of the season.

The Tar Heels, weak on pass defense in the past few games, will meet quarterback Johnny Gramling who is the fourth ranking passer in the Southern Conference. Sub Dick Balka has proved effective at helping Gramling direct the Gamecock T formation.

The Carolina offense, which has had trouble getting started, won't be any better off against USC than it has in previous games. The Gamecocks are ranked sixth in the nation on defense, and first in the Southern Conference.

Carolina quarterback Marshall Newman will general the split-T for the largest part of the game, depending on a few powerful backs and a talented throwing arm. Newman has completed 21 passes for 235 yards and five touchdowns this year.



Snavely has made only one change in the North Carolina

News Background, Is Biff Roberts' Plea

"This idea of campaigning for the editorship of The Daily Tar Heel by denouncing Saturday classes is the silliest thing I ever heard of," said Biff Roberts, sports editor and editorial candidate, yesterday.

Roberts, who is backed by the University Party, stated that he too was against Saturday sessions and would do all he could to combat them. "But," he added, "The Daily Tar Heel will be here long after we have had Saturday classes thrust upon us or have handed them right back to the Trustees."

Outlining his newspaper background, Roberts said, "I shall base my campaign on newspaper experience."

Roberts has served on the sports staff for four years and at present holds the position of sports editor and writes the popular column, "Down In Front." He spent two summers on the Louisville Courier-journal.

"I offer to the student body a promise to put out a good daily—one which will voice student opinion. The idea of not having Saturday classes is just one of the many times student opinion will have to be expressed," he concluded.

Roberts' statement was prompted by opponent Walt Dear promising to work for abolishment of Saturday classes.

Philippine Youngsters Bright, Coed Dean Says

By Tom Parramore

"I like the youngsters; they are very bright," Dean of Women Katherine Carmichael commented on here recent year in the Philippines.

The UNC dean spoke Thursday night to the YMCA supper forum in Lenoir Hall. Her topic was "Around the World with a Full-bright Scholar." Miss Carmichael spent the last school year in the islands on such a grant.

Dean Carmichael left the states in June of 1951, spent 9 months in Manila, coming home via Asia, Africa and Europe this july.

"I was assigned," said Dean Carmichael, "to teach in the Philippine Normal College. I asked for and was given a course in freshman English because I wanted to get close to the language problem in an Eastern country." As further preparation she was given graduate work in literature.

She explained that only the upper 25 per cent of any high or prep school graduating class was accepted into the government-controlled college. These are selected by competitive examination.

The people she described as being "very admirable, hardy people but mostly pagan." There are many Mohammedans and some Christians, she noted.

On the debit side, Dean Carmichael told of the destruction wreaked by the Japanese army of occupation during World War II. Almost completely demolished were many beautiful old walls and buildings erected by the Spaniards in the 16th century, she said.

Deadline For NROTC Test Is Nov. 22

Deadline date for receipt of applications by the NROTC for its college training program is Nov. 22.

Competitive examinations, the seventh since the program's beginning will be held Dec. 13, 1952, at test centers established throughout the nation. Only those who have submitted their applications prior to the deadline date will be allowed to take the exams.

About 2,000 students will be selected for entry into the NROTC program this year. Successful candidates will be appointed Midshipmen, USNR, and will have their tuition, books and some fees paid for by the government while working for bachelor degrees. In addition, they will receive pay at the rate of $600 a year for the four-year period and will be provided the required uniforms for use while on cruises and during drill periods.

The Navy has NROTC units at 52 universities and colleges throughout the U. S.

A Comma In The Creed

Davies Says Danger In Bible Study Is Finding Religion Real

By John Jamison

"The danger of preaching from the Bible is the danger of discovering that religion is real, that it must be practiced," said Dr. A. Powell Davies Thursday night in Hill Hall.

Dr. Davies is pastor of All Souls Unitarian Church in Washington, D. C. He is considered by some the leading "missionary" of Unitarianism to the less liberal denominations. He said orthodox believers have established religions basen on certain creeds, which creeds are little concerned with the actual teachings of Jesus. Their creeds, he said, are based on "preconceptions" of what they think religion should be.

Dr. Davies continued, "The life and teachings of Jesus are represented in the Apostle's Creed by a comma. '. . . born of the Virgin Mary, suffered under Pontius Pilate . . .' One comma alone, all the rest is dogma, not even concerned with the teachings of Jesus."

Dr. Davies recalled an occasion on which Sen. Claude Pepper had been asked to address the men's club of the All Souls Church. Senator Pepper requested of Dr. Davies a definition of Unitarianism so that he might not "get off on the wrong foot."

The pastor replied, "Unitarianism—the belief in one God, no Devil, and 16 ounces to the pound." To this Senator Pepper asked, "What good is that to me? I'm a Baptist. How many ounces to the quart?"

In a question-answer period following the main address, a member of the audience asked, Can Unitarians be called Christians in the precise sense?"

Dr. Davies answered, "What is the 'precise sense'? If it is that defined in the various creeds, no. If the definition of a Christian is one who studies the life and teachings of Jesus, most Unitarians can answer yes."

A Sensible Decision

A governing body never made a more sensible decision than the executive committee of the University made when it decided to have classes held on Saturday.

No other element of the population does so much time-wasting as college under-graduates. I (Louis Graves) am not speaking from hearsay. I have been there and I know. And so does everybody else who looks back upon his college career.

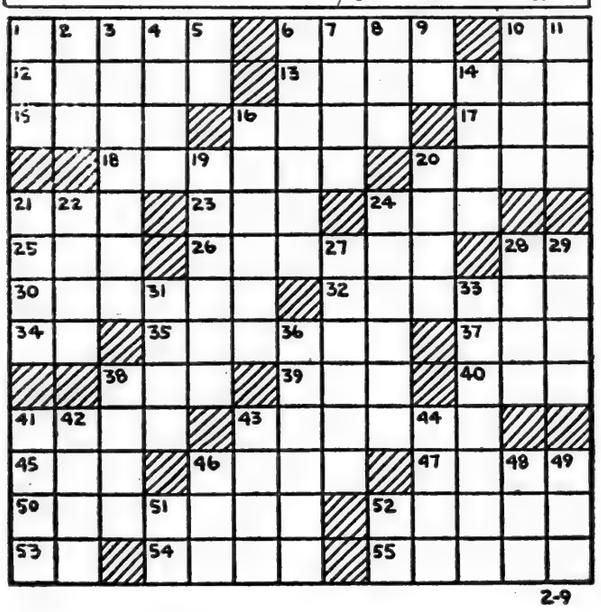
The University already has Saturday classes for law, medical and public health students and for graduate students, and there is no reason why undergraduates should not be on the same schedule. If you have talked, as I have many a time, with young men who have completed their undergraduate courses and then studied law and medicine, you have heard them say, "I never knew what work was till I entered the law school," or "till I entered the medical school."

Every student who comes to the University has a large part of his education here paid for by the State. A great majority of them are able to be University students because of the sacrifices made for them by their parents. It is contrary to all reason and decency that they should not devote more time than they do now to the main purpose for which they are supposed to be here.

I hope that the trustees will not allow themselves to be pressured into a change of mind by the petitions against the new schedule that are being signed by students. A great majority of the students are still minors and are certainly not mature enough to decide on how the University's program of studies should be laid out. The decision should be made by persons with knowledge and experience.

(The Editorial Board of THE DAILY TAR HEEL reprints Mr. Louis Graves' views in the interest of publishing a full coverage of a very controversial subject. The Board does not concur with Mr. Graves' views; in fact violently opposes them, but probably is not mature enough to answer them. Therefore, the board will allow each reader to decide the obvious answer for himself.)

Keeping Posted On Trees



When Joyce Kilmer wrote his immortal poem, "Trees", obviously he had never seen one with a poster on it.

Posters, of course, have their place, but must it be on the campus trees? It would be better that they be placed on posts, for which they are named, or even on bulletin boards which are provided for just such emergencies.

George, the campus dog, a tree lover from the word whoof, vigorously supports this viewpoint. "Trees," sez George, "should be seen, not covered with posters."

Candidates who have any desire to swing the always powerful Botany vote, should heed this warning post haste. Right now it's hard to see the forest for the posters.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

Dorman Cordell — Stewpot

In the days of old, men served strange gods, and the strange gods were represented by high priests, who were supposed to look after the people.

After much thoughtful contemplation, a system was worked out which the people agreed was fine, with rewards distributed according to the amount of work done, and with everyoone being free over each week-end. And for many moons they went happily along, with little or no government.

But after a while, the high priests murmured among themselves and said, "We are not being recognized enough. The people are looking after themselves too much. We must exert our authority once again, to show them that we are the high priests."

They thought much about what they could do to remind the people of the importance of high priests. And they talked with the money-changers.

"Make them work an extra day each week," cried the money-changers. "For there is too much reveling in foreign lands during the free periods. We must hold the people here in our own land, so they will cough up more of the green stuff (in those days, lettuce was the form of monetary exchange), that we may prosper and grow fat."

When consulted for his viewpoints, the Minister of Propaganda was all for it. "No other element of the population does so much time-wasting as the people of this country." And then he sat back on his easy chair to rest a while between his morning stroll and his afternoon stroll.

And so the word went out among the population that an extra day of work was to be the rule henceforth over all the kingdom. But the people were much wroth against the high priests, and rose up in arms and offered supplications to the strange gods to slay the high priests for such awful tyranny.

Word went out over all the kingdom that there would be a mass assembly to implore the wrath of the gods upon the priests. But only a small group appeared for the assembly, because everyone was too busy raving among his fellow men of the injustice of such a move.

Thus, disagreement and dissention ran along the length and breadth of the nation between the priests and their higher-up associates, and the good people of the kingdom.

And while they wrangled among themselves, a heathen tribe came out of the wilderness and captured them. And the young were eaten, and the others were made into slaves.

The moral of this story is: Don't worry about Saturday classes, whether we do or don't have. It's futile for the Army will get you in the end anyhow.

Express Yourself

How nice it is to have a beautiful gym such as we have here at the University. There are provisions inside for swimming, wrestling, boxing, handball, in fact almost any sport you can name. However for those who are actively interested in weight lifting and body building, the facilities are all too inadequate. These last consist of two bars, an antiquated replica of what at one time, I take it, was a platform, and two benches whose merits are doubtful indeed.

Now, we don't ask much. A small place somewhere, anywhere, and a little more equipment. I admit the crowds at Kenan were not too big this season but it wouldn't hurt the budget too much, would it? There are those who would be grateful if this were done. If they could just give us a room somewhere we'll try to rustle up some more equipment.

Winter will soon be here and though it does seem a little rustic or Bohemian I don't particuarly relish the idea of trying to clean 160 standing ankle deep in the driven snow.

Drew Pearson — The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Washington—While the time of arrival, etc., should not be revealed, General Eisenhower has decided that it would be foolish for him to go to the Far East without stopping at one of the most controversial spots in that area—Formosa.

Accordingly, he will visit Chiang Kai-Shek and inspect his troops with a view to possible use of three divisions of Chinese Nationalists in Korea later.

This is an extremely controversial subject which has been debated back and forth between the State Department, the Pentagon, and Senators favoring Chiang Kai-Shek. The Joint Chiefs of Staff have argued that the time and expense of equipping Chiang's men would be considerable compared with the risk that they might surrender to the enemy when engaged in battle.

However, General Eisenhower figures that this is something he can best decide for himself—after inspecting the troops himself, therefore, the trip to Formosa will be one of the most important parts of the Korean pilgramage. In fact, it's possible he may avoid Japan altogether.

It hasn't leaked out yet, but two sergeants in the U. S. Air Force have been caught trying to sell military secrets to the Communist in Korea. They now face a possible death penalty as traitors to their country.

The two sergeants tried to make a deal to sell information for cold cash to a man they thought to be a Communist agent. However, he turned out to be an Air Force undercover man.

The incident isn't a savory one. But, unfortunately, these things sometimes happen in wartime.

The Senate Elections Subcommittee, charged with the job of probing fellow senators, is now in a lather over what to do with its investigation of ten serious charges placed against Senator McCarthy of Wisconsin.

These charges were brought by Senator Benton of Connecticut on Aug. 6, 1951. Nothing conclusive has happened in the year and three months that has elapsed since. At first McCarthy tried to block the probe. However, the full Senate voted 60 to 0 against him. After that, McCarthy tried to bulldoze committee members, brought counter-charges against Senator Benton, and induced two members of the subcommittee to resign.

Senator Benton has welcomed any investigation of his finances, has offered the committee his income-tax returns, and only last week offered to testify about himself if and when the committee wanted him. But McCarthy has ducked.

Though Senators Welker of Idaho and Gillettee of Iowa have been induced to resign from the committee, another Republican, Sen. Bob Hendrickson, despite considerable pressure, has stuck to his guns.

Sen. Mike Monroney of Oklahoma, a Democratic Committee member, left for Europe without even telling colleagues, but Sen. Tom Hennings of Missouri, committee chairman of the probe, and Hendrickson seem determined to go through with it.

Committee investigators who have been digging into McCarthy's weird financial empire have found amazing transactions and cash deposits. For instance, during the one term McCarthy has served in the Senate, he deposited $24,388.09 in cash alone. During the same period, deposits of checks from unindentified sources totaled $65,592.57.

Yet McCarthy has consistently dodged giving the committee any explanation of his strange transactions.

Many Senators, including Republicans, feel that for the honor of the Senate these matters should be cleared up one way or the other. They recall the probe of Sen. Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma which was started by Sen. Homer Ferguson of Michigan, only to be dropped abruptly after Thomas wrote Ferguson a letter threatening to expose the dealership his family received from the Chrysler Corporation.

These suspended, inconclusive investigations, plus the Nixon expense fund, have given the public the impression most senators are subsidized, which is not the case. And the majority of the Senate—as indicated by the 60 to 0 vote of confidence—want these matters cleared up one way or the other.

John Taylor — Reviews

Why is it that Chapel Hill is plagued with long stretches of movies at which even Hollywood shudders, and then when worthwhile films do find their way here, they always come at the same time? This is a question that has long troubled your reviewer, and one to which he has yet to find a reasonable solution. As a case in point witness the fact that over the weekend students will be presented with not one, but two movies that are worth more than casual attention. They are "The Prisoner of Zenda," which begins a two-day engagament at the Carolina on Sunday and "The Quiet Man," which comes to the Varsity tomorrow and will be there through Tuesday. Both features will be shown at the midnight shows tonight.

"The Prisoner of Zenda," based on the novel of the same name, can be dismissed with the comment that it is an exceptionally good hokum movie. Produced by M.G.M., masters at this form of entertainment, it is full of battle royals, fair damsels in distress, dastardly villans, and self-sacrificing heroes. The stars are Stewart Granger and Deborah Kerr, old hands at castle-storming, and most everybody should get a kick out of seeing them ply their wares.

"The Quiet Man" cannot be discussed quite so simply because it falls into no fixed category. The John Ford production is the first American film ever to win three prizes at the Venice Film Festival—quite a recommendation — and is without doubt one of the finest pictures of the year. Filmed in technicolor against the natural, emerald landscape of Ireland — so beautiful that it alone is worth the price of admission — it is the story of Sean Thornton (John Wayne), who returns to his native Ireland from America with the idea of settling down to a peaceful, uneventful existence. His plan is foiled by the spitfire Mary Kate (Maureen O'Hara), her drunken, brawling brother (Victor McLaglen), a match-making busybody (Barry Fitzgerald), and any number of other humorous, and typically Irish characters. The film climaxes in a gruelling marathon battle between Sean and the brother, after which, on the theory that a good fight makes everybody friends, the happy ending comes. This show, a blending of an unusual, human, and amusing story, gorgeous landscapes, and fine performances by each member of the cast, is a masterpiece of its kind and is most highly recommended for students' entertainment.

Blind Mice

Editor:

Millions of dollars for bricks and not one cent for light bulbs. This seems to be the slogan of the chemistry department. Every day that we go into 206 Venable, the lights get dimmer and dimmer. One day when we enter our classroom, we'll expect to find it in total darkness, but class must go on. Along with all the other chemistry students, we would appreciate some light on the subject in the near future.

Local Booters Will Meet Maryland Eleven Today

Down In Front

By Biff Roberts

Battle Of The Carolinas

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 14—Tomorrow is the day that the supremacy of the two Carolinas is to be decided. For at 2 o'clock the Tar Heels of North Carolina and the Gamecocks of South Carolina meet at Carolina Stadium here and go through 60 minutes of football drudgery. According to the South Carolinians—and the bookies—the Gamecocks will win it this time—for the first victory over the Tar Heels since 1944. But from this corner of the press box, it doesn't look that way. I'm looking for the winless Tar Heels to take their first one of the year—maybe not by much—but they still ought to win it.

North Carolina has plenty to overcome. It is homecoming here tomorrow and the expected crowd of some 20,000 will definitely be rooting for the Gamecocks. On top of that the South Carolina players are still burning from the defeats we've handed them in the past few years. Add the fact that they've got a top passing combo in Johnny Gramling and Dick Balka—two top quarterbacks—which will give our erratic pass defense more to worry about, and things look pretty dark.

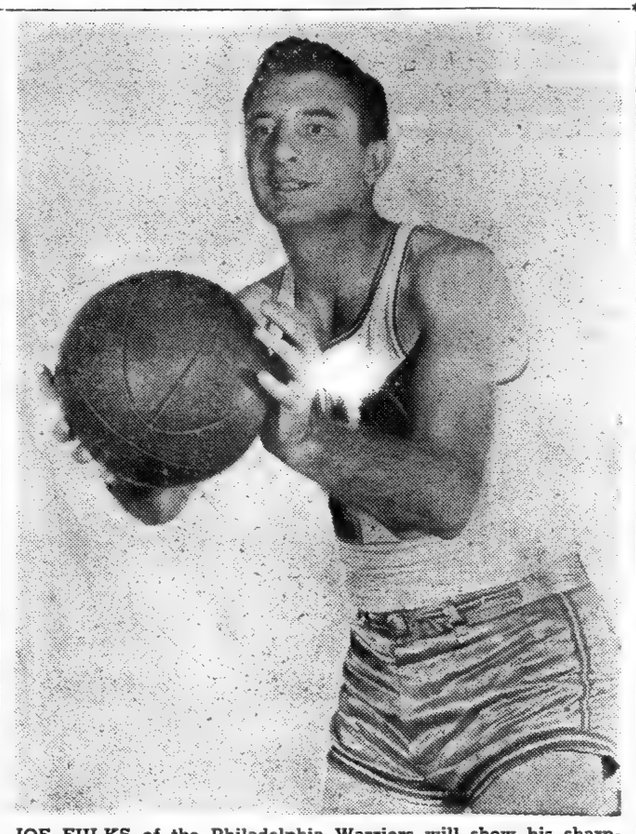
Then, too, the Gamecocks have been coming strong. After getting walloped by Duke about a month ago, they've won three straight, stopping Clemson, Virginia (shades of last week at Kenan Stadium), and The Citadel. All in all, South Carolina has a five and two record, losing to Army but beating Furman in the season opener.

Tough And Tougher

THE GAMECOCK PASSING game is a tough one. But their defensive line is even tougher. They now place seventh in the nation on rushing defense, which doesn't sound too encouraging. Balka and Gramling can handle the passing without much trouble and have two good receivers in Clyde Bennett, one of the top pass catchers in the Southern Conference with 20, and halfback Gene Wilson. Bennett has caught four touchdown passes and Wilson has taken in two while running for two more.

All of this isn't much to perk up the North Carolina rooters. But there are a few other things to be considered. Our pass defense has probably been our biggest weakness all season. But one reason it has been lacking is the fact that the strong teams we have faced, Texas, Wake Forest, Notre Dame, Tennessee, and Virginia, have all had strong running games. When you have to look out for both run- you take a look at South Carolina's running game you can see that it you take a look at South Carolina'srunninggame you can see that it doesn't compare with any of the five teams we have lost to this season. They've got some steady runners but none that are exceptionally fast, none that are exceptionally powerful, and none that are exceptionally shifty.

Lineman Stop That Runner



ALL OF WHICH MEANS that the Carolina line, one which has shown signs of brilliance at times during the year, should be able to stop the Gamecock running attack without having to overload it with line backers. If that line can hold, then Coach Carl Snavely can let his backs worry more about intercepting or blocking passes rather than having to worry about stopping runners who have broken through the line.

As an answer to the South Carolina passing Coach Snavely can again call on a strong line. In the Wake Forest game, when the Tar Heels came within a hair of winning, the hard-charging Carolina line continually dumped the Wake Forest passers for losses. The Carolina pass defense look good that day. If the line can do the same tomorrow afternoon, then the South Carolina passing attack shouldn't bother us too much.

Gaylord And Davidson

ON TOP OF THAT our rushing offense started to look a little better last Saturday—although we did get trounced by Virginia—and it should look even better tomorrow. John Gaylord returned to the offense last Saturday against the Cavaliers and added a good bit toward moving the ball for the Tar Heels. But the biggest offensive blessing Coach Snavely has had is the return of Bull Davidson, the fullback who was hit by polio back in September. Davidson was counted on heavily before the season started and in the opinion of Coach Snavely was probably his most outstanding runner. His absence in the Carolina lineup has definitely hurt us. But he has been practicing in the scrimmages all week, running as well as ever, and will definitely be able to see action tomorrow. His presence should certainly make a difference.

So with all apologies to Rudyard Kipling—IF the Carolina line can do the job it did against Wake Forest, a job it is capable of doing, IF the pass defense can hold,and IF Davidson can add a little spark to the running offense, well—we haven't beaten anybody since we took South Carolina last fall. Might as well make them our cousins again.

JOE FULKS of the Philadelphia Warriors will show his sharp-shooting talents next Saturday night, Nov. 22 at 8:30 when his Warriors meet the Baltimore Bullets in a National Basketball Association league game at William Neal Reynolds Coliseum. The former Murray State (Kentucky) star won the league's scoring crown in 1946-47 and has been highly ranked each year.

Pro Cagers Will Play In Raleigh Double Bill

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 14—Basketball fans in this area will have an opportunity to see two Eastern Division teams of the National Basketball Association in a regular league game in the William Neal Reynolds Coliseum at North Carolina State College Saturday night, November 22, at 8:30 o'clock.

The battling teams will be the Philadelphia Warriors and the Baltimore Bullets. The professional game will be followed by a game between the world-renowned Harlem Globetrotters and the Boston Whirlwinds.

In addition to the Philadelphia and Baltimore teams, the Eastern Division of the NBA is composed of teams from New York, Boston, and Syracuse. The Western Division squads are Minneapolis, Rochester, Milwaukee, Fort Wayne, and Indianapolis.

Among the famous players who will be in the Philadelphia lineup will be Bill Mlkvy, former Temple University star; Ed Mikan, brother of the famed Big George and himself an ex-Depaul great; and Don Lofgran, who played in the Coliseum against N. C. State while a member of the San Francisco University team.

Other Warrior players and the colleges where they first gained sports fame include Moe Radovich, Wyoming; Nelson Bobb, Temple; Neil Johnston, Ohio State; Andy Phillip, Illinois; George Senesky, St. Joseph's; Joe Fulks, Murray State; and Claude Overton, East Central Oklahoma.

The Warriors captured the league title in 1946-47 and took Eastern Division honors in 1947-48 and in 1950-51. They've never finished lower than fourth and thereby have always qualified for the post-season playoffs. Only twice have they been under the .500 mark for the season.

Thy have produced two individual scoring champions plus the league's leading playmaker and the NBA's top defensive ace.

Three of these four great stars are still wearing Philadelphia uniforms and are expected to be the mainstays of this year's club. They are the colorful veteran Jumpin' Joe Fulks and the stellar backcourt team of Captain George Senesky and Andy Phillip. Lone missing ace is Paul Arizin, league leading scorer last year who is now serving with the Marines at Quantico, Va.

Tickets for the game are now on sale at the Coliseum Box Office, North Carolina State College, Raleigh.

Tough Terps To Be Hosts To Carolina

Special to The Daily Tar Heel

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Nov. 14—The Carolina soccer team arrived here today to meet the strong eleven from the University of Maryland this afternoon.

This is the first meeting between the two teams this season. The Tar Heels and the Terps met once last year, with Maryland gaining a close 2-1 victory over the locals.

The Old Line State has long been the stronghold of collegiate and prep soccer, with the state university usually having first call on the best talent. The Terrapins should rank along with Penn State as the toughest foes faced by Coach Al Moore's team this season.

The forward line will have Raleigh Tremain on the outside right, with Harry Pawlik at the inside right. Gerry Russell will be the center forward. Rennie Randolph will start at inner left, while Tom Greenway will probably be on the outside left.

Coach Moore will have several capable reserves ready for action also. Among these are Louie Patseavorous, one of the heroes of the State win this week, Fletcher Green, Drew Patterson, Ham Hamilton and goalie Buckets Goldberg.

Russell and Randolph have been the offensive standouts for the Tar Heels this season. Co-captains Kalb and Tison have been dependable defensive performers, as has Burnstan.

Carolina will be looking for its fifth win of the current season. The Tar Heels own victories over three Virginia clubs plus Wednesday's triumph over the N. C. State Wolfpack. The Old Dominion victim of the locals were Virginia, Washington and Lee, and Roanoke College. Coach Moore's men have suffered three losses. They lost the season's opener to State, and were defeated by Duke and a fine Penn State eleven later in the season.

The local booters return here this coming Wednesday to close out their season against Duke, with hopes of avenging the earlier defeat at the hands of the Blue Devils.

Adolph Rupp Denies Rumors Of His Retiring This Year

Special to The Daily Tar Heel

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Adolph Rupp, whose coaching ability has kept Kentucky at the top of the nation's basketball teams, will be around for at least four more seasons, possibly more.

"I'll not retire until the man who said Kentucky can't play in the NCAA hands me the national championship trophy."

The veteran tutor told a civic club yesterday he wanted to spike rumors of his pending retirement — rumors whose origin he can't explain.

Rupp also stated that the causes that led to action against Kentucky by the NCAA and the Southeastern Conference "were completely beyond our control." The school has maintained that gifts to play were made without knowledge of university authorities.

Despite this, the SEC suspended the school in basketball this year and the NCAA council recommended probation, suggesting other NCAA members not play Kentucky.

Tar Heels Underdogs Again In Game At South Carolina

starting lineup, while injuries have forced him to juggle his defense. John Gaylord is slated to start at the right half back spot in place of Chal Port. Larry Parker at left half, and Bud Wallace at fullback complete the Tar Heel backfield.

On defense, Snavely will have a problem completing his secondary, as two safety men and a helfback are on the injured list. Leonard Bullock, who ran 69 yards from safety to score last week against Virginia, will miss today's game because of an infected ear, and Billy Williams is still lost to the Tar Heels. Doug Bruton was hurt in the Virginia contest, and will also have to be replaced.

Halfbacks Gene Wilson and Buddy Morrell, and fullback Hootie Johnson, take most of the Gamecock's running chores. Wilson is one of Gramling's favorite receivers, as is right end Clyde Bennett who is fourth in the Conference on receiving with 20 completions.

The South Carolina defense is shaken slightly by the loss of 240-pound guard Frank Mincevich who is out with a leg injury. Bob King, a 225-pounder, is a more than adequate replacement, however. The rest of the South Carolina team is in top condition.

The only basis for comparison of the two teams is their games against Virginia. Carolina played a good first half last week, but fell apart and bowed to the Cavaliers, 34-7. South Carolina scored three touchdowns in the last minute and 45 seconds to beat Virginia week-before-last, 21-14. The only Gamecock losses this year are to two powerful teams, Army and Duke.

Kickoff is at 2:00.

Orange Bowl To Scout 3 Clashes

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 14—The Orange Bowl scheduling committee will have scouts at three different games today in search of two worthy opponents for the January 1 tussle at Miami.

Scouts for the annual new year's classic will be watching Maryland meet Mississippi, Tennessee take on Florida, and the Duke clash with Wake Forest. Reports will also be received from indirect sources on Pitt and N. C. State, Alabama against Ga. Tech, Syracuse and Colgate, and Oklahoma versus Kansas.

Blue Devils Play Wake Forest Today In Big Four Scrap; State To Play Pitt

The twice-in-a-row beaten Blue Devils of Duke will try to break a four-year string of victories by Wake Forest when they meet the Deacons today in Baptist Hollow in a game whose winner will probably take the Big Four crown.

Not since 1947 has the usually favored Duke eleven been able to fill that roll successfully as year after year they heve been upended by the fighting Deacons.

Duke began the season with a team that was predicted to be one of the strongest in the South, but they have faded in their last two outings. Since their impressive win over Virginia three Saturdays ago they have lost successive engagaments to the powerful Georgia Tech wreckers and a surprisingly strong Navy team.

The question today will be whether Bill Murray, Duke coach, will be able to pull his forces together after the terrific psychological licking they have taken in the last two weeks.

In past experiences Murray has proved to be pretty good at keeping his team in the right frame of mind but two straight defeats to a team which was high in the national rankings may have done irreparable damage.

Outstanding feature of the two Blue Devil defeats has been the poor performances of Worth (A Million) Lutz, and the Duke following are beginning to wonder if he shouldn't be tabbed Worth (Less) Lutz instead.

After a very auspicious beginning when he was outstanding both on running and passing, his performances have not been up to par.

The Duke defense, which was one of the best in the country until the twin trimmings has also failed to continue its early-season performances. They surrendered four touchdowns to Georgia Tech and two to Navy.

Wake Forest has been pointing to this game all season and although the Deacons absorbed a licking last week from Texas Christian, they will be in high spirits for today's game.

Should the Deacons win this one they will only need a win over N. C. State to take their third Big Four championship in a row. Therefore, this is the big one as far as Wake Forest is concerned as State will probably offer little resistance.

The Wolfpack of N. C. State, revitalized by their upset victory over Washington and Lee last week run into a much stronger foe this week and it's almost a sure bet that they will lose.

State travels to Pittsburg to take on the University of Pittsburg, a team which may end up in the Sugar Bowl. Among other things this season, the Pitt Panthers were victors over a Notre Dame team which has turned out to be one of the best in the country.

CAROLINA CAROUSEL

Deenie Schoeppe

Trips to South Carolina and recoveries from last weekend seem to head this week's activities, along with petition signing and quite a few pinnings.

ATO Fletcher Green, Chapel Hill, has parted with the pin. Now wearing it is Peggy Henderson of Randolph Macon.

Tri Delt Luke Hill, Raleigh, was recently pinned to Bob Page, Phi Delt of Plainfield, N. J.

Phi Kappa Sigs are giving advance notice . . . they're going to christen that brand new bar of theirs right after the Duke float parade . . . the whole campus is invited to the ceremonies.

Sincerest get-well wishes are extended to the Sigma Nu's after their party at the Washington Duke last weekend.

Kappa Sigs recovered enough from their last weekend to go to the game at South Carolina.

Tri Delts had dinner and a party at the Legion Hut with the Sigma Chi's Thursday and will be entertained by the Zeta Psi chapter next Tuesday. Tri Delts and their dates enjoyed dinner and a party at the Legion Hut last night.

Coeds making their debut in Atanta recently were Mary Leigh Hendee, ADPi, and Flo Carter, Phi Mu.

PiKA's entertained campus housemothers last week at the house. Dinner was served and each guest was presented with a corsage.

SPE Beil Littlejohn, Morganton, is pinned to Janet Merrit, Chapel Hill girl.

Another recent pinning is that of Pi Lam Louis Bates, Greensboro to Rhoda Vener, Charlotte.

Wearing the Phi Delt pin of Pepper Stetson, West Chester, Pa., is Tri Delt pledge Will Frye from Hicko.ry.

Phi Delts will be making a trip to Harrisburg, Pa.to brother Art Friemuth's wedding this weekend.

Sigma Chi Johnny Motsinger, Winston - Salem, pinned Doan Randle from Orlando, Fla.

Deke's and Chi O's had much big party Thursday night with champagne and dinner at the country club.

All fraternities were invited to the Chi O study break last Wednesday. Chi O pledges entertained other sorority pledges Monday night with a dessert party.

KD's were hostess to a Girl Scout troop from Raleigh last weekend and had after-game refreshments for them. So you see the coeds couldn't have dated the Boy Scouts last weekend after all —the Girl Scouts were here.

ADPi's and Chi Psi's will work together on their "Beat Dook" floats and then have a party next Thursday night at Bob Smith's.

KA's have gone to S. C. where there'll be a small party with the chapter there.

Sigma Nu's will entertain the Tri Delts FROM DUKE Tuesday with a beer party at the house.

Tri Delt Mary Marshall Ragland, Raleigh, is wearing a diamond given her by Tom Cox, Darlington, S. C., formerly a Zete here.

ADPi pledges entertained other pledges with a circus party Wednesday.

Delta Sigma Pi Hal Rhodes, Raleigh, gave his pin to Dale Eatkins, Murphy.

Sigma Nu's celebrated their Founder's Day Sunday and entertained alumni Thursday night at the house.

Hate to say it but that's all. Happy Sadie Hawkins' Day and Beat Dook.

AK Psi Hears Charlotte Man

Carl G. McGraw, president of the Union National Bank of Charlotte recently spoke to the combined alumni homecoming and pledge banquet of Alpha Kappa Psi, national professional fraternity in business administration, held in the Chapel Hill Country Club.

He called for the nation's future businessment to accept the "challenge" of leadership and to overthrow the prophets of defeatism.

McCraw, selected as Alpha Kappa Psi's honorary member for 1952, was introduced by fraternity president L. R. Jordan as being a leader of his community with a lifelong record both in business and civic activities.

Immediately following the banquet a dance was held in honor of the 21 new pledges and their dates. The music was furnished by the Duke Cavaliers.

Jule Rousseau Named New Pika President

Jule Rousseau of North Wilkesboro has been elected the new president of Tau chapter of P Kappa Alpha.

dents' viewpoints at that time.

Also speaking for the continuance of the present five-day system were Ed Gross, Arch Fort, Al Bryant, son of the trustee, and Gilbert Marsh, presidentof YMCA. The Trustees heard wire recordings of comments made by students who work on weekends.

Young Bryant also appeared before the board asking that the present Book Exchange setup be investigated. He asked that the 10 per cent rebate be revived and that students be given better exchange values on their returned books.

The annual NROTC Freshman Dance will be given tomorrow night at 9 o'clock in the Naval Armory.

Thirty girls from the Women's College will be the guests of the Midshipmen at the dance.

Dr. Holmes Chairman Here For Sorbonne Celebration

Dr. Urban Tigner Holmes, Kenan professor of Romance philology, will serve as chairman of UNC's participation in the international celebration of the 700th anniversary of The Sorbonne of the University of Paris.

Carolina is one of three academic centers which have been invited to participate.

The celebration here will take the form of a ubscription luncheon in the Morehead Building in February. The second program will follow in Chicago in April, and the third in New York in December, 1953.

On the local committee in addition to Dr. Holmes are President Gordon Gray, Dr. William M. Dey and Dr. Jacques Hardre of the Department of Romance Languages, and Anthony F. Jenzano, manager of the Morehead Planetarium.

Dr. Holmes said the committee hoped "all those interested in medieval studies will join in making this an outstanding event."

Rare Books Will Be Exhibited In Trailer

Rare books and manuscripts dating back to 3500 B. C. will be shown Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in a trailer behind the Library,

The exhibit is given by the publishers of the Book of Knowledge, and is sponsored by the University Extension Division and the School of Library Science.

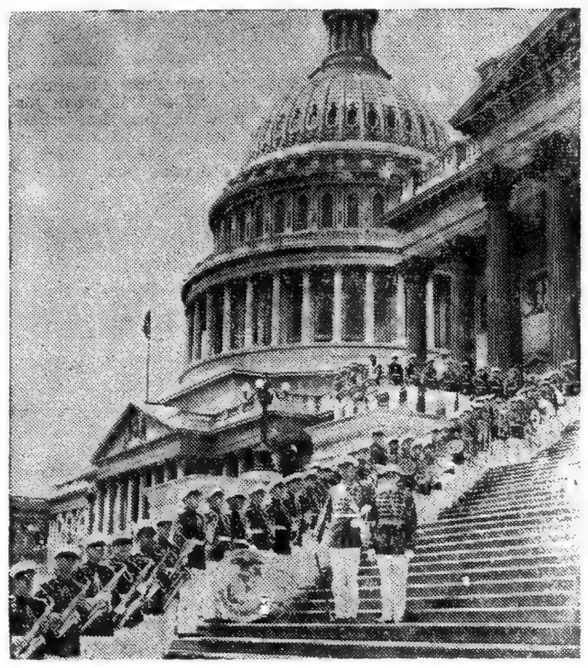
The exhibit will be open from 9 a. m. to noon and from 2 to 5 p. m. each day.

Slocum Thrilled By Marine Band

"One of the greatest thrills of my life came when I had the pleasure of conducting the United States Marine Band in Washington, D. C.," Earl Slocum, director of the University Band said yesterday.

The United States Marine Band will give a concert here in Memorial Hall Tuesday night at 8 p.m.

"I have nothing but the highest praise for the Marine Band," Slocum continued. "Their standard of performance is on the same high level as the finest symphony orchestra."



The program by the 154-year-old organization will consist of the overture from "Le Roi d'Ys" by Edouard Lalo; "Fetes" by Claude Debussy; "Marche Troyenne" from "The Taking of Troy" by Hector Berlioz; "Annie Laurie" by Arthur Pryor; "Irish Rhapsody" by A. Francis Pinto; selections from "The King and I" by Richard Rodgers and "The Lord's Last Supper."

The Marine Band has several "firsts" on its record. It was the first official band to represent the U. S. Military services, the first band to broadcast over radio and the first military band to give a series of television concerts.

Founded in 1789 by an act of important official functions at the nation's Capitol. It has played for every inauguration since Thomas Jefferson's.

Social Forum At WC Slated For Nov. 21

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

GREENSBORO, Nov. 14—Columbia, Princeton, and Rochester universities will provide the key speakers for the sixth annual Harriet Elliot Social Science Forum at Woman's College on November 21.

"Tensions in the Middle East" is the theme for the forum, condensed this year to a one-day event.

The forum will open at 10 a.m. with an introduction by Chancellor Edward K. Graham. 'Conflicts within the Middle East" will be the morning session topic.

Round table discussions are scheduled for 3 o'clock in the afternoon, during which time the forum speakers will conduct informal and individual discussions. The group will reconvene at 8 p.m. for the final session, the "Middle East and the West."

The speakers include Dr. Cornelis Willem de Kiewiet, president of Rochester university, who will act as moderator; Jacob C. Hurewitz, professor of government in the Near and Middle East Studies Program at Columbia University School of International Affairs; and Dr. T. Guyler Young, Professor of Persian language and history at Princeton.

Wood Artist To Talk Here

Miss Clare Leighton, wood engraving artist and author, will speak at 3:45 p. m. Thursday at the Bull's Head Bookshop tea.

The public may atend the talk, which will be held in the Assembly Room of the Library.

Miss Leighton will talk about the new Wedgewood plates that are decorated with her engravings of New England scenes.

One of the pupils of the English engraver and religious sculptor Eric Gill, Miss Leighton has visited Chapel Hill before to find out about the native crafts and customs of this area. She now lives in Woodbury, Conn.

Polio Victim Mother Of Seven-Pound Boy

The first birth at the new North Carolina Memorial Hospital was reported Thursday. The child, a boy, is the son of a polio victim.

Hospital authorities reported Mrs. Loren G. MacKinney, wife of a hospital pediatrician, gave birth to a seven-pound, nine ounce boy at 1:23 a. m. The baby appeared to be normal.

Mrs. MacKinney, formerly of Buffalo, N. Y., was stricken with polio Aug. 20 while she and her husband were isiting his parents here.

New Courses In Philosophy To Be Offered

Two new Pilosophy courses are to be offered in the Winter quarter.

Philosophy 57, under Professor Cavarnos, takes up the Medieval philosophy of the West with special attention to St. Augustine and St. Thomas Aquinas, and the great but little known Christian philosophers of Byzantium.

This course is perhaps somewhat unique in that it deals with Byzantine philosophy.

Philosophy 129, which will be taught by Professor Emery, is titled The Development of American Philosophy. The gradual emergence of systematic American philosophy from its matrix in earlier theology, social and literary thought. Chief emphasis on the late nienteenth century.

This course will be given for the first time in the Winter quarter, not the Spring quarter as the catalogue states.

Dr. Gillin Will Talk To Cosmopolitan Club

Dr. John Gillin, world famous authority on Latin America, will be the guest speaker of the Cosmopolitan Club tomorrow afternoon in the Rendezvous Room of Graham Memorial at 4 o'clock.

Gillin will discuss the cultural aspects of South America. Movies will be shown of Lima, Peru, where Gillin was with the American Embassy during the last war. Students from Latin America will furnish music for the program.

Members of the club and students are invited to attend.

Alert Alarm To Sound Here Monday At 8

A Civil Defense alter alarm will be sounded at 8 p. m. Monday at the Town Hal.

The alarm is to acquaint Chapel Hillians with the alert and will be given in a series of blasts which are easily distinguished from the fire alarm, officials said.

Study Council Offers Awards For Sciences

$6,000 Grants Are Available; Deadline Dec. 10

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

RAHWAY, N. J., Nov. 15—The National Research Council, Washington, D. C., today announced the availability of the Merck Senior Postdoctoral Fellowships in the Natural Sciences for 1953- 54.

All fields of physics, chemistry, and biology, plus the preclinical medical sciences, are open to applicants for Merck Fellowships.

These fellowships carry stipends of $6,000 and traveling expenses, and are offered to citizens of the United States with a Ph.D. equivalent in physics, chemistry, or biology. Candidates must also have at least three years of postdoctoral professional experience in their major field, only one of which may have been fellowship work.

Applications filed with the Council must be postmarked on or before December 10, 1952.

The fellowships will be awarded in the late winter or early spring, with the tenure of the one-year appointments beginning at any approved date between July 1 and October 1, 1953. A fellow may study abroad only when his type of proposed training can be obtained more effectively in a selected foreign institution, and as a rule he is expected to work in an institution other than that at which he had most of his academic training.

Further information and application blanks may be obtained from the Fellowship Office, National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Avenue, Washington 25, D. C.

Two Classes Set To Hear Asirvatham

Dr. Eddy Asirvatham, former head of the Department of Political Science and Public Administration of the University of Madras, India, will speak in two classes tomorrow to which the public is invited.

"India Since Her Freedom" will be his subject at 9 o'clock in Room 210 Caldwell where he will address Dr. Alexander Heard's class and at 10 o'clock he will speak to Dwight Ryne's class in Room 111 Saunders on "The United Nations and World Community".

At 1 o'clock Dr. Asirvatham is to speak to a luncheon meeting of the staff of the Institute of Research for the Social Sciences. He is also scheduled to speak Sunday morning at Duke Chapel at 11 o'clock.

Dr. Asirvatham's visit to the University is sponsored by the Inter-Faith Council with the cooperation of the Political Science Department. He is the second in a series of seven prominent speakers coming here this year, under the sponsorship of the council and other academic departments.

Get $5,500

Three University professors have been awarded $5,500 grants each by the Ford Foundation for research in the field of human behavior.

They are Dean Thomas Carroll of the Business Administration School, Dr. Alexander Heard of the Political Science Department and Dr. Daniel O. Price of the Sociology Department.

The announcement was made yesterday.

Coeds Get Big Chance: Free Males

Girls, your opportunity is here! Now the time to get your man.

Coeds are supposed to do all the date-making Friday, in keeping with the spirit of Sadie Hawkins Day at the University, Ann Bell, Sadie Hawkins Day committee co-chairman, said yesterday. This includes the dance at 8 p.m. in the Naval Armory.

Registration for the Sadie Hawkins race Friday afternoon will be held in the morning at the YMCA. Dogpatch characters will be present for the registration, and corncob pipes and other Dogpatch items will be sold.

The SUAB and the YMCA Recreation Committee, which are sponsoring Sadie Hawkins Day, will enter a Sadie Hawkins float in the "Beat Dook" parade Friday afternoon. Following the parade, the race will be run in front of South Building.

A mass wedding ceremony will be performed at the dance Friday night. The committee will also present a "Dogpatch style floor show" including clogging, a skit, and singing by a quartet.

Decorations will carry out the Dogpatch theme, Miss Bell said. The committee will award a prize for the best Dogpatch costume and for the best Daisy Mae and Li'l Abner. However, costumes are not compulsory for the dance, she said.

Success Comes After Death

It's Hard, Davies Says, To Be Young

By Sally Schindel

"A belief in one God, no Devil and 16 ounces in a pound — that's a definition of Unitarianism few people have heard before."

So said Dr. Arthur Powell Davies, pastor of the All Soul's Unitarian Church in Washington, who spoke recently before a sparse audience in Hill Hall. His subject was "The Dangers of Preaching from the Bible."

But the slight, casually dressed man, who calls himself a "theological radical" had more to say about his faith than that. In a more concrete explanation during an informal interview following his talk, 50-year-old Davies stated:

"Unitarianism is based upon the individual feeling of belief which is the right of the individual to form his own opinions and revise them as his mind grows. While revering Jesus and the great prophets the Unitarian follows truth wherever it may lead."

As to what is truth, Davies explained that a person can't look at one thing and say, "This is it, brother—this is truth," because each individual may have a different set of "truths." That is why, the theologian went on, the Unitarian Church, called the "creedless church" because it believes in no dogmas, advocates questions, not answers in solving problems.

Dr. Davies proudly claims that he is "Welsh," having been raised in Birkenhead, England on his grandfather's farm where he spent a robust youth riding a bull calf at two and later wearing out five motorcycles.

In 1925 he was graduated from London University's Richmond College of Divinity, and for three years he was a Methodist minister in London. Three years later he was in the United States preaching in Maine, and by 1933 had become a "radical."

Why is he known as a "radical?" Dr. Davies reasoned that it was because he openly rebels against any political or clerical form which he believes is fundamentally empty.

Dr. Davies advised students to settle difficulties by giving "honest, realistic thinking to the problems until they are understood; and resolution and fortitude until they are solved. I can offer you no more realistic advice because the world is full of danger — it's hard to be young."

Not only is Dr. Davies noted in the religious field through preaching, but he is known as the author of such books as "American Destiny" and "Unrepentant Liberal." Active in current affairs (a believer that one cannot have religion without politics), he has served as chairman of the Emergency Control on Civilian Control of Atomic Energy; president of Food for Freedom; Board of Directors, Federal Union, and Executive Committee, National Committee, National Committee on Atomic Information.

Who can belong to the Unitarian Church? This faith, which boasts such members as Thomas Jefferson, says Davies, welcomes even those who do not believe in a Supreme Being — one who is an atheist. However, he corrected himself, it is impossible to be an atheist, although one can be agnostic. To be an atheist, one would have to close his mind to any new information that may enlighten him, he explained.

However radical the Unitarian may be, he doesn't discount the Bible altogether and especially recommended the newest edition just released as being more accurate than the King James' version.

In looking over the doctor's past record and imagining what his future will be, it would be helpful to know the secret of his success. In answer to that question, he peered humorously through his glasses and replied he couldn't say he was a success —yet. "You should never never say a man's successful until he's dead."

Son Of Cripps Visiting Here

Tobias R. Weaver, head of the Information and General Branch of the Ministry of Education England, and adopted son of the late Sir Stafford Cripps, is spending several days at the University.

He has headed the United Kingdom delegation for the past three years to the UNESCO conferences in Geneva and was elected chairman in 1950.

Here on a three-month survey of American education, Weaver said his main interest is discovering who really controls education in this country.

AF Chooses 19 Coeds As Unit Beauties

Thursday night a board composed of Arnold Air Society officers and squadron representatives chose 19 girls out of 70 nominated by various women's organizations on campus to act as sponsors of the Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps.

These girls will be the first members of the newly formed unit at the University.

NEWS IN BRIEF

TOKYO — Forty-four servicemen, 37 of them U.S. Army soldiers returning from rest leave in Japan, were killed when an Air Force C-119 "Flying Boxcar" crashed into a mountain near Seoul, the Far East Air Forces announced yesterday. The twin-engined plane rammed into Mount Yebong, a 2,000-foot peak only a few minutes away from its destination, an airport in the Seoul area. An Army spokesman said the passengers were all American Army men who were returning to Korea after a five-day rest and rehabilitation leave in Japan. Names of the dead were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

SEOUL—United Nations infantrymen threw Chinese Reds from vital Sniper Ridge in a bloody eight-hour fight yesterday and farther west recaptured Jackson Heights guarding the Chorwon Valley invasion route to Seoul. It was the 15th time in a month of fierce fighting that Allied troops have knocked Chinese Reds from Sniper Ridge north of Kumhwa on the central front. The victorious South Koreans vanquished their foes with bayonets, knives and fists.

WASHINGTON—Official confirmation of history's first H-bomb explosion is expected shortly—perhaps by President Truman early next week, a high source suggested yesterday, if the Atomic Energy Commission doesn't do it first. This source suggested that Mr. Truman may make his Tuesday meeting with President-elect Eisenhower the occasion for the anticipated announcement. Many servicemen involved in this fall's atomic test at the Eniwetok Proving Ground in the Pacific already have reported in letters home that an H-bomb was detonated on about Nov. 1. So far officials have refused to comment on this.

Tar Heels End Losing Streak Against Birds

Flo Worrell Star Of Hard Fought Seesaw Contest

By Tom Peacock

DAILY TAR HEEL Asst. Sports Editor

COLUMBIA STADIUM, COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 15 — The University of North Carolina football team unleased an offense that had been missing all season to whip South Carolina, 27-19, here today before 20,000 homecoming fans.

Flo Worrell, playing regularly for the varsity for the first time this year, scored twice to pace the Tar Heels. Freshman quarterback Marshall Newman and his substitute, Charlie Motta, kept the Gamecocks on the defensive most of the afternoon, concentrating on a fast ground game paced by Worrell and Larry Parker.

Parker scored for Carolina, and a pass from Newman to end Benny Walser accounted for the other Tar Heel score. Tom Adler converted three times before missing on his last try.

Quarterbacks Johnny Gramling and Dick Balka ran hot and cold for South Carolina, and a determined second half Carolina defense stopped the Gamecock passing game. South Carolina's defense, ranked fourth in the nation, couldn't hold Worrell and company, and finally fell apart in the fourth quarter.

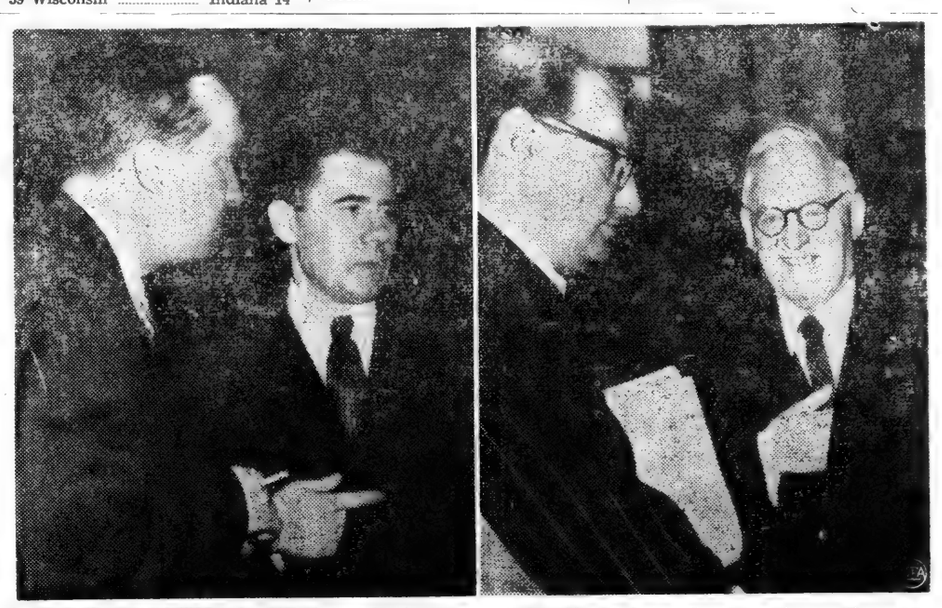
South Carolina held a 13-7 first half lead, with Gramling's passing and left half Gene Wilson's running dominating the play. Wilson scored first for the Gamecocks to put them in the lead before two minutes had passed. South Carolina's other scores came on a Gramling to end Clyde Bennett pass and a one inch linebuck by fullback Bill Wohrman.

The Tar Heels came back in the second half to score in the first minute, and take a 14-13 lead that they never relinquished. South Carolina could score only once more, and never moved the ball on a sustained drive after the second quarter.

South Carolina stunned the Tar Heels by recovering a fumble by Carolina fullback Bull Davidson on the second play of the game and going on to score in two quick plays.

Davidson cracked to the North Carolina 37 and fumbled. Gamecock co-captain John Latorre recovering for South Carolina. Quarterback Johnny Gramling faded from there and hit Clyde Bennett on the Carolina 7. Gramling then handed off to left half Gene Wilson who raced around right end to the end zone.

Dick Kokornick blocked Jim Jarrett's conversion attempt, and South Carolina jumped into a 6-0 lead with 1:35 gone in the first quarter.



The Tar Heels came roaring back with a sustained drive that pierced the vaunted Gamecock defense to the 11 before petering out. Quarterback Marshall New-

Letter Edged In Red

(Editor's Note: This commentary, based on an editorial published last year in the Brevard College CLARION, was penned by Tom Neal, Jr., former editor of the Brevard paper, and now a student of journalism at the University.)

Is it, O man, with such discordant noises,
With such accursed instruments as these,
Thou drownest Nature's sweet and kindly voices,
And jarrest the celestial harmonies?"
—Longfellow

FIGHTER FOR PEACE it is called—this alleged student publication from Chapel Hill, home of our state-supported university. The idea of a fighter for peace sounds promising, doesn't it? "Peace will conquer war" is its motto. If the purpose of the paper were carried out we might issue praise.

But here's the rub! Footing the final page is this modest admission: "Published by Student Section, Carolina District, Communist Party, U.S.A. . . . Chapel Hill, North Carolina." And the propaganda sheet has no masthead. Unlikely that it should. Hiding behind the pious slogan of "Peace will conquer war," the editor is one Junius Scales—and we know nothing more of the Communist organ at Chapel Hill.

Mr. Scales uses the simple vernacular in presenting his own (not so-called by him) "foreign ideas." He sets himself up as an American, but joins the Commies in saying that he is "opposed to this country's illegal intervention in Korea . . . to colonial wars against the colored peoples of Indonesia, Indo-China and Malaya." His bond paper has it recorded that Scales openly suggests a hatred for our capitalistic system of democracy. This is his type of patriotism and his fight for peace.

A well-read newspaper woman from New York — now studying in one of the small North Carolina colleges has received copies of FIGHTER FOR PEACE. Although she claims to have somewhat fewer inhibitions concerning the Negro problem, she writes: "Southerners . . . do . . . feel the weight of the Negro problem. There are also, however, few Southerners who cannot think of far superior methods of solving it than those advocated by the Communist party, U.S.A."

Miss Hansen concludes her interpretation of the Scale faux-pas . . . "Freedom of the press is one of the inalienable rights of every person or group in the United States. An example of this same freedom is the right to select the material which we read. The FIGHTER FOR PEACE was published in free America, with every right afforded any other publication of this country. It is up to the mentally alert citizens of today, however, to distinguish between this subversive literature and that literature written to inform rather than (to) misinform."

Incidentally, the four page "yellow" sheet is actually published on white paper . . . with black ink! Red ink would be apropos not only for ushering in the Christmas season, but for other obvious purposes.

Yes—inconsistent! But blinded by its own use of "such accursed instruments as these" the lobster clan can hardly see its errors.

Propaganda SP

It is a little hard to think about the coming campus elections after all of our energies have been spent for the past weeks on the national election, but on Tuesday a very important mid-year election is going to be held and it is the duty of all of us to turn our attention to that subject.

Taking the legislative election first I would like to make several observations concerning the 38 seats which are to be elected to this body. The first observation is that the Legislature over the past years has neglected a constructive program for the campus. The SP has never held a majority in this body and I honestly feel it is about time that we get that chance. We continually come up with programs but have been unable to carry them out for the most part in our minority role. In this day and time when the voters are giving the outsiders a chance I ask that another group of outsiders be given a chance.

The next vastly important decision to be made at the polls is in regard to the Student Council seats. The Student Party has never put three finer candidates up for this body than they did when they put up Lew Southern, Herb Cohn, and Wanda Philpott. Student Council would be aided immeasurably by these three people whose activities to date have shown them superior among their fellow students.

Continuing my endorsement of the Student Party slate I would like to mention in passing that the class officers, both from the freshmen and Junior class are an energetic group who I feel deserve the backing of the students.

Now I would never ask the student body to back candidates because they are student party unless the student party deserved to win. In past years the Student Party has presented a program of constructive action for the campus and continues this year to be the only party with a program and the only party consisting of all the students and existing for all the students. I have always felt that backing the Student Party meant backing a good program, a positive approach, and a denial of opportunity to small groups to control all phases of campus life.

Before I leave the decision of the coming election in your hands I would like to add a note of encouragement to the campaign of Walt Dear for editor of THE DAILY TAR HEEL. He has done a good job the past two years on the paper and would add zest and interest to its pages. He is the only candidate who I could back and feel that party politics would not be involved in THE DAILY TAR HEEL. We must have a fair-minded, non-partisan person in control and that person is Walt. Roberts as past chairman of the University Party has exhibited a great deal of partisanship which necessarily goes with such an office. But above all he has shown a lack of decency that I feel even partisan party leaders should have. Finally, I find it amusing that those who yelled most about cliques in government last year are now forming one of their own. For the election of Beta Biff will mean the fourth top position held by the Beta fraternity. Already the president of the student body, the chairman of the consolidated university student council, and chairman of the interfraternity court are related in those bonds.

The above would not stop me, even though it is appaling, if I felt Biff could do the job, but his past does not point that way, and Walt Dear can point to a past of devotion to the DTH in an entirely non political vain.

Voters, however you vote on Tuesday, show an interest in your local self-governing community by participation. I hope that that participation will show your faith in the SP which tries to show its faith in you.

Bill C. Brown — Tar On My Heels

Why has the Executive Board of the Trustees suddenly reversed its previous decision about Saturday classes at Carolina?

The conditions have not changed from those which were evident, and which the same Board pointed out, last year when the question came up.

The only real reason put forth for Saturday classes is that students form a mass exodus from Chapel Hill on weekends. Any of the readers of Tar On My Heels last year know that was one of my pet peeves. It still is, but Saturday classes are not the answer.

Saturday classes are not the answer for more than one reason, but, for one, let me appeal to the judgement of the Trustees with this statement: You can't force people to do a thing. You can't force students to stay in Chapel Hill on weekends if they are set against it.

Those determined to go home, will. If they are not allowed to go on Friday, they will leave on Saturday. Trustees of an educational unit such as UNC should realize force is not the answer; education is.

There are other arguments against Saturday classes. There are those that work on weekends. Sure, they could stay at Carolina on weekends and work at Lenoir, but at Lenoir they can earn only their food. The basis at Lenoir is unfair, but leaving that for a later issue, I wish to pose the question regarding what those students who must earn additional money to pay their tuition and other fees at UNC are going to do?

Are the Trustees willing to make available that many additional scholarships?

There are other students who go home for a multiplicity of reasons. Is it necessary that they be forced to stay here to decorate the campus for the personal satisfaction of the Trustees when they ride through?

I am not reversing my personal stands regarding students who go home to "mama" every weekend. I am attacking the means the Trustees are using to accomplish a mutual end. Force never solved any problem for long. If the Trustees of Carolina Carolina can't properly put education to work here to keep students at Carolina, they they are failing in one important part of their job. The institution of Saturday classes is only an admission that they have failed.

This is not Duke. Nor is it State or W. C. Sure those institutions have Saturday classes. Different conditions exist at our richer rival, Duke. Likewise, different conditions exist at Carolina than exist at State or W. C. I contend we are actually doing more work under the quarter system with Saturday classes than they are doing with the Semester system with Saturday classes.

The Executive Board turned back the clock of education when they substituted force for education.

Express Yourself

Editor:

In your edition of November 6 you printed a letter from one Bill Scarborough, refuting statements made by John Sanders in a previous edition, attacking Senator Joseph McCarthy. By some freak of nomenclature my name is identical with that of Mr. Scarborough, and as a result of the appearance of his letter in your columns, a number of my acquaintances have misconstrued the letter and sentiments therein to be mine. In order that Mr. Scarborough may be properly recognized as the originator of his argument, and in order that I may be disconnected from the viewpoint he holds, I wish to make known my own opinion concerning the McCarthy controversy.

The furore over Senator McCarthy's actions was initially drawn along partisan lines; thus has it remained, intensified by the imminence of the presidential election. Both factions have failed to realize the gravity of his charges, and have failed to give them serious or objective consideration; therefore, there is no basis for either the unrestrained vituperation of Mr. Sanders or the narrow and inconclusively documented defense of Mr. Scarborough. As an arch-conservative, I do not approve the cud-chewing complacency with which the present administration regards Communist interlopers in high government. From a personal observation of his conduct, in which I attempted to isolate the man from his reputation, I do not approve of Senator McCarthy. His demeanor is not that of the courageous public servant dedicated to the performance of his office regardless of personal loss.

I do not intend an affirmation or a repudiation of either Mr. Sanders of Mr. Scarborough by the above statement. It is my sole desire to reestablish myself as a separate entity from the Bill Scarborough who authored the letter in the Nov. 6 issue of THE DAILY TAR HEEL.

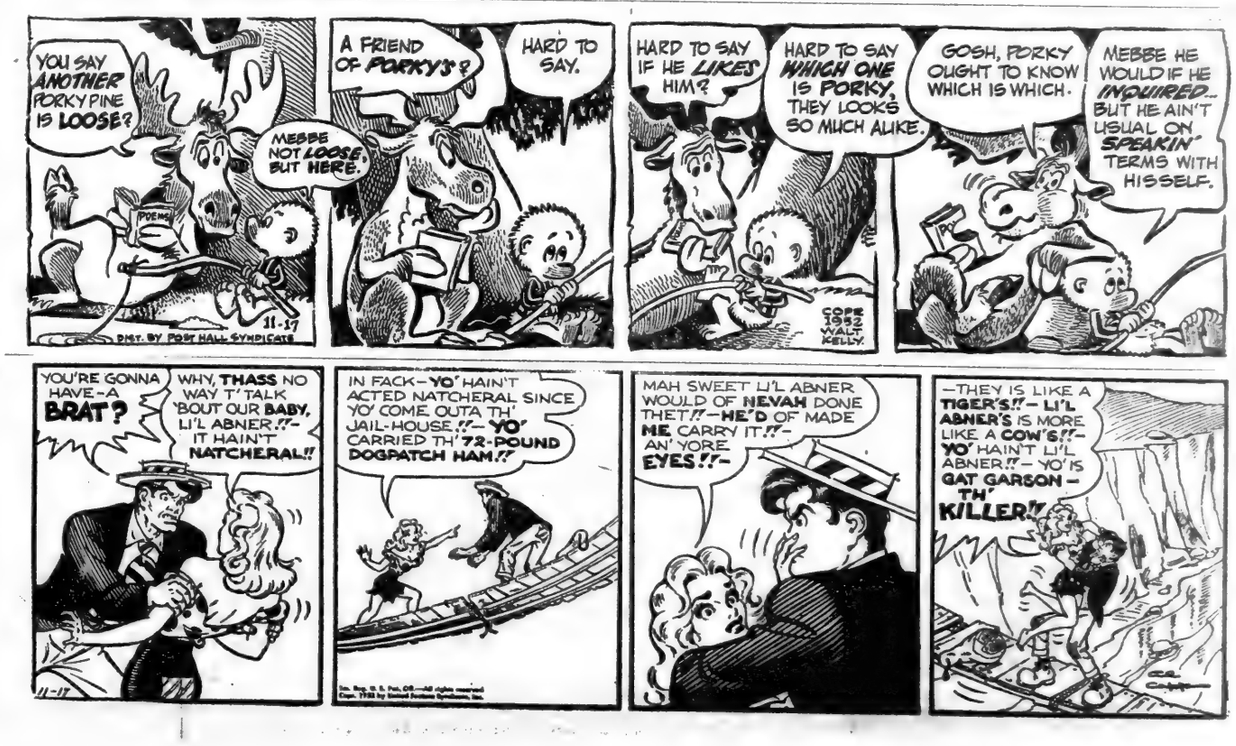
Propaganda UP

Fall elections will be held Tuesday and much is at stake in this campaign. You, the students, represented by an active University Party have many investments at stake. Last spring you saw fit to accept a UP platform which was put into effect by new faces around Graham Memorial and you have already received many benefits from this platform. Many more points are near completion but if the opposition party gains in this election the efforts of your University Party will be blocked.

Last spring the University Party promised to see that the Tarnation, our traditional humor magazine, would be reestablished. Two short weeks after the election, a Tarnation committee began work on the reestablishment of the magazine. Publication permission was cleared through the administration and before the end of the spring quarter plans had been completed for the new Tarnation. You now have the Tarnation again, thanks to your UP.

The University Party promised to resist removal of students from Vance - Battle - Pettigrew and Steele dormitories and since the spring election nothing more has been done by your administration to remove the students from VBP and Steele. Your UP was at work again.



Early this year your University Party presented a plan for redistricting of men's dormitory districts and over strong Student Party opposition the bill was passed; consequently, you have closer representation in Student Legislature. The opposition party offered a plan last year to cut the number of representatives in the legislature. The UP opposed and defeated this and again insured you of better representation.

The UP promised that every dormitory would soon have better social rooms. Today every dorm on campus except one enjoys greatly improved social room facilities. Last year only two dorms had social rooms.

It goes without saying that the UP is strongly opposing Saturday classes and the present Student Government administration is carrying the fight to the trustees in representation of you.

More important than what has been done is what will be done if the UP keeps your support next Tuesday.

Plans are now almost complete for the establishment of a check cashing service in Lenoir Hall. An infirmary dispensary at Woollen Gym to take care of injuries too minor for infirmary treatment will be set up soon. Plans are nearly completed for this also. A Student committee is presently investigating the UNC Book Exchange here on campus.

Tar Heels Taste Victory

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 15—'Mid fumbles and offside penalties Carolina finally got its offense rolling here this afternoon and found out that there's nothing like winning a football game. The Tar Heels, 14-point underdogs at game time, minced the South Carolina line, ranked fourth in the nation before today on rushing defense, for four touchdowns, by far the most productive effort of the season.

This first victory of the year was especially sweet in that it disclosed better things to come. The brunt of the Carolina offense fell on the shoulders of freshmen and sophomores. In fact, the big show of the day was freshman Flo Worrell, a former junior varsity star, who made his first offensive effort for the varsity in this game today.

Worrell scored two touchdowns, one of them on a double reverse which carried 50 yards. In addition to that he made some of the most exciting field running a Carolina back has shown since the days of you know who. He led both teams in the individual statistics with a personal mark of 120 yards, well over the Carolina team running average for the year.

Newman Runs And Passes

Marshall Newman, the freshman quarterback who heretofore had stuck to passing and sending his backs through the center of the line, found out that he himself could run the ball. He looked much better on the option play today and showed a good bit of speed in running—something which he had successfully kept concealed until today's jubilee. He set up our first touchdown when with the ball on the 50-yard-line he faded to pass, saw daylight between a host of Gamecock rushers, and dashed 40 yards to the SC 10-yard-line. He then had Larry Parker hit for five. Worrell tried the center again but failed to gain—one of his few misses of the day. The end of the quarter caused the ball to be moved to the other end of the field, but on the first play of the second period Parker took a hand-off and skirted the right end and slid into the end zone, safely inside the red flag.

There were others of coach Carl Snavely's band of young'uns who contributed to this rebirth of football freedom. George Wallin, another Jayvee convert, played a good game on offense and defense. His powerful running looked most impressive to press box observers. Larry Parker made his best showing of the season, too, running with the same form that carried him to great high school honors two years ago. His slippery fingers held his gaining down, but outside of his fumbling, his performance was more than creditable.

Pass Defense Still Weak

But all in all it was a team performance that brought this first victory in 12 straight games. Not since October last year, when we beat these same Gamecocks, had we won a game. Our pass defense still looked weak—pitifully weak at times—and South Carolina quarterbacks Johnny Gramling and Dick Balka capitalized to spark the Gamecock offense.

The first SC score was set up on a long pass from Gramling to end Clyde Bennett, and their second came on a pass from Gramling to Bennett again. But despite this weakness, the Carolina defenders seemed to come up with the ball when they had to. When the South Carolina passers started frantically filling the air in the closing minutes the defensive backs did their finest job. Safetyman Albert Long grabbed one on the two-yard line in that final flurry and ran it back 25 yards to end the South Carolina threat.

It looked for a while that we were going through another game just like the other ones. We fumbled on our second play from scrimmage, one of our seven bobbles of the day, and they reman alternated the running of back Larry Parker and John Gaylord with short jump passes to drive to the 11-yard line of South Carolina in nine plays after the kickoff.

With fourth down and three yards to go for a first, Newman handed off to Parker who was thrown back to the 20 to stop the threat.

Both teams were bothered by fumbles, the ball changing hands three more times through bad ball handling in the first quarter.

Carolina went into the lead shortly after the start of the second period. South Carolina back Bobby Drawdy fumbled on the Tar Heel 35-yard-line after making a first down, and safety Al Long recovered for North Carolina.

The Gamecock defense stopped the Tar Heels after they made a first down on the 50. Newman faded to pass on third down, couldn't find a receiver, and decided to run, dodging two men while racing to the South Carolina 10-yard line.

Parker bucked to the five, and then one play later took a hand-off and raced around right end to tie the score at 6-6. Adler converted to give the Tar Heels a 7-6 lead.

Carolina began to move after taking a punt, but lost the ball when Parker fumbled on the Gamecock 35-yard line.

Wilson and Bud Morrell of South Carolina cracked to the Carolina 40 for first downs, and then Gramling faded and threw to Morrell on the Tar Heel 21. Morrell was sitting on the ground.

But the pass nailed him to the spot on the next play. Gramling threw to Clyde Bennett in the end zone for the score, giving South Carolina a 12-7 lead. Jim Jarrett converted and South Carolina led 13-7 with 5:30 left in the second period.

The Gamecocks threatened to score again with one minute left in the half. Mike Coskey and Gramling alternated at running and passing to give South Carolina a first down on the 16, but Carolina safetyman Sonny Ridenhour stopped the threat by intercepting a pass on the Tar Heel 10-yard line. Newman ran the clock out, and the half ended, 13-7, South Carolina.

North Carolina grabbed its commanding lead before a minute had passed in the third period. The Tar Heel line recovered a Gramling fumble on the second play on the South Carolina 28-yard line. Parker crashed to the 24 and then Worrell, running from right half in place of John Gaylord, carried three men to the 5. Worrell bucked over tackle on the next play for the score, and Adler converted to give North Carolina a 14-13 lead.

South Carolina made three quick first downs after taking the kickoff, and threatened to stage a drive, but Junior Seawell intercepted a pass for Carolina on the 45 and set up the deciding Tar Heel touchdown.

Newman completed his third jump pass, this time to right end Benny Walser, who took the ball on the 50 and raced to the South Carolina 25-yard line. Parker was stopped a half-yard short of a first down on the 15, but Newman bucked twice on the quarterback sneak to make it.

Worrell was thrown to the 20, and then Newman pitched out to Connie Gravitte on the right. Gravitte ran, stopped, spotted Walser in the end zone, and fired a touchdown pass.

Adler's conversion increased the lead to 21-13.

South Carolina made its last bid just before the end of the third quarter. The Gamecocks were forced to punt after the kickoff, and Ridenhour was dropped on the Carolina 10. Two plays later, Parker fumbled, and Bill Earley recovered for the Gamecocks on the 10.

North Carolina's line almost held, but Wohrman got a first down on the one-inch line, and then went over for the score on the next play. Jarrett converted, and the Tar Heels' lead was cut to 21-19 at the beginning of the fourth quarter.

After an exchange of punts, Carolina took the ball on its 40. Charlie Motta went in to direct the Tar Heel split-T and handed off to Gravitte on the first play for a first down on the 48-yard line of South Carolina.

Motta pitched out to Worrell who dashed into the end zone. George Wallen threw the key block on the play. Adler missed his first conversion of the day.

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Nov. 15—Carolina's soccer eleven dropped a 2-1 decision to the University of Maryland team here this afternoon in a game played in a steady downpour and a sea of mud. Despite the imperfect weather conditions, both teams played with exceptional skill.

Maryland scored first in the opening quarter but Carolina tied the score in the second quarter on Gerry Russell's goal. The winning marker for Maryland came in the third quarter.

The Tar Heels close their season this coming Wednesday when they meet Duke in Chapel Hill.

What happened to the old rah rah spirit?

IT WENT OUT WITH RACCOON COATS and rumble seats. And we say good riddance.

Today's college man doesn't die a thousand deaths when the school loses the big game. And his clothes are no longer flashy, fancy and gaudy.

For his apparel, he looks to Manhattan® to reflect his quiet, self-assured manner . . . his insistence on quality, comfort and casualness.

Like this button-down Oxford with just the proper roll to the collar. Or this fine white piqué with an eyelet tab collar with just the right degree of difference.

We understand the modern college man. We concentrate our efforts, not on fads, but on making a better shirt. Ask for Manhattan . . . and you'll see how true this is.

Baptist

A quintet of Carolina BSU members journeyed to Camp Butner Youth Center Friday night to engage the sharp-shooting lads there in an early basketball game. The initial impetus for the contest came last Sunday night when 15 Camp Butner youths were guests of the BSU at the regular Baptist Supper Forum. Although the BSU cagers had held no practice sessions prior to the game, they turned in a creditable performance.

For the past two Sunday mornings attendance at Sunday School has decreased considerably. Dr. Epps is continuing his enlightening interpretation of II Isiah, and those students who are attending his class are finding the Sunday morning discussions most beneficial. The class meets this morning at 9:45 a.m.

The supper forum program tonight will be directed by Edlyn Freerks, graduate student in economics. The program which will follow the 6 o'clock supper, will include worship through hymns, litany and scripture.

Next Sunday a social gathering at the church will follow the Duke-Carolina game.

Christian Science

"Mortals and Immortals" is the topic of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches today. Church services and Sunday School classes of the local group are held each Sunday at 11 a.m. in New West.

Congregational-Christian

After enumerating and discussing the various ideas of God and their applications to a vital Christian faith, the United Student Fellowship today will take up a discussion of "What Can We Believe About God?"

Several representatives of the local USF are in Greensboro today attending the state meeting of the United Student Fellowship meeting which opened yesterday.

The sermon at the Congregational-Christian church this morning is entitled "Do You Want To Find God?"

Religious Society of Friends

The Quakers will meet this morning in Graham Memorial at 11 o'clock for their service. This morning Isabelle Ryan, leader, will discuss "Friends and Good Works" — how Quakers regard humanitarian service.

Roman Catholic

The meeting of the Newman Club has been announced for 5:15 p.m. at Lenoir Hall. Members of the group are requested to go through the regular cafeteria line and to meet on second floor Lenoir for a supper-discussion session.

Five members of the Newman Club are attending the Jubilee Convention of the Southeastern Province of the Newman Club, at Winthrop College (Rock Hill, S. C.) this weekend.

Masses each Sunday are observed at 8 a.m. and 9:30 a.m. in Gerrard Hall.

Methodist

A dramatic presentation by transcription of the life of Andy Bershak, a former Carolina football player, will highlight the evening program at Wesley Foundation tonight. Andy suffered from an incurable disease and knowing that he had only one year to live, he wanted to make it count. He did make it count for himself and for others.

The weekly Wesley Foundation schedule is as follows: Thursday, 5:45 p.m., vespers; Thursday, 8 p.m., Young Adults; Friday, 7:30 p.m., "Fireside" meeting; Sunday, 9:45, cocoa and donuts; 10 a.m., Wesley class, Joel Savell—teacher; 10 a.m., Young Adult class, Dr. Frank Hamft, teacher; 5:30 p.m., Fun and Fellowship and 6 o'clock Supper and program.

CPU

The CPU Roundtable discussion today will be prisoner of war repatriation. The CPU meets at 8 p.m. in the Grail Room, Graham Memorial.

Elections Board

The Elections Board asks all poll tenders to meet at 7:15 p.m. tomorrow in Gerrard Hall.

Forum Committee

The Forum Committee will meet tomorrow at 4:30 p.m. in the SUAB office in Graham Memorial.

Student Audit Board

The Student Audit Board will meet tomorrow at 5 p.m. in the Grail Room, Graham Memorial.

AROTC Exhibition Features Drill Team

The Crack Drill Squadron of the AFROTC presented an exhibition of maneuvers at Greensboro High School Stadium Friday night during halftime ceremonies of the Greensboro-Burlington football game.

Cadet Major Robert P. Midgett commands the drill squadron.

Wedgwood Plates Show New England At Work

By Mary Grace Megginson

The spirit of the rugged men who settled and tamed New England has been caught and preserved for posterity in a collection of 12 Wedgwood plates bearing designs by Miss Clare Leighton, a native English woman and former Chapel Hill resident.

The plates, together with other Wedgwood pieces, are on exhibit in the main lobby of the Library. The exhibit will continue until Dec. 6.

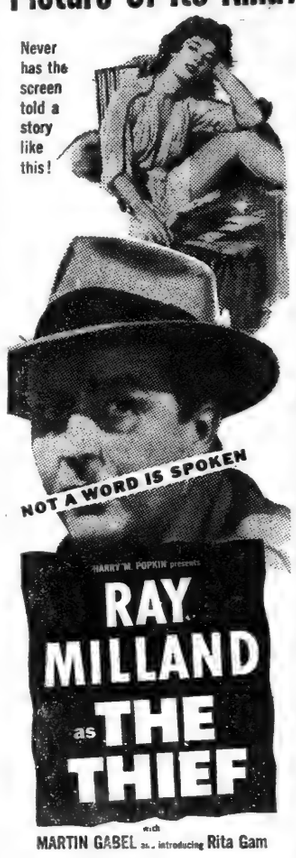
The designs, done in black and white, represent the basic industries o New England—portraying the harvest wrung from both earth and water.

Five show cases are devoted to the display.

Industries depicted are sugaring, shipbuilding, grist milling, whaling, farming, cranberrying, ice cutting, logging, tobacco growing, codfishing, lobstering and marble quarrying.

Each plate shows a picturesque, authentic phase of early New England life. Miss Leighton, who began the project in 1947 while living near Chapel Hill, makes a practice of gathering her material first hand and, in fact, goes to the location to become "a living part" of the scenes she is to depict. She now lives in Woodbury, Conn.

She traveled all over New England to get material for her sketches. The plates, made at the Wedgwood plant in Barlaston, England, were completed only last month.



In each case, the designs show workmen carrying out their particular job. At the base of each design the artist sketched the premachine age implements with which the work was done. Often Miss Leighton was able to locate the ancient tools only in museums.

In addition to the 12 plates, the display cases show, from sketch to engraving, how they were produced.

Miss Leighton, one of America's best known graphic artists, was requested by the firm of Josiah Wedgwood to engrave this set of plates. The winner of a number of prizes, Miss Leighton's work has been displayed at museums in New York, Baltimore, Washington, the British Museum, the Victoria and Albert Museums in London and in the National Gallery of Canada.

CELEBRATE CHILDREN'S BOOK WEEK WITH US

From November 16th to November 22nd we'll be celebrating Children's Book Week at the Intimate Bookshop, and we hope you'll drop in.

There'll be a big display of the new Fall Children's Books, chosen for gay color and moderate price.

And a small present for every small person who brings his parents.

You aren't as old as you think! Come in and enjoy a second childhood with us during Children's Book Week.

OUR CHILDRENS BOOK CODE

We believe that the most important gift in the world is the gift of a book to a child. No other gift carries so much promise for the future. No other gift offers so much present delight.

We believe that quantity is important in a child's reading. Not one book, or two, but lots of books are needed to satisfy new little minds in a big strange world. Therefore you'll find our selection of books leans toward inexpensive editions.

We believe that color is important. We've seen so many books, beloved of librarians, approved by grammarians, equipped with Thorndike vocabularies and the latest psychological gadgets, but still-born because the average child wouldn't touch the dull-looking thing with a five-foot pole! So you'll find most of our books are colorful and inviting.

We view our children's shelves as a gateway to the rich world of books, and we hope that our selection will make that gate a delightful one to enter.

Farber's Election Stand Is 'Impartial'

Despite a recent news story, ex-DAILY TAR HEEL Editor Barry Farber yesterday said he was not supporting any candidate for the job which he recently vacated.

He referred to a story appearing in Saturday's DAILY TAR HEEL which said he asked Walt Dear to take over the interim job when Farber left. The story quoted Wiley Kennedy, a supporter of Dear.

Farber's statement yesterday said in part: ". . . Although Kennedy's statement is 100 per cent true, I feel he has mobilized an impertinent truth to Walt Dear's advantage, somewhat unfairly.

"I asked Dear if he would fill in . . . between my departure and the fall elections simply because he was familiar with the job and was the only logical choice who was not already holding down an important staff position. I might have asked Biff Roberts had Biff not been burdened with the sports editorship.

"My position in Tuesday's election is one of sincere and abject impartiality."

Dear said yesterday in part, "It is regrettable that this misunderstanding . . . has occurred . . . However, I have never considered his (Farber's) request an endorsement, and do not believe Kennedy intended his comments to be misinterpreted as such an endorsement."

Barber Shop Quartet Will Make Debut

The Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America will make its debut on the Carolina campus Friday night when its chorus performs for the Sadie Hawkins Day dance.

The new chapter of the SPEBSQSA was organized last week with the selection of Bob Minteer as president and Bill Drummond as secretary-treasurer. Meetings are planned for Tuesday of each week and the only membership requirement is that the individual be a male.

Past barber shop singing led Minteer to initiate interest in this revised four-man harmony at UNC. As a member of the "Air Fours" quartet while in the Air Force, he saw the enthusiasm and rise of his quartet in the Dixie district of the SPEBSQSA. Before he was handed his discharge papers, he, and the other three harmonizers agreed to stir up barber shop singing interest wherever they were. The fulfillment of Minteer's pact is in the establishment of the UNC group.

Once established, the singing group plans to present an annual show plus performances upon request.

Wedgwood Talks

Mrs. Claire Leighton, one of America's best known graphic artists, will speak on her current exhibit of Wedgwood plates in the library.

Mrs. Leighton will speak at a tea sponsored by the Bullshead Bookshop in the Assembly Exhibit room Thursday afternoon at 3:35 p.m.

The work on the plates was done at the request of the English firm of Josiah Wedgwood. Mrs. Leighton comes from England, but has lived in Chapel Hill.

PiKA's Name Queen Tonite To Beat Dook

The "Beat Dook" float parade queen will be chosen from 21 candidates tonight at a dinner at the PiKA house.

Judges selecting the queen are Mrs. R. H. Wettach, Noel Houston and E. Carrington Smith.

Candidates and their sponsors are Anne Jacobs, ADPi; Dee Funai, Alpha Gam; Margaret Cheatham, Chi O; Sandra Donaldson, Tri-Delt; Bitty Schaeffer, KD; Lyn Daniel, Pi Phi; Peg Hall, Alderman; Page Moore, Carr; Tish Coley, McIver.

Ann Hartzog, Beta; Jackie Krell, Chi Phi; Linda Lindeman, DKE; Janie Bugg, Delta Psi; Diane Breslow, KA; Anne Sory, Kappa Sig; Judy Taylor, Phi Kappa Sigma; Sara Bostick, SAE; Carmen Nahm, Sigma Chi; Mary Helen Crain, Sigma Nu, Jo Ann Yokely, SPE, and Geraldine Snider, BVP.

Deadline for entering a candidate for queen has been extended to 3 o'clock this afternoon, Chairman Clayton Jackson said yesterday. Deadline for entering a float has been set for 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Marine Band Is Here Tonight

LT. COL. W. F. SANTELMANN

CHARLES OWEN
MARIMBA SOLOIST

"The President's Own," the United States Marine Band, will give a concert tonight at 8 o'clock in Memorial Hall as the first Student Entertainment Committee presentation of the year.

The Marine Band, founded in 1798, is on its annual fall tour. Conducted by Lt. Col. William F. Santelmann, the band makes three coast-to-coast radio broadcasts a week and makes frequent television appearances.

Students will be admitted free tonight upon presentation of ID cards. Faculty and townspeople will be charged $1. Auditorium doors will open at 7 p.m., SEC Chairman Bob Simmons said yesterday.

University Band Director Earl Slocum has compared the band's performance to the "same high level of the finest symphony."

Members of the SEC are Chairman Bob Simmons, Bill Watt, Walt Ernst and Bill Brain. Faculty advisors are Samuel Selden of the Dramatic Arts Department, William Newman of the Music Department and Olin Moujon of the Commerce Department.

Other performances scheduled by the SEC for winter and spring are Nadine Connor, Fred Waring's Chorus and Ogden Nash.

Debate Team Places Third In Tourney

The University Debate Squad placed third in a tournament attended by 10 schools at the University of South Carolina this weekend.

UNC students participating were Beverly Webb, Bruce Marger, Derith Alexander and Al Levine on the affirmative and Tom Lloyd, Bob Clampitt, Charlotte Davis and Ken Myers on the negative.

The affirmative team of Webb and Marger placed second in the tournament losing only one debate. Marger tied for third as the best individual speaker.

The query for debate was "Resolved: that the Congress of the United States should enact a compulsory fair employment practices law."

Duke and South Carolina placed first in the tournament attended by Wake Forest, Duke, UNC, South Carolina, Johns Hopkins, Georgia and Georgia Tech.

Former UNC Prof's Book Out Soon

"Divided We Fought: A Pictorial History of the War, 1861-1865," edited by a former University teaching fellow, will come out tomorrow.

The book, containing nearly 500 photographs and drawings, was edited by David Donald, who was on the staff here in 1942. A native of Goodman, Mississippi, Donald took his A.B. from Millsaps College and received his Ph.D. from Illinois in 1946. He is now an assistant professor of history at Columbia University.

The photographs and drawings were selected by Hirst Milhollen and Milton Kaplan who are associated with the Library of Congress in Washington. These are accompanied by a descriptive text and contemporary eye-witness accounts edited by Donald.

Mobile Unit Opens Blood Drive Today

Today and tomorrow the Red Cross Bloodmobile is visiting Chapel Hill to receive donations to fill the increasing need in Korea.

Bloodmobile doctors and nurses will be in attendance in Graham Memorial from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. during the two-day drive. The quota has been set at 400 pints for the Chapel Hill area.

Prospective student or faculty donors may make appointments by phoning Graham Memorial at 5611 or 9-1881. Donors are especially needed between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. both days.

Junius Fox and Bill Roth, co-chairmen of the blood donation committee are appealing to the patriotism of Carolinians, they said. The recent injury and casualty lists issued from the Pentagon show that war in the Sniper Ridge and Triangle Hill area is at its worst, they point out. Donations from this drive will meet the Korean need.

Donors must be between 21 and 69 years old and in good helath. Eighteen, 19, and 20 year olds may contribute with their parents' permission. Individuals giving blood are advised not to eat heavy, fatty foods within four hours of their donation.

NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON — After a grim aviation weekend, the nation yesterday counted 88 persons dead or missing in the disappearance or scattered crashes of eight American military planes and three civilian aircraft. Some 31 passengers and crewmen aboard two U. S. Air Force transports are missing; 48 are known dead in the crashes of a military transport, a fighter plane and 3 Navy craft; and nine are dead in the civilian crashes. Air Force planes searched in vain Sunday for a huge C-119 Flying Boxcar which disappeared in Alaska on Saturday with 20 men aboard.

In Washington, Congressional leaders expect Eisenhower and Truman to agree at their conference on a statement telling the world America is united in its quest for peace.

Italian Film 'Paisan' Tells War's Impact

"Paisan," an Italian film directed by Robert Rosellini, will mark the beginning of a series of two films sponsored by the Student Union Activities Board.

The film will be shown Wednesday night at 8 o'clock in Memorial Hall.

"Paisan" is the sequel to "Open City" made by the same director in 1945. A 1946 picture, "Paisan" shows the impact of war on a native population and a foreign soldiery. Beginning with the landing in Sicily the film follows the American and British armies through the invasion and liberation.

The majority of the dialogue is in English but there are English sub-titles for the German and Italian speeches.

The motion picture was winner of first prize awards at Cannes, Brussels and Venice Film Festivals. Life magazine writes about the film, "The best picture since V-E Day about Americans in World War II."

Series subscriptions are being sold at the main office in Graham Memorial. No individual tickets can be sold. The series price is 60 cents.

House Will Lecture Thursday On Beauty

Chancellor Robert B. House will give the Fall Quarter lecture in the Humanities Thursday night in Gerrard Hall at 8:30.

The Chancellor's subject will be "Where Beauty Dwells." He will discuss the place of the humanities in a well-rounded education.

Rep. Durham Hints

Weapon More Powerful Than H-Bomb Forseen

Rep. Carl T. Durham (D-N.C.), acting chairman of the Joint Congressional Atomic Committee, yesterday hinted that a bigger weapon than the hydrogen bomb is being planned for the future.

"Time doesn't stand still," Durham said. "We'll continue our development program in view of the present international situation."

When asked whether anything besides the hydrogen bomb was used in the Pacific tests announced by the Atomic Energy Commission, Durham said he did not know. He added, "We haven't had a report."

Durham said the hydrogen bomb gives the Western world a powerful new weapon which, so far as he knows, the Soviets do not have and said he thinks it will help deter would-be aggressors.

The Representative from Chapel Hill said he "wouldn't try to evaluate the psychological effect" of the H-bomb, and added, "I don't care to comment beyond the (Atomic Energy) commission's statement. I just say it adds to our stockpile of weapons."

UN Delegates Return Here From Forums

The 12 Carolina delegates to the United Nations Seminar returned to Chapel Hill yesterday after spending three days in the UN.

While in New York the deelgates conferred with UN officials, observed the UN councils in action, took part in forums with representatives from Egypt, Great Britain and Yugoslavia, and got a look at the behind-the-scenes story on what makes the United States delegation tick.

A question and answer session on the UN will be held tomorrow at a luncheon meeting in the second floor dining room of Lenoir Hall at 1 p.m.

The luncheon session will be followed up with a World Understanding Supper Forum at 5:45 Thursday night at Lenoir Hall when a panel from the delegation will give a report on their trip.

OCS Vacancies Open To Grads

Officer candidate course appointments are still open for students graduating in December, Maj. F. C. Caldwell of the USMR said yesterday.

The 7th Officers' Candidate Course of the Marine Corps will begin March 12 at Quantico, Va. Students successfully completing the 10 week course are commissioned as second lieutenants in the Marine Corps and attend a five month basic school course at Quantico as a second lieutenant.

Dear, Roberts Spar For Post With Tar Heel

Parties Present Varied Platforms In Late Campaign

By Louis Kraar

Carolina students will cast votes today for Legislators, class officers, student council members and the important post of editor of THE DAILY TAR HEEL.

Past fall elections have netted about 20 to 25 percent of students voting. Vigorous campaigns between editorial candidates Biff Roberts and Walt Dear are expected to prime the vote above the usual small number.

Biff Roberts, University Party nominee for the editorial post, is the present sports editor. He has served four years on the staff and writes the column, "Down In Front." Roberts has presented his campaign on the basis of "newspaper experience" and has promised to "put out a good daily—one which will voice student opinion."

Walt Dear, independent and Student Party endorsed, has waged his campaign for the editorship on the basis of independence from parties and impartial coverage. He is chairman of the Publications Board and has been on the staff four years. Dear has been summer editor, feature editor and columnist. He stated, "I am running as an independent candidate because the campus deserves an independent approach to campus problems."

The Elections Board, headed by Jerry Cook has made a special effort to get out the vote with signs telling where and how to vote in strategic campus places. Tonight the board will have about 35 vote counters working upstairs in Graham Memorial. A large blackboard downstairs in the main lounge will keep students informed of the latest count.

Thirty-eight Legislative posts are open in the race. The University Party holds a slight majority at present, and the seats probaoly be evenly distributed in the election.

The Student Party has sparked its campaign from a headquarters in Graham Memorial which has coordinated all movements. Posters, statements of party policies and other literature has been distributed.

University Party officials also have issued outlines of party issues, put up posters, and are running an advertisement in The Daily Tar Heel explaining their campaign.

The controversy over Saturday classes, after somewhat overshadowing the campaigns and elections, has become a prime issue. Both parties have taken a definite stand in opposition to them.

The University Party's platform is basically the same as last spring. It emphasizes the carrying out of former promises rather than making new ones. Among the plans they have promised to back are a check cashing service in Lenoir Hall, an infirmary dis-

This Is The News

It happened when President Gordon Gray attended a recent meeting of the Board of Directors of the Ford Foundation in New York.

Some of the men were asking radio commentator Ed Murrow who would be Ike's Cabinet members, as Murrow supposedly was in the know.

"Since the first two advisors have been Lodge and Dodge, I would suppose the next two appointments will be Hodge and Podge," Murrow informed them.

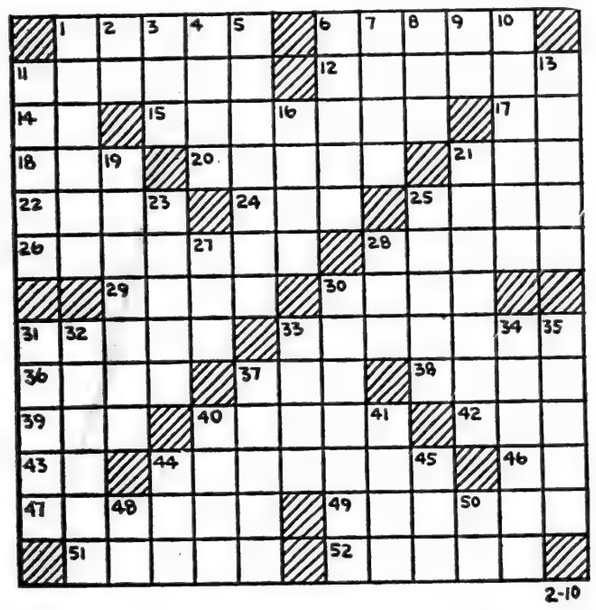
The Raleigh News and Observer

The Long And Short Of It

Nobody who remembers his own college days will be surprised that students at Chapel Hill, who have been having no classes on Saturdays, are indignant over a proposal by the trustees calling for classes on that day. In the long ago students tried to work out their schedules so they could duck Saturday classes, too, and if possible, any 8:30 a. m. classes during the week as well. The short work day and the long weekend seem familiar goals of man and boy, citizen and student.

Clearly, however, there is something funny in a consolidated university in which boys at State College and girls in the Woman's College at Greensboro have classes on Saturday while teachers and students at Chapel Hill get the whole day off. It may be that the boys in Raleigh and the girls in Greensboro are unduly oppressed but certainly the boys and girls in Chapel Hill ought not to be entitled to special Saturday treatment.



Good cases have been made out for the five-day week among working men as well as laboring students. Also both professors and students have made out elaborate cases to prove that 15 hours of class attendance and less than that of class teaching cannot be regarded as the true work week of the teacher or students. Both, they say, labor long and late outside the classrooms even maybe on Saturdays.

It seems possible, however, that the trustees, recognizing the increasing costs of college plants and staffs, felt that if plants and staff could be profitably utilized by other colleges on Saturdays, they might be profitably used for the benefits of the students and the State at Chapel Hill, too. They may have felt that neither the purposes or the pupils or even the teachers were essentially different at Chapel Hill from those at the two other parts of the university.

The argument in this matter will undoubtedly proceed with much indignation and some erudition. It will be a good thing for it to proceed. Saturday classes or no Saturday classes is a subject for debate into which a scholar can put his heart. One thing would seem to be clear even now, however. That is that one decision would seem to apply to all three of the units of the Greater University. It is doubtful that even Chapel Hill would be served even if its students could sleep later on Saturdays by a verdict that Chapel Hill is the school of the long weekend and the short week while the colleges in Greensboro and Raleigh are the long week, short weekend, hard working institutions.

One rule ought to prevail at all parts of the university. There is nothing special about the students, their labors or their climate at Chapel Hill which justifies any special exemption or exception.

On Saturdays as well as other days all students in the Greater University should be fed out of the same spoon.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

Average time of solution: 21 minutes.

—Louis Kraar—

Party Line

They've done it.

At last campus politicians have overlooked partisan politics and come to the aid of the students on an important issue. The unusual cooperation of both parties with each other and the students was beautiful to watch as they battled Saturday classes last week.

Sights like that of Ham Horton's office, frequently a scene of UP caucuses, filled with SP and UP party members working side by side, and UP and SP leaders unrolling the many yards of student petitions were rare indeed. Too rare.

Whether or not the battle against the extra day of classes is won seems almost unimportant. What is vital is that for once student government leaders went to work for the students that they represent — all students — and strived for a common cause. That's pretty hard to beat, even for trustees.

THE HOME STRETCH: Today is the day that students pick their leaders in student government. Among those leaders, but not a political post, is going to be a new DAILY TAR HEEL editor. Walt Dear, slightly frenetic chairman of the Publications Board, has exerted every ounce of his nervous energy in his campaign. A little more placid, Biff Roberts, sports editor, has steadily and calmly plodded the course of campaigning. Both are proficient newspapermen. Either would make a satisfactory editor. But only one can be selected, and who that one is is to be up to the students.

HIS MASTER'S VOTE: Ham Horton (UP) at the University Party meeting peptalking candidates, "You can put up all the pretty little posters you want, but if you don't go around, shake that hand, and give 'em that smile, you can't win."

BLACK MAGIC: The newest campaign promise is "I will get rid of Saturday classes." Two overly-enterprising and probably overly-ambitious candidates for Legislature in Cobb Dorm added that promise to their list. The elaborate posters, one of which ironically sat on a steaming radiator, and free cigarettes that they distributed weren't elements of a sane, rational campaign. They won't win confidence or votes that way.

POUNDING THE BEAT: Bill Brown (SP) knocking on Cobb Dorm doors to get those votes . . . Bob Little and Gaither Walser (UP) loudly drumming up the vote in "H Dorm" . . . Biff Roberts taking time out from sports editing for a little campaigning . . . Ken Penegar (SP) giving an old soldiers farewell at Legislature for Sol Cherry (UP), Henry Lowett (SP), and himself . . . Gene Cook (SP) mentioned for Speaker at the State Student Legislature by political leaders on campus . . . Bob Gorham (UP) lending that helping hand in the beat Saturday sessions move . . . Gordon Forester (SP) at the campaign headquarters for his party . . . modest Herb Cohn (SP) quietly, but surely running for Student Council . . . Sol Cherry (UP) caught with his political pants down when asked for his party's platform . . . and the lack of campaigning.

The Ram Sees

The Ohio State Yearbook, Makio, has thrown a new twist in the publications business.

This year the Makio will be wired for sound, the first college yearbook in the nation to try such an idea. There will be a special recording of highlights of the year on a 45 RPM record, which will be inserted in the back of the 650 page volume.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. — Secretary of State Dean Acheson and other top level U. N. diplomats met privately yesterday to consider an Indian compromise proposal to end the Korean fighting. Diplomats attending in addition to Acheson included Selwyn Lloyd, British minister of state, Halvard Lange, Norwegian foreign minister, and Paul Martin, Canadian minister of health.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON—It's been 20 years almost to the day that another President-elect called on an outgoing President, as Dwight D. Eisenhower calls on Harry S. Truman today.

President Hoover was bitter then, just as President Truman is today. All sorts of charges had been hurled at his administration, just as charges have been hurled at Truman by the man he once proposed for President of the United States.

However, for the good of the country, as today, they sat down together.

With them sat grave, long-faced Raymond Moley, top Roosevelt brain truster who later quarreled with his boss and has been bitterly against the Democrats since; also cherub-faced Ogden Mills, Secretary of the Treasury. Hoover talked in a monotone, at times plaintively. He reviewed the toboggan slide of British finances, told of the dangerous economic state of the world. The President-elect listened, talked little.

Finally Mr. Hoover said: "Now, Governor Roosevelt, I wonder if I could speak to you alone."

The others withdrew, Hoover talked longer to the President-elect regarding Britain's desperate condition.

Coming out of the White House later, Governor Roosevelt told Moley: "We're not going back. I don't want to get mixed up in this."

Today, 20 years later, Eisenhower likewise declines to share responsibility for decisions until he assumes office. But the time between election and inauguration is shorter now, and at least two of his representatives are working with the outgoing administration.

It's a 100-to-1 bet that Joseph Dodge, the Eisenhower adviser on budget problems, will not become Secretary of the Treasury or budget director, as some observers have speculated.

For some of Ike's advisers aren't at all happy about the discovery that Dodge borrowed money from the RFC for his Detroit bank in 1933 and did not pay it back until this year. They feel that with the Republican party having talked loudly about "keeping out of the red," Eisenhower couldn't afford to appoint a man whose bank has been in the red to the government for 19 years.

Dodge has been President of the Detroit bank since 1933. On Dec. 31, 1933, the bank borrowed $4,000,000 from the RFC in order to keep from folding.

Repayments on the loan were scattered and irregular. By the beginning of this year, the bank still owed $2,000,000. But strangely this large sum was suddenly paid up in full on May 20, 1952. In order to pay it, the bank issued new preferred stock to private interests.

Mr. Dodge is still president of the bank, on loan to General Eisenhower.

Washington's lame-duck Sen. Harry Cain is so reluctant to leave the Senate that he is pulling strings to get the relatively unimportant job of sergeant-at-arms.

This has brought him into a backstage clash with New York's powerful Congressman Dan Reed, who is boosting his son, Bill, for the post. The junior Reed is now deputy sergeant-at-arms and is counting on his daddy to help him move up.

Congressman Reed will pack a lot of weight in the next Congress as boss of the House Ways and Means Committee, which fixes the nation's taxes. But the Senate is known to be sympathetic to ex-members of its exclusive club; so senatorial courtesy will probably prevail and the ex-senator may get the job.

Senator Cain has whispered that he is anxious to take the step-down job for the sake of his wife, whom he almost divorced to marry a Senate secretary four years ago. Mrs. Cain prefers the Washington social whirl to the humdrum life of Tacoma, Wash.

Note—Senator Cain has told friends he can't figure out why he was defeated in a state that gave Eisenhower an easy majority. Chief reason was the drive and personality of his opponent, newly elected Senator "Scoop" Jackson. Another reason was Cain's close political liaison with Senator McCarthy. Whenever McCarthy needed anyone to speak for him on the Senate floor, Cain was always the first to do so.

Russians and Prisoners—Madame Pandit, head of the Indian Delegation to the United Nations, believes there is no chance whatever of arranging a truce in Korea even with Eisenhower directing the negotiations. Madame Pandit has talked secretly with foreign minister Vishinsky. Each time the Russians flatly refused to listen to any concession regarding prisoners of war.

REVIEWS

Three fine movies seen here previously and an interesting new novelty are the highlights of this weeks film fare.

On Wednesday "Viva Zapata," starring Marlon Brando as the Mexican guerilla leader, will be playing the Varsity. It was here not so long ago, but for those who have not seen it previously, it is well worth seeing. The same can be said for "High Noon," on Thursday at the Carolina. Starring Gary Cooper, this Stanley Kramer production is the best western to come out of Hollywood in many a moon — and the Lord only knows there has been a lot of them.

"Daniel and the Devil," which will be at the Varsity on Thursday, originally appeared about ten years under the title of "All that Money Can Buy." The movie is a superb adaptation of Stephen Vincent Benet's "The Devil and Daniel Webster" and stars the late Walter Huston as the Devil (one of his most famous roles), Edward Arnold as Webster and James Craig as Jabez Stone.

On Tuesday and Wednesday the Carolina will be presenting "The Thief," one of the years most talked about films. Acting on the old theory that actions speak louder than words, the producers have made the movie without using one word of dialogue. This is not to say that "The Thief" is a silent film; it is far from that, for it gains much of its suspense from the use of all kinds of sound effects and background music. It is simply that the picture in telling the story of a nuclear physicist who gives secret information to the Russians revolves around a number of situations in which words would be superfluous and in some cases detrimental to the plot. To say that the experiment is completely successful would not be entirely correct, for the limitation that the movie has set upon itself prevents adequate motivation of the leading character and tends to make the physical actions which are the manifestations of his thoughts repetitious. Nevertheless, if only for the novelty of seeing a silent talkie, students will probably enjoy "The Thief." Ray Milland turns in a powerful performance as the traitor, and Rita Gam is "silent and sexy."

Carolina In Good Shape For Duke Game Saturday

Alexander Only Injury At Columbia

By Tom Peacock

The North Carolina football team will be in better physical condition this Saturday when it meets Duke than it has been the past three weeks.

The Tar Heels suffered only one major injury while winning its first game of the year against South Carolina last Saturday. Will Alexander, 165-pound defensive guard, hurt his ankle against the Gamecocks, and may not be able to play in the Duke contest.

The rest of the Carolina injury situation remains static, with the possible addition of defensive back Billy Williams to the lineup. Trainers Fitz Lutz and Doc White have been hoping Williams could return for the past two weeks, but a weak ankle has kept him sidelined.

The Tar Heels practiced long and hard yesterday, and head coach Carl Snavely is expected to work the team hard all week for the traditional battle with the Blue Devils of Durham.

Carolina is already in top spirits and will be up for Duke, with the breaking of an 11 game losing streak last week adding to the morale.

Snavely worked the defense especially hard on the pass patterns used by Duke's star sophomore quarterback, Worth (A Million) Lutz. With Ed Lockland leading the jayvees in the role of Lutz, the secondary and the junior varsity concentrated on passing long past dark.

The offense had a grueling workout under the lights of Navy Field, too. The Tar Heels lost seven fumbles last week against South Carolina, and the Carolina coaches are determined to correct some of the backfield's butterfingerness. Fumbles set up one Gamecock touchdown and lost two scoring chances for Carolina last week.

Duke always plays its best game against Carolina, and will especially be out to run up a big score against the Tar Heels. The Blue Devils started out the season rated as one of the best teams in the South, but have played three poor games in the last three weeks, losing two of them.

Duke barely squeezed past Wake Forest, 14-7, last week to take undisputed possession of first place in the Southern Conference. If Carolina upsets the Blue Devils it will throw the mythical Big Four Championship into a three-way tie between Duke, Carolina and Wake Forest. Duke and Wake Forest both have wins over State.

Duke has scored wins over Carolina for the past three years, keeping the famed victory bell each year. Carolina had won the series in the previous three years.

GEORGIA TECH safety man Jakie Rudolph comes up here to stop Alabama's fullback Tommy Lewis just short of a touchdown in the first quarter of Saturday's game between the Ramblin' Wreck and the Crimson Tide. Tech stopped the Alabama drive on the six and then went on to win, 7-3. Other players are Bobby Marlowe (32) of Alabama and Orville Vereen (33) of Tech.—NEA Telephoto.

State Wins SC Harrier Meet; Webb Top NC Runner

Special to The Daily Tar Heel

RICHMOND, Nov. 17 — N. C. State College repeated as the Southern Conference Cross Country champion today as the Wolfpack harriers finished in front of the pack in the conference tournament here this afternoon.

The Raleigh team finished the field with a total score of 49, while Maryland's strong cross country runners wound up with a 65 total score for second place honors. West Virginia was third in the team scoring bracket with 69, while Virginia Military Institute finished with 106 points. Duke was the fifth place club in the team scoring with 160 points.

North Carolina took down sixth place honors in the conference with an aggregate score of 164. Richmond, Davidson, Washington and Lee, and William and Mary finished up the top ten in the loop.

State's Sawyer took individual honors for the tourney by finishing the course with a mark of 20:44. A teammate, Garrison, was close on his heels to take second place, while Maryland's Tidbitts was third.

Bob Webb paced the North Carolina runners with a finish in 15th place. Other finishes for the Tar Heels were: Morris Osborne, 28th; Al Marx, 33rd; Don Wright, 36th; and Bill Higgins, 52nd.

Three out of the first seven to cross the finish line were members of the championship State College team. Besides the top two runners—Sawyer and Garrison—State's Shockley came in seventh. Maryland, who was given the best chance of beating the Wolfpack in pre-tourney predictions, had three boys to finish with the first 15 runners.

Individual Results:

1st—Sawyer (N. C. State, time—20:44); 2nd—Garrison (N. C. State); 3rd—Tidbetts (M); 4th—Thobern (W. Va.); 5th—Thide (Rich.); 6th—Good (M), 7th—Shockley (N. C. State); 8th—Horsely (M); 9th—Jordan (R); 10th—Webber (W. Va.); 11th— McClean (V. M. I.); 12th—Tate (Duke); 13th—Miller (N. C. State); 14th—Forsythe (V. M. I.); 15th—Webb (N. C.).

Team Results:

1st—N. C. State, 49; 2nd—Maryland, 65; 3rd—W. Virginia, 69; 4th—V. M. I., 106; 5th—Duke, 160; 6th—North Carolina, 164; 7th—Richmond, 165; 8th—Davidson, 190; 9th—Wash. & Lee, 219; 10th—William & Mary.

Med School, Zetes Lead Wrestlers

Zeta Psi with three winners and the Med School with two won the fraternity and dormitory divisions of the Intramural department's wrestling tournament at Woollen Gym last Thursday night.

Eddie Brown, Chip Bryant, and Arthur Gregory won for the Zetes, runners-up last year, to help them un-seat the Sigma Chis who dropped to second this year.

In addition to its two winners, Cecil Godwin and Francis Pepper, the Med School had two runners-up to easily take the dorm crown.

Little Abbie Keys, Sigma Chi, was the only repeat winner from last year, winning the 130 pound class over Mel Schwartz on a pin.

Others getting pins were Jid Thompson, Sam Jordan, Kenton Creuser, John Tyndall, and George Whiteside.

Placing behind the Zetes and Sigma Chi was Phi Gamma Delta, while Everett and Ruffin trailed the Med School.

Fraternity Division

123 lb. class: Patton (Lamb Chi) decisioned Aldridge (KA)
130 lb. class: Keys (Sig Chi) pinned Schwartz (TEP)
137 lb. class: Brown (Zeta Psi) decisioned Collins (Sig Chi)
147 lb. class: Thompson (SAE) pinned Duke (Sig Nu)
157 lb. class: Jordan (Delt Psi) pinned Wood (DKE)
167 lb. class: Gregory (Zeta Psi) decisioned Spaugh (Beta)
177 lb. class: Bryant (Zeta Psi) decisioned Perry (KA)
Unlimited: Creuser (Phi Gam) pinned York (Chi Psi)

Dormitory Division

137 lb. class: Tyndall (Everett) pinned Stuart (Joyner)
147 lb. class: Whiteside (Ruffin) pinned Hopkins (Winston)

167 lb. class: Godwin (Med School) won from Clinard (Everett) by default
177 lb. class: Madison (Emerson) decisioned Boyd (Med Sch)
Unlimited: Pepper (Med School) won from Lineberger (Med School) by default

Medics Win; Sigma Chi's Edge Zetes

The Med School's number four team took a hard-earned 13-6 victory over Emerson in Intramural tag football competition yesterday afternoon. This was a quarter-final contest in dormitory division play.

All the scoring came in the first half of play. The Med School built up a slender lead, and then spent the rest of the afternoon staving off scoring threats by Emerson. The winners also made several near-successful scoring attempts in the second half. The Med School had one touchdown nullified late in the game.

Sam Joyner and Adam Thorp scored the Med School touchdowns. Bo Jenkins added the game's only extra point.

In the Fraternity division Sigma Chi took an important 13-7 win over Zeta Psi. This was a continuation of a tie game played between the two teams last week—a 7-7 deadlock halted by darkness.

Bob Fountain scored for Sigma Chi in the first period, for the game's only tally. After this touchdown the two squads settled down to a defensive battle. Both teams threatened several times.

In the third game of the afternoon Sigma Nu romped to a 32-8 win over the Phi Gams. This was a quarter-final clash in the fraternity division, as was the Sigma Chi-Zeta Psi battle.

The passing of Carl Duke highlighted the potent Sigma Nu offense. Duke passed for three touchdowns. Thomas was on the receiving end of two Duke scoring heaves. Page caught Duke's first paydirt pitch.

The other Sigma Nu touchdown came when Kimsey passed to Pridgeon.

The only Phi Gam touchdown came on a pass thrown by Dick Hoggard. Hoggard made a long run before throwing the touchdown pass.

pensary in Woollen Gym and investigation of the Book Exchange by a student committee.

Student Party officials, on the other hand, have set forth a ten plank platform which includes support of quiz files open to all students, more liberal class cut policy based on individual standings in class, uniform coed visiting agreement, sound proofing all dormitories and candy and cigarette machines in dormitories.

Cook pointed out the malpractices at the polls and warned students to abide by the elections laws. The malpractices are 1) no campaign literature of any kind is permitted within fifty feet of ballot boxes; 2) no person shall campaign for any candidate within 50 feet of the polls; 3) no sound mechanisms shall be used within hearing distance of the polls; 4) no distribution of samples, candy, cigarettes, pamphlets shall take place within 50 feet of the polls; 5) no candidate shall be a poll tender in the district in which he is running.

Voters should have their current student identification cards in order to vote. They will be stamped with the date by poll-tenders .

Coming Out

Despite any rumors or propaganda to the contrary, the Tarnation will hit the streets this week with three more issues to follow, the editors said yesterday.

Glee Club

The Women's Glee Club will meet this afternoon at 4:30 in Hill Hall.

J-C Club

The Johnston-Carolina Club will meet tonight in Roland Parker Lounge 1 at 7:30.

French

Persons wishing to speak French are invited to the French Supper Club meet tonight at 6 o'clock in the second floor dining room of Lenoir Hall.

Phi

The Phi Assembly will meet tomorrow night instead of tonight.

TGA

Members of the Town Girls' Association are reminded that they are to have their pictures made at 5 o'clock this afternoon in the Main Lounge of Graham Memorial.

Vets

There will be a meeting held next Monday at 7 p.m. in Gerrard Hall to discuss the reopening of a Veteran's Organization on Campus. All ROTC cadets may attend the meeting. For info prior to the meeting see Chuck Melvin in the Y lobby any day this week through Thursday.

FFC

The Freshman Friendship Council has added another entertaining feature to the coming Duke weekend. It is a pre-release showing of the movie "Something for the Birds" starring Patricia Neal, Victor Mature and Edmund Gwenn. The movie will be shown at the Carolina Theater as a "late show" after the Sadie Hawkins Dance.

Y News

The FCC Planning Committee will meet at 5:30 this afternoon on the second floor of Lenoir Hall. The Y cabinet will meet tonight at 9 o'clock in the YMCA.

Rare Book Collection Is On Display Here

A collection of rare books and manuscripts dating back to 3500 before Christ are on display now in a trailer behind the Library.

"The rare books, illuminated manuscripts and authentic examples of ancient writing contained in the exhibit show a complete history of the written and printed word for more than four centurys," according to Dean Susan Grey Akers of the School of Library Science.

The oldest items in the display are cuneiform writing on clay, recording deeds of sale and royal decrees from ancient Babylon and Sumeria. A papyrus leaf from the Egyptian Book of the Dead displays the first use of color in pre-Christian books.

The collection will be shown today and tomorrow between 9 and 12 a.m. and 2 and 5 p.m. There is no admission charge.

UN Troops Blast At Red Chinese Lines

SEOUL — United Nations artillery last night ripped to pieces a Chinese Communist battalion massing for an attack on Sniper Ridge where South Koreans clung to the crest under heavy bombardment from Red guns. American Sabre jets handed the Communist Air Force its worst licking in five weeks when they shot down five MIG-15s in a series of high altitude duels over northwest Korea's MIG Alley.

ALDOUS-HUXLEY: THE DEVILS OF LOUDUN

Apologia or How Naive Can We Get?

being

A discourse on how to lose your shirt and Elections, too.

We've been took.

We knew politics was a slick game, but we sure didn't realize how an election can be stolen by allies while you're still congratulating yourself on having them, or how folks can forget so quick.

But you see, we're still new at the game. And maybe we don't study it enough.

It was like this: We woke up yesterday and it hit us like a bolt out of the blue—the fall elections were being slowly but steadily pulled out from under us while we were off fighting for Saturdays. Last spring the students got up and kicked out of office a dynasty of wheels who for 7 long years had been looking-busy-doing-nothing. So we moved into Student Government after being outside for a long time. We were, frankly, naive about this whole business. We thought platforms were promises—to be kept. So we got busy and got ours more than half done in three months. (now we find this is a waste of time in professional politics.)

Now, atlhough this may be locking the barn after the horse is gone, we have discovered (or, more accurately, stolen) the technique of "How to Win Elections in Three Easy Lessons." (This you get for free as a special service to our constituents.)

Chapter One

Promises

Promises should not be sensible. Nor should they be made to be kept. This particularly applies to Platforms, which are to be read, not remembered. In teaching ourselves a lesson from the SP on how to make promises, here's what we've learned.

File all the promises you can find. Two headings for the files will be enough: Promises, Absurd, Illegal, etc. and Promises, Musty BUT Trusty.

The first category is most fun. The main point here is to be spectacular. (Example: "Rose petals in every toilet bowl," "Bedside telephone in every room.") If they are also illegal under state or local law, (Pool Tables, Vending machines and ABC stores in every Dorm") they make even better promises.

The second category is like the old soldier: it never dies. These promises are not quite so flashy, but are reliable. ("Insulated Dorms, new seats for Memorial Hall"). Without them your platform seems a stranger. Always make some of the same promises—your constituents will learn to welcome them like an old friend. The SP has a real good file on promises, having accumulated them for over 7 years and never having lost a one due to accomplishment.

Chapter Two

The People; Their Uses And How To Placate Them.

We reckon this is another example of our amateur rank. The other bunch learned long ago that the nicest thing about being a politician is that people forget so easy.

Take last year for example. Who remembers anything about the clique? (And their periodic crusades against everything from South Building to Fraternities) And who remembers the kinds of things they proposed while in power? (The legislature bills to spend $450 for an executive secretary, the comprehensive exams for seniors bill, admissions-test-bill, cut in legislature size bill, etc. ad nauseum.)

Moral: A leopard can't change his spots, but an ostrich can bury his head.

Besides making plenty of promises, always try to nominate one or two "independents." People like "independents," and by some clever arrangement, you too can have one. Let him declare himself independent as soon as he has your promise of a nomination. "Endorse" him and send all your little cohorts out to campaign for him. Thus he will be obligated to you without bearing the stigma of your name.

Chapter Three

The Sovereign Principle of Me-Too"

The last rule is: Divide the enemies attention and conquer.

We lost our shirt here, and damn near our pants too.

The idea is to find an issue. If one arises naturally, why, wonderful! The issue should be something everyone is against. Then you can stand up and cry, "I hate potato bugs too, more than anybody!" Make one or two speeches to fellow potato-bug-haters, and then fold your tent and quietly steal away.

While the other fellow's spraying the plants to keep off the bugs, you can be in another part of the field pulling up potatatoes. It's good practice too to sit beside the field and tell the bunch fighting the potato bugs that they are doing it all wrong.

Can you see why we're disillusioned? While our DTH candidate is working up in the DTH office or covering a sports assignment, his counterpart is panting up and down your halls laden with handbills and petitions.

While our men are working 8 hours a day to accomplish a platform and trying to stave off Saturday classes, the others, (with three notable exceptions) are wringing your hands, patting your backs and murmuring, "isn't it just too terrible? here's my card I'm running for—." You know the rest.

Maybe we're old fashioned—believing a good job well done is the best advertisement. At any rate, we have finally learned the above three secrets of politicsmanship. And console ourselves by saying experience is the best teacher.

Signed,
Your wear-but-wiser UP.

CELEBRATE CHILDREN'S BOOK WEEK WITH US

From November 16th to November 22nd we'll be celebrating Children's Book Week at the Intimate Bookshop, and we hope you'll drop in.

There'll be a big display of the new Fall Children's Books, chosen for gay color and moderate price.

And a small present for every small person who brings his parents.

You aren't as old as you think! Come in and enjoy a second childhood with us during Children's Book Week.

OUR CHILDRENS BOOK CODE

We believe that the most important gift in the world is the gift of a book to a child. No other gift carries so much promise for the future. No other gift offers so much present delight.

We believe that quantity is important in a child's reading. Not one book, or two, but lots of books are needed to satisfy new little minds in a big strange world. Therefore you'll find our selection of books leans toward inexpensive editions.

We believe that color is important. We've seen so many books, beloved of librarians, approved by grammarians, equipped with Thorndike vocabularies and the latest psychological gadgets, but still-born because the average child wouldn't touch the dull-looking thing with a five-foot pole! So you'll find most of our books are colorful and inviting.

We view our children's shelves as a gateway to the rich world of books, and we hope that our selection will make that gate a delightful one to enter.

Drive For Blood Falls Far Short

The Bloodmobile on its visit here yesterday failed to get even half of its two-day 400-pint goal and 250 pints are needed today to push it to the quota.

Doctors and nurses will be in Graham Memorial again today from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. for the simple operation which takes only about a half hour from registration to finish. Bill Roth, one of the drive's co-chairmen, reminded prospective donors that "giving blood is painless and has no harmful after effects."

Donors must be between 21 and 69 years of age and in good health. Those who plan to donate blood are asked not to eat heavy fatty foods within four hours of their donation. Appointments may be made by calling 5611 or 9-1881.

Roth recalled a story told him by a Korean veteran. He quoted it as follows:

"I spent the rest of one night there in the hospital, recovering from wounds received in action. In the back of the ward, near the spot where the stock of blood was stored, weary men were awaiting their turn to be transfused.

"Every few minutes one of the nurses would come back to get more blood for the wounded. I decided to say thanks for the blood you gave—for blood that literally brought my buddy back to life."

Roth said the period from 2 p.m. until 4 o'clock this afternoon will be reserved for donors from the NROTC. Other donors are asked to come at any time between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. and 5 p.m.

Beat Dook Torch Rally This Friday

There will be a Beat Dook pep rally and torchlight parade Friday night at 7:30. It will be sponsored by the University Club.

The parade will begin at the Y Court and proceed to the intramural field beside Woollen Gymnasium. On the field a bonfire will be built and a short pep rally held. The procession will be led by the University band and the Carolina cheerleaders.

Torches for the parade will be distributed at the Y Court. Students are asked to come dressed in the clothes they will wear for the Sadie Hawkins Day dance at the Naval Ar-

NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON — President-elect Eisenhower, in town for a "strictly business" conference with President Truman, got a rousing mass welcome from his future hometown yesterday. After a brief official greeting ceremony at the airport the smiling, bareheaded Eisenhower drove to the White House past cheering hundreds of thousands lining the street.

Dr. Asirvatham Sees His Land As 3rd Force

Says That India Is Independent, But Not Neutral

"Communist China has been as much sinned against as sinning," is the opinion of an authority whose country is pressing for admission of the Red regime to the U. N. Security Council against U. S. wishes.

Dr. Eddy Asirvatham spoke on Campus Monday after spending the weekend at a Y conference on international relations at Camp New Hope.

Continuing on Communist China, the native of India said we must recognize the legitimate party of China. This is not Chiang Kai-Shek's Nationalist government on Formosa but the Communist organization in Peiping, Dr. Asirvatham declared.

"Are we sure the Chinese Nationalists are the true representatives? It's guess work, and because of corruption and nepotism the Chinese do not believe in this government.

The Chinese are sick and tired of war. They are not prepared to go along with the Nationalists."

The professor of political science at Boston soon will return once again to his native India to teach. He sees his country as a "third force in world politics . . . independent but not neutral." India must not align itself with either world bloc, the speaker said, but must "weigh each case on its merits."

Dr. Asirvatham turned to religion and identified himself as a Hindu - Christian-Congregationalist-Methodist-Quaker. He explained the break down as "Hindu by culture, Christian by conviction, Congregationalist by birth (father was converted), Methodist by affiliation and Quaker by inclination."

Dr. Asirvatham said the Indian people are great admirers of Woodrow Wilson and regard the former president as "one of the great men of the United States." He called Dr. Frank P. Graham, former consolidated University president, "a prophet without honor in his own state." He lauded the UNC liberal's work in Kashmir after two other men had failed to bring about a settlement between India and Pakistan.

Dr. Asirvatham pointed pridefully to the fact that India warned that should Gen. Douglas MacArthur threaten the Yalu River Red China would enter the Korean War. She did, considering it a violation of her integrity, the political scientist asserted.

Dr. Asirvatham made his remarks in a talk to Dwight Rhyne's international relations class. He also spoke to Dr. Alexander Heard's political science class.—RN.

SP Takes Over Legislature; 2,078 Students Cast Ballots

By Louis Kraar

Energetic Independent Walt Dear won the editorship of The Daily Tar Heel last night over Biff Roberts (UP) 1,195 votes to 883 in an election which brought over 40 percent of the students to the polls.

Dear, who appeared at Graham Memorial shortly before his victory was announced last night said, "I humbly thank you, for your generous support. I am grateful. You have chosen an independent editor. I will strive to maintain my independence and to edit a paper for all students."

Dear's margin over Roberts was 312 votes, with 2,078 voting.

Sitting in the editor's office already, Dear said he had not chosen anyone to take his place as chairman of the Publications Board. "The board probably will meet and elect someone soon," he added Dear could remain chairman according to existing laws, but he indicated he would remain on the board and not continue in the chairmanship.

Complete returns on the many candidates running in the election were not available early this morning. They will be run tomorrow in full.

Roberts congratulated Editor-elect Dear and added, "This election sort of reminds me of baseball. You lose some, and you win some. But this one should have been rained out."

Student Party officials filled Graham Memorial halls with shouting and singing when it was learned they gained legislative majority. Twenty-six SP representatives will occupy seats in the Legislature to give the party "the first legislative majority in 14 years," according to Joel Fleishman and other SP officials. The legislature was set up in its present form in 1938 and since then SP has never held a majority, its members say.

President Ham Horton (UP) said after the election, "This was a wonderfully successful election. Students turned out as they never have before in a fall election. Those that deserved to win won. We want to give them all our cooperation and support."

Sol Cherry (UP) said "The best man won. Now that they have a majority, we are expecting big things from them."

Party Chairman Ken Barton (SP) said, "The students showed they are tired of the do-nothing UP Legislature and have voted for the first Student Party Legislature in history. We of the Student Party appreciate your support and pledge ourselves to unselfish and endless work for your benefit."

Fall elections generally bring out about 20 percent of the voters. The unusually large number of voters in this election probably is the result of vigorous campaigning between Dear and Roberts for the editorial post.

Students elected to the Student Council were Herb Cohn (SP), Jimmy Adams (UP) and Wanda Philpott (SP).

Lou Wolfsheimer was named president of the Junior Class; Ann Street, secretary and the others were still not counted early this morning.

Jerry Cook, Elections Board Chairman, was very indefinite on the race for president of the Freshman Class but there was strong indication that there might be a runoff.

University Grows With State—Gray

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

GREENSBORO, Nov. 18.—Gordon Gray, president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, pointed to the growth of the three institutions he heads as indicative of the growth of the state in a recent talk here.

Speaking to a Methodist fellowship group, Gray pointed out that the Consolidated University's 1939 budget was $6,000,000. This year, he noted, it is $26,000,000 with an additional $4,000,000 being requested from the new Legislature when it convenes in January.

Gray took one division of the Consolidated University and traced its growth. The Institute of Statistics has a department

The Sugar Mills Went South

Local Bookshop Owner Fought As Cohort, Enemy Of Zapata

By Robert Bartholomew

A man who can fight on both sides of a Mexican revolution and live to tell it is indeed rare. Yet, such a man is Joseph Augustine Helguera, owner of the local Unicorn Book Shop on Franklin Street.

Helguera is the father of Leon Helguera, a UNC student, who is taking a Ph.D. degree in history and who is also a member of the library staff.

In 1912 Helguera was attending the Mexican Military Academy when a revolution against the government led by President Madero was started. He was commissioned a calvary officer and sent to the northern part of the country to fight the rebels.

The Carranza Government ended the revolution in which Helguera was fighting in 1914. At that time Mexico City was occupied by General Zapata's forces, who were dismantling sugar mills and moving them to the southern part of Mexico.

Helguera applied for a job moving the mills and was accepted. It was then that he was working for the forces of the Zapata government.

A short time later, his background was discovered by one of Zapata's generals. Most of these generals, like Zapata, could neither read nor write.

The general, who was a former sergeant in the Mexican Army, needed trained men badly, men who could read and write and knew something of administrative work. He approached Helguera with a proposition.

Left with the choice of being an officer in Zapata's army, or being shot Helguera decided to accept the live offer. He was given the rank of captain, the

Air Force Band Here This Sunday

The United States Air Force Dance Band will present a concert in Memorial Hall Sunday at 8 p.m. for the benefit of "Operation Christmas" 1952, a project sponsored by the airmen of Pope Field to provide a Merry Christmas for orphans throughout North Carolina.

The appearance of the band here is being sponsored by the Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity and the Chapel Hill Jaycees.

"Operation Christmas" is a program dedicated to the welfare of each orphan in the state. It was inaugurated in 1950, repeated in 1951, and on both occasions the success of the venture was national heralded.

The aim of the program is to bring Santa Claus via helicopter with a gift wrapped and person-

Film Series Runs Short On Money

The Italian film, "Paisan," will be shown tonight at 8 o'clock in Memorial Hall under the auspices of the Student Union Activities Board.

Film committee member Earl Stevens said yesterday that support for the two films offered in the series has not been adequate to warrant continuation of the art films. "If enough tickets are not sold tonight, I am afraid we will have to cancel the winter series," Stevens said.

Membership series for the two films, "Paisan" and "Orpheus" cost 60 cents.

Friday Morn Nears, Males Standing By

By Alice Chapman

UNC males will tremble when Friday dawns for it marks the celebration of Sadie Hawkins Day, begun almost two decades ago in mythical and slightly mad Dogpatch.

In 1937 Mayor Hekzebiah Hawkins in a desperate attempt to marry off his uncommonly ugly daughter instigated the scheme that ended Sadie's 35 years of unblessed singleness. His Honor decreed that a foot race should be run between all bachelor ladies and men, and further ordained that the captured man must marry the gal.

On the fateful day as the mayor screeched a go signal the fear-

Uniform Policy Needed

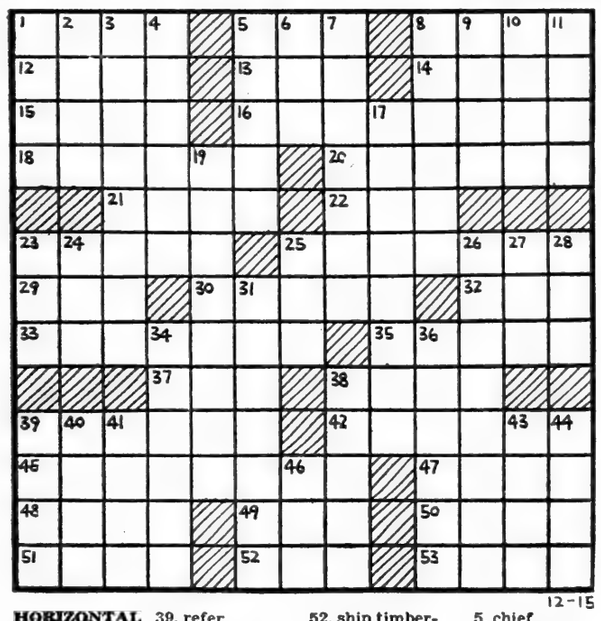
In all probability this argument over Saturday classes at the University of North Carolina has been magnified out of proportion. But even with such allowance the basic policy involved calls now for careful study rather than any snap judgment or mass appeal one way or the other.

Nor do we believe the decision should be left to faculty members or students, both of whom have special interest and a day to gain, however you may look at it, from the present five-day class schedule.

As we understand, the quarter system, which allows for no classes on Saturday, was instituted at Chapel Hill well before the university's consolidation. The semester system obtained at the university's other two units at Greensboro and Raleigh and has so continued down the years.

This difference is what the public, which after all has greatest interest in the Greater University and foots the bill for its operation does not understand. If five-day classes are good for the University unit at Chapel Hill and hold certain advantages or benefits for students and/or faculty why should not these same advantages or benefits rule at State and Woman's Colleges? Or, vice, versa, if Saturday classes are justified and bring certain advantages to these two units why should they not also apply to Chapel Hill?

These are details which the trustees through proper channels, should study and analyze carefully; and unless full and sufficient reason can be given for existing differences uniformity of policy should obtain. For whatever it may be worth, we note that Louis Graves, whose comments in the Chapel Hill Weekly can generally be counted on to be as sage as they are sapient, declares for Saturday classes from his argument-side seat.



Express Yourself

Editor:

I would like to suggest to the party responsible for the hiring and firing of the barbers that do the trimming in the basement of Graham Memorial please fire the present barber and get some one who will work when he is supposed to work.

Last Saturday two other students and I waited for an hour to get a hair cut. Now don't get me wrong—the wait would not have been so bad if the barber had been on the job, but he was not. The shop was open and thinking that the barber had stepped out for coffee we entered and waited for his return. After we had been there about 20 minutes the janitor came in and told us that the barber was in another room in the building and that he would tell him that we were waiting. We waited about 20 minutes more anticipating his return.—No barber came so I started to leave. On my way out who should I see but the barber in the "Tarnation" office typing letters. I asked him if the barber shop was open on Saturday mornings and he answered "yes." I then informed him that there were three of us waiting and had been for almost 40 minutes. He curtly informed me that if we didn't like to wait to go downtown. I then asked him if he was coming in to wait on his customers—he answered that he would be in shortly. We waited another 20 minutes. This was more than I could take—I left. Whether or not the barber ever came in or not I don't know . . . .

As election day neared, campaign oratory was hot and heavy across the campus, but the closest race of all promised to be that for representative of women's district number 40, between Miss Madli Fradley and Miss Ila Kyke.

Miss Fradly started things off when she came out against Saturday classes. Miss Kyke, not to be outdone, stated she was not only against Saturday classes, but was against all outside assignments by professors. In addition, Miss Kyke stood strongly for the serving of free beer between classes on the steps of the Old South Building.

Not to be outdone, Miss Kyke came out for both free beer and free love, to which Miss Fradly replied that she thought Miss Kyke had always been fairly free with her 'ove. "I'm not in favor of free love, but I approve of the inexpensive kind," Miss Fradly stated.

As election time neared, Miss Kyke hired a jet pilot to fly over dropping handbills. She also persuaded the Jones Pork Sausage people to alter their banner to r ad, "Jones Pork Sausage and Ila Kyke."

But Miss Fradly was far from licked. Procuring a helicopter, she had herself lowered to the top of the bell tower, where she did a strip tease, accompanied by the chimes in the tower.

Miss Fradley played another trump card when she appeared at a discussion of "How to Cure the Troubles of the World," and obtained the floor. Here she stated her unequivocal support of manhood, womanhood, and the American flag.

When called upon by The Daily Tar Heel, Miss Kyke was furious. "That Madli Fradly wasn't interested in solving the world's problems. She just wanted to campaign," she asserted. "You can tell your readers that I'm in favor of free speech and against sin."

Election Day came, and many marched to the polls, like good little boys and girls. And when the ballots were counted—lo, and behold, both Miss Fradly and Miss Kyke had lost. The winner, by a write-in vote, was Harry Truman.

Many wondered why this strange thing had happened. But the Chapel Hill Meekly, edited by John L. Tombstones, explained it all in a stirring editorial:

"When Miss Fradly came out in favor of the American flag, she lost the support of the student body, for believing in keeping all the dear old traditions of Chapel Hill, the students naturally upheld none but the flag of the Confederacy.

"And Miss Kyke failed when she campaigned against sin. For she should have known well that no student is against sin. Why would he come to college if he were?

"Why was Harry Truman the selection? Being the only Democratic campus in the country, the students didn't want poor old Harry left without a job after next January, so now he can stay in politics here at Carolina."

both at State and at Chapel Hill. In 1939-40, he said, it began with a grant budget of $28,000. This year its budget amounted to $350,000, Gray said. During the period since its inception, $2,000,000 has passed through the institute, Gray declared.

The institute at State is concerned with applied statistics and the one at Chapel Hill deals with thoretical statistics.

Gray also told the fellowship he had just returned from New York where he was negotiating for two grants, one for UNC and one for N. C. State.

This will be the last home football game of the year, Head Cheerleader Bo Thorpe pointed out. He asked all students to participate in Friday's rally, adding, "With the proper spirit behind the Tar Heels we can show those Blue Devils that we can beat Dook."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON — Here are some of the views of top American scientists behind the official announcement of the first explosion of our first hydrogen bomb:

1. We know now that the H-bomb can be made. Prior to this, we simply did not know. It was a most uncertain experiment. But we also know that before long the Russians are bound to have an H-bomb too.

2. For psychological reasons it was imperative that the free world beat the Russians in developing the first H-bomb. If the Russians had announced its perfection before we did, it might have thrown the free world, especially Western Europe, into panic.

3. The H-bomb will have only a limited number of targets when used by us, whereas for Russia it would have many more targets. In other words, the number of Russian industrial cities of any size is limited. And to the cold view of the military strategist, there is no use wasting an H-bomb on a medium-sized industrial city. On the other hand, our great industrial cities — Detroit, Pittsburgh, Chicago, New York, Philadelphia — fully merit the use of H-bombs by an enemy.

4. The scientists still do not know what might happen to the world's atmosphere if a large number of hydrogen bombs were to be exploded almost simultaneously. If, for instance, 100 H-bombs were to be exploded in a short interval, the atmosphere of the earth might become so saturated with radioactive material that all life on this planet would be destroyed.

Scientists still do not know how much radioactive matter the atmosphere can stand, and some fear the final answer may come when it is too late.

Since the United States is such an attractive H-bomb target, the scientists felt it was imperative that we know as much as possible about the new bomb so we can at least partly defend ourselves against it. This was the reason for the rushed-up Eniwetok explosion.

President Truman, who has been burnt up at his old friend General Eisenhower, is planning to talk to him in a fatherly way at their conference Tuesday. However, some White House advisers predict that the President, frequently given to letting off steam, may talk more like a Dutch uncle than a Father.

In advance talks with his advisers, however, Mr. Truman has emphasized that he would tell the President-elect he wanted to let bygones be bygones and hoped to cooperate 100 per cent in arranging for a smooth transfer of government from one administration to the other.

The main point he plans to make with Eisenhower is that the next two months will be extremely critical, and that the Russians could well take advantage of American indecision and confusion to take over Iran, part of Germany or all of Indo-China.

The Kremlin, he will point out, may bank on the fact that an out-going administration would not want to take responsibility for a firm stand to protect Iran from a Kurdish-Tudeh invasion. Yet, a brief period of indecision, while the Truman administration is bowing out and the Eisenhower administration bowing in, might find a Russian-Communist government sitting astride the oil reserves of Iran and the strategic gulf of Persia.

Similar indecision also could be disastrous regarding Communist putsches in Germany and Indo-China.

1. The December 15 NATO Conference. At this, the Atlantic Pact countries are scheduled to fix their budgets and goals for the next two years. However, unless Eisenhower cooperates with the Truman representatives who go to this conference there is no use having it. Truman will tell the General that unless that cooperation is forthcoming, he will have Secretary Acheson call the meeting off.

2. Prisoners of War—Truman wants the President-elect to issue a statement that he supports the Democrats 100 per cent in refusing to repatriate Chinese and Korean prisoners who do not want to return to Communism. Unless there is unity on this point, Truman argues, the Communists will play the role of divide and conquer, and prisoner talks can get nowhere.

3. The French and North Africa — Premier Antoine Pinay and almost every political leader in France is sore because the United States has voted to let the United Nations discuss Arab independence in French North Africa. The French consider this an insult, and Premier Pinay has wanted to come to Washington to discuss the entire matter, plus French Indo-China, before the U. N. talks go any further.

Since U. N. deliberation cannot be postponed, this is another vital problem needing Eisenhower's decision.

Friends of both the President and President-elect say that although the sparks may fly at first they will cooperate together for the best interests of the nation and in the end they will part as friends.

Riff by Raff

Several years ago when I was still in high school and college looked like something that would never come, I stood out on a North Carolina highway and with my thumb in the breeze, I was determined to see how Carolina was railroaded to gridiron popularity under the guidance of Choo-Choo Justice. Well, I made it to Chapel Hill and my hopes of seeing high football spirit were augmented only by th reality of observing the stadium in a not-too-rare (for those conquering days) state of pandemonium. The tumult of winning was ear-shattering and all the cheerleaders had to do was raise a finger and the stands would do vocal tumblesaults in praise of the big blue bombers.

I have to sort of chortle under my breath and at myself for having been taken in by such a group of happy hailers. At the Virginia game (like many of the others during the last two years) I felt like I was sitting in a doctor's reception room. If there ever was absolute silence it certainly existed in Kenan Stadium.

What I am getting at is that the fault lies not with the cheerleaders or the team (or the coach—though I doubt it), but with that finger-nail chewing mob sitting around the forty yard line. You know those people—they are pretty garrulous about five o'clock in finding fault with the cheering section, the leader, the team, and the coach. What's wrong with the team is another matter and I'm not concerned with that now. I just want to give a verbal castigation to those folk who complain about all these things and don't do anything about them.

I guess the fact remains that people are people and that's their biggest mistake. I don't know this fellow Bo Thorpe, but if he were Eddie Arcaro I still realize he couldn't make a dead horse run. Getting those stands emotionally pitched is like trying to make J. P. Morgan turn communist.

Of course, we all want to see a winning team and it's difficult to feel elated over the present pigskin situation after the memorable days of the reign of Justice. The boys out on the field this year however deserve just as much support. In fact, I think we all would agree that they could use a little more.

To offer a remedy other than the obvious would be silly, so the only suggestion that remains is to support what we have got even though we are not satisfied with it.

Booters Close Season Against Duke Here Today

Down In Front

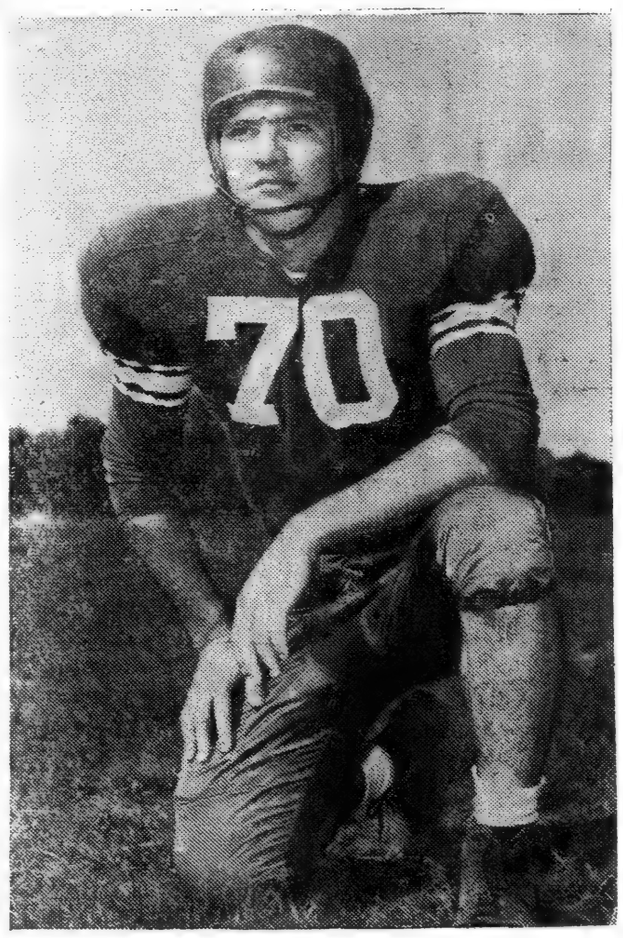
By Biff Roberts

An Appealing Decision

FOR MOST TAR HEELS the State of South Carolina has little appeal. But after last Saturday's dip down to Columbia most Carolina football fans are ballyhooing it as the number two state in the nation. We went down there with a spotless record—of wins, that is—and came back on the long end of a 27-19 score—the first time we had looked down on anybody since we beat the same Gamecocks here in Chapel Hill last year. We've got that first victory now, but where we go from there is another question that will take a heap of answering this Saturday. It's hard to say that we would have a successful season even if we did win our remaining two games, but when you win that Duke-Carolina game it can make a lot of people forget a lot of things.

In addition to winning the game we also discovered a few heretofore camaflauged elements of the Carolina football team. The game might have been another loss for the Tar Heels had it not been for the work of a freshman who started the season with the Junior Varsity, moved up to do some infrequent defensive work for the varsity, and then got his first offensive chance when John Gaylord re-injured his finger. Most of the sports writers didn't know who he was Saturday, because his name wasn't even on the program, but the name of Flo Worrell has gotten pretty familiar with Tar Heel football followers in the past week and promises to become even more reknown.

Dyna-Flo



WORRELL WAS THE SPARK that kept the Tar Heels from slipping into a mediocrity in the South Carolina game. True, the defensive line was holding well. The same applied for the running of Larry Parker and the passing of Marshall Newman. But without the running of the Wilmington freshman, the Carolina team might never have gotten its offense going full steam. The dyna-Flo gentleman showed an amazing speed, good power, and an evasive pair of hips. He's got all of the qualifications for a good halfback. He stands about 6 feet, 1 inch, weighs approximately 180—all of it compacted into a good frame. What impressed the press box observers so much was his ability to go up the middle or around the end. The first time he attracted attention came when he went up the middle of the South Carolina line and dragged three men with him to the four-yard line for a 15-yard gain. On the very next play he slipped around the right end for a Carolina score. Later he took a pitchout from Charlie Motta and did some tall scampering to streak 49 yards for another touchdown. Still later he took off on a triple reverse and showed his brilliance as a broken-field runner, almost getting away when he had run out of blockers before being hauled down from behind. His performance was one of the best turned in by a Carolina player all year. Worrell carried the ball nine times for 120 yards, a 13.3 average.

Others There, Too

THERE WERE OTHERS, too, who made the trip to the Palmetto State an enjoyable one. Francis Fredere, another Wilmington product, played his best game of the year as defensive tackle. The giant 6 feet, 4 inch junior was the main reason South Carolina's passing offense failed to produce in the second half. He was in like a burglar on most of the plays, and with the help of Thad Eure, a reserve tackle who may see a good bit of action this Saturday, kept Gamecock Quarterbacks Johnny Gramling and Dick Balka well spread on the South Carolina turf.

Larry Parker showed signs of returning to his potential form, too, getting off some good runs, but he was hampered by fumbles most of the day. It was this fumbling of the ball that held the Tar Heels from gaining more than the 263 yards they did make on the ground. They lost the ball seven times to the Gamecocks. With Duke as the opponent Saturday Coach Carl Snavely will certainly have to find a cure for fumblitis. The return of Bull Davidson certainly added to the lineup, too, and although Parker and Worrell pretty well handled the offensive work, Davidson was a much-needed aid on defense.

So, it looks as if the scene might shift for the Tar Heels. It's hard to keep coming back when you're slapped down every weekend. As the Republicans say, "It was time for a change." Things might be different now.

Football Team Works Hard For Blue Devils

By Tom Peacock

North Carolina's Tar Heels worked out under the lights yesterday in one of the hardest practices the football team has gone through in three weeks.

Teedie Bullock, freshman safety man who missed the South Carolina game because of a throat injury, was back out yesterday for the first time since last week. Bullock scored the only Carolina touchdown against Virginia on a punt return.

Carolina coach Carl Snavely continued working his defensive lineup against the plays of Duke's powerful split-T in preparation for the annual thriller this Saturday in Kenan Stadium.

The defensive secondary stressed pass protection against the quarterback-end combination of Duke's Worth Lutz and Howard Pitt. Carolina's pass defense has been weak all year, and Lutz's passes to Pitt are one of the biggest weapons on the Duke offense.

The team is up for the game, with morale at a peak after the 27-19 win over South Carolina last week. Duke is Carolina's traditional rival, always the team the Tar Heels are especially out to beat, and a win over the Blue Devils will do much towards making a season successful.

Snavely continues to stress condition, running the team each evening after scrimmaging. The Tar Heels are in the best shape they have been in for some weeks, with no new injuries to hamper them. Guard Will Alexander, whose condition was doubtful after suffering an ankle injury against South Carolina, will be ready for practice tomorrow. Alexander worked out in light equipment yesterday.

The Carolina offense concentrated on passing, with freshman quarterback Marshall Newman doing the majority of the throwing from the Carolina split-T. Newman's passes, especially a new jump pass last week, have led the North Carolina offense all year.

Freshman Flo Worrell, a former junior varsity back who surprised everybody with his running in the South Carolina contest, worked out on the first team for the first time this year. Worrell runs from right half.

The Carolina-Duke game is the major football contest of the State.

Spartans Top AP Grid Poll

Special to The Daily Tar Heel

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Michigan State's power-laden Spartans ruled the roost on the Associated Press' football poll for this week. With little Marquette the only club left on its schedule, it appears that the Spartans are headed for the national championship.

Because of the close call felt by Georgia Tech, and Maryland's upset at the hands of Mississippi, the Michigan State squad was out in front with nearly two-thirds of the first place votes in the polling of the sportswriters across the country. Michigan State compiled 80 first place selections, while second place Georgia Tech could muster but 14.

U.C.L.A. and Southern Cal were about evenly matched by the writers, with the Uclans receiving the third place vote while Southern California landed fourth. By virtue of their 47-7 victory over Missouri, Oklahoma's Sooners jumped from eighth to fifth.

Mississippi, victor over Maryland, ascended the ladder from 11th place to take the sixth spot. Tennessee is in seventh place, while the Terrapins fell from third to eighth. Notre Dame, in ninth, and Texas, in 10th, round out the top ten.

The top ten, with first-place vote in parentheses:

1—Michigan State (80) 1,168; 2—Georgia Tech (14) 1,020; 3—U.C.L.A. (9) 968; 4—Southern Cal (11) 911; 5—Oklahoma (1) 542; 6—Mississippi (4) 522; 7—Tennessee (4) 496; 8—Maryland 433; 9—Notre Dame 256; 10—Texas 242.

Carolina Fell 4-1 To Devils In Last Tilt

By Paul Cheney

Carolina's soccer team will close its 1952 season here this afternoon when it meets the Duke Blue Devils on Fetzer Field at 3:30. This is the end of a nine game card, which has seen the Tar Heels take four wins and lose as many times.

Coach Al Moore will probably field the same starting line - up which he has used all season long. Co-captain Ben Tison will start at goalie. Co-captain Barry Kalb will be at right fullback, with Burnie Burnstan at the left fullback post. This trio has sparked a rugged Carolina defense this season.

Buddy Barnes will start at his customary left halfback spot. Tommy Hopkins is slated to open at center half, while Dave Cole will probably be on his right.

Russell High Scorer

Coach Moore has a number of reserves who might see action against the Blue Devils. Among these are Louie Patseavorous, Fletcher Green, Drew Patterson, Ham Hamilton, Jim Skidmore and Bill Fetzer. Goalie Buckets Gladstone will back up Tison.

The Blue Devils boast one of the best soccer elevens in the south, and have had a prosperous season in spite of a 4-1 loss to powerful Penn State. Duke is led by its high scoring captain, Davey Strauch.

Lost Earlier

In a meeting between the two clubs earlier in the season at Durham, Duke took a 4-1 win over Carolina. The improved Tar Heels will be out to avenge this loss, as well as the 6-0 shutout they suffered at the hands of their traditional rivals last year.

Today the local booters will be trying to climb above the .500 mark. In Moore's first season as coach last year, the Tar Heels had four wins, four losses, and one tie. To date this season Carolina has four wins and four defeats. They have been defeated by N. C. State, Duke, Penn State, and Maryland, while winning from Virginia, Roanoke, Washington and Lee, and State in a return engagament.

PROGRAM SELLERS

All students who are interested in selling programs Saturday for the Duke-Carolina game should contact Bill Kuyck at the intramural office in Woollen Gym sometime after 2 o'clock in the afternoons before Thursday.

CCNY Suspends Holman, Two Others Indefinitely

Special to The Daily Tar Heel

NEW YORK, Nov. 18—A former head basketball coach and two officials of City College of New York were under suspension today as an outgrowth of the 1951 cage scandals.

Nat Holman, who coached his City College team to championships in both the NCAA and the National Invitational tournaments in 1950, was placed on the suspension list along with Professor Frank S. Lloyd, chairman of the faculty athletic committee, and Assistant Coach Harry Sand. The suspensions, without pay, were announced last night by college president Dr. Buell Gallagher.

Dr. Gallagher was acting on the recommendations of the City Board of Higher Education's committee on inter-collegiate basketball. The committee accused the three former CCNY officials of conduct unbecoming to the college.

Sigma Chi Tops Dekes, 15-0; Med School, Chi Psi's Win

The Sigma Chi's cashed in on an intercepted pass and a blocked punt and put together an almost impenetrable defense yesterday afternoon to eliminate the Deke's from the intramural tag football playoff.

The game was just getting under way good in the first half when the Deke's were set back by a penalty and then Buzzy Shull's kick was blocked in the end zone by Kelton to give the winners a lead that was never threatened.

It will be the Med School against the Med School today in the finals of the dormitory tag football playoffs. Med School 4 will meet Med 3 on field 3 at 4:15 for the title.

After the safety neither team was able to move the ball until a Deke pass was interccepted on the Deke 20 in the flat and run back for a touchdown, with Middleton going over for the score. Henning's placement was good.

About midway of the second half the Sigma Chi's started a drive after receiving a punt which carried them to their last score. The scoring play went about 40 yards with Kelton going over for the touchdown. Henning's kick was blocked.

The Sigma Chi defense had the Deke passers on the run all afternoon and intercepted many of their passes. The Deke's were never able to get their offense rolling.

In the other game in the fraternity division, the Chi Psi's upset the Beta's 14-6. The score was tied at 6-6 at the half but the winners came back after the half to score a safety and a touchdown.

The Beta's took the lead in the first half on a touchdown scored on a pass to Green. However, the Chi Psi's didn't wait long to tie things up as they scored on a play that went from Rhyne to Bradish.

The winning touchdown was also scored by Bradish in the second half on a short pass.

In the dormitory division the Med School 3 team won an easy 21-0 victory over Manley.

Pepper caught two passes for touchdowns, one thrown by Hall and one by White. The other touchdown was scored by White on a pass from Mooring.

The Med School also scored a safety when a Manley back stepped out of the rear of the end zone. Their point after touchdown came on a pass from Harrel to Mooring.

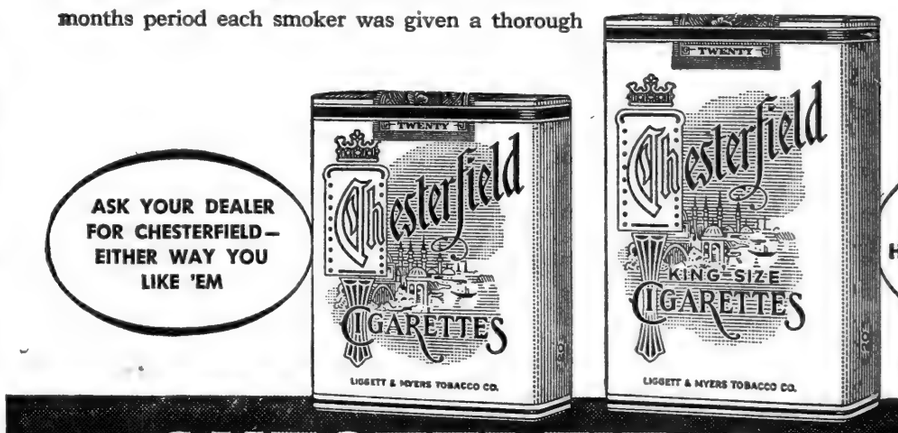
NOSE, THROAT,
and Accessory Organs not Adversely Affected by Smoking Chesterfields



FIRST SUCH REPORT EVER PUBLISHED ABOUT ANY CIGARETTE

A responsible consulting organization has reported the results of a continuing study by a competent medical specialist and his staff on the effects of smoking Chesterfield cigarettes.

A group of people from various walks of life was organized to smoke only Chesterfields. For six months this group of men and women smoked their normal amount of Chesterfields—10 to 40 a day. 45% of the group have smoked Chesterfields continually from one to thirty years for an average of 10 years each.

At the beginning and at the end of the six-months period each smoker was given a thorough examination, including X-ray pictures, by the medical specialist and his assistants. The examination covered the sinuses as well as the nose, ears and throat.

The medical specialist, after a thorough examination of every member of the group, stated: "It is my opinion that the ears, nose, throat and accessory organs of all participating subjects examined by me were not adversely affected in the six-months period by smoking the cigarettes provided."

NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON—President elect Eisenhower kept the road open yesterday for swift changes in Truman administration policies when he takes over the presidency Jan. 20. A carefully worded statement issued by Eisenhower and President Truman after their historic White House conference Tuesday emphasized that Eisenhower was not asked to assume—and did not assume—any responsibility for decisions taken by the Truman administration in its last weeks.

SEOUL—Allied troops in hand-to-hand battles hurled back three heavy Chinese attacks last night against the Hook—a vital mainline ridge guarding the western invasion route to Seoul. In the air, American Thunder jets attary headquarters and an oil stortacked a large Communist miliage area 25 miles from the Yalu river, leaving both targets in flames.

WASHINGTON — Informed sources said yesterday "several" government officials may face criminal prosecution in connection with an international wheat racket now under investigation by the Agriculture Department. The federal employees are said to have known about shady dealings with a group of Texas grain exporters alleged to be involved in the racket.

NEW YORK — President-elect Eisenhower and his two top lieutenants in Congress agreed yesterday that Eisenhower must have more time than the law allows now to reorganize federal departments. Sen. Robert A. Taft reported after a conference among himself, Eisenhower and Rep. Joseph W. Martin, Jr. that they had agreed on the necessity of asking the new Congress to extend quickly the law empowering a president to submit reorganization plans. Taft said early action on extending the Reorganization Act at least one year is needed because the present law expires April 1, and Eisenhower would not have an opportunity to prepare reorganization plans that soon.

Legislature's Mock Meet Opens Today

The Carolina delegation to the State Student Legislature will leave this afternoon to attend the 16th annual session in the Capitol building.

Over 250 student solons from 25 North Carolina universities and colleges are expected to attend the three-day mock legislature, Interim Council President Ken Penegar said yesterday.

Each school has three delegates in the Senate and in the House each school is permitted three delegates for the first 1,000 students in its enrollment and one delegate for each additional 400. Both houses are organized and operated like their real life counterparts.

The first bill on the calendar will be introduced tonight by the Carolina delegation. It is a resolution commending the Truman administration.

7 Questions

Control Of Legislature Still Vague

Official election results announced yesterday by Jerry Cook, chairman of the Elections Board, indicated that there might be a deadlock between the two parties in Legislature.

Altogether 22 Student Party Legislators as compared to 19 University Party legislators were chosen. However, there seems to be some doubt among politicians that the SP has a majority because of the vague leanings of seven doubl endorsed candidates.

Consensus of leaders from both parties indicated that five of the double endorsed candidates lead towards UP and two towards SP. A single independent legislator is reputedly SP inclined.

According to these suppositions by campus politicians, the contested race between Frank Plott (SP) and Gerry Wagger (UP) in Men's Dormitory District IV will determine whether SP has a majority or whether both parties have the same number of legislators.

Cook said that a runoff between the two candidates would be held only if the candidates requested it before 11:30 this morning.

The following were elected:

Freshman: President, Hartwell Conklin (SP), Vice - President, Bill Sanders (UP), Secretary, Elaine Allison (SP); Treas., Everette Parker (UP); Social Chairman, Anne Jacobs (SP). Juniors: Pres. Lew Wolfsheimer (UP); Vice-Pres., Fred Dale (UP); Sec., Ann Street (UP), Treas., Louie Patseavouras (UP), Social Chairman, Boatie Boatright (UP).

Student Council: Jimmy Adams (UP), Herb Cohn (SP), Wanda Philpott (SP). Men's Council: Freshman seat, runoff between Pete Adams and Scotty Hester; Sophomore seat, runoff between Kent Bradley, Herb Browne, and Al Mebane; Junior seats, Ozzie Ayscue and runoff between Art Einstein and Bill Patterson.

Women's Council (3 seats): Marilyn Habel, and runoff between Mary Bumpous, Mary Kit Myers, Carolyn Johnson, Nancy Shaw and Peggy Trotter.

Character Top Qualification For Selection

Seven girls were tapped into Valkyries in pre-dawn ceremonies early this morning.

Coeds chosen for the highest women's honorary on campus are Sue Ambler, Susan Bullock, Grace Dore, Teancy Matthews, Rosemary Scovil, Jane Webb and Rachel Williams.

"Leadership, scholarship and character are the basic principals upon which Valkyries are chosen," a Valkyrie spokesman said yesterday. "Of these, the Valkyries feel character to be the greatest. Looking at these girls as individuals their offices, honors and grades seem to be far in the background. The Valkyries feel that each in her own way has contributed a great deal to the University and a great deal to her friends," she continued.

Miss Ambler, Chicago, Ill., is a junior, majoring in French. She has been secretary of the Freshman Class, social chairman of the Sophomore Class and is now on Student Council. She has participated in the Splash Club, Glee Club and the YWCA. A member of Pi Beta Phi sorority, Sue is vice-president of McIver dormitory and chairman of the McIver house council.

Miss Bullock is a senior from Stovall. She is on the YWCA Vespers Committee, chairman of dorm vespers in Spencer and a member of the Infirmary Committee. She is secretary and treasurer of the Independent Coed Board.

Miss Dore, Raleigh, is a senior physical education major. She is president of the Women's Athletic Association and of Alderman dormitory. A member of Tri-Delt sorority, she is vice-president of Pan-Hellenic Council and served as Pan-Hellenic rush chairman during rushing. She is on the Recreation Committee of the YWCA and is a member of Canterbury Club.

Miss Matthews, Norfolk, Va., is a cheerleader and vice-president of Tri-Delt sorority. She edited the Women's Handbook last spring and was a member of the McIver house council.

Miss Scovil, Greenville, S. C., is a member of the YWCA Hospital Committee and Recreation Committee. She is secretary of Alpha Delta Pi.

Miss Webb, Chapel Hill, is a senior in the School of Business Administration. She is a member of the Town Girls' Association, Glee Club and Splash Club. Last year she was chairman of the Music Committee of the YWCA. She also belongs to the Citizens for Eisenhower Club.

Miss Williams, a senior from Prospect Hill, is president of Carr dormitory and a member of Residence Council. She also belongs to the Independent Coed Board and the Hockey Club. She was named "outstanding advisor during orientation" at the orientation banquet last week.

Student Cites Rule, Wins Parking Case

By Neal Reichle

A Carolina student used a State Superme Court ruling on ownership of a car to acquit himself of a parking violation in Recorder's Court here Tuesday.

Scott W. Spradley of Shelby argued his own case when he was given a citation for parking on the sidewalk. He remembered the Supreme Court ruling which said police had to prove that the owner of the car was the one who violated the law. The ruling was made concerning parking meters but Spradley thought it might apply in his case.

Officers Diggs and Creel of the Chapel Hill Police Depart ment testified that an old model Dodge was parked on the sidewalk on Cameron Ave. The officers said as they were putting a citation on the car, Spradley came out and said the car was his. He said he would move it, but by that time he had a ticket, Spradley told the court.

Spradley testified that it was his car that was parked on the sidewalk but that at least two other people had driven it since he parked it on the other side of the street. He testified that he had not parked the car on the side walk and did not know it was there until a boy told him that he was getting a ticket.

Spradley argued his case with the solicitor and Judge William Stewart found him not guilty.

In the case just before Spradley's, William O. Griffin of Williamston pleaded guilty to parking on the sidewalk and was taxed court costs of $7.50.

The only other student on the docket was Dedrich B. Alexander, who paid court costs for discharging fireworks.

Inter-Dorm Warns About Fireworks

The Inter-Dormitory Council yesterday reminded dorm residents that "shooting or possession of firearms or firecrackers, either in a dormitory or in the vicinity thereof, will not be permitted."

Anyone found guilty of the rule is liable for suspension from University.

Harrer Gets Welfare Post

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

BATON ROUGE, La., Nov. 19—Joseph W. Harrer, a graduate of the University of North Carolina, has been named Welfare Case Supervisor in Lafourche Parish, Louisiana, by the Department of Public Welfare here.

Harrer has been employed by the Welfare Department since his graduation from North Carolina in 1949, serving as welfare visitor and later as welfare case worker in the New Orleans area.

He served in the US Army from 1944 to 1946, and is married to the former Lois Bagwell. They will reside in Thibodaux, La.

Those initiates were Fred Alexander, Statesville; Fred Holmes, Wilmington; Al Joe Braxton, Scotland Neck; Ed Kearsley, Raleigh; Bob Carswell, Richard Hauser, Winston - Salem: Wilbur Bland, Charlotte; Joe Souhterland, Henderson; Bob McAdams, Roanoke Rapids, and Fred Crawford, Statesville.

Trustee Confab

Students who have talked or plan to talk to Trustees about Saturday classes here are asked to contact the student government office in Graham Memorial.

President Ham Horton said the information would be instrumental to his office in preparing the case against Saturday classes.

Need For Applause

When a college newspaper pats you on the back, it is usually looking for a soft spot to stab you. The time comes though for sincere commendation.

Therefore and herewith, The Daily Tar Heel offers congratulations to the following:

—The Elections Board for its smooth and swift handling of Tuesday's campuswide elections.

—The voting students who provided the above committee with an unusually large number of votes to count.

—The also-rans who polled less than a majority of the unusually large vote, but in keeping with traditions, ran a good race.

—The blood donors who so willingly gave to those who are so unwillingly in need.

—The faculty, sometimes at odds with those they teach, who stood shoulder to shoulder with the students on the issue of Saturday classes.

—The Carolina football team who stick-with-it-ness last weekend product one victory and promises of many more.

—Loyal Tar Heel supporters who remained after the Virginia game to stand and sing "Hark the Sound."

—The Film and Coordination Committees of the Student Union Activities Board for their excellent work in presenting foreign films and editing the campus calendar.

—The University Administration for requesting appropriation of the necessary funds to build a new Student Union.

—The Student Entertainment Committee for its presentation of outstanding entertainment such as United States Marine Band.

—All those Tar Heel rooters who are confident that Carolina will annex Duke Saturday.

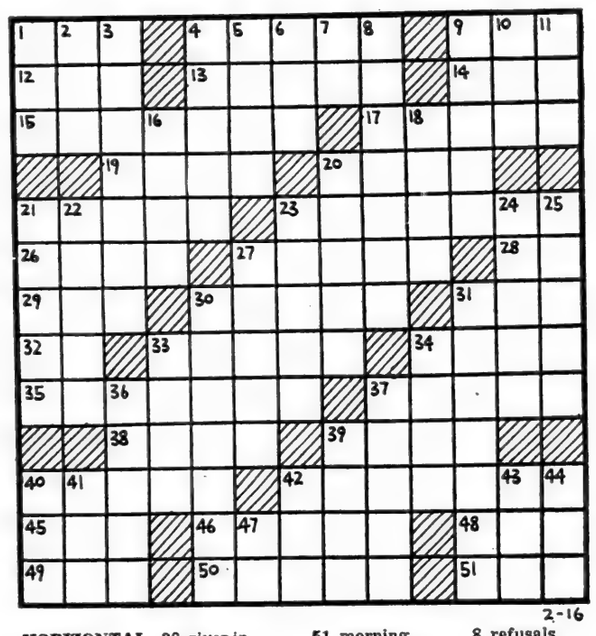
It seems to me in the short time that I've been here, the University of North Carolina offers many and varied courses useful in all and any fields of endeavor the graduate decides to enter into.

Perhaps the most useless of the above mentioned courses are those in some branches of physical education.



This quarter my physical education schedule is composed of boxing (the thoroughly useless waste of time, unless one intends to be a pugilist, which I do not advise) and tumbling, and equally usless endeavor.

These courses offer absolutely nothing except an inconvenience to the student, and the taking up of valuable time (the better part of two hours) in which the student could accomplish some needed studying.

I will not condemn, however, some of the beneficial courses of physical education which no doubt are of some value, such as golf, tennis, and swimming. Most of these, however, are electives. Boxing, wrestling, and tumbling on the other hand, are compulsory and of little use either as an enjoyable pastime or as a contributing factor to the physical well-being of the student.

Therefore, I feel that the student should be required to take six quarters of physical education. However, he should have his choice of some of the more interesting and practical of these courses.

Tar On My Heels

We can expect big things from Student Government now. Or can we?

Student Party—the party which has never had control of the Student Legislature since the conception of same now has such control, slight though it may be.

Some of the big things that can be looked for because of such control is a permanent redistricting of the entire campus, especially the town districts, abolishment of the class offices, and an attempt to delay fraternity rushing.

There are plenty of other things you can look for now SP has gained control of Legislature. The reason is rather evident: SP has never had control of Legislature and so has a huge backlog of old bills—unpassed and tabled permanently—that will come out of the files and trash cans. UP, on the other hand, with control for over 13 years has been able to push through whatever pets it once had, and so has become lax. At the same time Student Government has become known as a "do-nothing" dead duckling.

It was time for a change locally as well as nationally and such change has been put through in both places.

Last Spring a furor was raised. Student Party finally began to realize it would have to admit what it really is—a party of dormitory men and women. The Fraternity and Sorority cliques have been fully represented in Student Government, having had virtual control of at least one of the three branches of Student Government since it began.

SP, on the other hand, attempting to represent both factions of our campus, has failed in some cases to represent anyone.

Now they are representing someone. They are representing, primarily, dorm residents and other non-fraternity men. The UP is representing the rest. It is a prefabrication of the truth to put it any other way. This doesn't mean the SP is going to close down the fraternities and it doesn't mean the UP is going to evict non-fraternity men from campus. It unfortunately means there are two factions on campus, each represented by different parties. The fraternity men realized this long ago. Now there is an awakening to this fact by dormitory men.

Three weeks ago I predicted a large turnout at the polls this fall. Over 40% of the student body did turn out for, I still believe, one reason; an increasing interest in S.G. This large turnout loudly denounced the UP for the first time as far as Legislature is concerned. I say that because this was not a battle of personalities as the election of the president lends itself to become. This denouncement was securely on a party basis.

The denouncement came from the dormitories and neither party should nor will forget it.

But now SP is really in for it as dorm men look to see if the party they have supported is really for them. The piddling few fraternity men who have supported SP are going to want to know if the SP is realy the fraternity-hater they are tod it is by their "brothers."

The other fraternity men are already lost and so look for the worst because they are—for the most part—made up of men who believe the fraternities are the only thing at UNC and that any non-Greek is just so much trash. They have looked for, and in a great many cases found, this point of view among UP leaders. There are quite a few UP's who realize this, and dislike it, since UP like SP is made up of two factions.

At any rate, this is a big year for Student Government and SP is in a position not to be envied by UP. The increasing interest in Student Government by the student body is going to have to be met by an increasing and beneficial program from the Legislature.

Anyone for tiddlewinks?

"Hello, Ike—How Are You At Baby-Sitting?"

Drew Pearson

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON—Generai Eisenhower has received two invitations to visit Latin America and is considering the possibility of making a good-neighbor trip there before his inauguration Jan. 20.

The two invitations are from Mexico and Chile, both among the few remaining democracies in the western hemisphere. Though Chile is now under the presidency of General Ibanez, he was elected in a free election and has shown no tendencies toward dictatorship, though he staged an anti-U.S.A. campaign to get elected. The Eisenhower trip would help to melt Ibanez' frigidity.

If Eisenhower makes the pilgrimage, he would follow in the footsteps of Herbert Hoover who made a good-will tour of Latin America between the period of his election and inauguration.

Some of Ike's advisers urge that since Latin Americans generally hoped Stevenson would be elected, he should go; thus dispelling Latin-American predictions of a return to isolationist imperialism under the Republicans.

Sen. Lyndon Johnson of Texas will be the new leader of Senate Democrats all right, but some Democratic Senators are not at all happy about it. They figure that "Lyin'-Down," as he is nicknamed, will follow a pro-Republican line and there won't be much Democratic opposition to G.O.P. policies.

What Senator Johnson did to ensure his selection was to start a telephone barrage the day after election to line up votes for himself. When freshmen Senators such as "Scoop" Jackson of Washington and Mike Mansfield of Montana were pressured by Lyndon there wasn't much they could say except that they would support him.

Later, Mansfield was asked by an older Southern Senator why he had been stampeded into endorsing Johnson. The new Senator from Montana didn't have much of an answer.

"Don't you think it's healthy to have Texans leading the party in both Houses of Congress—Sam Rayburn in the House and Johnson in the Senate?" Mansfield was asked.

"I thought Lyndon was Sam Rayburn's boy," Mansfield replied. "And if there's anything I can ever do to repay Rayburn for the favors he's done me I'd like to do it."

Senators Paul Douglas of Illinois, Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, and Guy Gillette of Iowa tried to organize opposition to Johnson with Gillette urging Senator Lister Hill of Alabama to become minority leader. Senator Pastore of Rhode Island also urged Senator Clements of Kentucky to serve.

When Senator Fulbright of Arkansas sounded out Lister Hill, however, the Alabama Solon replied:

"No, sir, I had enough of being senate leader. If Lyndon wants that job let him have it.

"I don't know but what he's making an awful mistake, though," philosophized Hill. "He's up for re-election two years from now and look what's happened to McFarland in Arizona and what happened to Scott Lucas in Illinois.

"Every Democratic leader of the Senate of late has been defeated. And it's bound to happen again. For the man who's Senate leader just hasn't got the time to give to his own state.

So folks back home turn him out when his term is up.

"No, sir," concluded Hill. "If Lyndon wants that job, let him have it."

It isn't supposed to be known, but Governor Stevenson will come to Washington on or about Dec. 1 to spend an evening with President Truman and chart the future course of the Democratic Party.

Truman will pretty much turn over the party to Stevenson at that time.

One thing they will discuss is the chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee, now in the hands of Stevenson's former law associate, Stephen Mitchell. There are a lot of divergent views among Democrats as to what lost them the election, but one thing they all agree on is that Mitchell didn't help.

Mitchell did not call one meeting of the Democratic National Committee during the campaign, though urged to do so repeatedly. He would not even call regional meetings. He antagonized so many local leaders that many refused even to call him on the phone.

Stevenson may insist on keeping Mitchell, but Truman and everyone around him will urge that he be eased out.

Taftites aren't at all happy over the appointment of Herbert Brownell, former campaign manager for Governor Dewey, as chief patronage adviser for General Eisenhower.

In their opinion this means that jobs, for which the G.O.P. has been waiting 20 long, lean years, will now go to the Dewey wing of the Republican Party.

Brownell is under instructions to clear appointments with G.O.P. National Chairman Arthur Summerfield, who is a Taft man, and to work with the Republican National Committee. Furthermore, he is only to handle jobs below cabinet rank.

Nevertheless, leaders of the Taft wing are not at all happy. They foresaw something like this immediately after the Chicago convention at which Dewey and Brownell were largely responsible for nominating Eisenhower. And it was fear that the Deweyites might take over patronage that caused Taft to write a special patronage provision into the "Declaration of Morningside Heights" after his breakfast with Eisenhower.

Brownell went down to Augusta quite unobtrusively and the first thing the Taft people knew he had come back to New York with the job-screening ar-

Here is a sincere apology to Bob Midgett and the two patrons referred to in this column yesterday. I assure you the Saturday morning letter writing is of now no more. Bob, the attitude in which you took my requests is regrettable as this was not intended. The fine patronage accorded the Graham Memorial Barber Shop this season is greatly appreciated by the management. We shall continue to serve you to the very best of our ability, and shall continue in our efforts to locate an additional barber so that the shop may render you the services of another barber. Remember you look best for less by patronizing your barber shop in the basement of the Graham Memorial.

Having access, through the efforts of our Consolidated University Council, to your newspaper, a number of us were thoroughly amazed to see that only 350 members on your campus attended the mass meeting at which Ham Horton denounced.

This is a letter written by those unfortunates who have quietly, therefore ineffectively, suffered the ordeal of those classes to which you are so opposed; and though we envy you your two-day freedom, we're also behind you all the way in your efforts to suppress same. Nevertheless, it stands to reason that a name on a piece of paper, in petition form, is not nearly as potent as some true spirit expressed throughout the student body; why, one of the most important arguments against these classes would be hearing those Tar Heel voices in unison instead of by one mouth!

So, how's about some action, people!

Duke Tops Booters; Med-4 Wins Dorm Grid Title

Russell Gets UNC Marker In 3-1 Loss

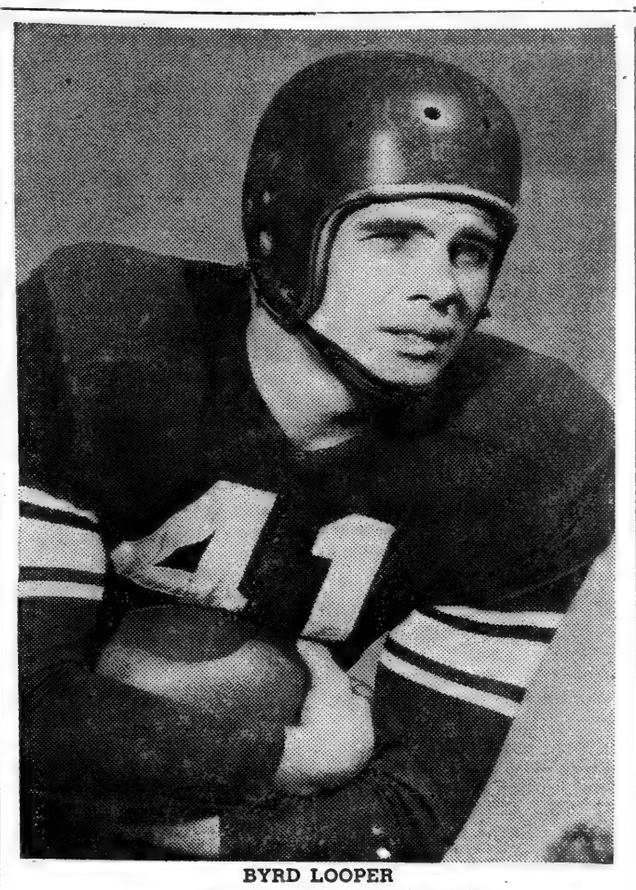
By Paul Cheney

Duke's Blue Devils took a 3-1 victory over the Carolina soccer eleven on Fetzer Field yesterday afternoon. This duplicated the score of another Duke triumph earlier in the season at Durham.

Davey Strauch, the Blue Devil's diminutive captain, was the whole show offensively for the winners. Strauch got all three Duke score, bagging two in the first half, and another in the second half.

After a scoreless first period, Duke broke into the lead early in the second quarter when Strauch made his first goal. He knotched another shortly after to give the Blue Devils a two point lead at half time. The Carolina attack could do little against the stout Duke defense during the first half.

Third Tally



In the third period Strauch got his third tally of the afternoon to bulge the Duke lead to three points. Soon afterward Gerry Russell, the Tar Heel's high scoring center forward, spoiled a Duke shutout by booting a goal. Russell's marker was the best kick of the afternoon. Harry Pawlik made a nice assist on the tally.

Strauch had some nice assistance on his offensive work from Schaeffer and Riquezes. Pawlik and Rennie Randolph along with Russell were outstanding in the field for Carolina. The play of Co-captains Barry Kalb and Ben Tison highlighted the Tar Heel defense, while goalie Ost-John shone for the Blue Devils on defense.

Evens Record

This loss evens the Tar Heel's overall season record at five wins and five defeats. In collegiate competition the locals own a four won and five lost record. Carolina has taken wins over the Cherry Point Marines, Virginia, Washington and Lee, Roanoke, and N. C. State. They have dropped decisions to Penn State, N. C. State, Maryland, and Duke twice.

Although this game closed the collegiate season for Carolina, the Tar Heels have one more game remaining on their slate. They meet the Cherry Point Marines in a return engagement here Monday afternoon. The local booters whitewashed the Leathernecks 3-0 early in the season. A victory on Monday will better the Tar Heels record of last year, which was four wins, four losses, and one tie.

Lettermen To Select Coed For Dixie Classic Queen

North Carolina's Monogram Club has been asked by the Dixie Classic officials to select a Carolina co-ed to compete with contestants from Duke, Wake Forest, and N. C. State for the honor of being named Queen of the Dixie Classic.

Each dormitory and sorority on the campus has an opportunity to enter a contestant in the contest to select the local representative. The contestants are asked to submit a photograph and attend an informal gathering so that the Monogram members will be able to meet them.

The girl selected by the U.N.C. Monogram Club will then compete with the other candidates for the crown. Her expenses, if she wins the title, will be paid by the Dixie Classic officials.

The queen will be expected to present trophies and individual awards to the Dixie Classic teams during the halftime presentations each night. She will be furnished a corsage each day of the tournament, and will receive tickets to sit in the guest box.

A full page in the tourney program will be devoted to the queen and her school.

LACROSSE MEETING

Lacrosse Coach Alan Moore yesterday asked all persons interested in playing lacrosse to please meet with him today at 4:00 in room 304 of Woollen Gym. This includes all of last year's monogram winners.

FROSH SWIMMERS

Coach Dick Jamerson asks that all freshman swimmers report to room 304 of Woollen Gym at 4:00 this afternoon to fill out eligibility blanks.

ID CARDS NEEDED

All students will be required to present permanent ID cards at the student gates Saturday for the Duke-Carolina game, the ticket office announced yesterday.

Sigma Chi's, Sigma Nu Go To Frat Final

Med School-4's Powerful squad, led by Ronney McKnight and a strong defensive line defeated Med School-3, 20-0, in a game which the winners dominated all the way for the dorm tag football championship yesterday afternoon.

The winners scored early to build up an unsurmountable lead and win going away. The first touchdown was scored by Right end John Baggett and the extra point was added on a pass from Thorp to Smitty Lineberger. This was enough to win as the winners put up a stout defense.

Back Runt Richardson put his team way out in front just before the half ended by scoring on a running play. The extra point was missed, giving the winners a 13-0 half-time lead.

In the last half Med School-3 put up a stout defense to stop every scoring threat of the winners with the exception of a long pass from Ronney McKnight to Smitty Lineberger. The play, covering 40 yards, completely fooled the secondary of the defensive team. The extra point was added by Thorp on a placement to end the scoring.

The Sigma Nu's turned on the steam to defeat the Zetes, 24-6, in a game that was dominated by the winners all the way. The winners scored three touchdowns in the first half to lead throughout the contest.

Led by Billy Duke, Sigma Nu scored three touchdowns on passes and one on an interception and then settled down to a defensive game to defeat the Zetes. Lyn Bond scored first on a pass from Duke, Gene Shaw added another midway the half and Bull Page scored on a pass from John Fountain just before the half ended.

In the last half the two teams matched scores as the defense took the reins. Joe Brewer scored for Zetes and Wallace Pridgen added the last touchdown for the winners on a lateral interception. All the extra points were missed.

Sigma Chi used a strong offense and a tight defense to defeat the Chi Psi's and go into the finals of the fraternity division this afternoon.

The strong Sigma Chi's scored 13 points in each half while holding the losers scoreless to win easily in a game that was supposed to be close. Led by the defensive play of Bobby Bell, the winners stopped several scoring threats of the Chi Psi's in the last half to assure their victory.

Tar Heels To Taper Off Today After Long Scrimmage Under Arcs

The Carolina football team will start tapering off today in practice, after finishing the contact work for the week yesterday with a lengthy scrimmage under the lights on Navy Field.

Pass defense is still one of the biggest problems bothering the Carolina coaches, and Head Coach Carl Snavely continued to stress defense against the passes of Duke Quarterback Worth Lutz,

The Carolina offense, which never got started until last week against South Carolina, was one of the bright spots in practice. Quarterbacks Marshall Newman, Charlie Motta, and Lou Britt alternated at directing the ground and air game of the Tar Heels.

Over at the Duke camp in Durham, Coach Bill Murray also finished most of the rough work for the week yesterday. Duke has played poorly in its last three contests, and the Blue Devils are out to run up a high score against underdog Carolina.

Duke has thoroughly scouted the Tar Heels, and Murray and his chief scout Dumpy Hagler have assured the Blue Devils that Carolina is no pushover. Confidence still runs high on the Duke squad.

The Carolina squad didn't get a chance to see the pictures of the South Carolina game until Tuesday because of a delay in shipping, and Carolina coaches aren't satisfied with the play of the team despite a 27-19 win.

Although the outcome of the Duke game is never sure until after the final whistle, there hasn't been an upset in a Duke-Carolina game since 1940 when the Tar Heels squeezed by, 6-3. Carolina holds a one-game edge in the series, winning 18 while losing 17 and tieing three. There is still a dispute over the 1889 game, which both schools claim as a victory.

Duke is heavily favored in the Conference and Big Four play with a spotless record, with a 7-2 record for the year. The game is Duke's last of the season, while Carolina plays Miami the following week.

Monogram Meeting

Movies of the Carolina-South Carolina game will be shown at the meeting of the Monogram Club at 7:15 in the club room tonight.

Discussion of the Dixie Classic queen will also continue and all members are asked to be present.

Thanksgiving Service Is Announced Here

An inter-faith community-wide Thanksgiving service will be held in the Chapel Hill Baptist Church on Thanksgiving morning at 10 o'clock.

The service is sponsored by the Chapel Hill Ministerial Association.

Participating in the service will be the Rev. C. T. Boyd, the Rev. John A. Weidinger and Rabbi Ephraim Rosenzweig. The Rev. E. C. Cooper will preside and the sermon delivered by the Rev. William Howard. Music will be provided by members of the Baptist Church choir.

An offering will be taken which will be used for work among the migrants sponsored by the North Carolina Council of Churches in the eastern part of North Carolina.

The committee planning the service is composed of the Rev. Richard R. Jackson, chairman, Dr. R. J. McMullen, Dr. Samuel T. Habel and the Rev. J. R. Manley.

The public is invited to attend.

Needed: Generosity

International students on the campus will spent Thanksgiving in the homes of generous North Carolinians if some generous students will provide rides to the hosts' homes.

The YWCA said yesterday it needs rides for four to Morganton, four to Fremont, four to Goldsboro, one to Clinton, two to Washington, (N. C.), one to Stovall and two to Asheville.

Persons with hospitable automobiles are asked to phone the YWCA at 9-9181.

House To Give Beauty Lecture

Chancellor Robert B. House will give the Fall Quarter lecture in the Humanities tonight in Gerrard Hall at 8:30.

The Chancellor's subject will be "Where Beauty Dwells." He will discuss the place of the humanities in a well-rounded education.

Wives Group Meets, Names New Officers

The first meeting of the Y Wives was held Tuesday night at the Carolina Inn Apartments with 13 present.

This group, sponsored by the YWCA and open to all student wives, met to discuss organization, fellowship, and opportunities for service. The following quarterly officers were elected: President, Mrs. James Zeller; Vice-president, Mrs. Bill Cupp, and Secretary - Treasurer, Mrs. Gus Harrer, Jr.

Those present elected to meet bi-monthly on the first and third Tuesdays, the first meeting to be a business meeting, the second, social. The next meeting will be held on Dec. 2, at which time Mrs. Tom Barth will be in charge of the program.

Those interested should contact Mrs. James Zeller, 155 Daniels Road, Victory Village, or Miss Gay Currie at the "Y" Building. Baby-sitting for mothers wishing to attend will be provided by the YWCA Office—courtesy of YWCA Social Committee.

Grail Ticket Sale Will Begin Today

Tickets will be on sale in the Y Court today, tomorrow and Friday from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. for the Grail dance to be held in Woollen Gymnasium Saturday night.

Prices are stag, $1 and couples, 75 cents.

The informal affair will last from 9 p.m. until midnight and will feature the music of the Duke-UNC Cavaliers.

The dance is a joint Duke-Carolina affair climaxing the long slate of weekend activities.

Unitarian Panel Set For Sunday

General discussion on questions raised by Dr. A. Powell Davies' recent talk here will be the program for the Unitarian Fellowship when it meets Sunday night at 8:30 at Gerrard Hall.

There will be an informal panel and discussion on the various questions will be open. Dr. Davies' talk was an "The Danger of Preaching from the Bible."

Panel members are Charles Vickery, Harriet Doar and Jim Beshers.

NEWS IN BRIEF

NEW YORK — President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower announced yesterday that he had picked three members of his cabinet—John Foster Dulles of New York, Charles E. Wilson of Detroit, and Gov. Douglas McKay of Oregon. Eisenhower announced that following his inauguration he would send to the Senate the nominations of Dulles as Secretary of State; Wilson as Secretary of Defense, and McKay as Secretary of the Interior.

WASHINGTON — President Truman said yesterday he is very happy over Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's views on the Korean prisoner of war issue, and declared "this country is a unified organization in its policy toward the rest of the world." In his first post-election news conference—his first in fact since Sept. 25—Truman laid emphasis on unity and on the effort to make the shift of power to President-elect Eisenhower as smooth as possible.

OXFORD, N. C. — A violent short-lived tornado struck the Oak Hill School community near here Wednesday night, destroying six buildings and causing $400,000 damage. The 15-room consolidated Oak Hill School was wrecked by the violent wind. Oak Hill is in Granville County, about 15 miles north of Oxford. Striking before midnight, the tornado cut a swath of destruction about 600 yards long and 400 feet wide.

QUONSET PT., R. I.—Three officers and five enlisted men died yesterday in the crash into the sea of a P2V, a Neptune bomber 70 miles southeast of Block Island. The plane, participating in anti-submarine exercises, made a pass at a submarine, then hit the water, the Navy said. It was operating with a second plane at the time.

Frosh Sponsor Show Tonight At Carolina

"Something for the Birds", a comedy starring Patricia Neal, Victor Mature and Edmund Gwenn, is being presented at the Carolina Theatre tonight by the Freshman Friendship Council of the YMCA.

The show will begin at 11:15 and will be over in time for coeds to get back to their dorms by 1 a. m.

Over $40 in door prizes is being offered and one does not have to be present to win. The winning numbers will be called out at the theatre and posted at the Y. Prizes will be presented to the winners at either place upon presentation of ticket stubs.

The following is a partial list of prizes and donors on display in the Y lobby: Huggins Hardware, a University tray worth $3.95; Intimate Book Shop, $3 worth of books; Foisters Camera Shop, a picture frame worth $2.25; Dairy Bar, three banana splits worth 55 cents each; Campus Shoe Fixery, $3 worth of repairs; Berman's Dept. Store, $2 worth of merchandise; University Cleaners, one suit cleaned; Milton's Clothing Cupboard, one necktie; Jack Lipman, one necktie.

Other donors are Electric Construction Company, Wentworth Sloan Jewelers, Sutton's Drug Store, Danziger's and Town and Campus.

About That Prof

Students are being asked for their ideas on how to improve relations with the faculty.

More than 300 questionnaires have been mailed out, mostly to the Senior Class. Eventually, the Student-Faculty Committee of the SUAB hopes to send out 1,500 forms. Forms are available in the Y Lobby for those who desire to express themselves on the question.

Results of the effort will be published when tabulated.

Of Legislature

One Race Holds Key To Control

By Louis Kraar

The runoff election between Frank Plott (SP) and Gerry Wagger (UP) was the issue of importance among campus politicians yesterday as both parties sparred for a legislative majority.

The Student Party has 25 legislators, including two double endorsed and one independent candidate who lean toward SP, as a result of the election. The University Party has 24 legislators, counting five double endorsed candidates who are UP inclined.

The race between Plott and Wagger in Men's Dormitory District IV will hold the key to the battle. If Plott wins, SP will have a majority of two and if Wagger wins, UP will have the same number legislators as its opposition.

Both SP and UP leaders are putting their heads together to further the campaigns of their respective candidates. The runoff race is slated for Tuesday, according to Jerry Cook, chairman of the Elections Board. The decision will be up to the residents of Mangum, Manly, Emerson Stadium, Joyner, Grimes and Ruffin who make up the district.

Cook announced the following were elected because their opponents who would have been in a run-off with them did not submit requests for the runoff: Scott Hester, freshman seat on Men's Council, Herb Browne, sophomore seat on Men's Honor Council, and Bill Patterson, junior seat on Men's Honor Council.

Mary Bumpous, Carolyn Johnson, Mary Kit Myers, Nancy Shaw and Peggy Trotter will compete for two junior seats on the Women's Council on Tuesday.

Morehead Financial Aid Is Available

The John M. Morehead Foundation yesterday invited graduates of North Carolina universities, colleges and junior colleges to apply for Morehead Graduate Scholarships for 1953.

Application papers may be secured from the University Scholarship Office, 302 South Building. The completed applications are due Dec. 15, 1952.

All nominees from UNC must be members of the current (1953) graduating class, Chancellor Robert B. House said. Only male students who have completed the requirements for a bachelor's degree from UNC, as a member of the class of 1953, will be considered, he said.

The bases of selection are scholastic ability and attainments; qualities of manhood, truthfulness, courage, devotion to duty, sympathy, kindliness, unselfishness and fellowship; evidence of moral force of character and of capacities to lead and to take an interest in his schoolmates; and physical vigor, as shown by interest in competitive sports or in other ways.

The Nominating Committee of the University, appointed by Chancellor House, will make its nominations on Jan. 15, 1953. The Trustees of the John Motley Morehead Foundation will announce the 1953 Morehead Scholarship Awards early in 1953.

Nominating committee members for the University are Chancellor House, chairman; Prof D. D. Carroll, vice chairman and Deans T. H. Carroll, Clifford Lyons and Guy B. Phillips.

The value of a Morehead Graduate Scholarship for each college year is $1500. Undergraduate scholarships are valued at $1250.

Pore Critturs Fleeing Sadie In Big Doins'

Every Coed Has Her Day, Ladies This May Be It

By John Jamison
Dogpatch Editor

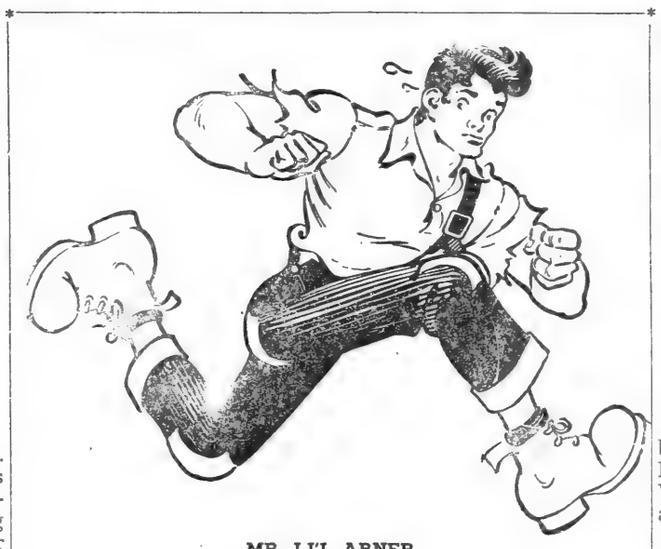
Now, you've done it, men. Just by getting out of bed this morning, you miserable, shivering, cow-eyed, turnip-eating bachelors have risked your cherished liberty.

For you see, men, sun-up today marked the beginning of Sadie Hawkins Day.

"I hereby declare and assert," declared and asserted President Ham Horton, "Friday the 21st of November, 1953, to be Sadie Hawkins Day, on which occasion it shall be legal and moral for each and every Chapel Hill coed to take, seize, capture, kidnap, attack and attach any male of the aforesaid town, and that this Sadie Hawkins Day shall begin at dawn and end at sunset the 21st. Hereunto have I set my hand and seal of office, this the 20th day of November, 1952. Ham."

All this legal talk means the following perpetrations are going to be perpetrated on Carolina men today:

After having sneaked around to their classes this morning, these unmatrimonied wretches are going to watch the Dook Float Parade at 3 o'clock from any reasonably safe vantage point (e. g. hollow trees, garbage cans).



When the parade is over, eleven of these unhappy critturs are going to be rounded up in the Y Court and auctioned off to hundreds of screaming, clawing coeds. The medium of exchange for the auction will be human kisses.

Carolina men to be put on the block are Biff Roberts, Ham Horton, Bill Williamson, Sidney Hoots, Walt Dear, Lou Brown, Billy Evans, "Brother" Crawford, Fred Hutchins, Jones York and Ed Gross. Jim Wilkinson will be auctioneer.

The quadrangle behind South Building will be the scene of a three-legged race, a wheelbarrow race and a one-legged race.

Then comes the big foot race to determine how many of these whining males will lose their bachelorhood. A whole passel of unmarried women will be turned

Coed Poisoned As Mock Trial Slated

By Tom Parramore

Coed Sally Guerry's scream pitched second McIver into a temporary panic yesterday afternoon as she walked into her room and found her roommate Carman Nahm dead on the floor.

An autopsy conducted at the hospital late yesterday revealed that the popular coed had died of poisoning by potassium cyanide.

Miss Guerry's statement after she had been questioned was:

"I came home from lab to get my mail. I went upstairs and stopped in Barbara Reed's room. Then I got a phone call and went to my room to get ready for a date.

"I walked in the door and Carman was on the floor. I screamed and called Sue Ambler and Sue called the ambulance and got Mrs. Cook (housemother)."

Thus, began the Law School's annual mock trial. Sponsored by Phi Alpha Delta, the law fraternity, the trial will be held in the law courtroom on Dec. 5.

Seems that Miss Nahm was helping the future lawyers to put one over on McIver residents so everything would seem as real as possible.

Cook Elected SSL Speaker

By Jody Levy
DAILY TAR HEEL News Editor

RALEIGH, Nov. 20 — Gene Cook, head of Carolina's delegation to the State Student Legislature here, was elected Speaker of the House.

Joel Fleishman was chosen Parliamentarian of the House and Ken Peneger got the presidential election for the Plenery session which opens tomorrow.

Over 200 students from 25 North Carolina schools attended the opening session of this three-day mock legislature. Each school has three delegates in the Senate and in the House each school is permitted three delegates for the first 1,000 students and one for each additional 400. Both houses are organized and operated like their real life counterparts.

Big Parade Will Feature Entries Of 38

In Case of Rain Event Is Slated Tomorrow At 10

Thirty - eight floats have been entered in the big Beat Dook parade which leaves Woollen Gym this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

In addition, the colorful parade will feature the drill teams of the AFROTC and NROTC, the NROTC Drum and Bugle Corps, the University Band and the Lincoln High band.

Organizations entering floats from the Women's Dormitory Division are Alderman, Carr, McIver and Spencer; from Men's Dormitory Division are Aycock,

There will be a bonfire pep rally tonight on Fetzer Field. Students are asked to meet at the Y Court at 7:30 and a parade will form there. After the Fetzer Field rally, the cheerleaders will lead the rally to the Sadie Hawkins dance.

B-V-P, Lewis and Stacy; representing sorority interests will be Alpha Delta Pi, Alpha Gamma Delta, Kappa Delta, Chi Omega, Delta Delta Delta and Pi Beta Phi.

Fraternity floats are being entered by Alpha Tau Omega, Beta Theta Pi, Chi Phi, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Delta Psi, Kappa Alpha, Kappa Sigma, Lambda Chi Alpha, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Gamma Delta, Phi Kappa Sigma, Pi Lambda Phi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Chi, Sigma Nu, Sigma Phi Epsilon and Tau Epsilon Phi.

Other attractions will be a Chesterfield float, a Sadie Hawkins float, clowns and the cheerleaders.

The queen's float will be a garden scene with the queen on a throne and six attendants near her on the float. Matt Wood of Enfield, is in charge of construction of the queen's float.

To get to Woollen Gym entrants are to take Country Club Drive to the Raleigh Road, take a right turn there and move up to their places. There will be a sign indicating where each division will begin.

Judges will be Fred Weaver, Roy Holsten, Capt. John S. Keating, James Street and Nolan Rogers, president of the Duke men's student body.

In the event of rain, the event will be postponed until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Dog In Solitary After Biting Coed

"George", the campus collie, got run in by the Chapel Hill Police Department yesterday.

The Collie, who was treated at the veternarian's office several weeks ago after being shot in the face, allegedly bit coed Harriet Hill. "George" will be confined for 14 days while he undergoes tests for the rabies. He is residing again at the veternarian's.

The coed could not positively, identify the dog as "the one called George." Investigating policemen, however, said the collie was "George."

Dance Ducats

Tickets continue on sale today for the Grail Dance after tomorrow's Duke - Carolina game.

The dance will be held in Woollen Gym from 9 p.m. until midnight. Tickets are 75 cents for couples and $1 for stags. They are on sale in the Y Court from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. today.

Run For Your Honey

Boys, put on your track shoes and running shorts—Sadie Hawkins Day is upon you.

Following the Duke Float Parade, the men of the campus will run for their bachelor life across South Building mall—the coeds close behind them.

Coeds, if you're among the 90 per cent, now's your chance to get caught up with the Carolina males. If you're among that lucky 10 per cent, here's your opportunity to start a string or enlarge your present one.

It will be a fair race. Each Sadie lady making a legal catch (anything under 100 lbs. must be thrown back) will be awarded a marriage certificate, ceremony, and a free telegram to her parents reading, "Relax, Pa, I got one."

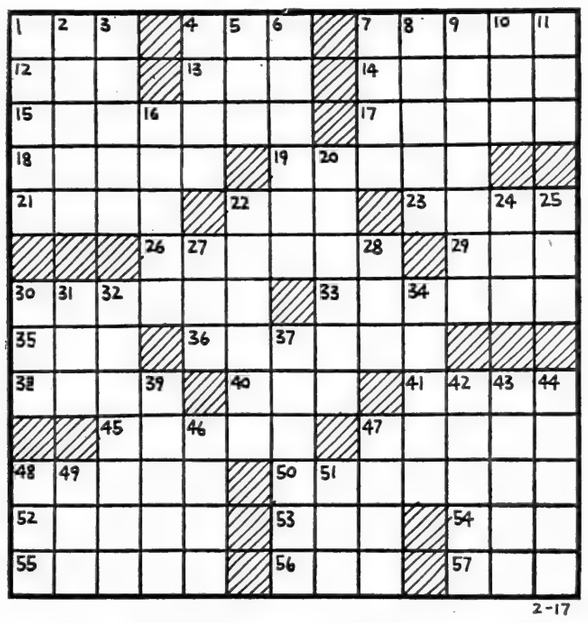
Males escaping capture will start against Duke on Saturday.

Express Yourself

Editor:

One week ago at this time, the students of this University were banding together in a great crusade — a crusade with the visible intent of placing before our worthwhile Board of Trustees, feasible and intelligent reasons in opposition to Saturday classes.

Fellow students; today, just one week later, we are a dormant body. All opposition has ceased and we don't even know the opinion formed by the visiting committee last Friday. I am not proposing revolt, but as a member of this student body subject to Saturday classes I feel that it is my privilege to know what has happened. It seems that our opposition has been completely ignored, just pushed aside and forgotten.



We are not children nor do we serve to be treated as such. Why are we not informed as to the action taken by the Board of Trustees? Are they going to keep it under cover in much the same way a mother hides the medicine bottle from her young child and then pops the medicine into his mouth before he knows what has happened. Are we going to come back here next fall and discover only then that the Board of Trustees has decided to uphold Saturday classes.

I propose that a committee be appointed immediately by President Horton to find out why this matter has been so quickly and effectively hushed up. This committee would also have as its purpose to inform us as to what concrete progress has been made in determining the true facts.

Have we lost the fight? Are we to give up so quickly and without any further opposition? Are we, as well as our faculty, going to submit so easily to the will of men who will not even consider our honest pleas? Are we going to let these men hush it up so that we can not know the effect of our opposition? I sincerely hope not.

ZACK WATERS, JR.

(Since we haen't room for a column and a half of editor's note, we suggest you: 1. Contact Ham Horton in the student government office, or 2. Contact The Daily Tar Heel offices. The fight is not dead; the facts are not hidden, and nothing has been hushed up. We also suggest you get out some old Daily Tar Heels, where the story has been covered completely. — Ed.)

Editor:

I would like to comment on Bill Brown's column, "Tar On My Heelss," in yesterday's Daily Tar Heel, as a UP representative, without any connection with my necessarily nonpartisan position as chairman of the elections board.

As you know, the SP jumped to the conclusion that it had a majority in the legislature—the way I see it, the body will very likely be deadlocked.

In consequence I hope that both parties will now realize that they must work together if they want to get something done in student government this year. The SP and UP seem to be bumping headss in an attempt to effectively hinder each other for fear that the other party might get credit for some legislation.

The parties battle so much over so many things that should be bi-partisan in the legislature, that they are leaving the students they supposedly represent out in the cold. This "I'm aginnit" attitude toward proposals merely because they are presented by the other party, must stop.

The SP's self-styled title—"a party of dormitory men and women"—is a rather distorted opinion the SP has taken of itself. How can this be possible when most of the leaders of the party are in fraternities and sororities? For instance take the chairman, secretary, publicity chairman, and other leaders. The party claims to be the protector of the dorm men in order to get their votes.

The UP now has representatives from three dormitories, and plans to get representatives from all the rest now that the elections are over. I can imagine how the SP will feel about this.

The only reason the UP hasn't done this before is that the dorm men haven't taken the initiative needed to get a list of 25 people who want to be represented in the party. Now, the party is seeking and encouraging the dorm men to get representation in the party.

Another thing—I dislike very, very much the gulf you, Bill, like to widen between fraternity and non-fraternity men for the benefit of the SP. We are all students at UNC and every type person should be represented in each party. I admit that the UP has been guilty of being too much pro-fraternity in the past, but it is slowly overcoming this.

As you say, the SP has failed in some cases to represent anyone, but I don't believe it is because of an "attempt to represent both factions of our campus." I feel it is because of the basic setup of the SP. Each person is representing himself and only himself. It appears to be a group of students just trying to get each other into office. I think I am qualified in saying this—I was an SP legislator and was affiliated with the party when I was a freshman. I believe this attitude squelches interest in student government.

At least the UP members are representing some group of students whom they have to answer to besides their own party cohorts.

Frankly, I don't think the reduction of UP seats in the ligislature was the results of the large turnout "loudly denouncing" the UP. I believe it was because the SP mechanized their "paper publicity" campaign in such a way that they beat the UP to the punch and got the names of individuals up before the students first. In all the districts but Cobb, (where the UP candidates over - campaigned) the winning candidates won because they posted their names in more places than their opponents did. The denouncement is non-existent.

The statement that the majority of Greeks feel that any non-Greek is "so much trash" is trash. You sound a little bitter, Bill. Most people are alike—they judge a person by what he is, not by his extra-curricular activities. I don't know where you got that wry idea.

I hope this will be a good year for Student Government and I just hope that the two parties can get together long enough to get the student government apathy out of all the students. Let's try that for a change, shall we?

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON, Last Sunday, the day the hydrogen bomb explosion was announced, I happened to go to church. I say "happened" because a television program and a radio broadcast both coming on a Sunday ordinarily makes it hard for me to go to church.

But the telecast is being switched to Wednesdays, so I surprised Mrs. P. by taking her to church, where I listened to Rev. John R. Anschutz preach a sermon on prayer. Knowing that the hydrogen bomb announcement was due to be made later that day or the next morning, I did quite a bit of thinking about prayer, and the fact that maybe if we had relied more on prayer and the things that go with prayer, we wouldn't be in the predicament of building bomb shelters and going underground for fear of explosions that could burn up our civilization.

Over at the Alexandria, Va., church where George Washington used to worship, Rev. O. V. T. Chamberlain chose as his closing hymn: "The Day Thou Gavest Lord, Is Ended."

That expressed some thoughts of mine too.

For the day the Lord gave us could very well be ended if we and the Russians ever get to trading hydrogen bomb blows across the Artic.

On the other hand, I also figured that bombs never killed an idea, and our greatest natural resource is not plutonium or tritium, but our moral and spiritual strength.

Religion and Communism cannot survive together. But one trouble is that religion has got to mean more than a refuge from ruthless force. It must be a pattern for life, not a ritual for one hour on Sunday.

Another trouble is that men of all faiths and of little faith have been seeking ideas to defeat Communism, when right around the corner the best idea of all is being neglected — the Sermon on the Mount, given us 2,000 years ago as a daily guide for living with each other.

The big trouble, of course, is to get that daily guide adopted not only here, but also behind an iron curtain where religion is barred and where we can't even mail a package.

I have been harping for so long that I guess people are tired of hearing me, about the fact that there will always be danger of war—no matter how many H-bombs we build or how many men we draft—as long as we can't speak to the Russian people, can't mingle with them, can't cooperate with them in a free press, free radio, free church, free books, and free contact with the outside world.

As long as 12 men in the Kremlin can declare war with no Congress, no church, no press, or power of public opinion to put on the brakes, there will always be danger of war and the day thou gavest, Lord, may be ended.

I have tried in what feeble ways I could to show that the iron curtain was not as impenetrable as it's supposed to be. I once traveled along it from Turkey to Berlin showing up its loopholes; and in cooperation with the crusade for freedom I helped float 11,000,000 leaflets via balloons into Czechoslovakia and Poland.

These at best were puny efforts, though they showed, from the reaction on the other side of the iron curtain, how eagerly its people welcome contact with us.

Today, however, we have two opportunities which need not be puny. First we have a new and powerful hydrogen bomb, thereby giving us tremendous bargaining power to break down artificial barriers preventing peace.

Second, we have a new President. He is a man of great prestige, known throughout the world and in Russia. And he has what Franklin Roosevelt had, a flair for dramatics, the ability to win people, to capture their imagination. Whether you agree with him politically or not, Eisenhower is and can be an international salesman. And that's what's needed today in selling the world new instruments for peace.

It is always possible at the beginning of a new administration to form important, new and dynamic policies.

That's because outgoing leaders become jaded and get in a rut. Our present outgoing leaders have put across some milestones against communism for which historians will give them great credit — The Marshall Plan, the North Atlantic Pact.

But the sheen is off these policies now. They are shopworn and lackluster. They still form a firm foundation on which to build for prosperity and peace. And on them a new administration can build bigger things—if it has courage and imagination.

Seldom in history has a new President come into office when the peoples of the world had reached a lower ebb of despondency, when the danger of total war was potentially greater, and when there was placed in the new President's hands greater bargaining power — the hydrogen bomb.

In another year that bargaining power may be gone. The Kremlin by then may have the H-bomb. But until then a new leader with courage, imagination, conviction has a heavensent opportunity to reopen the Baruch Plan for the control of atomic energy, and simultaneously open up the iron curtain to American truth, culture, and the American people.

If the latter can be done, the Korean war and all kindred problems will automatically solve themselves.

A letter of advice to the lovelorn columnist Miss Dixie Dorth:

Dear Miss Dorth: We have a horrible problem and we hope you can give us help. I am writing as a representative of my fellow women students at Carolina.

Our remorse is just too, too awful to bear. There are only about 600 of us, while there are over 4,000 men students. But we still don't have dates for the Duke-Carolina game and the other activities of the week-end.

The trouble is, the men all bring in a bunch of nasty old imports from other colleges all over the state and even up in that heathen place of Virginia. And they won't ask us for dates. The reason is, they want to get sloppy drunk, but they can't drink in front of Carolina coeds. And they don't want to bring us home at a reasonable hour.

Here we try our best to look beautiful for them all the other days of the year and we always fill in when they need a quick date for a movie or something. But then, being ungrateful men that they are, they go off and get those horrible old imports for big events like the Duke-Carolina week-end or the Germans or all the other big things.

We have just reached the end of our rope, and don't know where to turn. We just can't sit home every time there's a big week-end. So we are turning to you for advice. What can we do?

Please rush an answer immediately, so we will know what course of action to follow. Sincerely, Worried.

Dear Worried: Miss Dorth has asked me to send you her advice. She said in matters of love and the like, it is every woman for herself. She would have answered your letter herself, but she was preparing to leave for Chapel Hill just as it arrived. She has a date with a Carolina man for the week-end. Sincerely, her secretary.

Tar Heels Finish Secret Practices Today

Down In Front

By Biff Roberts

A Good Trade In

TWO WEEKS AGO YOU couldn't have gotten a trade with 20 points on Carolina's sputtering model-T, but since Coach Carl Snavely has added Dyna-Flo Worrell to his offensive engine people are beginning to figure that the Tar Heels might run pretty well Saturday against Duke. With Marshall Newman as the driver the dealers believe the new '52 Carolina model ought to be a pretty good trade with Duke—if you throw in seven points.

Since we beat South Carolina last Saturday people have started looking on the Tar Heels with kinder thoughts in their minds. And this boy Dyna-Flo is the big reason we took the Gamecocks—and our big hope, along with quarterback Newman, to give the Blue Devils an upsetting. Without Worrell our offense at Columbia might have been as mediocre as in the past games. It's right amusing to look over the Carolina team statistics and look at the offensive running averages. Leading the list is Larry Parker, who did some fine running in his own right at South Carolina, with a total of 142 yards in six games. Chal Port, who trotted 73 yards against Wake Forest, has a total of 119. But the funny part concerns Worrell, who has 120 yards to his credit—all of it in the South Carolina game.

Backs At It Again

SO YOU CAN SEE that a lot will depend on this Wilmington fire horse and what he can do against the oft-tried and thoroughly-tested Duke line. That Blue Devil forward wall ranks as the best in the Southern Conference so its evident the Dyna-Flo will have to be shifted in to high gear for the game. If anybody can do it then it seems that Worrell is the man. He showed a good bit of everything at Columbia, gaining up the middle, around the end, off tackle and just about anywhere Newman and Charlie Motta sent him.

With Dyna-Flo at halfback Coach Snavely will have probably his best backfield since the Notre Dame game when Bob White got shipped to the sidelines with a fractured cheek. Parker will definitely be a starter and if he can run as well as he did at South Carolina—at the same time keeping a handle on the ball—then the Duke line will be in for a testy day of it. Then, too, King Carl will have John Gaylord, Bud Wallace, George Wallin, Bull Davidson, and Connie Gravitte to throw in there to make sure the Tar Heels keep rolling.

In The Hole

BUT IT'S STILL a basic principle of football that to keep the backfield going you need the linemen up front. Next to Worrell's revelation probably the most inspiring part of Carolina's victory over South Carolina was the improvement the line showed—on offense and defense. One of the main reasons we weren't able to move the ball and give Newman good protection early in the season was the inexperience of the offense line. If there isn't some kind of hole in the line then the Choo himself couldn't make any headway.

The defensive bunch stacks up with the Blue Devils pretty well. Francis Fredere seems to have finally found what to do with his 221 pounds and was a standout against the Gamecocks, especially in the second half when he broke up so many pass plays before they got started. Thad Eure played his best game of the season against South Carolina. With Jim McCreedy nursing a slight injury he will probably be in for a good bit of action. Coach Carl Snavely will have his most dependable linemen in action, too. Tom Higgins, George Norris, Junior Seawell, and Dan Mainer have consistently been play stoppers all season long and there's no reason they can't do the same tomorrow.

Can The Director Produce

NEWMAN, AS THE DIRECTOR of producer's Snavely's play, will have a lot of pressure on him when he faces the Devils but he's shown every indication of being able to handle the situation. The Clinton freshman was off on his passing against Virginia, the last time Chapel Hill stay-at-homes saw the Tar Heels (and what a sight it was), but his performance against the Gamecocks made up for it. He continues to look better on the option play and seems to have recognized his ability to run with the ball. He had a creditable 3.3 yards-per-try average against the Gamecocks, which is good for a passer when you consider he has a lot of distance knocked off when he is trapped trying to get the ball off. A lot of his yardage came when he took the ball from the SC 35 to the 10 after being trapped back of the 50 while trying to pass.

So with our sudden turn onto the victory highway, the addition of a good front bumper, Dyna-Flo added to the engine, and a much-improved driver at the wheel, the Carolina model-T might run pretty well tomorrow. I believe I'd trade it even for the millon-dollar Duke model.

Snavely Lets Up On Team

Carolina head football coach pulled the shroud of secrecy even further over the pre-game practice of his team as the Tar Heels went through their last extensive workout before meeting Duke here tomorrow.

Chapel Hill police were doubtful about the security risk of anyone not in a Carolina practice uniform. The secrecy was justified, as Snavely put the team through its paces, and ran most of the Tar Heel plays.

Snavely alternated two backfields against the jayvee secondary, quarterbacks Charlie Motta and Marshall Newman sharing the duties in a passing drill.

Defensive assistant coach Jim Gill worked with the Tar Heel defensive line, stressing the off-tackle and end plays of Duke's powerful backs, Jack Kistler and Charlie Smith. Coach George Radman continued to drill the first string secondary on the passing of Duke quarterbacks Worth Lutz and Jerry Barger, and concentrated especially on the plays to end Howard Pitt.

A dark spot in the outlook for Carolina was the injury of Chal Port in practice Tuesday. Port pulled a muscle in his right thigh while running, and trainer Fritz Lutz reports that he will definitely be lost in tomorrow's contest. Port has one of the top rushing averages on the team, and excelled at defense last week against South Carolina.

The team worked out on Fetzer Field yesterday because the lower Navy Field was a quagmire of mud, and practice was cut shorter than previous ones this week as there are no lights. The Tar Heels will run through a light workout tomorrow, their last before the game.

The weather was a slight worry to Carolina coaches, as the weather bureau predicted warm and sunny skies for the game and the team accustomed to the coolness of this week. Any handicap it has on Carolina will be on Duke too, however.

The Blue Devils finished their serious workouts for the week yesterday, too, and coach Bill Murray was pleased with the showing his charges made. The Duke spirit has been low for the past three weeks, but the Blue Devils are way up for Carolina and are out to win for the third straight year. A Duke win will give the Blue Devil seniors a perfect slate against Carolina.

Duke is first in the Southern Conference, and has already beaten Wake Forest and State, the other two Big Four teams. Tomorrow's game is Duke's last of the year, and win will give it undisputed first place in both Conference and Big Four play.

Duke has been paced all year by the passing of quarterback Worth Lutz and a strong defensive line, headed by two massive tackles. Lutz and right end Howard Pitt have been a deadly combination for Blue Devil opposition all year. Defensive tackles Ed Meadows and Tank Lawrence are among the best in the Conference, and are expected to give the Carolina running game a lot of trouble. Guard Lou Tepe is another Duke defensive line standout.

Globetrotters Will Be In Raleigh Saturday

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 20—A big basketball doubleheader is set for the William Neal Reynolds Coliseum at North Carolina State College Saturday night at 8:30 o'clock.

The spotlight will be on the fabulous Harlem Globetrotters, who will meet the Boston Whirlwinds in the finale of the twin bill. The other two teams are the Philadelphia Warriors and the Baltimore Bullets, who will clash in a regular National Basketball Association league game.

Seldom do fans in this section have the opportunity of seeing a regular NBA game. Some of basketball's most famous names are in the Philadelphia and Baltimore lineups.

Among the famous players who will be in the Philadelphia lineup will be Bill Mlkvy, former Temple University star; Ed Mikan, brother of the famed big George and himself an ex-Depaul great; and Don Lofgran, who played in the Coliseum against N. C. State while a member of the San Francisco University team.

Other Warrior players and the colleges where they first gained sports fame included Moe Radovich, Wyoming; Nelson Bobb, Temple; Neil Johnston, Ohio State; Andy Phillip, Illinois; George Senesky, St. Joseph's; Joe Fulks, Murray State; and Claude Overton, East Central Oklahoma.

The Warriors captured the loop title in 1946-47 and took Eastern Division honors in 1947-48 and in 1950-51. They've never finished lower than fourth and thereby have always qualified for the post-season playoffs. Only twice have they been under the .500 mark for the season.

W. Z. Betts, director of the Coliseum, said the pre-game ticket sales have been "very good." He reported that all $3.00 tickets have been sold, and the remaining ducats are going at a fast pace. Tickets may be obtained at the Coliseum Box Office, North Carolina State College, Raleigh.

Sauer NL's Top Player

Special to The Daily Tar Heel

NEW YORK, Nov. 20 — Hank Sauer, the rags to riches outfielder of the Chicago Cubs, today was named the Most Valuable Player in the National League for 1952 by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

The selection of the 33-year-old Chicago slugger came as a surprise to many as Sauer slumped badly during the last month of the season following a brilliant start.

Sauer won his circuit's highest honor by a narrow margin over Robin Roberts, the graceful right-hander of the Philadelphia Phillies, and Joe Black, the rookie relief expert of the pennant-winning Brooklyn Dodgers.

The Chicago star collected 226 points out of a possible 336. Roberts, who won more games than any other pitcher, 28, finished second with 211. Black was third with 208.

Three writers from each major league city participated in the balloting. Points were awarded on 14 for a first-place vote, nine for second, eight for third and so on.

Oklahoma Stays With Big Seven

NORMAN, Okla., Nov. 20—The University of Oklahoma and the rest of the Big Seven Conference were apparently in tune again today after the Sooners backed down on a move to bolt a conference rule and play in a post-season football game.

University officials and team members decided yesterday that they would rather stay in the Big Seven than play in the Orange Bowl and thus violate the post-season game ban, reaffirmed by the conference only last week.

But they were still hoping that the conference would make an exception or abolish the rule and

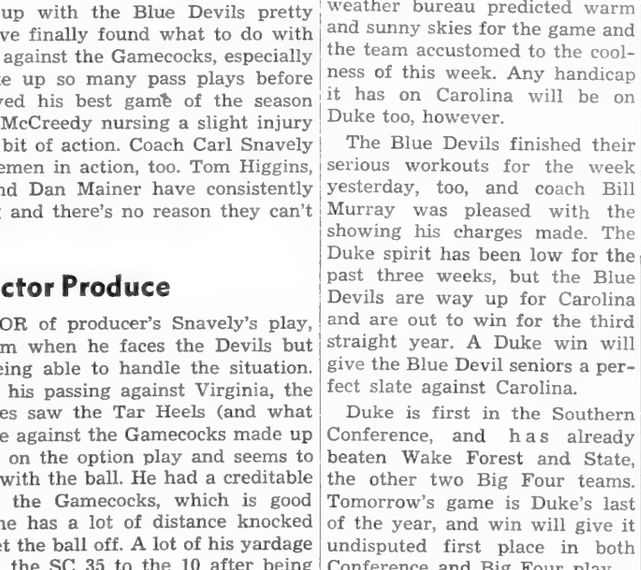
Slay Is Selected 'Lineman Of Week'

James Edwin (Bud)) Slay of Waynesboro, Miss., and a senior end on the University of Mississippi football team, has been named "Lineman of the Week" in the weekly Associated Press poll.



Slay, 185 pounds and six feet, one and a half inches tall, was selected for the honor as a result of his brilliant play against Maryland as Ole Miss toppled the nation's No. 2 team from the unbeaten ranks.

Phi Assembly Backs More Cuts

Wednesday night the Phi Assembly overwhelmingly passed a resolution endorsing unlimited cuts in classes of the University, a basing of grades upon tests and not upon number of lecture hours attended, and a two day warning period of significant tests.

The wording of the bill was done by Representative Don Angell.

A bill endorsing Carl Snavely, coach of the University football team, was defeated at the same meeting by a tie vote.

Humanities Practical As Science

Religion, literature, music, arts and the other humanities are "just as practical as the sciences" in the development of a well-balanced education and a well-ordered life.

This view was stressed here Thursday by Chancellor Robert B. House who delivered the fall quarter lecture in the humainities at the University.

Addressing an audience of faculty, students and townspeople in Gerrard Hall, he summed up the theme of this series of lectures—on the value of the arts to an educated person—which was inaugurated in 1944.

He was presented by Dr. Dougauld MacMillan, chairman of the English Department.

Chancellor House stressed the view that a proper balance should be maintained between the humanities and the social and physical sciences.

Taking the position that America is the most practical nation in history, Chancellor House said this nation unhesitatingly applies the practical test to any field of value and that by any test "the humanities are utterly practical.

"They are knowledge basic to all other knowledge; and, since knowledge is basic to action, they are basic to all thought and action. Moreover, the humanities are the arts of expression, execution, and communication.

"No sound work is possible without them. And, finally, recreation is as practical as work; and the humanities are the greatest known recreational resources. No sound play is possible without them."

Chancellor House's subject was "The Educational Function of the Humanities." He took his text from a line by Alfred North Whitehead, the great modern philosopher, who said: "Show youth where beauty dwells and there it will abide."

He also quoted a pasage from the poet Keats who said: "Beauty is truth, truth, beauty—that is all ye know on earth, and all ye need to know."

Chancellor House said he was convinced that "more good teaching goes on in this University today than in my day because the spirit remains the same and the means have increased. It is wonderful to me to see art, music, drama, religion functioning today as departments," he declared.

An alert student today can "absorb a certain amount of culture here now that was not available 30 years ago," he said. . . . "Real education is active, but I believe more good studying goes on now than formerly."

Phi Delts, Alderman Win Cup

Mangum Dorm, Tri Delts Also Share Honors

Tri-Delts, Phi Delts, Alderman Dorm and Mangum Dorm took first honors yesterday in the Duke float contest.

The Tri-Delt entry consisted of a huge, leering man licking a sucker. The float bore the legend, "Lick Dook," and carried several Tri-Delts who tossed suckers to spectators.

Phi Delta Theta's float carried a red and blue replica of the Bell Tower with chimes playing Carolina songs. On the rear was a praying Blue Devil, bowed over the Duke "grave." A sign said, "Poor Dook Is Dead." Phi Delt Ty Boyd said his fraternity's float was the result of three days' efforts and $50.

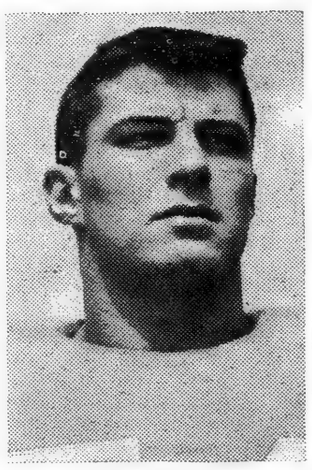
Pi Kappa Alpha Clayton Jackson, whose fraternity sponsored the contest, said yesterday cups will be awarded the winning organizations at half-time of today's game.

Queen for the parade was Carman Nahm, who was sponsored by Sigma Chi. She rode on the PiKA float with six attendants. They were Ann Sory, Mary Elizabeth Lindeman, Ann Jacobs, Judy Taylor, Page Moore and Judy Landauer.

Yack Beauties Are Picked Before Appreciative Males

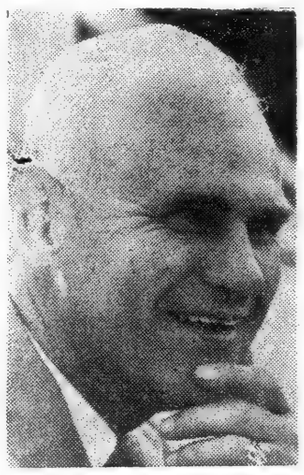
By Walt Dear

Carolina men got a dazzling sample of coed beauty Thursday night when the annual Yackety Yack Beauty Contest produced 70 lovelies with 12 singled out to appear in the 1953 yearbook.



The winners and their sponsors: Carman Nahm, Sigma Chi; Bish Fox, Pi Kappa Alpha; Sara Rose, St. Anthony Hall; Beth Lloyd, Alpha Tau Omega; Lindy Lindeman, Alpha Tau Omega; Rita Begmanis, Smith Dorm; Virginia Wilson, Chi Omega; Paige Moore, Phi Delta Theta; Kathleen Dever, Alpha Gamma Delta; Mase Chapin, Delta Delta Delta; Ann Hartzog and Peg Hall, Phi Kappa Sigma.

The complaints about local talent were squelched for at least an evening as an almost all-male audience cheered each each entry. The audience had less cheers for a three man judging squad from the N. C. Press Photographers' Association.



One of the judges remarked that the lighting was inadequate. "I had a hard time judging the first 30 because they went through the paces so quickly."

Master of Ceremonies Jimmy Capps, commenting on the fast entrances and exists of the girls, finally quipped as one coed left the stage, "And this yong lady is sponsored by the track team."

In spite of the disappointments of those that didn't make the finals, the audience was treated to a full stage view of all 70 at the end of the show.

Carolina Seeking Second Win Of Year Over Team Which Has Lost But Pair

By Tom Peacock
DAILY TAR HEEL Assistant Sports Editor

Carolina's Tar Heels, boosted to seasonal heights by their first victory of the year last weekend, will try to shake off the be-devilment of Duke's Worth Lutz and his split-t this afternoon.

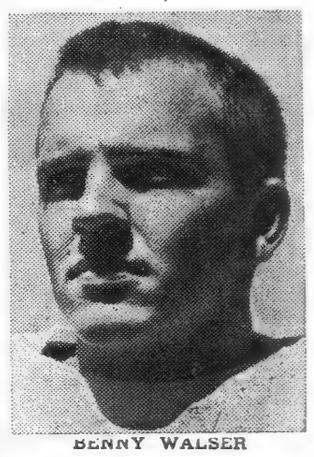
Kickoff time is 2 o'clock in Kenan Stadium, and a sellout crowd of 44,000 is expected for the annual neighborhood rivalry.

Carolina will be trying to extend its winning streak to two games at Duke's expense, but the Blue Devils are 8-point favorites over Carolina. Pre-game odds are usually disregarded because of the intense rivalry in Duke-Carolina contests.

Carolina has won but one game this year, a 27-19 victory over the University of South Carolina last week, while Duke has won seven games over such powerful opponents as Tennessee, Virginia, and Wake Forest.

N. Carolina	Pos.	Duke
Kocornik	LE	Keziah
Lambert	LT	Green
Foti	LG	Grant
Kirkman	C	Tepe
Neville	RG	Bonin
Yarborough	RT	Holben
Walser	RE	Pitt
Newman	QB	Lutz
Parker	LH	C. Smith
Worrell	RH	J. Smith
Wallace	FB	Looper

The Blue Devils have lost two games, one to Georgia Tech, the second-ranked team in the nation, and the other to Navy, a top defensive outfit. Duke and Carolina have played four mutual opponents, Duke winning against all four, and Carolina defeating one. They are Tennessee, Virginia, Wake Forest, and South Carolina.



The Tar Heels are given a good chance to win, however, as Duke has looked poor in its last three games, while Carolina has steadily improved.

The Carolina offense has had trouble getting started all year, but the discovery of a fleet freshman halfback and the improved play of the offensive line last week enabled the Tar Heels to muster their best scoring effort of the year.

The discovery, Flo Worrell of Wilmington, was brought up from the jayvee squad to play defense a few weeks ago, and made his first offensive effort last week, scoring two touchdowns and gaining 120 yards.

Another freshman, quarterback Marshall Newman of Clinton, will handle Carolina's split-T and passing games. Newman's passes have been a bright spot for Carolina head coach Carl Snavely all season, and Worrell plus the improved running of left half Larry Parker are expected

NEWS IN BRIEF

NEW YORK — President-elect Dwight Eisenhower yesterday appointed two more members of his cabinet. They are George M. Humphrey, Cleveland, O., as secretary of treasury and Herbert Brownwell Jr. of New York as attorney general. Eisenhower also announced that he would name Harold E. Stassen, long-time contender for the Republican presidential nomination, as director of the Mutual Security Agency, succeeding W. Averell Harriman.

WASHINGTON — William Green, president of the AFL, died yesterday at his home in Conshocton, O., the AFL announced. An AFL official said death came at 1:22 p. m. EST. He said Green, 79, died of a heart attack. It was the second death of a major labor leader within a month. Philip Murray, head of the rival CIO, collapsed and died at San Francisco Nov. 9. Green's death left alive only John L. Lewis, head of the Independent United Mine Workers, of the three major labor leaders of the past two decades.

NEW YORK — Sen. H. Alexander Smith said yesterday after a lengthy conference with President-elect Eisenhower that Ike's forthcoming trip to the Far East would involve only a visit to Korea, by-passing Japan. "He is just going to Korea and he is not going to Japan," the New Jersey senator, one of the ranking Republican members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, reported.

WASHINGTON — Creation of a super council in the Eisenhower administration to mastermind a cold war offensive against the Kremlin seemed assured yesterday by the announcement that John Foster Dulles will be the next Secretary of State. Dulles, like President-elect Eisenhower announced his selection for the post on Thursday, has made clear that his first major new goal in foreign policy will be to wrest the initiative in the global conflict from Russia.

Truman Is Lauded In SSL Resolution

By Jody Levey
DAILY TAR HEEL News Editor

RALEIGH, Nov. 21.—Carolina delegates Julian Mason and Henry Lowett proposed a resolution commending President Truman that was carried by both houses of the State Student Legislature today.

The resolution introduced by Mason in the House and to the Senate by Lowett, praised the president for "his courageous leadership, his statesmanship, and his devotion to his fellowman." It called his place in history "a colorful page in the struggle for a better life and world for all."

Speaking for the resolution were Bob Pace and John Faust of Carolina. Opposition to the move included George Lynch of Duke University.

Carolina delegates voiced further complaints against Saturday classes by means of bill requesting the five day system remain in effect at UNC.

A bill to revised the election of trustees of the Consolidated University was passed. Copies of this bill will be sent to Gov. Kerr Scott, President Gordon Gray and the trustees.

The State Student Legislature took a rap at the South Carolina referendum passed in Senate. The bill said "Assembly goes on record as condemning the people of South Carolina for this action and puts upon their conscience the blackness of misdeed."

Twenty-four delegates from the University attended this mock legislature session. The Carolina delegation is headed by Gene Cook, who was elected Speaker of the House at Thursday's session. The session closes Saturday morning.

Tickets On Sale Here For Big Play

Tickets are now on sale at Swain Hall for the Carolina Playmakers presentation of "John Brown's Body," which will come to Memorial Hall Jan. 9-10.

The cast will include Tyrone Power, Raymond Massey and Judith Anderson, and the world-famed Walter Schumann Choral Group of 20. It will be directed by Charles Laughton. Prices for the production are $2.20, $3.30 and $4.40.

This is the first large-scale translation to the medium of the stage of Stephen Vincent Benet's epic poem of America which has been called the greatest work of literature yet to come from the pen of an American writer. It has been undertaken by Paul Gregory, who startled the world production of Bernard Shaw's of the theater last year with his "Don Juan in Hell," which also was sponsored here by the Playmakers.

The "John Brown's Body" company has just completed a limited engagement in San Francisco which was received by audience and critics with acclaim, and hailed as a "smashing victory" with "ringing eloquence and memorable dramatic impact."

WILLIAM GREEN, who had been president of the American Federation of Labor since 1924, died yesterday of a heart attack. He was 79. The recent death of Phil Murray of the CIO along with Green leaves only John L. Lewis of the UMW alive in the big three of labor. —Central Press picture.

Tables Turn As Men Bid On The Coeds

By Louis Kraar

Shivering Carolina Dogpatchers witnessed a strange new twist to their annual Sadie Hawkins celebration as scores of male students began bidding on the almost legendary Carolina coeds yesterday afternoon.

Over 200 students, mostly men, gathered in the Court for the festivities which were originally to feature the auctioning of male campus celebrities to the female populace for kisses.

The absence of Dogpatch apparel was obvious, but the spirit was there.

Walt Dear, newly elected editor of The Daily Tar Heel, submitted rather reluctantly as the first piece of merchandise on the kiss market. Attired in the latest Dogpatch fashions, straw hat, plaid shirt and an overcoat reputedly made from flour sacks, Dear brought nine kisses from a pert coed. Dear, when questioned about the coed said, "Don't know her name, but I enjoyed it."

Campus politico Sol Cherry was next on the auction block. He was bought by Virginia Hall whose exaggerated eyebrow paint simulated the Wolf Girl. "It was great," exclaimed Cherry after the kiss.

After this, the sale was a real bargain for the men. Jeff Johnson and Toni Kelly, co-chairman of the Sadie Hawkins fiesta, brought bids that sounded as high as the national debt.

Jim Wilkinson, chairman of the celebration, drummed up the trade for the kiss mart with some glib announcing over a public address system. He jokingly hailed Cherry as a "big politician on campus" and promised to the Editor Walt Dear called his first staff meeting yesterday for Monday at 4:30 in The Daily Tar Heel newsroom.

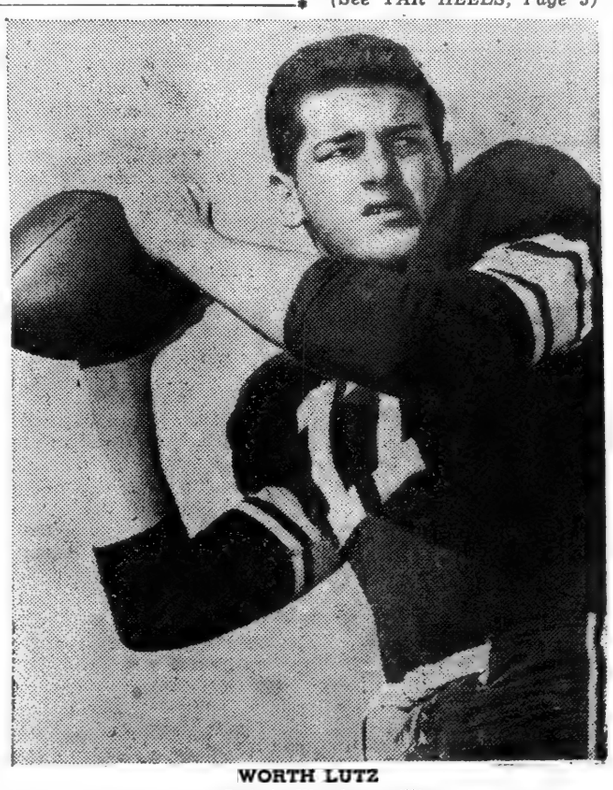
Dear asked all staff members to be present. He also extended an invitation to students interested in working on the newspaper to attend.

No Sunshine Today, Just Plain Cold

Tar Heel football fans needn't look to the skies for sunshine today. The weatherman says it's going to be cloudy, with the low expected to be near a cold 50 degrees.

The cloudy weather comes as a result of a storm over Western North Carolina. Another storm is forming off the Carolina coasts and small craft warnings are up all along the North Carolina beaches.

Snow fell in a number of counties northwest of Asheville early yesterday but only flurries fell on the city and surrounding area.



Helpful Hints For Driving Here Today

If you're taking in the Duke-North Carolina football game today here's some helpful traffic information.

One-way traffic east to west will be invoked starting at the intersection of NC 751 and US 54 (Hope Valley Road) at 12:30 until game time. Two lanes will flow into the Kenan Stadium area.

After the game, one-way traffic from Chapel Hill towards Raleigh, will be enforced on highway 54 to the intersection of 751. The left lane of this traffic pattern will be required to take 751 (Hope Valley Road) with right lane continuing toward Raleigh.

Residents of Glen Lennox must use the new by-pass (without entering 54) or Mason Farm Road. However, the by-pass will be blocked off to all other traffic.

A Mock Poisoning

Police Still Searching For Clues In 'Murder'

Local law enforcement officials yesterday were pursuing leads in an effort to discover the "murderer" of coed Carman Nahm.

While no names of suspects have been revealed, officials hinted an arrest probably will be made within the next few days.

The "murder" was staged by Phi Alpha Delta law fraternity in preparation for its annual mock trial.

Miss Nahm, chairman of the Women's Council, was found lying on the floor of her room in McIver Dormitory by her roommate at approximately 4 p.m. Thursday. Miss Nahm was taken to the hospital by an ambulance from Walker's Funeral Home and was pronounced "dead" upon arrival. A subsequent autopsy determined that death was caused by potassium cyanide.

Police yesterday revealed discovery of a bottle of cough medicine in Miss Nahm's room which contained a lethal amount of the poison. No motive for the crime has been established, police say.

Members of the legal fraternity are working in close cooperation with law enforcement officials.

Extra Show For Visitors At Morehead

In order to give weekend visitors an opportunity to take in performances of the current Morehead Planetarium showing, "The Heavens Tonight," the regular sch dule has been arranged.

Today the football crowds may see an 11 a.m. performance and another will be given immediately following the Carolina-Duke game in Kenan Stadium. The regular 8:30 performance is also scheduled.

Regular performances are given at 8:30 each evening and matinees on Sunday at 3 and 4 p.m.

Visitors to "The Heavens Tonight" will "behold telescopic images of heavenly objects, situated particularly for observation this month," Manager A. F. Jenzano said. "Subject matter concerning our neighbor worlds is presented in the form of an interesting sky story."

A Remedy, Too

More than 600 student hours a year are being wasted during pre-registration due to an antiquated liason system between South Building and Archer House.

During November and again in March the pre-registering student is called for a conference with his Dean. After selection of courses for the coming quarter, the student is handed a Green Form and told to present same at Archer House.

Upon reaching Archer house, the student hands in the Green Form, receives a yellow card and is told that he may pick up his class tickets on Jan. 5.

The Green Form is changed in no way from the time Dean X hands it to Student Y until Student Y turns it in at Archer House. Yet twice a year 4,000 students are forced to make the trek from South Building to Archer House.

Simple arithmetic produces our figures, based on five minutes time between the two houses of administration. This is a needless waste which should be eliminated.

The remedy is simple: A single university employee could make the rounds of the Deans offices once a day, pick up all completed forms and deposit them at Archer House. The time involved: perhaps one hour.—C. W.

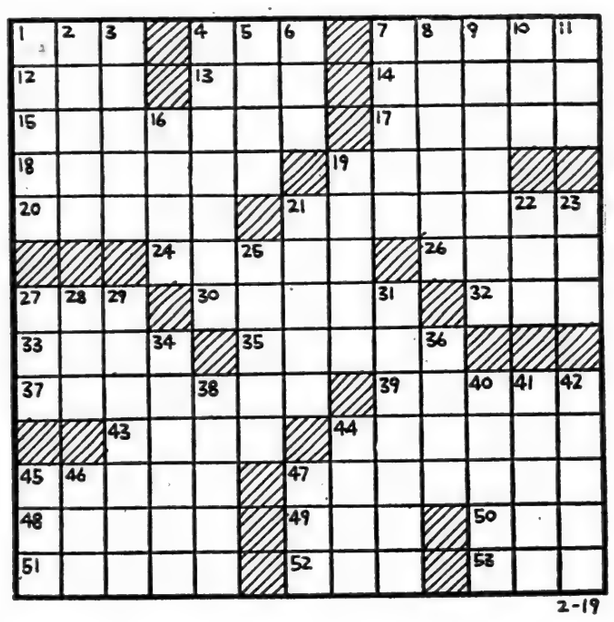
What Kipling really said was, "Carolina is Carolina and Duke is Duke and never the twain shall meet." He was was wrong. Barring a late cancellation, Carolina and Duke will play football this afternoon at Kenan-in-the-Pines to decide among other things just what kind of housing the Victory Bell will have during the coming year.

For the past two years, that bell has tolled the hollow ring of defeat for Carolina. The Tar Heels haven't been on the right track in this matter since the immortal Choo Choo huffed and puffed and blew the Blue Devils down four times running—and passing, too.

In true Brooklynese we cried last year, "Just wait 'til next year." Next year is here. And the Tar Heels are on hand. They have revived the prose of the late Wendell L. Wilkie, and now the cry is, "What we need is one Worrell." We have him.



We know we will win today. Knowing it is a big part of winning it. Victory rarely comes as a surprise. In the words of Carolina's perennial water boy, Morris Mason, "Duke just gotta go down!"

Now we don't wish to go on record as being opposed to giving the Devils their dues. Being Devils, though, you can't give them heaven, boys, but you can always give them hell.

Tar On My Heels

Your red-faced columnist begs your forgiveness!

After checking figures and checking with those who had also checked figures, I stated SP had a majority in the Student Legislature for the first time in the history of Student Government.

Apparently, that question is still open to debate as the headline of the same day's paper proved. Attention is now fixed on the lone dorm district IV runoff that can decide the question.

Even if tied in Legislature, it still is probably the closest SP has ever come to having a majority. And I still predict big things from such body; I still predict these things for the same reasons I set forth in my last somewhat over-ambitious column.

There are other things, however, that Tar On My Heels came out with November 19 that perhaps need a little clarification — witness Jerry Cook's letter.

The first of these things is to make clear once again that Tar On My Heels is not the official or unofficial organ of any political society on campus. Student Party members read these columns at the same time University Party members read them. This is the official and unofficial offspring of one Bill C. Brown and he is quite willing to accept the roses and curses for such. Such roses and curses should not be lauded on SP simply because I am a member of such party; Tar On My Heels is not its mouthpiece.

The only reason I stated SP sometimes has failed to represent anyone was that in trying to represent both dorm and frat residents, I have found that one faction gets more than its share of representation, leaving the other quite without anything like a full share. You see, SP has been willing to co-operate, willing to give in on a few points for the sake of harmony.

SP should continue such conciliation moves, but not at all costs. I think SP will continue to co-operate. Now that UP has all but lost control of Legislature, perhaps they will meet us half way. I certainly will work and hope for the day.

Another point of clarification: Tar On My Heels did not mean to imply most fraternity men think of non-Greeks as so much trash. Some do; they are the notable exceptions. Some SP's undoubtedly would close down the fraternities; they likewise are the exceptions and I certainly do not join them.

I am glad UP is attempting to get non-fraternity members finally. It is welcome news, but news coming about 14 years too late. In controlling Legislature for that many years they have not bothered themselves with non-fraternity men. I feel confident the record will show something like 99% of their candidates have been from the fraternity and sorority cliques. The SP, on the other hand, as Mr. Cook points out, has about as many fraternity men as non-fraternity and nominates about as many. I am proud of the fact our outlook on campus affairs is not limited to a view of one faction; a faction which neither resides in dormitories nor knows its problems. I, personally, have never tried to hide this fact from the students, nor do I believe SP as a whole has.

Now that UP has come dangerously close to losing control of it's long held whip over Legislature, they are considering the non-fraternity man and are attempting to pawn themselves off as the great unifier of UNC. Such was not the case 14 years ago, nor is it true today.

SEOUL—United Nations rockets and artillery chased four Chinese "mechanical monsters" off the battlefield yesterday and hurled back a new series of Red attacks on Sniper Ridge. The Chinese called in four armored tank-like vehicles to saturate Republic of Korea defenses on the vital central front height with multiple machine gun fire. But Allied artillery got the monsters in range and forced the Reds to retreat with their strange machines to towering Mount Papa, 2 1-2 miles northeast of Sniper Ridge.

"Think This Is Too Soon To Hang 'em Up?"

Jerry Belcher

Washington Square Confidential

From The Spartan Daily

Well, I hate to admit it, but I simply am not "cool." Neither am I "Way out, Man what I mean gone!" Probably this makes me the most reactionary of reactionaries, musically speaking, but I am a man of courage and feel I must express myself.

Once upon a time, I was cool, way out, gone, I thought that JATP, or to the unitiated, Jazz at the Philharmonic, was simple "the greatest ever, Man!" I was fourteen at the time and young for my years.

I had pegged trousers, a string tie, a duck's tail hair-do and stomping shoes. I could leap up and holler "Go! Go! Go! Man!" with the best of them. After all, we have all sinned.

Times have changed and so have I. But unfortunately for the world of music, and particularly for the world of jazz, JATP has not.

The other evening, JATP did San Jose the dubious honor of opening its nation - wide tour here. Had I been alert in my duties as a public - spirited, watch - dog type journalist, I would have given you forewarning. But if I may add butchery of a metaphor to my multitude of failings, I was asleep at the switch.

Unwarned, then a few of you must have been sucked in. It is understandable if you were. Mr. Norman Granz, the promoter, offered some mighty enticing talent. Real famous jazzmen like Gene Krupa, Buddy Rich, Lester Young, Roy Eldridge and Flip Phillips.

Now I did not attend Mr. Granz' presentation here, being as I said before, no longer cool. But a friend reports the following:

The first number was the "Star Spangled Banner." Perhaps Mr. Granz is a very patriotic fellow. But when his charges jazzed the national anthem, even the "coolest" spectators cringed at the lack of good taste. Fortunately, for international relations, they did not choose to improve on "God Save the King," or the "Marsellaise."

After this initial faux pas, the gentleman went off into their regular show. This consisted mainly of a great deal of writhing, facial contortions and foot stomping and minimum of music.

Mr. Flip Phillips, who once played a nice, smooth, jaz spends most of his time imitating a bull elephant with extreme dyspepsia. He and his friend, Mr. Young, also had a contest, the object of which was to produce the highest screech and the lowest burp possible with a reed instrument.

A similar contest was held by the trumpeter, Mr. Roy Eldridge and Mr. Charlie Schaeffer, and the drummers, Mr. Gene Krupa and Mr. Rich. The latter was somewhat comparable to being trapped in a gasoline barrel with two beserk jack-hammer operators.

Mr. Oscar Peterson, the large Canadian, played an enjoyable piano for a while. He often was extremely imaginative and whimsical on the keyboard. At other times, however, he sounded like Mr. King Cole giving a bad imitation of Mr. George Shearing.

Miss Ella Fitzgerald, the large American, sometimes sang very well indeed. That is when she sang it straight. But she also "bopped it," which was nothing more than a perversion of the highly improbable "scat" singing in the late 1920's.

JATP wound up with a slam bang conglomeration of dissonance called "Perdido." This title, I believe, is from the Spanish and means "lost," which is exactly what JATP should get.

Reviews

On Thursday evening, your reporter was seated in Memorial Hall drooling over the most gorgeous hunks of feminine pulchritude that have graced Chapel Hill in a long time and having a hell of a good time laughing at the piano highjinks of Bill Collins in the interludes of the Yackety Yack Beauty Contest, when he suddenly remembered that he had an article due at the TAR HEEL office early the next morning. He was petrified, because he didn't have anything planned to write about — this can't truthfully be said to be an unusual situation — until he looked up onstage and seeing Collins thought of all the very talented performers around the campus and knew that he had the basis for what he, at least, thought would be an interesting series of columns.

No one article could possibly list all the gifted acts in Chapel Hill, and that will not be attempted here. This will be the first of a series of articles that will try to give a little credit where it is due the accomplished showmen of the vicinity.

The most obvious person with whom to start is the aforementioned Bill Collins, piano virtuoso and scat singer extraordinaire. Bill, a member of the English department, is a professional, which accounts in part for the seeming ease with which he holds his audience every step of the way. Although he is very funny in straight comedy, his main forte is in the rendition of not blue, but purple songs while accompanying himself with mucho gusto on the piano. Much of his material he has written himself.

One of Collin's main assets is that he has enough imagination to vary the delivery of his material, so that no matter how often it is heard, it is still tremendously entertaining. This reviewer has heard him do much of his act previously, but laughs more and more on each reptition. It takes a real artist to have that effect on people.

Bill has appeared professionally in Daytona Beach, Florida, among other places. He has generously donated his time to perform for many worthy organizations and was recently one of the actors who presented a show at Fort Bragg.

Express Yourself

Editor:

As a '52 graduate of Carolina and a graduate student now at the University of Tennessee, I would like to suggest the following solution to the Saturday Classes problem.

They pulled that Saturday business down here and it is now an established procedure, all shouts of indignation from the student body to no avail, naturally. I yelled bloody murder when I discovered that weekends begin at noon on Saturday here — that is until I learned to do what everyone else does. Just don't go to class if there's anything interesting going on elsewhere. It's a most satisfactory solution . . .

Mother Horner

ONCE UPON A TIME in the great City of Bull there lived one Mother Horner, a great teller of fairy tales and myths. And in that same city there dwelt a band of wicked devils, great warriors in their own right, but when their feats were described by Mother Horner, they struck fear deep in the hearts of their opponents. Mother Horner exalted these devils daily, and because of her position as Herald, she was able to tell all of the citizens of the Bull City of the prowess of their clan. For years he had written of these devils, followed them through lean years and fat years—lauding their merits when ever possible.

Then one year it became evident that the devils had potentially their greatest band of warriors in years. Friend and foe recognized them as some of the most fearful fighters in the surrounding country. In their first encounter the devils met an army composed of nothing but generals. With no privates to do the work the generals were sent in complete rout. In their second battle the devils traveled far across the country to face a wild herd of mustangs. After a struggle they coralled the mustangs and returned home—only to be faced by a bunch of volunteer riflemen. Sizing up the situation the devils laid an ambush and the volunteers were sent limping back over the mountains.

Duelling Cavaliers

WITH THREE FOES already conquered the devils were sent out to meet a band of fighting roosters. But they heavily outweighed the bantams and when the skirmish had ended the gamecocks had been plucked. The devils returned home to find wolves threatening the door. But when they met the wolf pack they found that the animals were toothless and clawless. It was little trouble to handle them. The followers of the devils, led by Mother Horner, were elated. Their ferocious warriors had withstood the attacks of five opponents and were undefeated. But then cries of supporters of a troop of dueling cavaliers roared into the Bull City and the devils were sent northward for a showdown. When they met the dueling cavaliers they learned that the points of the swords were dull. They went out and sliced the cavaliers' forward wall to ribbons, conquered the rear forces, and went back to the City of Bull victors in their sixth straight battle.

Now, during the time that the devils had done battle and returned victorious, Mother Horner had stirred the followers to a key pitch. This new band of devils was compared to the devils of old—warriors who had gone through an entire campaign unscathed. This new band of devils had a valiant leader—a rich nobleman. When he went into the first encounter he had a fortune of thousands, but battle by battle that fortune seemed to grow. Mother Horner and his followers padded his bank book and soon he was a millionaire, then a two millionaire, and so on, until after the engagement with the dueling Cavaliers he was being called a billionaire. With such a fortune amassed the leader could do no wrong and the devils were being touted by Mother Horner and her flock as the greatest warriors in the country.

A Measured Measure

BUT IN A LAND SOUTH of the City of Bull a group of engineers had gotten together. They had heard the fairy tales coming out of the Bull City, but placed little faith in them. They got out their drawing boards, compassed, and protractors, studied all the angles and then headed for Bull City. When they arrived in the fair town they found a joyous folk. With a billionaire as leader and six straight conquests under their girths, the devils could do no wrong.

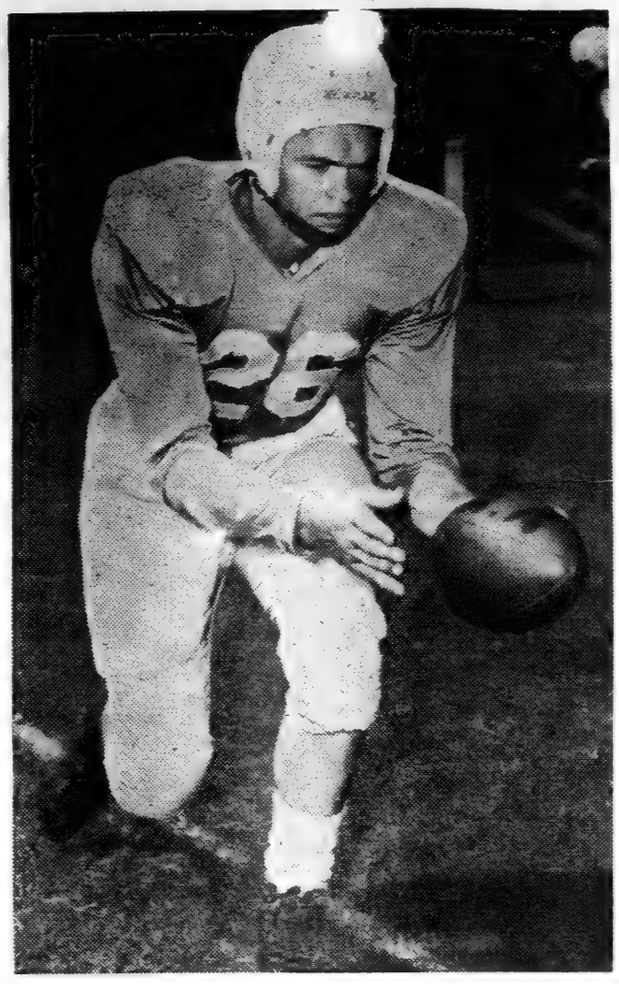
But the engineers had discounted all of the myths of the mighty devils. They had studied the angles. They went into battle with the devils and before they had finished they had rambled at will to wreck the devils—the first loss in seven campaigns. They brought on a depression that almost bankrupted the billionaire. The people were amazed. They had seen the devils perform before and had read Mother Horner's stories. How could their devils be beaten? But then an answer was given. These engineers were more experienced in battle, their reserve forces were deeper. The devils were still young and not yet ready to take them. It wouldn't happen again.

But the very next week a vast navy sailed up to the city's ports and let loose a barrage that rocked the devils again. Some of the devils had been wounded in the fray with the engineers and could not meet the navy. The sailors took advantage and again the devils sank to defeat. The next battle found the staggering (although no one would admit that point) devils against a flock of deacons. Somehow they made it through the battle, although severely threatened in the final stages, and sacreligiously whipped the churchmen.

In The Land Of Tar Heelia

NOW, ALL THE WHILE these devils were going into battle their neighbors in Tar Heelia were doing likewise, but with contrasting success. The forces of Tar Heelia had been suffering recent lean years and in hope of fattening their flock had changed from their usual battle formation to a new one, much the same as that of the devils. They had worked on it long and hard but because of previous commitments were forced to experiment with it against some of the strongest forces in the nation. They opened their campaign against a herd of longhorns and were severely gored. Then when it seemed that they would meet some weaker foes and would get a chance to improve their new battle formation, the land of Tar Heelia was stricken with a plague. The Tar Heelians were forced to withdraw from battles with biting bulldogs and the same band of toothless wolves that had been downtrodden by the devils.

When they reutrned to battle they met the deacons, who were later to fall to the devils, and it seemed for a blasphemous moment that they might come out victorious. But the deacons gave one final kick and won the battle. Then the path went further downward for the Tar Heelians. They were completely routed by the infamous Notre Dragon. The volunteer rifleman had recovered from the ambush of the devils and with their sharpshooting gave the Tar Heelia forces a tremendous licking. Then came the dueling cavaliers, who, after making sure their swords were sharpened this time, sliced the Tar Heelians for their fifth straight defeat.



No Happy Ending

DURING THIS TIME that the devils had been ever-winning and the Tar Heelians ever-losing, Mother Horner and her cohorts had filled the war pages with praise for the devils and condolences for the Tar Heelians. It was the custom of the two neighbors to meet each year for the supremacy of the area. The fairy tales of the devils had spread all over Bull City and into the land of Tar Heelia where the natives themselves had fallen under their spell. The Tar Heelians had begun to mock their warriors and, putting all of their faith in the myths and fairy tales coming out of the Bull City, had all but conceded the annual battle to the devils.

Came the day for the big battle and the supporters of both armies assembled on the banks of a great hill in Tar Heelia. The Tar Heels had managed to win a battle the week before from the gamecocks who had also lost to the devils, but that was still not enough to restore confidence in the warriors. It was inevitable that the devils would win. Hadn't Mother Horner said so? The two forces met head on. Up and down the field of battle they moved with neither army able to strike a deciding blow. The people of Tar Heelia were amazed at their warriors efforts. When a rest period was called their warriors were more than holding their own. But Mother Horner said, "Wait until after the rest period." And the people understood and waited. The armies resumed battle and again they went up and down the field. The Tar Heelians continued to threaten but because they had placed their faith in the fairy stories of Mother Horner they had not planned to win—and because they had not planned to win, they couldn't deliver the telling blow. In the final stages of the fray the devils pulled a sneak attack and hit the Tar Heelians on their end zone for the deciding blow.

With the battle ended the people of Tar Heelia sat in amazement and stared at each other. Why, these devils were not what Mother Horner had said they were. And their leader was no billionaire. And as for the Tar Heelian warriors—with just a little more push on the flank and an extra thrust up the middle, the outcome would have been different. But the fact remained that Mother Horner had another fairy tale to tell. The Tar Heelians had been duped and the devils had caught them sleeping in their own little beds of defeat. The battle was over. It was too late to change the plans to win. Once again the devils returned to the City of Bull victorious. And once again, because Mother Horner and her devils had caught them with their pants at their knees, the Tar Heelians bowed—losing their most important battle of the year.

Moral to the story: Don't put much faith in fairy tales. They don't always have a happy ending.

to provide the Tar Heels' punch.

The Duke team, rated in the top ten most of the season, is led by sophomore quarterback Worth Lutz. Lutz took over the Blue Devil split-T when quarterback Jerry Barger was hurt in last year's Carolina-Duke game, and has kept the post since. Lutz's passing is one of the top Duke offensive weapons, giving the Blue Devils a last second win over SMU earlier in the season. His favorite receiver is end Howard Pitt.

One of the best defensive lines in the country, and the running of some fast and powerful backs provide the rest of Duke's power. The defensive forward wall is headed by two tremendous tackles, Tank Lawrence and Country Meadows, and a hard-driving guard, captain Lou Tepe. Another Duke defensive standout, guard Bobby Burrows is, still sidelined from a broken ankle suffered in the Georgia Tech game.

Fullback Jack Kistler, his alternate Byrd Looper, and halfbacks Charlie Smith, Red Smith, and Lloyd Caudle lead the Duke running attack. Kistler has been periodically injured this year, but the whole Blue Devil squad is in top shape for today's game, with the exception of one freshman tackle.

Charlie Smith, followed closely by Caudle, has been Duke's most consistant ground-gainer this year. Piney Field, a fleet 155-pound scatback, has been outstanding for the Blue Devils on kickoff and punt returns, and is always a scoring threat. Billy Lea is another defensive standout and is one of the best pass defenders on the team.

The last upset in a Carolina-Duke game was in 1940 when an underdog Carolina squad best Duke, 6-3. The Blue Devils hold a slight edge over Carolina in the series since the 1940 upset because in 1943 the teams played twice, Duke winning both games. Carolina has an overall lead, winning 18, losing 17, and tieing three. Duke has won for the past two years, and Carolina won the four games previous to those.

Black, Byrd Best Rookies

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

NEW YORK, Nov. 21 — Joe Black of Brooklyn and Harry Byrd of the Philadelphia A's, a pair of fine pitchers, were named Rookies of the Year today by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Black was an overwhelming choice in the National League with 19 votes from the 24-man committee which also placed him third in the most valuable player balloting.

Byrd, a late blooming hot shot, nosed out two catchers, Clint Courtney of the St. Louis Browns and Sam White of the Boston Red Sox in a three-man race. Byrd got nine votes, Courtney because his relief work was largely responsible for the Dodger pennant. An also-rain in spring training, Black appeared in only six games up to June 1. Then he started to work.

The feats of Black are known eight and White seven.

At stretches, Manager Charley Dressen had the Negro ace working every day. He wound up with 56 games, a 15-4 won and lost record and a low earned run average of 2.15.

That earned run mark was best in the league but it won't be recognized because he did not pitch 10 complete games or work at least 154 innings.

Byrd made the big jump from Savannah of the South Atlantic League to the majors with great success. He finished with a 15-15

Deacons Play Furman; State To Meet W&M

Wake Forest, 14-7 victims of Duke last week, trael to Greenville, S. C. today to meet the Purple Hurricane of Furman in a contest which will probably be a battle of offenses.

A brilliant passing contest appears in the making with Furman's duo of Gene Pedrick and Roland Barefoot opposing Wake Forest's twosome of Charles (Sonny) George and Captain Jack Lewis. Pedick has completed 39 of 77 passes for 566 yards with Barefoot being on the receiving end of 17 of those aerials.

Likewise, George has a good record of 51 completed passes in 121 efforts for 647 yards. Captain Lewis has caught 17 of these for 217 yards, four less than Barefoot.

Wake Forest's No. 1 pass receiver, Bob Ondilla, will miss the game due to a collarbone injury suffered on the opening kickoff of the Duke game last Saturdal. Ondilla had caught 22 aerials for 313 yards prior to the Duke contest but missed all but 20 seconds of the game with the Blue Devils.

The Wolfpack of N. C. State travels to Williamsburg, Va., this weekend to William and Mary and will be counting on a junior varsity graduate to put some life into their heretofore listless offense.

Eddie Frantz, a 5-19, 165-pound freshman from Charlotte who performed brilliantly last week the quarterbacking duties for as a substitute, will take over Coach Horace Hendrickson today. He took over the Wolfpack team midway in the third quarter against Pittsburg and led the team on an 86-yard march for State's only touchdown.

William and Mary will be a 21-point favorite to hand State its seventh defeat of the season. but the Indians will have to keep a sharp eye on Mr. Frantz.

Weekend activities began last night with a hayride to Crabtree State Park where a costume-cabin party was planned. Costumes represented popular phonograph records.

Stage Exhibits In Photographs At Morehead

"Theater — From Ritual to Broadway," an exhibition of photographs vividly recording the development of the American stage, opened in the Morehead Building this week and will continue through Dec. 15.

Prepared by the editors of Life Magazine, the exhibit traces the history of theater from its beginning in ancient ritual to its present familiar shape in the Western World. The exhibition also undertakes to suggest some of the reasons—religious and social—for theater's perennial and universal appeal.

Twenty-five panels (including one devoted to a meticulous documentation of all the illustrations) make up the lively display. There is an introductory panel suggesting something of the variety of places of theatrical performance.

The exhibition proper opens with a section on "The Beginnings of Theater." This section touches upon the ritualistic aspects of Maypole dances and present-day Indian dances, which are related to the Festivals of Dionysus in classical Greece — the festivals which gave birth to the Greek tragic theater.

The second section is devoted to "Tragic Theaters." The six panels of this section deal with Greek tragedy and its use of chorus, and relate Shakespearean tragedy to the ordered world of medieval Europe where theater took place against the background of the Cathedral.

"The Perennial Life of Comedy" is the title of the third section. It shows that the tradition of clowning and popular farce has been almost unbroken, from the ancient clowns that came from the fertility-rituals, down to modern vaudeville performers. Popular farce also the source of high comedy, is traced through the Commedia dell 'Arte, through Moliere and the Restoration to American Minstrel show and contemporary musical.

The final section is concerned with the "Theater in the Modern World" which reflects, on the one hand, the revolutionary movements of our industrialized society, and on the other, the sufferings of the lost, or rebellious, or bewildered individual. This section of the exhibition begins with Ibsen and Chekhov, fathers of Contemporary drama, and includes pictures from many current productions.

The text for the exhibition was written by Francis Ferguson, whose distinguished critical study, "The Idea of a Theater," has been widely acclaimed.

Grail Dance In Woollen Tonight

Ticket Sale To Continue At Gymnasium

The Order of the Grail will hold its last dance of the season in Woollen Gym tonight from 9 o'clock until midnight.

Duke and UNC Cavaliers will play for the dance, open to students from the two schools. Ed Higgins, President of Shoe and Slipper, said ticket sales at Duke have been good throughout the week.

Proceeds from the Grail dances go toward the five Grail Scholarships awarded annually to undergraduates who have proved themselves worthy of financially aid.

Tickets will be on sale at the door tonight.

Thus the A's, with Byrd and Bobby Shantz, the most valuable player, cornered season honors in the American.

The 27-year-old righthander from Darlington, S. C., pitched 15 complete games including three shutouts. On Sept. 7 he blanked the pennant-bound Yankees with one hit.

The 1951 winners were Willie Mays of the Gients, and Gil McDougald of the Yankees.

Blood Drive Exceeds Goal By 58 Pints

Thanks to the response of the students and townspeople, the Bloodmobile went over its goal by 58 pints on the recently concluded visit at Graham Memorial. Three hundred six donations on Wednesday added to the 152 of Tuesday made this drive the seventh in a row to go over the goal, according to Bill Roth, co-chairman of the Chapel Hill Bloodmobile. The 400 pint goal was exceeded by 58 pints.

Special credit goes to the ROTC units, Roth said.

Roth also added his appreciation to the host of over 40 volunteers who made the donation program possible by their service as registrars, hostesses, canteen workers, nurses and aides.

While thanking all the donors to this drive, Roth issued the first call to those unable to contribute this time and to the donors for the next opportunity to aid servicemen through the blood program next April when the Bloodmobile will return.

Une Poeme

Woke up this morning, stumbled out of bed.
Clutched at my Tar Heel—Carman was dead!
It couldn't be true? I read and I read.

So gracious, so lovely, so well in the head.
Rain beat on the window, little pellets of lead—
In hopes of error, my steps I retread.

OH! HAPPY DAY . . . A mock trial it said.
Now I am contemplating (Safe in my bed)

West May Be Losing Its Race In Middle East

WC Panel Thinks Asiatic Populace Has Two Choices

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

GREENSBORO, Nov. 22 — A frantic, and perhaps losing race in the Middle East against time and Russia was described here yesterday during day-long discussions of the annual Harriet Elliott Social Science Forum at Woman's College.

Three imported experts led campus talks on the subject "Tensions in the Middle East." The trio was composed of Dr. Cornelius William de Kiewiet, president of Rochester University, Jacob C. Hurewitz, Columbia University School of International Affairs and T. Cuyler Young, Princeton.

Dr. Young, posing the Middle Eastern question most sharply in the evening session, asked: "Has the time come when we must persuade our allies, for their own good, to change their colonial policies? In the long run, may not the masses of Asia become even more important than Europe itself?"

For the first time in history, the panel agreed, the millions of the Middle East and Asia itself now have the choice of alternatives in their course — a choice which boils down to Russian communism or Western democracy.

Dr. de Kiewiet, in suggesting the perilous position of Western powers in the situation once said: "The meaning of Russia is that she seems to have solved the problem of modernization in equipping a backward nation with the implements of modern society . . . While we have depended upon legislative means, money, time and debate, Russia has gone ahead with force and utilization of men."

Dr. Young, however, suggested that only in Iran has communism taken such hold that it is dangerous to the West at this moment. He described oil-rich Iran as crouching on the borders "of the Russian colossus, under the upraised paw of the bear, which has already seized her northern territory and has continued pressure upon her."

Young said that Iran, in view of "mistakes" in American foreign policy toward her since 1949, had been courageous in facing down the Russians on their demands. The Iranian party now in power seems determined to walk the line of neutrality — and the United States by its neglect and errors of policy in recent years, has missed

Duke's Devils Hand Carolina Worst Defeat

Red Smith Scores Three Touchdowns In Carolina Rout

By Tom Peacock

DAILY TAR HEEL Asst Sports Editor

A far superior Duke University football team ripped open the North Carolina defense at will yesterday to score four times in the first half and hand Carolina its worst licking in the 64-year old rivalry. A near capacity crowd of 42,000 in Kenan Stadium saw Duke triumph, 34-0.

The Tar Heels came close to a score only once in the game, penetrating the tight Duke defense to its 10-yard line before losing the ball on a fumble.

Quarterback Worth Lutz directed the running of Red Smith, Charlie Smith, and Byrd Looper so effectively that he seldom had to pass, the Blue Devils amassing 349 yards on the ground.

Red Smith, running from right halfback, was the leading Duke ball carrier, scoring three times while running for 125 yards in 12 carries. Looper scored once, and the fifth Blue Devil touchdown came on a pass from Lutz to end Bill Keziah. Red Smith added four out of five conversions for a personal 22 point total.

Flo Worrell made the best effort of the Carolina backs, gaining 58 yards in 13 carries. The Carolina offense looked better than it had all year, but could only gain a total of 165 yards as it seldom had the ball.

Carolina didn't cross the Duke 45 until late in the third quarter, when quarterback Charlie Motta directed a sustained drive from the Carolina 15 to the Duke 10. The Tar Heels were in Duke territory three other times, a one-yard penetration seconds before the end of the game, and four, five and 15 yard other jaunts.

Duke won the toss, took the kickoff on its 17-yard line, and scored six first downs and five minutes and 59 seconds later. The Blue Devil line tore gaping holes in the Carolina defensive unit, and the two Smiths and Looper waltzed straight down the field with Red Smith going over for the score from the two. His conversion attempt was wide, and Duke took a 6-0 lead at 5:49 of the first quarter.

The next Duke score took less time as the Blue Devils started closer to the Carolina goal. Carolina's co-captain Bud Wallace punted to the Duke 47 after the Tar Heels bogged down.

Seven plays later, Looper ran 17 yards from the Carolina 18 to the 1, and then scored on the next play. Red Smith, who runs right according to Duke supporters, kicked the extra point with his left foot, and Duke held a 13-0 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Duke gave the crowd more than an inkling of the coming rout by adding seven more points less than two minutes after the start of the second period.

The Blue Devils started from their own 47-yard line after taking another Wallace punt, but wasted less time by taking to the air. Runs by fullback Jack Kistler and halfback Lloyd Caudle gave Duke a first down on the Carolina 25, but a holding penalty put the Blue Devils back on the 41.

Currie Will Speak In Hill Hall Tonight

"Spectator Sport" will be the Rev. David M. Currie's topic when he addresses students at a University Sermon program tonight at 8:30 in Hill Hall.

"...e want to have something to unify the student body and have scheduled this sermon at a time when we hoped the most people would be able to attend," Pat Aydlett, University Sermons chairman said yesterday. "We hope to have an outstanding speaker such as Mr. Currie appear on our program each quarter."

Mr. Currie, graduate of Choate School in Wallingford, Conn. received his BA at the University of Texas and has traveled in 15 European and Near East countries. He attended Yale Divinity School and received his BD degree from Austin Seminary, Austin, Tex.

Currently he is director of the Department of Campus Christian Life of the Board of Christian Education of the Presbyterian Church of the United States. A Phi Beta Kappa, Mr. Currie was active in the Y program at the University of Texas and has participated in religious activities at various other universities. He also has served for five years as chairman of the Synod of Texas Committee on student work.

Tonight's program will open with Handel's "Prelude and Fugue," with Bach's "Now Let Every Tongue Adore Thee," as the call to worship.

Three Plays To Be Cast On Tuesday

Three new one-act plays by local authors will be cast Tuesday at 4 p.m. in the Playmakers Theater.

Scheduled for production Thursday and Friday, Dec. 11 and 12, they will be student-directed by James T. Pritchett of Lenoir, George Boozer of Lexington, S. C., and William Bowser of Chapel Hill. The entire production will be under the general supervision of Foster Fitz-Simons of the Dramatic Art Department.

"The Silver Birch" by Sydney Litwack, graduate assistant from Los Angeles, is a drama of prejudice among French-Canadians. "Buck" by Tommy Rezzuto of Asheville and "Uncross Those Stars" by Emily Selden of Chapel Hill are both comedies.

World Health, Peace Linked 'Irrevocably'

By Mary Grace Megginson

Dean Edward G. McGavran of the University School of Public Health, appointed by President Truman as one of three U. S. delegates to a world health assembly in Switzerland, comes home after a three-month study tour of Europe convinced that world health and world peace are tied together irrevocably.

The assembly is the governing body of the World Health Organization of the United Nations.

Dean McGavran said that he believes that the World Health Organization "holds the greatest promise for world peace in the future." He made the first report on his study tour, which covered eight European nations as well as the Geneva sessions, in a lecture this week before faculty and students of the School of Public Health.

Problems of world health and world peace dominated the discussions in Geneva, Dean McGavran said, pointing out that "good international relations and understanding in the past have been most successful in the health field."

Atlhough the world health organization is only five years old, Dr. McGavran said it has accomplished much. He listed 10 major accomplishments: the standardization of quality and dosage of drugs, antibiotics, vaccines, vitamins and serums; establishment of uniformity in reporting communicable diseases, deaths, etc.; efforts to control the traffic in narcotics and habit forming drugs; adoption of a new code of international sanitary regulations; encouragement of training programs across the world; assisting countries in the control of certain conditions, such as malaria, venereal disease, and tuberculosis; the Fellowship program; expert committee program which is designed to avoid duplication of activities; consultative service in certain areas such as health education, sanitation, and influenza control; and technical conferences where people are drawn together to work out solutions to problems none were able to work out independently.

NEWS IN BRIEF

ASHEVILLE — A sudden 22-inch snowfall swung northward into the middle Atlantic states after leaving clogged highways, and fallen telegraph and power lines over a wide area in Western North Carolina and the mountain sections of Tennessee, Kentucky and Virginia yesterday. Communications and transportation were paralyzed for many hours yesterday morning. All communications were cut off from Knoxville, Tenn., where the traditional Tennessee-Kentucky football game was scheduled during the afternoon.

SEOUL — South Korean and American officers said yesterday they believe the Communists are preparing to mount a new offensive against Sniper Ridge and Triangle Hill on the central front. Enemy groups up to 50 men jabbed at South Korean positions on Sniper Ridge until dawn yesterday. Troops holding a slope position on Jane Russell Hill on Triangle beat back a heavier probe of near-company strength. U. N. battlefront commanders said these probes indicated a new Red buildup was in the making and that the Reds would mount another all-out attempt to drive the Allies from the vital north-south ridgelines before the first snow falls.

VIENNA, Austria — Former Czech Deputy Foreign Minister Arthur London pleaded guilty to treason and espionage yesterday in Communism's greatest show trials since the Moscow purge, the Prague radio reported. London, from a microphone-equipped stand in Pankrac prison, pleaded guilty to charges against him and admitted "direct contact" with the mysterious American brothers Hermann and Noel Field, Prague said.

DETROIT—C. E. Wilson, President-elect Eisenhower's choice for secretary of defense, prepared yesterday to accompany his new boss on his trip to Korea. The General Motors president earlier had refused comment on reports that he would accompany Eisenhower. He revealed his plans at a news conference on Friday, but had no further statement about plans for the trip or his new job. "I'm just a bush-leaguer and I can't talk about the home runs I'm going to hit until after I've hit them," Wilson said.

COSHOCTON, Ohio — Funeral services for William F. Green, president and leader of 8,000,000 American Federation of Labor members, will be held tomorrow in this small east-central Ohio town. The elderly leader of the country's largest labor union died quietly though unexpectedly in his modest white farm house here Friday following a heart attack. Green became ill in October and returned to his home here in the rolling hill country where he was born in a small log cabin.

More Funds Are Sought For Medicine

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

NEW YORK, Nov. 22—Acting under the impetus of a warning by President-elect Eisenhower that medical education in the United States can be put on a sound basis "free of the threat of government-sponsored plans or schemes to control it," the National Fund for Medical Education last night officially launched an expanded $10,000,000 fund-raising campaign in support of the schools.

General Eisenhower, one of the original founders of the National Fund, telegraphed S. Sloan Colt, president, the Bankers Trust Company of New York, and the Fund's President, as follows:

"I regret that the heavy pressure of my November schedule makes it impossible for me to attend the meeting of the Board of Trustees of the National Fund for Medical Education. You already know how much I believe in its work in helping to meet critical financial problems of the nation's medical schools. Only if our medical schools remain solvent, can we hope to place medical education on a sound basis, free of the threat of government-sponsored plans or schemes to control it. I sincerely hope that American industry will support to the limit the campaign which will be launched at the November meeting by Colby M. Chester."

Former President Herbert Hoover, Honorary Chairman of the National Fund, set the keynote for the forthcoming campaign when he warned that "A real breakdown in our independently endowed medical training system would be a national disaster."

Old Glenn Miller Unit Here Tonight

The United States Air Force Dance Band will give a concert in Memorial Hall at 8 o'clock tonight. Formerly the Glenn Miller service unit, the band plays on a world-wide basis. Over 200 of the best musicians from the top dance orchestras in the nation were auditioned in selecting the 18 men which make up the band which operates out of Bolling Field, Washington.

The concert is one in a series being given by the band in North Carolina cities for the benefit of "Operation Christmas 1952," a project designed to bring a present by Santa Clause plane to each orphan in the state.

The proceeds from tonight's performances, sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity and the Chapel Hill Jaycees, are wholly dedicated to this project.

Tickets will be on sale at $1 each at Memorial Hall tonight.

Iowa State Daily

Breaks Tradition

The all-college guessing game has come to an abrupt end. It ended when Dr. James Harold Hilton was named to succeed Dr. Charles E. Friley as President of Iowa State College in July.

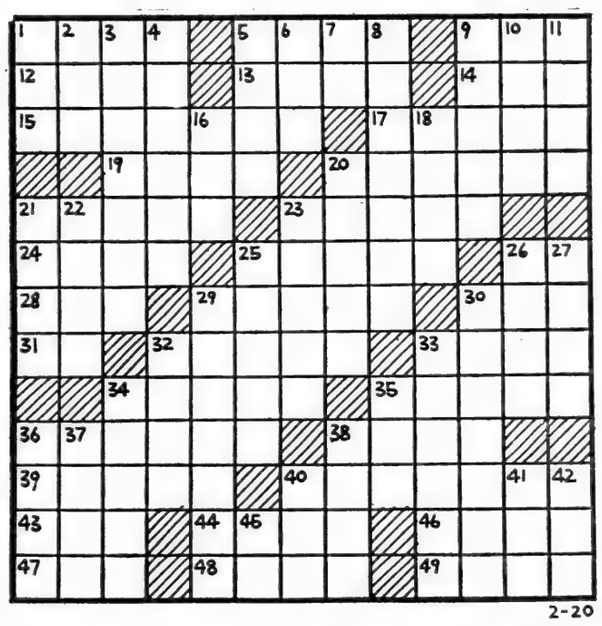
To the public, Dr. Hilton was somewhat of a darkhorse candidate for the job. The names of educators most familiar to the campus populace included Dean Floyd Andre, of the Division of Agriculture, and Dean Harold V. Gaskill, of the Division of Science. Allan B. Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation and an Iowa State graduate, also was considered as a possibility. These three men were among those given a great deal of consideration by the Board of Education.

The Board's appointment of Dr. Hilton as Iowa State's next president broke a rather consistent pattern which has been followed in the past by Iowa State's presidents.

Dr. Hilton is an alumnus of Iowa State. He graduated with a B.S. degree in 1923. He is the first alumnus to become president of the college.

Dr. Hilton, soon to become the tenth Iowa State president, is not a native Iowan. In this respect, his appointment follows the general trend. Only one native Iowan, Dr. R. M. Hughes, now president emeritus was chosen . . .

This information stacks the background of the next president against those of past presidents. Looking over the record that Dr. Hilton has made in his lifetime, it seems there is little need for comparison. It can stand alone. North Carolina's loss is Iowa's gain.



Express Yourself

The students of Carolina are preparing to celebrate our period of National Thanksgiving, and immediately following this we look forward to the Yuletide. We greet all students at the beginning of this holiday season with wishes for Health and Happiness. As you receive your letter the 1952 Christmas Seal Sale gets under way across the nation. Once again, as has become the tradition here at Carolina in the past, good Tar Heels will pour out their hearts in the form of inch square stamps to combat tuberculosis. During the past forty-six years great progress has been made, but much remains to be done.

Tuberculosis control for the general population is directly and indirectly beneficial to each and every student in our community. Services are not restricted to any group. Alpha Phi Omega is deeply concerned with the 2,088 tuberculosis beds in the state of North Carolina and its four chapters in this state are working hard to make life happier for these people. Please help now.

Kindly place your donation in the envelope you will be receiving in a few days. Rho chapter of Alpha Phi Omega through its president Jerry Campbell who is U. N. C. chairman for the Seal Sale wishes each of you Best Wishes for the Holiday Season.

CPU Roundtable

The Carolina Political Union, meeting tonight in the Grail Room at eight, will discuss the issue of Saturday classes. Because of the belief of the Union that the case against Saturday classes has not yet been fully and effectively presented, the following resolution has been prepared and is offered in entirety. All persons interested in the subject are invited to attend and take part in the discussion.

WHEREAS: The executive committee of the Board of Trustees of the University of North Carolina has instructed the administration of this University to prepare a schedule for a six-day class week; and

WHEREAS: There has been considerable protest by the student body and continued opposition by the Administration during the four year period that the matter has been under consideration, and

WHEREAS: It is felt by the Union that the recent action concerning Saturday classes and the student reaction to it has not been handled as well as it might have been, and

WHEREAS: The Union feels a great vacuum of facts concerning the institution of a six-day class week;

THEREFORE BE IT BY THE CAROLINA POLITICAL UNION RESOLVED:

ARTICLE I. that the Board of Trustees should reverse the decision of the executive committee concerning the institution of a six-day class week at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

In a spirit of co-operation and factual approach we offer the following reasons in support of our stand.

1) Saturday classes will not solve the mass exodus problem because a) according to surveys by the office of the Dean of Women and the Psychology Department there is no mass departure of students on the weekend, and b) students go home when they do go home largely because they have little homelike atmosphere here.

2) There hav been no sound academic reasons advanced to us proving the advisability of this action.

3) Our Administration and faculty have held since 1948 that a six-day class week would be impractical and a poor morale factor.

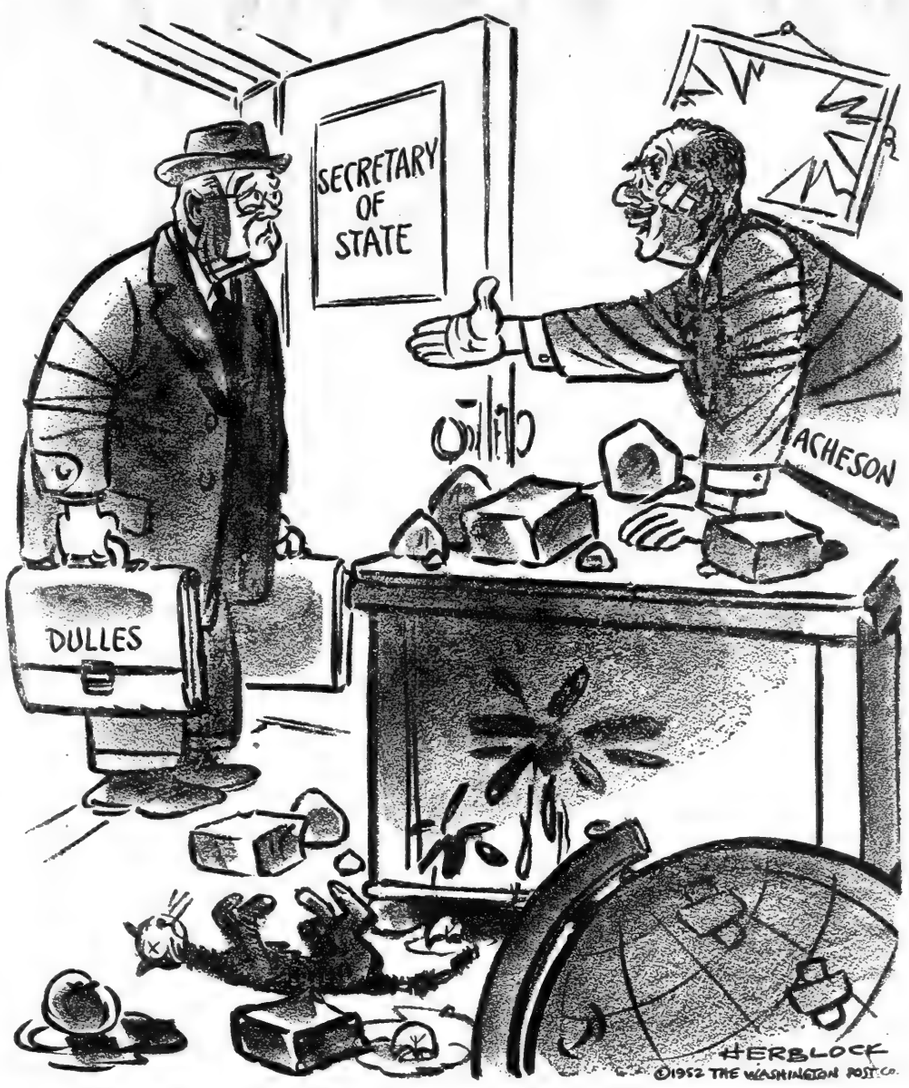
4) The University at Chapel Hill has unique opportunities, traditions, and problems which would not facilitate the adoption of this system as used by N. C. STATE and W. C.

5) Saturday classes would rob the Carolina student of valuable time used for economic employment, extended study, and cultural absorbtion, while adding little of value to the student.

6) While the entire Board has decided that this action should be taken sometime, the executive committee meeting which decided that the time should be now, saw only five out of twelve members voting. We feel that not only is this procedure unsound, but that also the Board should be considering the effects of the approaching war and the method of selection of military manpower which may result in an extremely reduced student body.

ARTICLE II. That, while the student body and their student government should be commended for their energy in opposing the decision of the executive committee, they should be repremanded for hasty and ill-considered action in the use of emotionalism and name-calling, and for not approaching the matter in a quiet, considered, gentlemanly, factual manner.

ARTICLE III. That the Board of Trustees as an alternative and more effective solution to the problem should take the following steps:



1) Make all possible speed in providing the student body with an adequate Student Union building to help replace the atmosphere and facilities lost by not going home.

2) Take immediate steps on problems which have been under investigation by the Board and Administration such as the Advisee system, free class cut policy, over stress in the graduate level, and over-loading of many professors and instructors.

3) Increase the self-help and scholarship program.

4) Help students become more mature and responsible students and citizens by helping them in their extra-curricular activities by providing a) trained faculty advisees, b) more building space and equipment, and c) academic credit for work in student activities.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON — What Harry Truman told Dwight D. Eisenhower and vice versa is known directly only to the two men themselves. But what is known is what President Truman told intimates he said to Ike.

Both men were obviously nervous before and after their interview. One friend who talked to Truman just before he saw Eisenhower, noted that he looked fidgety and dropped some papers.

Eisenhower also looked nervous and wiped perspiration from his barren brow after the conference.

The version which the President gave one of his closest friends also indicates that the two men were a little tense at first. But he broke the ice by telling Ike something like this:

"I've been in politics for 40 years. Sometimes you win and sometimes you lose. That's politics.

"Sometimes you have to say some harsh things in politics, because everyone's out to win. But let's forget all that.

"The only important thing is the future. I want to help you in every way. I want you to have as much assistance as we can give you between now and January 20.

"I only wish I could have been briefed before I took this job. President Roosevelt's death hit me like a thunderbolt. I didn't even attend a cabinet meeting. I don't want you to go through that."

Truman pointed to a sign on his desk which read: "The buck stops here."

"Every government official has a boss to whom he can pass the buck—except the President," he said, according to the account given a friend. "But when it gets to the President, he has no one to pass the buck on to. 'The buck stops here.'"

Mr. Truman had also prepared for the President-elect a series of loose-leaf notebooks containing copies of all his executive orders, reports on defense production, and charts showing exactly the amounts of production achieved in every strategic material. He told friends that he hoped these would be of value to Eisenhower and he certainly wished someone had prepared such reports for him when he took office in 1945.

When Eisenhower and Truman appeared in the cabinet room a minute or so later they were smiling and appeared to be congenial. At this second and enlarged meeting, Secretary of State Dean Acheson did most of the talking.

One important point he made was that, unless Eisenhower made some reassuring statement about continuing the present policy for Europe, the governments of France and Italy might fall.

Eisenhower interrupted at this point to say that he had already made one such statement, but he did not elaborate as to what statement he referred to.

Acheson also said he was "unhappy" about the split between the United States, Canada, France and England over the Indian proposal on Korean prisoners of war, but said he felt that our differences could be repaired—though he did not indicate any approval of the Indian proposal.

He also discussed the December 15 meeting of the North Atlantic Pact nations originally scheduled to make important decisions on Army strength for the next two years. Britain and France want to proceed with the meeting as scheduled on December 15, though because of the changeover of administrations in Washington, no important decisions will be made.

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder gave a report on the finances of our Allies, warning especially of the economic predicament of France and Italy. England, he felt, was not in such bad shape.

Secretary of Defense Lovett talked chiefly about Korea and defense production. The latter was the only domestic question discussed during the entire conference.

Neither President Truman nor General Eisenhower did much talking during the conference. It was purely a briefing session, with little opportunity or necessity to talk.

When Eisenhower came out of the White House the grim and irritable manner noted by reporters was probably because he was surrounded with newsmen. He had expected a military aisle through which to walk, and remarked that he thought things had been outrageously handled.

Yourself Express

Dear Mr. Freshmen:

I am a bit surprised at the difference between you and your counterpart of ten years ago. You are no younger on the average, your experience before coming to Carolina are generally the same, but your interests and and willingness to try your athletic potentialities are quiet different.

Ten years ago from a smaller freshman class some sixty to seventy boys would try out for freshman swimming. Although we did not cut the squad about half of the group would drop out, developing other interests. The remainder formed the nucleus of a group of boys whose hard work brought Carolina recognition in swimming. There were no scholarship swimmers and many had never been on a siwmming team before, yet they went on to become outstanding performers. Many were pre-med and pre-law students, some were self help students, yet they found time by arranging their academic and athletic work to swim. The important fact is that "many" had a desire to try out for the team with a goodly number enjoying the fun of work and competition enough to stay with it.

This year thirty-five freshmen reported for the first meeting. Twelve quit without ever coming to the pool, seven others have for some reason dropped out. Thus only sixteen boys out of over eight hundred apparently have the interest to try out for swimming — only four of these have had previous competitive experience.

If this is all of the men in the freshman class with an interest or desire to try out for freshman swimming that is fine. I wonder though why you are so different, why you wouldn't try some sport. It is puzzling that such a distinct change should occur in the interests and desires of young men in such a short period of time. This is no plea for swimmers, we only desire boys who want to swim and who are willing to do the work necessary to be good in swimming—or any other sport. This is a challenge to you, Mr. Freshman, to ask yourself if you have the interest and desire to be on an athletic team, and if so, why are you unwilling to at least try.

Dick Jamerson,
Prof., Physical Education

If making you take boxing and tumbling twice a week serves no other purpose than to make you take a shower twice a week, the whole program is justified.

Rest In Peace

CAROLINA, '52, OF CHAPEL HILL died late yesterday afternoon after being hit by a Duke freight train at Kenan Crossroads. The Tar Heels were thrown back a total of 401 yards by the collision and passed away from the sudden jolt before regaining consciousness. Chapel Hill physician Carl Snavely tried to revive the Tar Heels with aerial respiration but his team could not respond to the futile attempts of intern Marshall Newman—Duke had already applied the anesthetic.

The Duke deisel cracked the Carolina forward wall, heretofore a capable defensive unit, for 349 yards on the ground and then added 52 by passing, on only four completions out of 12 attempts, to wreck the Tar Heels, 34-0. After last week's victory over South Carolina most Carolina supporters, from the staunchest to the weakest, felt that Carolina had a chance of upsetting the Blue Devils—but from the first quarter the Tar Heels were never in the game.

Where Were We?

AFTER TAKING THE KICKOFF from Carolina and returning it to their own 18, the Blue Devils commenced to march the remaining 82 yards of the field for a touchdown. From there it was Duke all the way. It seemed for a few fleeting moments that the Tar Heels might push the Devils back in their own territory. With second down and two yards to go on the Duke 27, quarterback Worth Lutz gave the ball to fullback Byrd Looper. Carolina end George Norris had him hemmed in on the sidelines but could receive no immediate help, tried to make the tackle himself, only to see Looper escape to the right and go for the first down. From there Duke made a consistent sustained drive to score the opening touchdown.

This 34-0 licking that we took was the worst that a Carolina team has ever suffered at the hands of Duke. It was admitted before the game that Duke probably had the best team on a seasonal basis, but there were few Tar Heels who didn't have a deep-in-the-heart feeling that Carolina might win. That feeling never came into existence. We were beaten in the first quarter and never were in the ball game from there out—although we did play a creditable third quarter.

Reversing Form

WE DID SHOW A REVERSAL of form, though, in that we played a good second half—while showing little in the first. Our usual pattern has been to stick close in the first stages of the game and then go down by decisive scores. Notre Dame had us 13-7, Tennessee had us 14-7 and Virginia had us, 14-7, at the half—and all three ran up the score on us. But this game was different. The Blue Devils ran with ease to lead us 27-0 at the half. They only beat us 7-0 in the second half, but there still is a rule in collegiate football that you have to count both halves in totalling the score.

The most appalling thing about the game was the ease with which the Duke offensive line moved our defensive line around. According to Duke publicity director, Ted Mann, "It had been our plan to pass over you." But with a five man line employed to stop the Duke running attack the Devils saw a perfect chance to keep the running game going. The monotony of their five yard gains was almost dulling.

Defensive Hopes

THE TAR HEELS HAD PLACED most of their hopes on winning the game in the defensive line and hoping for a break where the offense might push a couple of scores across. But that wasn't the case. The Duke offensive line was so far superior that when we seemed to have stopped the Blue Devils for no gain, they had actually picked up four or five yards. Our defensive linemen were being pushed back on every play and although we seemed to stop them in their line-of-scrimmage tracks they still made yardage. In the first quarter, when the Devils had the ball near our goal line there was a hole big enough for a lame colt to get through for yardage.

The game was a disheartening blow for students and Carolina alumni alike, but was something that couldn't be helped. The Carolina team, eager to play and definitely up for the Devils, never had a chance. They were knocked off their gams in the opening minutes and were out of it from there on. There's an old saying that the first play of a football game is the most important. If you can knock your opponent around on that first play then you can win the game. That was the case yesterday.

Marvin Bass, former Carolina line coach, is now line coach for the professional Washington Redskins.

Duke Win Biggest Rout In 64 Years

Defeat Is One Point Worse Than 33-0 Licking In 1944

Lutz could only pick 11 yards in three plays, and faded to pass with fourth and 15 to go on the 30. End Bill Keziah had beaten Carolina safetyman Sonny Ridenhour to the left hand corner of the field, and took Lutz's pass on the five. Ridenhour made the tackle, but Keziah reached the end zone on his first roll for the score. Smith's conversion made it 20-0 at2:47 of the second quarter.

Carolina reached Duke territory for the first time after taking the kickoff. Worrell took a pitchout from Motta on the option play, and ran 18 yards around left end to the Duke 46-yard line. The Tar Heels could go no further, and Wallace again was forced to punt.

Duke, the new Big Four and Southern Conference champions, got its next score in record time. The Blue Devils got the ball on their 20 after Wallace's boot went into the end zone. Lutz ran three plays, getting a first down on the 35-yard line.

The red-headed Smith gentleman then took a handoff from the red-headed Lutz gentleman, minced five yards off left tackle, and ran like hell the other 60 yards for the score. He was never touched. After regaining his breath, Smith converted to give Duke a 27-0 lead with 8:16 left in the second quarter.

Carolina's defense settled down, and began containing the Blue Devils, with co-captain George Norris and others playing first-rate ball. Neither team could move the ball, and the half ended, 27-0, Duke.

The Tar Heels started the second half by holding Duke inside the Carolina 20-yard line. Carson Leach deflected a pass by Carolina's Newman, and tackle Tank Lawerence intercepted for Duke on the Tar Heel 20. Red Smith collected a first down on the five, but Charlie Smith fumbled, Lutz recovering on the 16. Two passes failed, and Carolina took over on downs.

Before the Tar Heels could get out of the hole, Newman fumbled, and Duke recovered on the Carolina 26. Once more the Tar Heel defense proved up to the job, with Dick Lackey intercepting a pass on the three.

Carolina started on the 15 after Lackey ran back the interception, and marched 75 yards to the Duke 10 before losing the ball. Charlie Motta ran the Tar Heel split-T that picked up six first downs during the drive. Parker Worrell, and Wallace were the big guns, and there were no passes thrown.

Parker ran off left tackle from the Duke 16, picked up six yards, and then fumbled, Duke's Bill Lea recovering to stop the touchdown threat. The quarter ended with the score standing at 27-0, Duke.

Duke got its last touchdown at 6:57 of the final quarter. Carolina safety Albert Long returned a punt from the Carolina 45 to the Duke 35, and then the Tar Heels pushed down to the Duke 26, but could get no further, losing the ball on downs.

The Blue Devils drove from there to the Carolina three-yard line, where Red Smith scored. Lutz himself made the outstanding play of the drive, a 21 yard run from the 50 to the Carolina 29. A frantic lunge by Tar Heel Junior Seawell kept him from going all the way.

Charlie Smith drove 15 yards down to the seven, Lutz went to the three, missed on a pass, and then Smith scored, making the tally 34-0, one point more than the 33-0 score of the game in 1944 which was previously Duke's worst defeat of Carolina.

Duke coach Bill Murray sent his third string offense in for the rest of the game, but the Tar Heels couldn't muster a score against the mighty Duke defense that played the whole game, and the game ended with Duke ringing the victory bell 34 times.

Chess Club

Mike Rauhut and Joe Levin tied for first place in the "B" division of the chess club's fall tourney. The playoff game will be held at the weekly meeting of the chess club Monday night at 7:30 in room 301-B, Woollen Gym. Anyone interested in watching, learning or playing the game is invited.

Kit Crittenden, state champion, repeated his last year's victory with a clean sweep of five games.

Will Herberg To Talk Here On Dec. 1, 2

By Tom Neal Jr.

Free lance journalist . . . author . . . contributor to labor, social research and theology . . . this is Will Herberg.

He will speak on campus on Dec. 1 and 2, the Monday and Tuesday following Thanksgiving holidays, under the auspices of the local Inter-Faith council.

". . . Almost every one who has heard Herberg speak agrees that this energetic man is one of the most interesting individuals he has heard," Jim Haney, president of the Inter-Faith group said yesterday.

Herberg has written widely on social, political and religious subjects. Among his publications as "The Ethics of Power," in Labor Unions," "The Jewish Movement in the United States," "The Political Theory of American Socialism," "Theological Issues of the Hour," "The Theology of Reinhold Niebuhr," "Franz Rosenweig's Judaism of Personal Existence."

His recent book, "Judaims and Modern Man: An Interpretation of Jewish Religion," has been hailed by Niebuhr as a milestone in American religious thought." Herberg is at work on a study of the relation of religion to the social sciences.

A graduate of Columbia University, Herberg is now a labor consultant and director of research in a large AFL labor union.

Herberg's key address during his two day series of talks here will be Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. His public lecture in Gerrard Hall is entitled "Communism — Democracy — Religion."

In addition to the Gerrard Hall lecture, Herberg will speak in several classrooms, at a faculty-student seminar and to the Hillel Foundation.

Ken Myers, Hillel representative to the Inter-Faith council is in charge of Dr. Herberg's program. Exact hours and topics of each talk will be released soon.

In Your Church

By Tom Neal Jr.

Baptist

The local Baptist Church will observe Thanksgiving with a Harvest Home service this morning at 11 o'clock and with a Thanksgiving dinner for all the congregation at 7 p.m. Tuesday. The service this morning will include special Thanksgiving music by the choir, and a sermon on the Thanksgiving theme, "Give God the Glory" by the pastor, the Rev. Samuel T. Habel.

Christian Science

A special service on Thanksgiving day will be held at 11 a.m. in New West Lecture Hall by local Christian Scientists. Topic of the lesson-sermon is "Thanksgiving." As a part of the regular service, laymen of the church will offer brief testimonial remarks appropriate at the Thanksgiving season.

Congregational Christian

The United Student Fellowship will continue its discussion "What We Can Believe About God" this morning at the regular meeting, from the viewpoint of science and its phenomena that cannot be explained.

Student recreation, discussion and supper will begin at 6 p.m.

Jewish

A supper and program hour will be observed at the Hillel House tonight at 5:45.

Quakers

"Ministry in Silence" will be discussed at the Religious Society of Friends meeting this morning at 11 o'clock. Jack Phillips will be discussion leader for the program which is held in Graham Memorial.

Lutheran

"Nothing But Thanks" is the title of the Thanksgiving sermon, which will be delivered at the Lutheran Church today by the Rev. E. C. Cooper, pastor of the church. Special music for the service will include "Now Thank We All" by the chorus choir under the direction of Billy Chance.

Methodist

An interpretation of "Praying Hands" will be the theme of the worship program tonight at the Wesley Foundation meeting. Jeanette Chance is in charge of the program. Following supper, election of Wesley Foundation officers will be held. Vacancies will be filled for offices of president, vice president, secretary and treasurer.

No Wesley program is planned for next Sunday, November 30. However, the regular schedule will be followed throughout the week.

Presbyterian

Guest minister this morning at the Presbyterian church is the Rev. William M. Currie, Associate Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Greensboro. Mr. Currie will preach at both the 9:45 and 11 a.m. services. Presbyterians from Greensboro have been invited to worship with the local congregation this morning.

The local congregation and student groups will have their regular suppers and study sessions tonight. The students will be lead by Dr. Arthur Fink, Dean of the School of Social Work. Topic of discussion is "The Christian Citizens Concern for the Welfare of Others: How Can He Put This Into Action?"

The congregation will be lead in its study on the Westminister Confession of Faith by Dr. McMullen, Acting Pastor. Both groups open their meeting with a supper at 6 p.m.

Unitarians

The Unitarian Fellowship will meet tonight at 8:30 in Gerrard Hall for a discussion on questions raised following Dr. A. Powell Davies' recent talk here. The publis is invited.

35 Paintings Of Old Salem In Morehead

By Elizabeth Napier

Thirty-five paintings of Old Salem, described as a faithful record of the quaint physical characteristics of this early American village and "graphic evidence of the steadfast character and Godly spirit of the Moravians", are now being exhibited in the Morehead Building.

Created in oil by Mrs. James A. Gray Sr., Winston-Salem, widow of the North Carolina business and civic leader and philanthropist, who died recently, the exhibit of scenes from Old Salem, now in the process of restoration, will be seen in the North Gallery of the Morehead Building through January 2.

Commenting on the exhibit, Controller and Vice-President of the Consolidated University William D. Carmichael Jr., said "Old Salem is in the soul and in the heart of Mrs. Pauline Bahnson Gray. It is in her every day life, just as she is in the every day life of this historic community. Old Salem is in her blood. She is the daughter of a Moravian physician, Dr. Henry T. Bahnson, and the granddaughter of a servant of God and the Moravian Church, Bishop George Frederick Bahnson."

Controller Carmichael said Mrs. Gray, using a style and technique suited "to the quaintness of Old Salem, has achieved a unique album. Her pictures convey, even to those who do not know Old Salem, some of the understanding of why the Moravians cherish it so dearly and why thousands of people of many faiths make the pilgrimage, each year. . . ."

Old Salem Cemetery is hallowed ground for Mrs. Gray," Controller Carmichael explained. "There are the graves of her forebears. There, her husband, James Alexander Gray, is buried. It is a place of peace and majesty. There one knows that he stands at the Gates of Heaven."

NANCY GREEN of Chapel Hill in her role of the mayor's wife in Gogol's classic farce comedy, "The Inspector General," to be presented by the Carolina Playmakers December 3-7 at 8:30. Tickets are now on sale in Swain Hall and at Ledbetter-Pickard in Chapel Hill.

Emmons Gets Program Job At Morehead

Richard H. Emmons, formerly with the engineering department of Goodyear Aircraft Corporation, Akron, Ohio, has been appointed program chairman at Morehead Planetarium.

He already has assumed the duties of this newly-created position.

Formerly an instructor of mathematics and astronomy at Kent State University, Kent, Ohio, Emmons took his undergraduate degree at the University of Southern California. He received his master's degree from Kent State University.

Emmons assisted with observations at Perkins Observatory with their 69-inch diameter telescope while attending Ohio Wesleyan University and made the 13-inch telescope used at John Carrol University in Cleveland, Ohio. He supervised the production of approximately 75 telescopes and a small planetarium while sponsor of the Kent State University Astronomy Club.

an opportunity to hold Iranian good will, he declared.

The discusion brought forth a picture of a great revolution now taking place in the East, where millions, lately freed from colonial rule, are in active search of help in solving their problems. The experts debated rather cautiously the great question of whether the East could in the end embrace the West, in view of the proximity and power and persuavise propaganda of Russia.

Dr. Young said, "We must remember that industrialization in our own country was slow and painful . . . We must see that it cannot be developed in small nations overnight."

Dr. Hurewitz said, "One advantage to us is that the United States is actually giving help, concrete help, under the Point Four program, whereas Russia is only talking, propagandizing."

Dr. Young demurred slightly, "Despite the value of the Point Four program, we must realize that we cannot make a sound foreign policy of dollars—in fact, economic factors may be less important in the East than psychological and political factors. A flood of dollars, in some instances, may actually worsen conditions."

Ken Penegar will introduce Mr. Currie and Virginia Hall will give the benediction. The postlude will be Eslava's "Postlude." Thomas Sibley will be organist and music will be by the Men's Glee Club. Other hymns include "St. Theodulph" by Melchoir Teschner and Thompson's "The God Who Gave Us Life."

Opportunities in Optometry

Optometry is a profession offering special adantages to ambitious young men and women. Its scope is constantly expanding. Eighty per cent of the Nation's millions depend upon the Doctor of Optometry and his professional skill in conserving vision. There is a shortage of optometrists in many States.

The Doctor of Optometry possesses the dignity of being a professional man. He renders an essential service to the health and well-being of his community. Substantial financial rewards are obtainable almost from the beginning of his practice.

U. S. Department of Defense and Selective Service grant optometry students the same consideration accorded medical students.

The Doctor of Optometry degree can be earned in three college years by a student having sixty or more semester hours of Liberal Arts credits. Such students will be admitted at mid-year by Chicago College of Optometry.

Chicago College of Optometry is centrally located in the heart of the world's greatest center for teaching in the healing arts. It is nationally accredited and is splendidly equipped. Clinical facilities are unsurpassed.

One day he realized that this habit of always saying "Yes" to the Big Question was costing him a Pretty Penny. So he became a Hard Man to Get To. Letters, phone calls and personal visits all encountered a secretary with a face like a flint and a 4-word vocabulary. ("He's out of town.")

This was Rough on the Old School, but nobody had a solution—until the football coach, a Brain in his own right, came up with a Magnificent but Simple Idea. He dashed down to the Western Union office and dispatched a Telegram saturated with Old School spirit and dedicated to the theme that unless some Noble Soul came through pronto, the eleven would be playing barefoot and jersey-less.

Runoff Races Today

Wagger, Plott Hold The Key To Legislature

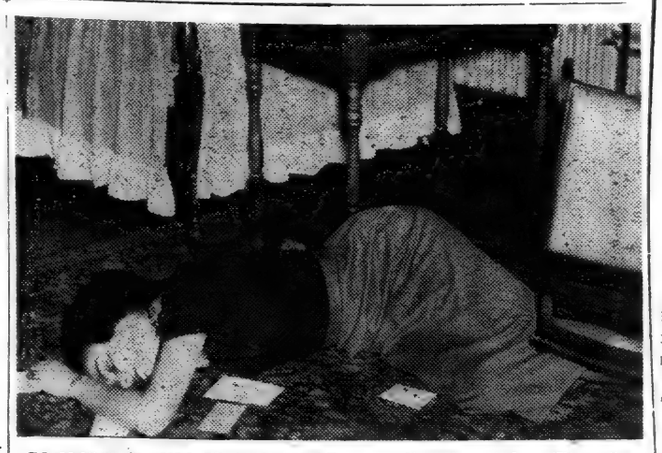
Woman's Council Seats Also Slated To Be Elected

By Louis Kraar

The Student Party and University Party will square off again today in the campus political arena to fight for a legislative majority as runoff candidates Gerry Wagger (UP) and Frank Plott (SP) vie for votes in Men's Dormitory District IV.

Student Party legislators number 25, including two double endorsed and one independent candidate who lean toward SP, while UP has 24 legislators, counting five double endorsed candidates who are UP inclined.

Today's political clash between Plott and Wagger will decide whether SP has a legislative majority or whether both parties will have the same number of legislators. If Plott wins, SP will have a majority of two and if Wagger wins, UP will have the same number as its opposition.



Residents of Mangum, Manly, Emerson Stadium, Joyner, Grimes and Ruffin Dormitories will make the decision. As expected, both candidates have been given an extra push by their respective parties.

Wagger (UP) is a senior from High Point. He has served on the Committee to investigate presidential appointments and the Committee to appear before Chancellor House to request social dorm rooms. He said yesterday, "As an incumbent legislator, I would like to thank those who have supported me this past year. I have always voted the way I wanted to in the Legislature and will continue to do so if reelected."

Plott (SP) is a freshman from Charlotte. He attended Central High School and was active in the band, orchestra, and dramatics group. Plott plans to study law. He stated yesterday, "In addition to the fact that I've pledged full support of the Student Party in the coming Legislature session, I feel that this particular race holds the key to the balance of power. It is important for it would break the deadlock and provide the opportunity to really accomplish something in the Legislature."

CARMAN NAHM IS PICTURED as police found her Thursday night on the floor of her room, dead of poisoning. Yesterday, police announced the arrest of Yackety Yack beauty Virginia Wilson in connection with the murder. Neither the "dead" Miss Nahm nor the "suspected" Miss Wilson had any worries, however, as it's all staged for a mock trial.—Daily Tar Heel photo by Cornell Wright.

Yack Coed Beauty Is 'Murder' Suspect

Police yesterday announced the arrest of newly elected Yack beauty Virginia Wilson as the suspected murderer of Carman Nahm.

Miss Wilson was taken into custody last night while she was having dinner at the Chi Omega Sorority House on West Franklin Street.

The arrest resulted from investigation of circumstances surrounding the recent poisoning of Miss Nahm. Police, cooperating with Phi Alpha Delta legal fraternity in staging its annual mock trial, said Miss Wilson, who was on permanent probation, was due to appear before the Woman's Council last Friday because of charges made by Miss Nahm, chairman. Testimony by Miss Nahm probably would have meant expulsion from the University. Police also said the suspect had attempted to make purchases of poison.

Solicitor Harry Faggart of PAD said that other "conclusive" evidence was in his hands, but declined to comment further on the nature of the evidence.

Miss Wilson refused to make any statement before consulting her attorney, Roger Hendrix. Hendrix was unavailable immediate following the arrest. The suspect was released under bond pending a hearing before the grand jury.

Miss Nahm was found by her roommate lying on the floor of her room last Thursday night. Worried dorm residents soon were reassured, however, that it was only the legal fraternity's staged incident for its annual mock trial.

See Trustees Over Holidays, Horton Urges

Personal Contact Might Be Helpful For 'Big Push'

The fight against Saturday classes was renewed yesterday as student government officials planned what President Ham Horton termed "the big push over the Thanksgiving holidays.

"We want to wage a quiet, personal, man - to - man campaign which in the long run will be more effective," said Horton in outlining the campaign.

The plan, which is being monitored by student government officials is this:

Over the Thanksgiving holidays every student should plan to pay a visit or write a letter to the trustee in his locality. Before doing this, the student should check by Horton's office in Graham Memorial and tell workers there which Trustee he plans to see. In this way, all the Trustees will be seen and not too many students will go to any one.

A detailed file on each Trustee, the number of students who are going to see him, and the Trustee's reactions are going to be kept.

Horton emphasized the importance of tact and politeness when

(See TRUSTEES, page 4)

Last Chance

Tomorrow is the last day students may preregister for the Winter Quarter.

Green forms must be turned in the office at Archer House, before students leave for the Thanksgiving holidays.

2nd Trustee Against Extra Day Of Class

Hugh Harris, Agriculture Official, Joins With Umstead And Students

Another member of the Trustee Executive Committee, Assistant Commissioner of Agriculture A. Hugh Harris, joined students yesterday in protest against Saturday classes at the University.

"I'm not only against Saturday classes at Carolina," Harris said in a telephone interview yesterday, "but oppose them at State too."

Harris, who was unable to attend the meeting of the Executive Committee earlier this month at which Saturday classes was voted, said he called President Gordon Gray to offer his vote by proxy against the extra class day.

"Please be assured that I will continue this attitude and will never weaken on my stand in this connection. Should you have the opportunity, I will be glad for you to inform the officials of your student organization of my feelings," he declared in a letter to Watts A. Scott, a disabled veteran friend who attends the University.

Scott, who has a wife and two children, is one of the many students here who depends upon outside work to finance his education. He was one of the first to air his protests on the wire recordings made by student government officials.

"Please be assured that I am first, last and always opposed to a five and one-half day week for any of our State educational institutions and will continue to register my protest if and when I have the opportunity, Harris asserted.

He concluded, "It is my humble opinion that the adoption of a five and one-half day week is setting our great University back at least twenty-five years. We have a most progressive administration at the University now, and in my opinion, a move of this kind would be tragic both to personnel and students."

J. W. Umstead, brother of the governor-elect and local insurance agent, is the other Executive Committee member who has come out against Saturday classes.

Cuts To Cost $2.50 Each For Holiday

If you're thinking about cutting class before or after the Thanksgiving holidays, you better reconsider. At least, that's the word from Central Records Office.

For each class cut taken tomorrow, the day before Thanksgiving, students will be required to pay $2.50. The same applies for cuts taken on Monday, the day holidays officially end.

There is one consolation, however. The maximum fine for cutting classes before or after holidays is $7.50. Even if you cut both days, you won't be fined over $7.50.

The fine for holiday cuts is a standard policy for undergraduates who are absent before and after holidays. Instructors are required to call the roll, Central Records officials said.

Officials added one more note. Deans of the various schools will not accept excuses for flat tires, broken-down cars, and missed trains or planes.

Pace Coming Here Dec. 2 For Speech

Secretary of Army Frank Pace Jr. will speak here Dec. 2, Ken Penegar, chairman of the Carolina Forum announced yesterday.

Pace will speak in Memorial Hall at 9 p.m. following a dinner at the Carolina Inn. After the address there will be a question and answer period.

The Army secretary was appointed by President Truman in 1950. He entered the Army in 1942 as a second lieutenant and in four years rose to the rank of major. He now holds a reserve commission as lieutenant colonel in the air force.

In his career Pace has served as director of the Bureau of the Budget, Chairman of the Defense Ministers Conference of NATO, executive assistant to the Postmaster General and special assistant to the Attorney General.

A native of Little Rock, Ark., Pace is a graduate of Princeton University and of the Harvard Law School.

The 40-year-old Army secretary has received honorary degrees from Princeton, the University of Louisville, Syracuse University, the University of Arkansas, Temple University and Dartmouth College.

Following the address Tuesday night there will be a reception in Graham Memorial.

Dear Holds First Meet With Paper

Editor Walt Dear held his first staff meeting yesterday since winning the job to head the campus daily paper in last week's election.

In a short talk to the staff, Dear lauded the "good job" done by the Interim Editorial Board which filled in after Editor Barry Farber left in October. The board was composed of Managing Editor Rolfe Neill and Associate Editors Sue Burress and Bev Baylor, with the girls doing the preponderance of the actual editorial work.

Dear said putting out The Daily Tar Heel was a "team job and when one member of the team fails it reflects on all of us." He said he hoped the full staff would continue to work under him.

Also present at the meeting were several students who responded to the editor's call for new staffers. Today's is Dear's first issue since being elected.

Wilson Visits Texas, Talks Of Money

"You can't pay and keep a top-notch faculty with only pleasant atmosphere," UNC Vice-president Logan Wilson told a Daily Texan reporter last week at Austin, Tex.

The president-elect of the University of Texas, on a two-day orientation trip, said that "Feeding his family is more important to a professor than any sense of loyalty to a university.

In discussing low salaries of University of Texas professors, Wilson said, "Professors resign every day from low pay at small colleges as well as large universities." But the University of Texas should at least be able to compete with salaries of other universities, he said.

A full professor's salary at Texas ranks 13th from the top when compared with other universities in the United States. Associate and assistant professors' salaries are 15th from the top and instructors' salaries rank 11th, the Texas campus daily said.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. — The most serious diplomatic rift between Britain and the U. S. in years continued unabated yesterday despite efforts by India and other countries to close the breach. Day-long harmony moves were expected, but diplomats held little hope for them. The two great allies split far apart when the U. Gov. Scott Gets Praise In SSL Bill

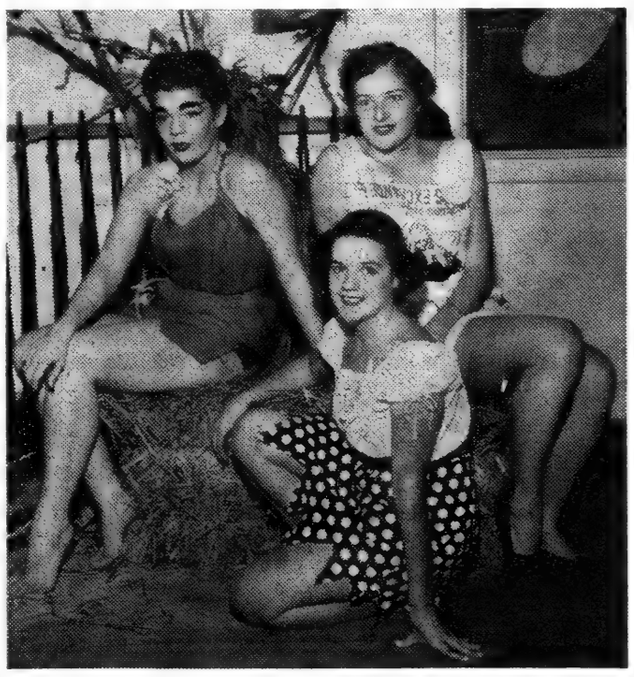
By Jody Levey

DAILY TAR HEEL News Editor



RALEIGH, Nov. 24 — Carolina delegates Bob Pace and Dale Ryon introduced a resolution commending Gov. W. Kerr Scott that was carried by both houses of the State Student Legislature Saturday.

The resolution was adopted as one of the last orders of business as delegates from 25 Tar Heel colleges wound up their three-day mock legislature.

Praising Scott, the resolution urged him "to seek election to the United States Senate in 1954."

Other bills passed in the assembly include measures for a new salary schedule for public school teachers in North Carolina, introduced by Julian Mason, UNC; the admission of Alaska as a state; a uniform married law for the nation; driver education in

Jaycee President Speaks Tonight

J. B. Brame, president of the North Carolina Junior Chamber of Commerce, will speak to the membership, pledges, and invited guests of Alpha Kappa Psi, national professional fraternity in business administration, this evening at 7:30 P. M.

A native of Durham, Brame has been head of the North Carolina Junior Chamber for the past year. The young Durham businessman is not only head of the Brame Specialty Company but also travels extensively while administering Jaycee policies.

He will address local business administration students on the necessity of taking an active part in community affairs as well as business activities.

East And West

Thanks to a responsive student body, international students here will be able to ride to the North Carolina homes in which they're going to spend the Thanksgiving holidays.

However, yesterday came a plea from the Y for two more rides. Rides are needed for two people to Asheville and one to Clinton. Contact the Y if you are interested in a Good Turn for the day.

Jesus Christ Only A Man?

Just A Lot Of Fuss, Weigle Says Of Ruckus On New Bible

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 24 —The scholar who directed preparation of the new Bible said today that Rev. M. L. Hux of Rocky Mount, N. C. was making an unnecessary fuss over only one word in the scriptures.

Dr. Luther A. Weigle, dean emeritus of the Yale University Divinity School, said the members and minister of the Temple Baptist Church at Rocky Mount actually were "hollering over a mistake made in the old edition of the Bible and corrected in the new one. Dr. Weigle recently spoke at the University of North Carolina.

Rev. Hux has attacked the new Revised Standard Version of the Bible as denying the deity of Jesus Christ and His virgin birth.

The minister, speaking at a mass meeting of 100 people protesting the new Bible, said, "I hope God Almighty will use this wedge (the Bible) to split the churches and separate the remnants of the Godfearing people from the modernists."

In explaining what he called the denial of Christ's deity, Rev. Hux pointed out that the "rule of the translators" in the new version is that "thee" and "thou" are used only in referring to God. He said that pronouns, such as "you" and "your" which refer to mere men, are used in reference to Christ. He said that this indicates "Jesus Christ is a man and not God incarnated."

The minister claimed that the basic difference in the two Bibles can be illustrated by a passage in Isaiah. He stated that the translators have eliminated the virgin birth from the Revised Standard Version by replacing the word "virgin" with "young woman."

"If the translators' version is true, Jesus Christ is a mere man born of a woman. If Jesus Christ is just a man, we might as well throw our Bibles away," he said.

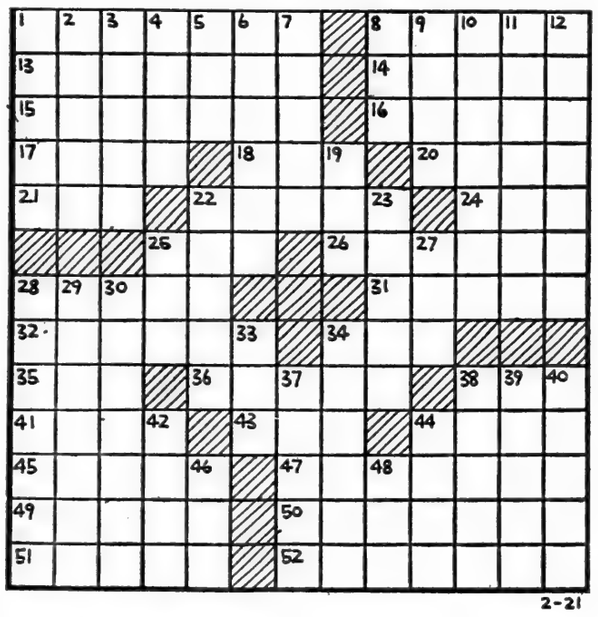
Just Type And Ink?

What is this sheet of paper? Is there more than type and ink? Is there more than a few campus briefs, a picture, an intramurals story, an ad, or a snappy column?

Who does THE DAILY TAR HEEL represent? What does it stand for? It has sometimes been misconstrued as representing the opinions of all the students. This is impossible, although we will attempt to get a wide and varied student opinion through our columns and letters to the editor. This newspaper has often been ridiculed as a naive, inaccurate, small-time gazette. To some, THE DAILY TAR HEEL has been a continuing experiment with new minds constantly trying to achieve a more fascinating product.



THE DAILY TAR HEEL is a day-to-day history of the University of North Carolina. It is a living account of the University community, from 5,500 students to the 100 members of the Board of Trustees. It should be and has been occasionally the essence of this school, encompassing progress, freedom to think, and truth.

We think this newspaper should speak out with a forceful and clear voice on matters affecting the University. Through these columns until Springtime, we shall present our views. We urge every student to sound off with his opinions by letters.

We feel that THE DAILY TAR HEEL is obligated to do more than express student opinion. It is this newspaper's job to express its own opinion, to criticize, to congratulate, to inform. Judge Louis Brandeis pointed to the values of free thinking when he said, "Those who won our independence by revolution were not cowards. They did not fear political change. They did not exalt order at the cost of liberty. To courageous, self-reliant men, with confidence in the power of free and fearless reasoning applied through the process of popular government, no danger flowing from speech can be deemed clear and present, unless the incidence of the evil apprehended is so imminent that it may befall before there is opportunity for full discussion. If there be time to expose through discussion the falsehood and fallacies, to avert the evil by the processes of education, the remedy to be applied is more speech, not enforced silence. Only an emergency can justify repression. Such must be the rule if authority is to be reconciled with freedom. Such . . . is the command of the Constitution."

THE DAILY TAR HEEL will seek to cover all segments of campus life, including the activities of graduate students as well as undergraduates. It will seek to dig out of the fourth floor room the student who always wanted to write, but "has never got around to writing." It will continue to give a well-rounded picture of University athletics. An editorial policy of ideas, constructive criticism, a channel for leadership, and wakeful thinking shall be attempted.

The newspaper team of reporters, salesmen, circulation deliverymen, and editorialists is at your service.

Raleigh

Those student legislators have the old folks in a stew again.

A few years back they set things popping around the Capitol when they let down the racial bars in their assembly.

This time they set out to "get" the Clark brothers. John W. and David, those hardy, strong-willed souls who always keep things stirred up among the Greater University trustees.

But the dogs were called off, and the callers were no lesser personages than State College Chancellor John W. Harrelson and Greater University President Gordon Gray.

It happened this way: State College's delegation to the '52 Student Legislature had cooked up a little bill to boot the Clark brothers off the trustees. It was a popular little bill; the delegates favored it 10-4.

Eight days ago State College's student newspaper, The Technician, ran a story on the upcoming Student Assembly and the college's part in it. The Technician even printed the caption of the Clark brothers bill, a caption that read: "A Bill to Remove John W. and David Clark from the Board of Trustees of the Consolidated University of North Carolina Introduced by North Carolina State College."

That set it off. Chancellor Harrelson got in touch with the delegation and invited it around to his office Tuesday at noon.

The delegates knew what was coming. So they got together Monday night and voted, 7-4, to retract the bill. "He scared us," said one delegate.

By that time word of the bill had drifted over to Chapel Hill. Gordon Gray became interested and let it be known that he thought the bill was improper. Gray's opinion was forwarded to certain members of the delegation by State College's assistant dean of students, Banks C. Talley.

When the bill came up in the Student Assembly Thursday Thursday night, it was a far cry from the original. There was no mention of the Clark brothers by name, although the old, objectional caption still was printed on the Calendar of Bills.

Even so, the legislation accomplished the original purpose. It said that a person should vacate his trustee seat upon reaching 65; it said also that no one should serve more than two terms. As such, it would knock both Clarks off the board without a name being mentioned.

During the debate the Clarks were referred to but once. G. W. Willis of Gloucester, the State College student who introduced the bill, spoke of the "gentleman from Greensboro (John) and the textile editor of Charlotte (Dave) who seem to be life members of the board of trustees and who seem to be running our institutions."

As it finally passed the House, the bill would restrict any trustee to more than two consecutive terms.

Both Clarks have had long and always stormy careers on the Board of Trustees. John caused student tempers to flare this year by bringing pressure to bear upon students whom he considered to be taking part in left-wing activities. He was writing home about them.

Dress Up!

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 24.—Students at John Carroll University must dress for the occasion at their classes—and a too-informal garb can land them in the dean's office.

"Too informal" means flamboyant jackets, overalls, boots and sombreros among other things, according to faculty members.

Deans of the College of Arts and Sciences and School of Business, Economics and Government have posted the following notice: "The attire of Hopalong Cassidy no doubt has its place—but the university is not such a place. Blue Jeans, T-shirts and jackets advertising social and athletic clubs are not to be worn at this university."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON. — Eisenhower's top advisers have hatched smart strategy for dealing with Democrats in the Senate. Through it, they expect to control a majority of Southern Democrats in the Senate for at least two years, possibly longer.

Their strategy is to play ball with the Southern Democrats and not attempt to build up the Republican Party in the deep South. Ike advisers figure that if they butter-up men like George and Russell of Georgia, Eastland and Stennis of Mississippi, they will cooperate on Eisenhower's legislative program.

However, they will employ a completely different strategy in the border states, plus Florida. For in these states—Kentucky, Tennessee, Maryland, and Oklahoma—Eisenhower either rolled up sizable margins or won.

In these states, therefore, Republican strategy will be to organize locally as diligently as possible with the hope of making them definitely Republican in the next election.

But in Virginia, where Eisenhower will seek to keep the favor of Senator Byrd's friends, and in the deep South, GOP strategists figure that Democratic senators think and vote pretty much as Republicans anyway, so the best strategy is to court their favor.

It's just leaked out that the only man who can talk turkey to General MacArthur and get away with it—General George Kenny—made an eleventh-hour plea to the proud MacArthur to let bygones be bygones and endorse his former military aide, Dwight Eisenhower, for President. But MacArthur shook his head, sat sullen and silent in his Waldorf tower until the last election returns were in.

Only a few insiders know about General Kenny's last-minute appeal, which he made three days before the election. He was put up to it by New York's Governor Tom Dewey, who had already tried to win MacArthur over to the Eisenhower bandwagon through such GOP stalwarts as ex-President Herbert Hoover and House Leader Joe Martin. Both had failed to heal the old rift between MacArthur and his one-time aide.

However, the man who has always been able to tell off MacArthur and still make him like it, is the runt-sized, weather-beaten Kenny, MacArthur's air commander in the South Pacific. So Dewey dispatched the retired Air Force General to MacArthur's Waldorf tower apartment to make a final appeal.

"Boss," urged Kenny, "why won't you come out for Eisenhower?"

MacArthur spoke grandiloquently of his obligation to his loyal followers who were still supporting him for president.

"Those California radicals?" snorted Kenny. "If you string along with that gang, you couldn't be elected dog-catcher."

The blunt-talking Air Force General argued, pleaded, and cajoled.

"Look," he said, "it's only a five-minute walk from here to Eisenhower's suite at the Commodore."

"And it's only a five-minute walk from the Commodore here," replied MacArthur.

That ended the conversation. Probably the breach between the two men now never will be healed.

New Attorney General Herbert, Brownell, writing as guest cloumnist for the Washington Merry-Go-Round Aug. 23, 1945, said: "The inside story from Republican leaders is that the Republican Party will win control of Congress in 1946. Put that down as one of this column's 'Predictions of Things To Come.'" . . . Brownell, then chairman of the Republican National Committee, proceeded to make his prediction come true. . . . Brownell began politics as Tom Dewey's successful campaign manager in the race for governor of New York in 1942, has been close to him ever since, watched Dewey's racket clean-up in New York, should do an equally good job in cleaning up federal corruption. . . . Brownell is one of the closest men to Eisenhower, was given the job of handling patronage, will fly with Ike to Korea. At the Chicago convention, novice Eisenhower leaned on Brownell heavily, used to say: "What do we do next, Herb?"

George Humphrey, new Secretary of the Treasury, is the nearest thing to an Andrew Mellon since Mellon himself ran the Treasury. Humphrey is chairman of the Mellon-dominated Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Co., one of the biggest in the world; also heads the Mark

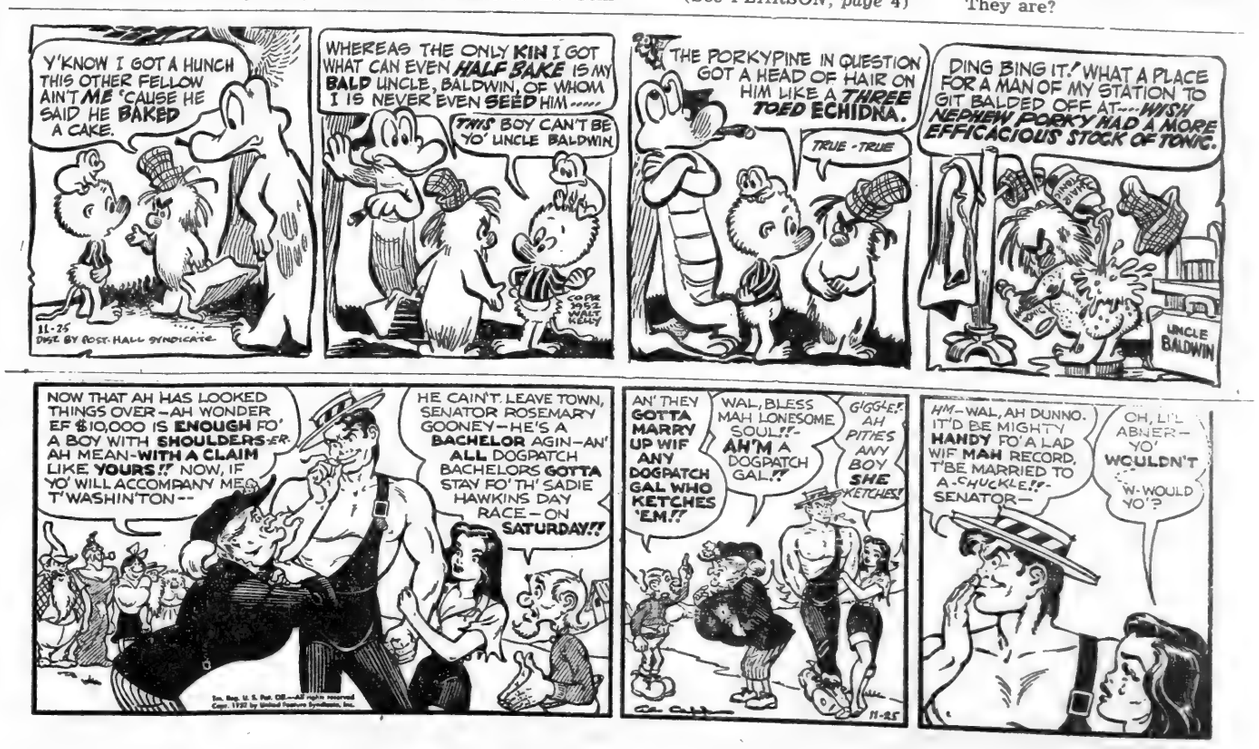
Party Line

A small group of students will decide today which party will have a majority in Legislature.

For a change, this group will not be any clique of politicians or band of backroom heads. It will be the students of Dorm District IV who vote in the run-off race between Gerry Wagger (UP) senior and Frank Plott (SP) freshman.

This anticlimax to the regular election is rather ironic. Weeks of handshaking, dorm door pounding, postering, and other forms of political propaganda or "improper-ganda" proved only one thing. Students are going to vote for the man they like, not a party title. That's why SP has 25 legislators and UP 24, a close number. And that's why there are two political parties on campnus.



BLUES IN THE NIGHT: Student Party politicos boast they have got the firsst legislative majority in 14 years. They tell of the great plans they have for legislation. But why do some of them still keep crying the blues about the "big clique" and that "bloc vote" of the opposition?

TAKE YOUR PICK: Women juniors could literally "cast their vote and get their choice" when it came to choosing Honor Council members. 25 likely lassies ran for three seats. The ballots looked like Hialeah racing forms and none knew who to put their vote with. Maybe the Selections Board likes run-offs, but do 25 coeds relish costly campaigning?

ACME OF APATHY: In many conversations with the students on campus, one finds many students don't know who was running for legislature from his dorm or for Daily Tar Heel Editor. Nothing short of Marylin Monroe or free beer could prime some campus characters in to take interest in their student government. Yet, it's the student-on-campus who complains that "those politicians don't ever do anything."

POUNDING THE BEAT: Ken Meyers (SP) still around, but not politicing. . . . Lew Southern (SP) caught red-faced when Prexy Horton (UP) interrupts one of his sermons on "that UP clique." . . . Bob Little (UP) taking it like a good loser and out to try again in the spring. . . . Ed Gross (UP) . . . mentioned for post of party chairman. . . . Joel Fleishman (SP) leaving GM around midnight to attend a "strictly secret" party planning session. . . . Student Council President Ted Frankel looking in on election results last Tuesday. . . . Freshman Ben Meyers counting votes and proving that you don't have to be a politician to take an interest in student government. . . . Gene Cook, Ken Peneger, and other Student Partyites politiking and partying at State Student Legislature. . . . Sol Cherry (UP) lending himself to Sadie Hawkins Day and winning kisses instead of votes for a change . . . and Jerry Cook's unselfish efforts as election board chairman to really put over a good fall election.

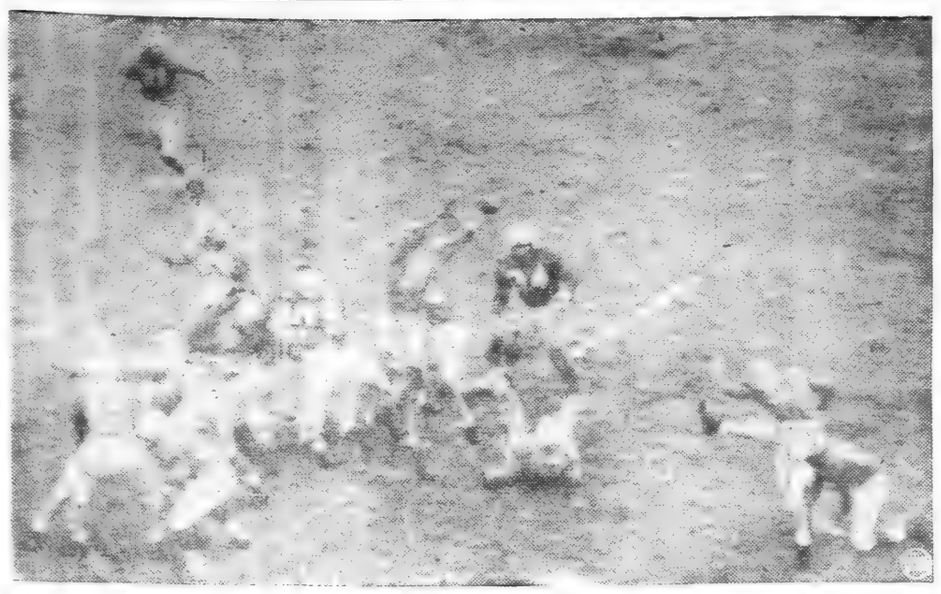
MISINFORMED INDIVIDUAL OF THE WEEK: "Oh, those campus politicians. They're just a bunch of guys that make better than average grades, sit around in Lenoir Hall and drink coffee, and spend all their time around Graham Memorial." They are?

Sigma Nu Takes Grid Crown; Soccer Team Bows

Winners Cop 12-8 Title Game

By Everette Parker

The powerful and tricky Sigma Nu's, led by Gene Shaw and Billy Duke, turned on the steam in the last half of a close contest to defeat a determined Sigma Chi squad, 12-8, yesterday afternoon for the Fraternity tag football championship.



After a close first half which ended in a 6-6 deadlock, the winners scored on a pass from Gene Shaw to Bob Hewitt to go out in front to stay. Using an array of deceptive plays, the Sigma Nu's fooled the defensive secondary completely by sending Hewitt into the end zone while Billy Duke handed off to Bill Harrington who in turn passed short to Shaw. Shaw turned and passed to Hewitt in scoring territory.

Soon after the winners scored their last touchdown, the Sigma Chi's came back to score a safety and get back into the game. The safety was scored by Fred Dale who caught Duke in the end zone. With the score resting at 12-8, the Sigma Chi's could never get another rally going.

The game started out as a battle against the strong defenses of both teams but the tide soon changed as the Sigma Nu passing attack began to click. Duke passed to Hewitt for the game's first score and gave the winners a short lived lead. Harrington missed the extra point.

With the score 6-0 against them, the Sigma Chi's began to come to life. The tying score came late in the first half on a pass from Don Evans to Dale to tie the score only to miss a chance to go ahead when John Fountain blocked the try for the extra point.

Sigma Nu, receiving the second half kickoff from the Sigma Chi's, almost went all the way for a score but was pushed back by a strong defensive line. After this stand the losers scored their only touchdown.

UNC Booters End Season In 5-1 Loss

By Paul Cheney

The Carolina soccer team was overpowered by a surprisingly strong Cherry Point Marine eleven on Fetzer Field yesterday afternoon, losing to the Leathernecks, 5-1. This was the closing contest of the current season for the Tar Heels.

After a scoreless first period, the Marines poured through three goals in the second quarter to take a commanding lead in the game. Roy Taylor scored the first marker early in the period, with an assist from Perry Sentementes. Shortly after Taylor's marker Sentementes tallied, with Lou Zeither assisting. Taylor made his second score of the period just before halftime intermission.

Cherry Point continued to dominate the offensive play in the third period. Inside right forward Jim Cacciatore got the fourth Marine marker soon after the half. Sentementes ended the Leatherneck scoring in the fourth period, with his second tally of the contest.

Carolina averted a shutout midway through the final stanza when the team's high scorer, center forward Gerry Russell, racked up a marker. Russell received some nice assictance from Rennie Randolph.

Taylor and Sentementes were the outstanding performers offensively for the winners, with Cacciatore also contributing to the attack. Goalie Al Hauch was far and away the game's leading defensive performer. Dick Pfieffer and Joe Wilson were also key men in the rugged Cherry Point defense.

This was the first victory of the season for the Marines. They were shut out early in the season by the Tar Heels and later dropped a decision to Fort Bragg. The Leathernecks tied Virginia, who had previously lost to Carolina, last week.

Carolina closes its season with a record of five wins and six defeats. The Tar Heel booters lost to N. C. State, Penn State, Maryland, Duke twice, and Cherry Point.

The locals hold victories over N. C. State, Virginia, Washington and Lee, Roanoke College, and Cherry Point.

Yesterday's loss was the second worst defeat of the year for the booters, being surpassed only by Penn State. The Pennsylvanians handed the Tar Heels a 7-0 whitewashing.

Down In Front

By Biff Roberts

A Beating

CAROLINA'S LOSS TO DUKE Saturday wasn't the first for the Tar Heels—but it was by far the worst. We had dropped five other games before entering the game and had won but the lone one over South Carolina. But at least in those other five losses we had looked like a team. Saturday we just didn't have it. It's not hard to lose a game, and it's not too hard to take a losing season, but when your team isn't in the ball game from the first play to the last, it's a pretty tough blow to take—especially when that game comes against Duke.

It was the same picture as last year—only worse—with a Smith named Red trying to make a personal grudge of it. Last year at Durham it was his 40-odd-yard run that broke the game wide open. Saturday he scored three times and kicked four out of five extra points for a total of 22, pretty fair for somebody who was a doubtful starter.

Trouble Aplenty

THAT THE DEVILS ran the game as they saw fit is pointed out by the fact that they scored the first four times they had their hands on the ball. Not once in the first half were they forced to punt. In fact they had to kick only twice in the ball game—and they added insult to injury by that, averaging 44 yards for the two boots. We didn't hit them for a loss until the final minutes of the first half when Albert Long fell on a Barger bobble that kicked around midfield.

Our main trouble—if one must be declared—was the complete inability to handle the option play. When either Worth Lutz or Jerry Barger took the ball down the line we usually had but one man to get in the way. A good block took him out and the quarterback either pitched out from there or ran it himself. For us it was just the opposite. When Marshall Newman or Charlie Motta tried the same play they had us all bottled up. Larry Parker got hit behind the line of scrimmage—through no fault of his own—so many times that he looked as though he were wearing a uniform of grass-stain blue. Duke, on the other hand, swept our ends with monotonous success.

All This And...

OUR BRIGHT SPOTS were few. The brightest was the drive we made near the end of the third quarter, going from our own 15 to the Duke 10—against their first string line. But there, as has happened so many times before, we lost the handle on the ball and Billy Lea grabbed a Parker bobble and it was the same thing over again. Dick Lackey became the second man of the year to intercept a Lutz pass when he grabbed one on his own eight after the second half had started and ran it back to the 16. Only Georgia Tech had been able to snare one before that.

We had moments in the first quarter that looked as if we might get a drive going, but every time, after we had picked up a first down or two, something happened and we were forced to punt. The jump pass with one receiver down field, the play which had such success at South Carolina, got us one quick first down in the first period, but wasn't used after that. As far as first downs go we stayed close, with 13 to their 20, but while we were just making our first downs they were going for the long gains.

First downs don't win ball games—nor do they always indicate the score. The fact remains, we had the blood beat out of us. It was all Duke—and hell, too.

Football Team Settles Down To Hard Work For Miami

The University of North Carolina football squad forgot its licking from Duke last Saturday and settled down to hard work yesterday in preparation for the season's closeout this Friday night at Miami.

Coach Carl Snavely sent the team through a thorough workout, but kept the contact down to a minimum in order to give it time to fully recuperate from Saturday.

Trainer Fitz Lutz reports that all the players who were suited up for the Duke game will be ready Friday, plus the addition of Will Alexander, defensive guard who injured his ankle against South Carolina.

Jimmy Neville and Bull Davidson were both temporarily injured in the Duke game, but they will be in good shape by the end of the week. A number of Tar Heels, including halfback John Gaylord, were in light equipment in yesterday's practice.

Carolina will meet the Hurricanes in the famed Orange Bowl in Miami, under the lights at 8:15.

Miami's record this year is five won and four lost, while the Tar Heels will be looking for their second win of the season against six losses.

The Hurricanes have beaten V. M.I. and Richmond, Southern Conference schools, Boston University, Marquetee University and Stetson University. They have lost to Alabama, Kentucky, Vanderbilt, and Florida.

Both Carolina and Miami lost to long traditional rivals last Saturday. Miami was beaten, 43-6, by hated Florida in Gainesville, to set a new scoring record. Duke set a new record, too, surpassing its previous best scoring effort against Carolina by one point.

Carolina has played Miami once before, under different circumstance but in the same place. The 1946 Tar Heel team took an easy 21-0 victory over the Hurricanes.

The first season Carl Snavely served as a head college football coach, 1927, at Bucknell, his team won six, lost three and tied one. The Carolina coach has a 145-71-16 lifetime record.

Jim Gill, Carolina line coach, played football at the Uniersity of Missouri.

Track Meeting

There will be a meeting of the Carolina track squad this afternoon in 304 Woollen Gym at 4:00 to discuss plans for the coming indoor and outdoor track seasons coach Dale Ransom announced yesterday.

Wisconsin Chosen To Play In Rose Bowl By Big Ten

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—Wisconsin was chosen today to represent the Big Ten conference in the Rose Bowl on New Year's Day by the athletic directors of the member schools. The regular season race ended in a tie between Wisconsin and Perdue.

Wisconsin had a chance to sew up the championship Saturday by beating Minnesota, a team which had been defeated three times previously. However, the Badgers were held to a 21-21 tie which allowed Perdue to pull into a deadlock for the crown with a 21-16 win over Indiana.

Wisconsin was the favorite to get the invitation because they had a better overall record than Perdue and because Wisconsin had not won the league championship since 1912.

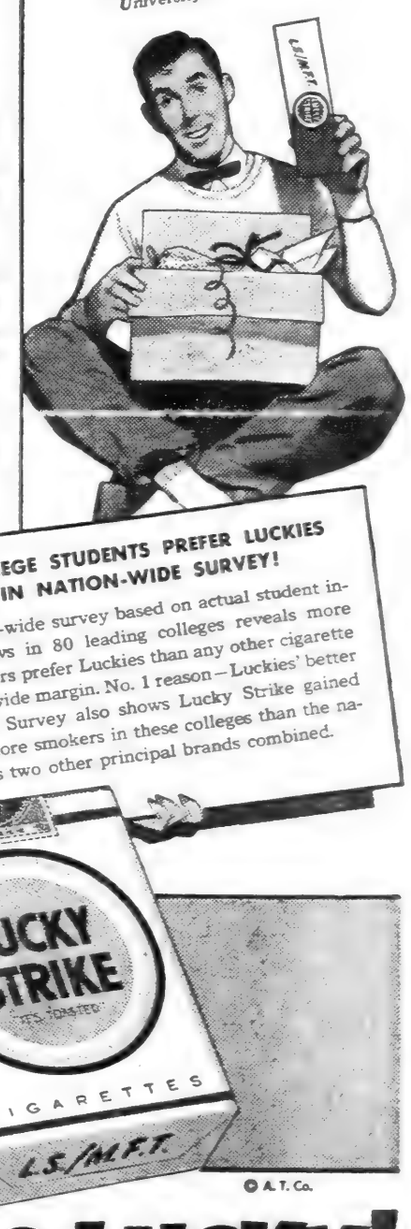
LUCKIES TASTE BETTER!

They're made better to taste cleaner, fresher, smoother!

Ask yourself this question: Why do I smoke?

You know, yourself, you smoke for enjoyment. And you get enjoyment only from the taste of a cigarette.

Luckies taste better—cleaner, fresher, smoother! Why? Because Luckies are made better to taste better. And, what's more, Luckies are made of fine tobacco. L.S./M.F.T.—Lucky Strike Means Fine Tobacco.



So, for the thing you want most in a cigarette . . . for better taste—cleaner, fresher, smoother taste . . . Be Happy—Go Lucky!

L.S./M.F.T.'s the code
To keep in mind today—
So for a cleaner, fresher smoke
It's Luckies all the way.

COLLEGE STUDENTS PREFER LUCKIES IN NATION-WIDE SURVEY!

Nation-wide survey based on actual student interviews in 80 leading colleges reveals more smokers prefer Luckies than any other cigarette by a wide margin. No. 1 reason—Luckies' better taste. Survey also shows Lucky Strike gained far more smokers in these colleges than the nation's two other principal brands combined.

Tabloid May Come Back To Tar Heel

The Daily Tar Heel will revert back to tabloid size beginning January and will cut issues in December, the Publications Board decided yesterday afternoon in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial.

Stiff losses in advertising income, student fees, plus the additional printing costs were the reasons given for the switch. Financial Coordinator Marshall Cline said that the Board estimates a $10,832.09 total loss if the newspaper continues in its present form.

Asked whether the tabloid decision is final, PB chairman and editor Walt Dear, said, "If we can think of any other financially feasible program before Chrisstmas that is better than the one adopted, then of course, the Board might consider a different plan. The Board is always open to suggestions."

The paper will not be printed Tuesday, December 2, following the Thanksgiving holidays, and Saturday, December 6.

The Board approved the following appointments to the Daily Tar Heel staff: Rolfe Neill, managing editor; Jim Schenck, business manager; Bob Slough, news editor; Carolyn Reichard, subscription manager; Biff Roberts, sports editor. Jody Levey, former news editor, resigned yesterday for academic reasons.

Harriman Coming Here; Pace Plans Released

W. Averell Harriman, now Mutual Security Administrator and formerly Secretary of Commerce for President Truman for two years, will speak here March 26.

Carolina Forum Chairman Ken Penegar made the announcement yesterday.

Multi-millionnaire Harriman, prominently mentioned as Democratic presidential candidate, will talk in Memorial Hall on a subject to be announced.

Secretary of Army Frank Pace Jr. will give the first of this year's Carolina Forum talks Tuesday.

"My Life in Public Service" will be the topic of the secretary's talk when he speaks in Memorial Hall at 9 p.m. There will be a question and answer period following the address.

Pace will be met at the Raleigh-Durham airport by members of the forum and will be driven to Navy Field where the Air ROTC will pass in review in honor of the Army Secretary.

A dinner will be given for the Secretary and members of his staff at the Carolina Inn at 6 o'clock. Members of the Carolina Forum, student government officials and representatives of the administration will attend.

W. AVERELL HARRIMAN

Dr. Herberg's Schedule Of Talks Listed

Dr. Will Herberg, noted Jewish philosopher and writer, will speak to various UNC groups next Monday and Tuesday.

Dr. Herberg comes to the campus under the auspices of the Inter-Faith Council.

NEW YORK—Rep. John Taber (R-NY), who will head the House Appropriations Committee in the next Congress, said yesterday he believed the 1954 budget can be balanced and brought down to $65,000,000. Taber said at a press conference in the offices of President-elect Eisenhower that it might be possible to cut some taxes if the budget were "more than balanced" in 1954. However, he said that "it's too early to tell definitely about that."

WASHINGTON—A quick end to all price and wage controls by order of President Truman was seen as a possibility yesterday in the wake of two major developments:

1. Sen. Maybank (D-SC), chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, said in a broadcast from Charleston Monday night he has information Truman is considering doing away with such coontrols by executive order before Jan. 3.

2. Tighe E. Woods resigned as price stabilizer. His resignation was peppered with criticism of Congress for providing a controls law which he contended favors "special interests."

SEOUL — Okinawa-based American Superfortresses blasted a Communist supply depot at Hoechang yesterday as British and Australian soldiers harassed Chinese outposts on the western front with commando-like raids. The 12 superfortresses took off from Okinawa and dropped 500 pound bombs through a solid overcast before dawn yesterday to wreck the 18-acre Red supply depot east of Pyongyang. B-26 raiders bombed two bridges over which Red supply and ammunition convoys moved and destroyed 85 trucks. Clouds hampered these operations also.

'I Got Four Weeks Behind...'

From Diet To DiMaggio, Marilyn's Success Story

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 25.—Blonde, beautiful and buxom Marilyn Monroe, who has come a long way from nude calendar poses and bit movie parts, has more than a few words to say about marriage, movies and money.

"There is a rumor going around that I am married. This is not true. I have no definite marriage plans," said the glamorous movie siren who has been seen lately with baseballer Joe DiMaggio. She denied reports of romances with Peter Lawford, Marlon Brando and Rock Hudson.

When friends asked her to meet DiMaggio she said, "I don't know a baseball from a footbal. But I'd like to meet him." Evidently Georgia Tech's grid squad didn't mind her lack of pigskin knowledge either. The Engineers voted her their official mascot.

Miss Monroe explains her first meeting with DiMaggio at a party as: "We had arrived separately. We met. We left together."

Thinking back about the days when she first started modeling and success wasn't rapping round her door, voluptuous Marilyn told of life at the Studio Club in Hollywood where she lived "pleasantly, but not luxuriously, for a modest sum a week."

"Sometimes I didn't eat so much. I got four weeks behind in my rent and was getting worried," she said. It was at this point that she posed for the famous nude calendar that has had her fans buzzing. "Every photographer I had ever worked with had asked me to pose in the nude. But I refused," she declared.

MISS MARILYN MONROE

Finally after her eviction notice arrived, she consented and earned a much-needed $50 which carried her through those bad days.

Movies began looking at her "when I had filled out some and did pinups and cheesecake modeling." Her first audience saw her merely walk across the stage "while Groucho Marx leered" in the film, "Love Happy." But that was enough for most males.

At present I am rehearsing for 20th Century's "Gentleman Prefer Blondes," in which I'll play another dumb blonde—who isn't dumb—Lorelei Lee," she explains. With bossomy Jane Russell in the same flicker, the battle of bulges will be on. Marilyn is delighted with the whole thing because:

"For the first time I get to do my own singing."

Free Films To Feature Man's Fight

"A Tree Grows In Brooklyn," a film based on the book by Chapel Hillian Betty Smith, will be shown Dec. 8 at 7:30 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

It will be the first of a film series sponsored by the YMCA and the Hillel Foundation. Discussion following the film will be led by Dr. Reuben Hill.

The film series will be divided into three categories. The first, "Man and His Environment," will feature "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" and "The Late George Apley." The second, "Man Against Institutions," will feature "Call Northside 777" and "Prisoner of Shark Island." "Snake Pit" and "The Treasure of Sierra Madre" will illustrate the last theme of

Meet Favors No Ads For Educational Video

A group of 65 educators, radio and television executives indicated at a meeting here Monday that they favor the establishment of non-commercial educational TV programs in North Carolina.

The ultimate goal, they said, would be a state-wide TV network. However, as a beginning, they said they thought it advisable to activate Channel 4, already allocated to the Greensboro-Durham-Raleigh area by the FCC.

The group also favored the creation of a state educational radio and television commission and requested University President Gordon Gray to ask Gov.-Elect William B. Umstead to appoint such a commission.

Gray made it clear that the University, in case funds become available for the establishment of educational programs, would not apply for a channel until enough money to operate for two years has been assured.

The FCC has allocated 242 TV channels for educational programs—eight of them in North Carolina. Charles F. Carroll, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, said he thought the State should use at least six of the channels allotted if a statewide plan governing all the channels is adopted.

Gray emphasized that application must be made for the edu-

Even After Gen. Hershey's Warning

19-Year-Olds Need Not Worry About Draft At Present Time

By Alice Chapman

Nineteen-year-olds here need not be alarmed over the prospects of being drafted—at least not in the near future.

Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey recently issued a statement that he will give the go-ahead on drafting 19-year-olds but said the young men cannot be drafted until local boards are unable to fill their quotas.

At present, no state selective Service chief has reported difficulty in filling his monthly quota. Boards are barred from drafting anyone under 20 years old, and have been requested not to classify anyone under 19 years and six months.

In addition every student is entitled to a year's deferment by law unless he has previously has his year's deferment or II-S classification (student) since June of 1951 and does not qualify now.

At present, 50 per cent of the freshmen are deferred by being in the upper 50 per cent of their class academically (mandatory deferment), a probable 25 per cent are further defered by Air or Naval ROTC or veteran status.

Of the remaining 25 per cent many who are failing will drop out of school before they have received their first notice, and will join a service immediately or wait the draft call out of school, officials say.

Therefore a release on the draft-age limit would effect the number of University men little more than it does at present, officials add.

Plott Winner Over Wagger For Dorm Seat

SP Will Dominate Student Solons By 26-24 Count

By Louis Kraar

The Student Party, after 14 years according to SP officials, gained a majority in Legislature yesterday as Frank Plott (SP) beat out Gerry Wagger (UP) in Men's Dormitory District IV, 93 votes to 77 in a runoff race.

Student Party legislators total 26 and the University Party has 24 representatives, as a result of the runoff. These totals include two double endorsed legislators and one independent that are SP inclined as well as five UP inclined double endorsed candidates.

Although Student Party members hailed winning the majority as a moral victory and an indication of campus preference of parties, this majority is more evident on paper than in practice. The vague positions of double endorsed candidates, who frequently switch sides, and the many legislators absent at certain sessions keep either party from holding a decisive majority.

Sol Cherry, UP chairman, said after the returns were announced "I hope that the Student Party will see fit to use its majority in the Legislature to benefit the student body as a whole. With this in mind, I offer the co-operation of the University Party."

"The Student Party is very happy that the students have chosen it to carry out a program which will benefit all the students. In all sincerity, we firmly resolve that the trust will be carried out in its entirity," stated Joel Fleishman (SP) in behalf of his party.

Carolyn Johnson and Mary Kit Meyers won junior seats on the Women's Council in yesterday's runoff election which attracted only 11 percent of women voters.

Voting in Dorm District IV, composed of Mangum, Manly, Emerson Stadium, Joyner, Grimes and Ruffin, was very light yesterday, according to Jerry Cook, chairman of the Elections Board. Out of about 400 potential tial voters, only 28 percent casted their ballots.

Campaigning between Plott and Wagger was especially vigorous for a runoff race. Aided by extra party support, both waged strong personal campaigns. The lack of funds by the candidates who had exhausted their expense limits, made door to door visiting imperative. Observers in Ruffin and Joyner said they were paid visits by both candidates.

Wagger (UP), the loser, is a senior from High Point who has served in Legislature several terms. The winner, Plott (SP), is a freshman from Charlotte and plans to study law.

In view of Executive Committee member A. Hugh Harris' expressed opposition to Saturday classes here and at State, it would be enlightening to hear how other Trustees feel about the matter. We urge students to read the Presidential Memo column, then contact during the holidays Trustees living near their homes. The names of Trustees who have not been contacted are listed elsewhere in today's paper.

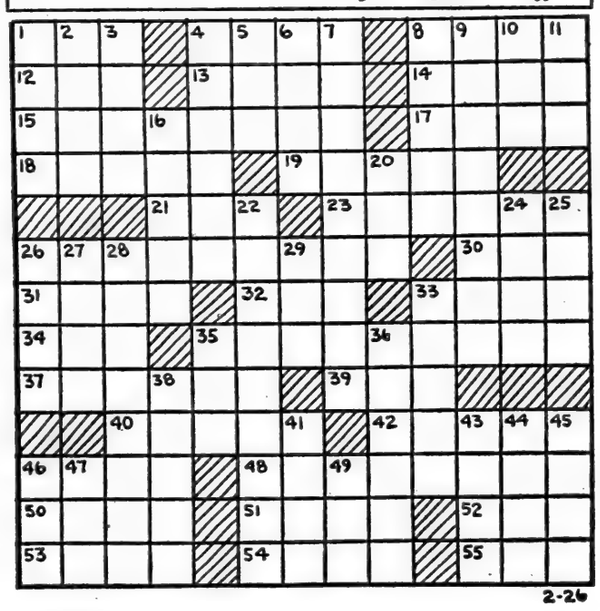
Appearing elsewhere on this page yesterday was the "Under the Dome" column from The Raleigh News and Observer. Gist of the doings in the dome was that Gordon Gray let it be known that he didn't favor a resolution about to be introduced into the State Student Legislature which was a backhand to the Clark brothers. The SSL met last week in Raleigh.

Dave and John, the aforementioned Clark brothers, are two of the University's more active Trustees who side with the ultra conservative interests. This resolution, later passed in a tepid form, certainly would have provoked their ire. Any man—be he Trustee or student—who gets such a resolution aimed at him isn't going to consider it a compliment.

The Daily Tar Heel believes it unwise for students to start popping off at Trustees when they already are engaged in a fight, i.e. Saturday classes, which transcends the bitter feud of a year ago. We believe President Gray had this in mind when he suggested that the resolution not be brought up.



And we further think that Gray was merely trying to help, not dictate, as the column implied.

Thankful?

The clanging of the keeper's keys
Broke through the prison gloom,
The quaking of the captive's knees
Foretold the captive's doom.
The hunchback keeper jarred the door,
His eyes sought out the prey,
He'd spent a year just waiting for
This execution day.
He asked the captive's last request
But no reply was uttered.
No wish, no word, no late behest.
The captive only shuddered.
The prisoner was led away
His eyes bloodshot and murky,
After all, what can one say
When one is born a turkey.

Ham Horton — Presidential Memo

Saturday classes still take most of our time down here in the Student Government office. We want to tell you that although petitions, mass meetings, etc., aren't in the headlines every day, it isn't because we've gone fishing or lost hope. It's just that the campaign is now being conducted on a personal level—but this level requires, even more than last week's outspoken campaign, your help.

What we're trying to do now is to see the trustees one by one and convince them by logical, sound arguments that in our case here at Carolina 5 day classes are a thousand times better in every respect than 6 day classes. But we can't see each one, and that's where we've got to trust each individual student.

Now there was a list of particularly important trustees to see together with their addresses on the back page of yesterday's Daily Tar Heel. We have a mimeographed brief for you to use down here at the Student Government office that gives you facts, figures, and especially good arguments. If you'll drop by, or call us, we'll see that you get a copy.

We also have a card catalog on all the trustees in the office. The most important thing is to let us know beforehand which trustee you will see and the results of your interviews. We won't know where we stand unless we get this information.

The fight is looking better and better. In spite of the two unfavorable editorials written last week in N. C. papers (one of which, after a personal call, reversed itself), we heard from a member of the Executive Committee who came out as completely opposed to Saturday classes.

Then Raymond Taylor, from Washington, N. C., told us after a visit home last weekend that two trustees down there are leaning our way. Dale Ryon, from Asheville, did a little handshaking that weekend too, and tells us the situation there is looking up.

One thing is certain, though. We've all got to stick together on this thing. If anyone has any suggestions or criticisms of how the fight is being conducted, please, please, come down and let us know and don't just sit off and criticize. We need all the help we can get; but sowing dissention and gloom does not come under the category of "help." This one campaign must be non-partisan. I know it's fun to criticize and easy to find fault. But let us wage this one battle on only one front.

The State Student Legislature met in Raleigh last weekend to pass resolutions.

Better-late-than-never section. Bouquets and sympathy are due for Tom Creasy who after an entire summer's work on Consolidated University Day and arranging everything from Life Magazine coverage to beauty contests to W. C. dates for U.N.C. men, had his whole program collapse about his head when polio struck last month.

Stuart Jones is new head of the Student Government Committee to secure a check-cashing service in Lenoir Hall.

Student Government interest and suggestion blanks which were distributed last week are really rolling in. Keep 'em coming.

Finale: Happy Thanksgiving and git them trustees!

Drew Pearson — The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON—Oregon's independent Sen. Wayne Morse paid an unusual call on the Bureau of Internal Revenue the other day. Most people fight shy of this tax-collecting agency; some people get heart failure when its agents even telephone.

But the Oregon Senator ambled down to the bureau and said he wanted to meet with the officials who were running it. Accordingly, Harold Swartz, acting assistant commissioner, sat down with him, plus David Gatzenmeier and Frank Cohen of the chief counsel's office, plus E. I. McLarney and Leonard Boyd of the audit division.

"I would like to ask the Bureau of Internal Revenue," Senator Morse told them, "to make a careful audit of my income tax returns."

The tax officials couldn't believe their ears. The bureau makes it an unwritten rule not to look too closely at the tax returns of members of congress. So for a senator to come in and ask for an audit was revolutionary.

Morse went on to explain that, when he was elected to the Senate in 1945, he had a campaign deficit of about $16,000 which had been paid partly by him, partly by contributions from friends; and that recently Oregon politicians had been circulating charges that the handling of this deficit had violated the tax laws.

He said the money was not paid to him, and he was certain the tax laws had not been violated. But to make sure, he asked that his tax returns be thoroughly audited.

"But we can't audit them prior to 1949," said Assistant Commissioner Swartz. "The statute of limitations has expired."

"Then I'll waive the statute of limitations."

"You'll what?" asked Swartz incredulously. "Well, we'll have to have written authorization for that."

"You'll get it," replied Morse, who promptly went back to his office and wrote a letter to acting Commissioner John S. Graham, which stated:

"I respectfully request that you consider this letter as being my official request for an audit of my income tax returns since I have been in the Senate, starting with the 1945 returns."

Note—When this Columnist in 1946 suggested to Senator Morse that members of Congress and all top government officials file a statement of outside fees received, income from law practice, stocks and commodities purchased, he immediately introduced a bill to this effect. Had it passed, the Nixon Fund would have been required to be registered so the public could know about it before Nixon's nomination to the important office of Vice President.

Lame-duck Senator McFarland of Arizona is planning a final fling at the taxpayers' expense. He is making arrangements for a round-the-world trip during his last month as Senator . . . Senator Ferguson of Michigan is so anxious to take over the Senate Appropriations Committee that he can't wait. He is second to Senator Bridges of New Hampshire in seniority. But, if Bridges accepts the job of majority leader, there's a chance he will be too busy to head the Appropriations Commitee too. So Ferguson has been pestering Bridges' office to find out whether he is giving up the Appropriations Chairmanship. . . . Secretary of Defense Lovett has invited his successor, Charles E. Wilson, to attend the North Atlantic Pact Conference in Paris Dec. 15. . . . General Eisenhower has invited Army Chief of Staff General Collins to fly to Korea with him — after Collins hinted broadly for an invitation. . . . President Truman is pleading with Defense Boss Joe Fowler not to quit until Ike is inaugurated. The President wants the mobilization program going full steam when Ike takes over. . . . Eisenhower will appoint a special commission, headed by Vannevar Bush, to study the reorganization of the Defense Department. . . . Senator Lodge of Massachusetts has told friends he won't be in the cabinet but will probably serve as an assistant president and trouble shooter.

John Taylor — Reviews

For all those people who are still weeping in their beers about the fiasco on Saturday, there are two movies coming to Chapel Hill on Tuesday which should show them that there are some individuals who have greater worries than that of losing a football game. One of the films, "Les Miserables," coming to the Carolina, is deadly serious, but the other one, "Island Rescue," to be at the Varsity, has a typically British tongue-in-cheek seriousness about it that is quite beguiling.

The story of Jean Valjean, the much harrassed hero of Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables," is so familiar to everyone who has managed to pass high school English that it seems superfluous to recount it here. Let it only be said that this, the umpteenth movie version of the classic, retains the basic plot line, along with such characters as Valjean, Cosette, Jevaert, Marius, and the Bishop, and that, except for Michael Rennie as Valjean and Cameron Mitchell as Marius, both of whom are excellent, it is no better and no worse than most rehash films. But for all you students of the classics, a trip to the Carolina on Tuesday or Wednesday might be worthwhile.

The characters in "Island Rescue" also have their problems, but the question of how to remove a prize cow from a German-occupied Channel Island can hardly be taken as the basis for a really serious war drama. The grimness of the top officials of the British government when they discover that this most beautiful of all bovines is trapped on the island and the earnest self-sacrifice with which a number of people risk their lives to save Venus (the cow) is in the best tradition of English comedy. It is not an hysterically funny comedy—nor is it supposed to be—for there is a large dose of tense drama to it, too. Neither the comedy nor the drama ever gets out of hand, and there is a good balance between the two elements.

The acting is superior. David Niven is his usual suave self as the man who leads Operation Venus, and Glynnis Johns is, as always attractive and competent as the girl who assists him. Able supporting performances are contributed by George Coulouris, particularly good as an unorthodox German officer, Barry Jones, Noel Purcell, and Jeremy Spencer.

Orange Bowl Bound

CAROLINA'S FOOTBALL team heads for the Orange Bowl tomorrow. That would make the beginning of a great story, one that would warm the hearts of thousands of Tar Heel fans, but the fact is that the preface to the tale spoils it all. We will be playing in the Orange Bowl this Friday night against Miami, but it won't be anything like the annual New Year's Day game, and there won't be a crowd near the size of the one that crams itself in there the first day of every year. Instead, it will be a Carolina team putting the finishing touches on one of its most dismal seasons on record.

For most Tar Heel fans the season ended last weekend when the Blue Devils poured it on us. There'll be a small band of stalwarts heading down for our first night game since 1949—a lot of them naturally drawn by the prospects of a good weekend. To those who wrote the season off after last Saturday, all we can say is that we've still got one more game to play. Last year's team had a record of two wins and eight losses—the worst a Carl Snavely-coached team has ever experienced. If we want to exempt ourselves from the stigma of breaking that record then this game means a lot. If we lose, our seasonal mark goes to 1-7, which reads a good bit worse than two and eight.

The Faithless Ones

FRANKLY, I'M WORRIED. Not too much because of the team's performance against Duke, although it didn't do much to impress the Miami scouts, but because of the attitude that seems to be infiltrating the Chapel Hill atmosphere. It seems to me that everybody is selling everybody else down the river—the students, team members, coaches, et al. We've lost faith in the team, the team's lost confidence in themselves, the coaches have lost faith in us and the team—all a vicious circle. I wouldn't be surprised if you could get eight to five at some of the well holes that the sun won't come up in the morning.

Naturally we can't expect a feeling of elation over the Duke game but at least we can write it off and think about the Miami game. To win it would make the record look somewhat better. If we want to hang the whole season on the Duke fiasco, then let's just forget the Miami trip. We've got this last game to go and there's no reason we can't win it.

Not Too Great

MIAMI HAS BEEN no great shakes this season either, although they do have a 5-4 record. They have beaten VMI, Boston University, Richmond, Marquette, and Stetson, no great claims to fame. The losses have been to Alabama, Kentucky, Vanderbilt, and Florida. They are defending Gator Bowl champions, defeating Clemson, 14-0, and lost to the same Clemson team in the 1951 Orange Bowl, 15-14.

But they've lost some of their most talented players from those two bowl teams and Coach Andy Gustafson has had to concentrate a good bit on building. As he put it earlier in the year, "Losing men like All-America Jim Dooley, Frank Smith, Jack Hackett, Ed Lutes, and Ray Arcangeletti all at one crack would be a tough blow to almost any football team. This is rebuilding year for us. Our squad is young and green, but we believe we have some talented youngsters who may catch fire and give us a good ball club late in the season."

Miami has shown sparks during the season and a lot of those "talented youngsters" have looked good at times. The Hurricanes are stronger in the middle of the line than the team which won eight and lost three for them last year. They have three lettered defensive tackles returning and claim to be better at defensive guard, something which may give the Tar Heels a good bit of trouble. They have power down the middle in their running attack—a fact that can cause the Carolina team quite a few points if it doesn't improve over last week's showing.

On The Ropes

OUR HOPES SEEM TO rest on the fact that their defensive ends and backfield have been weakened. Marshall Newman and Charlie Motta will have a little more time on passes and the option play than they did against the Blue Devils—a factor which may mean the difference in scoring and not scoring.

Then, too, we didn't lose anybody on injuries against the Devils and picked up an important one who couldn't play Saturday. Little Will Alexander, who made a personal battle of it against Virginia, was hurt against South Carolina and missed Duke. He will be a much needed addition to the Carolina defense.

It will certainly be no easy job to beat Miami. But it seems to me that it's one that would be well worth the extra effort. There's no sense throwing in the towel because we're on the ropes. After all, Tunney got a long count.

Team Leaves On Trip Today; Ends '52 Season Friday Night

By Tom Peacock

The Carolina football team will leave for Miami late today to meet the Hurricanes from the University of Miami in an attempt to close one of its poorest seasons on a bright note.

The 1952 Tar Heels, winner of only one game out of seven this year, hope to celebrate their Thanksgiving on Friday night instead of Thursday afternoon by defeating Miami under the lights in the Orange Bowl.

Advance sale of tickets for the game have been poor both in Chapel Hill and in Florida, and the huge 65,000-seat bowl will be far from full. Few Carolina rooters will forsake Thanksgiving at home to see the game although it was designated as the yearly "campus trip."

Carolina head coach Carl Snavely worked the team harder yesterday than he has in the past few weeks, with the practice continuing into the night under the lights of Navy Field.

CARL SNAVELY
. . . his team has final chance

The jayvees, who play Duke Thursday afternoon in the annual Thanksgiving day clash, ran the Miami plays against the varsity defense. The Hurricanes run from the T, but have had great success this season with a type of double wing designed for passing.

The Tar Heel offense, which showed a marked improvement last week despite the loss, worked out against the jayvee team, concentrating on passing and the option play from the split-T.

The Tar Heels are in the best physical shape they have been for quite some time, with all the players who suited up for Duke ready plus the addition to the lineup of defensive guard Will Alexander.

Carolina will be depending on the passing arm of freshman quarterback Marshall Newman and the running of halfbacks Larry Parker and Flo Worrell Friday. It will be up to the defense to stop the passing of talented Miami quarterback John Melear and the breakaway running of Harry Mallios and Bill Smith.

The Hurricanes have two men on the squad they are pushing for All-America honors, one a defensive linebacker and the other a versatile, 60 minute guard. The linebacker is Rex Shiver, 180-pounder who has made more tackles than any other man on the Miami team in all but one game.

Miami's 60 minute guard is Nick Chikillo, 220 pounds of muscle that has given opposition a fit all year. He usually finishes his blocking assignment in the line in time to lead the downfield interference too.

Tar Babies To Meet Duke In Thanksgiving Contest

By Paul Cheney

Carolina's Tar Babies and the Duke University Blue Imps will stage their annual turkey day tussle at Duke Stadium tomorrow afternoon in the fifth renewal of the contest. Carolina has taken three of the four games played to date.

The series has provided a thrilling game on each occasion, with last year's 51-41 Carolina victory heading the pack. The Blue Imps' only triumph came in 1949, when a great Duke freshman team led by Charlie Smith, Piney Field, Tank Lawrence, and Red Leach took a 39-20 win.

Tar Baby coach Walt Pupa will have a starting line-up composed almost entirely of freshmen. At the offensive ends will be Wilson Sholers and Bob Lee. Don McCormick and Ray Crahen man the tackles, with Bill Prothro and Tom Maultsby at the guards. Jimmy Allen will be the center.

In the backfield the split-T attack will be quarterbacked by Ed Laughlin, with Ernie Liberati also seeing service there. Billy Hawkes and Vince Murray are the halfbacks, with Billy Joe Johnson running at fullback.

The Carolina defense will have Harry Anderson and Norman Lane at ends, Barry Pruss and Dick Frucci at tackle, Roland Perdue and Giles at guards, Reeves and Baxter Mangum as the linebackers, Charlie Poindexter and Carey Lawrence at the halfback posts, and Liberati at safety.

Duke will be spearheaded by two swiftly moving halfbacks, Bernie Blaney of Newark, Delaware and Mickey Riggs of Portsmouth, Va. Gene Riggle or Bob Murray will quarterback the split T attack. Hunter Hadley or Bob Pascal will operate at fullback. Center Don Snowberger is the leading Blue Imp lineman.

Med School Wins 30-0 For Tag Championship

By Melvin Lang

Med School-4 unleashed a powerful offensive attack yesterday to wallop Sigma Nu, 30-0, to take the Intramural Tag Football Championship.

Playing on the varsity field at Kenan Stadium, the victors struck early in the first half as Thad Monroe tossed a touchdown strike to Smitty Lineberger on the goal line. Adam Thorpe kicked the extra point, giving Med School a 7-0 advantage.

After exchanging control of the ball, Med School warmed up again and soon had their second score. It came on a pass from Bo Roddy to Runt Richardson, who ran it over for the touchdown. Thorp's conversion was good, and Med School had started its rout with a 14-0 lead.

Sigma Nu seemed to rally after the second score, but it was to no avail as the Med School's defense came into its own. After pushing the losers close to their own goal line, Lineberger broke through to smear Bull Page in the Sigma Nu end zone for a Med School safety.

Med School led 16-0 at the end of the first half.

The second half saw Sigma Nu put up a stiffer defense soon after it got underway. Med School's Bo Jenkins took the kickoff and passed off to Bo Roddy, who in turn passed downfield to Richardson to move the ball from their own 10 to Sigma Nu's 25. Sigma Nu tightened at that point and pushed the Med School offense all the way back to their own 30 yard line, where Jenkins was forced to kick.

Bob Hewitt's passing had Sigma Nu knocking on the goal line in three plays, but the Sig Nu offense failed again to break into the scoring column, losing the last good opportunity that they had during the contest.

Med School was forced to kick, but Lineberger set up another touchdown for the mural champions with an interception on his own 45. On the first play following the interception, the winners scored on a series of passes covering 55 yards. Roddy started the play by passing to Richardson, who immediately tossed off to Lineberger. Playing an outstanding game on both offense and defense for Med School, Lineberger threw the ball to Sam Joyner and immediately got it back only a few yards from the goal line.

Girl's Field Hockey Squad Wins Over W.C. In 3-0 Game

Carolina's Field Hockey Girl's team won their first game of the year Monday afternoon by handing a 3-0 white-washing to a team from Women's College.

Ott Oettinger gave the winners their initial lead early in the first half as she drove a long shot into the goal out at Kenan Stadium from her left wing position. A spirited W. C. rally soon afterward was broken up by center halfback Dot Lowenstein, who was a defensive leader for the Carolina girls throughout the contest.

Pepper Stetson, center forward for Carolina, gave the winners their second score just before the end of the half when she picked up a pass in the driving circle and shot for a goal. Carolina lead at halftime, 2-0.

From the center bully which started the second half, Di Bourne took the ball down field to score the final goal for U.N.C. Women's College threatened to score several times in the later stages of the contest, but their threats never materialized.

Thanksgiving

. . . when the whole country unites in giving thanks, it is only fitting that the CAROLINA express its appreciation for your generous patronage. It has been our aim and purpose to present the finest of photoplays and supplementary programs. If we have succeeded in making your hours of relaxation more enjoyable we are indeed thankful.

Reasons To Give Thanks Are More Than We Think

By Charlie Haskett

It would take less than the 10 fingers on your hands to count the few millions of Americans that observe Thanksgiving as the holiday it is.

America has learned to look forward to Thanksgiving as merely one of the long weekend holidays. To many the Day of Thanks means time out for the big parties, a hunting or fishing spree or just an extra 24 hours to lounge around the house and take it easy.

The founders of "Lounge Day" sound off, "What have we got to be so thankful for?"

"Inflation has all but roped us up by the neck. We're sending our boys to Korea to be shot up for the rest of the world. We've got millions of destitutes right here in America. But does the government look after them? Hell no. They take up collections for everybody else's country in the form of taxes on us. Surely we have something to be thankful for, but what is it?"

Back up a minute, Mr. Lounger and take inventory. True, you are taxed, but you are still financially better off than any generation in the American history.

You have a roof over your head, whether it's paid for or not. A dollar to a doughnut you can not remember the day when you have not had at least a half-full stomach. It has been a long time since you had to face Mother Nature naked.

It's also true that our boys are in the far corners of the world fighting to keep the Commies from spreading. But that puts a bad taste in your mouth, doesn't it? You had rather have our boys home and let the Reds run over the other countries.

"What should that matter to me? They are over there and we are over here. We have no business fighting their wars."

But what after the Reds take the Eastern half of the globe? It's a pretty sure bet they won't stop there. America would stand a much better chance of being their next stopping point than Mars.

Remember what the Pilgrims came over for? Freedom of religion. We still have that cherished liberty to worship God in whatever description we wish. We have the finest form of government in the world. We have more natural resources than you can shake a stick at. We have unlimited opportunities in the fields of education, health, politics and you take it from there.

Still you have so little to be thankful for. Would you trade places with a Communist dictated Russia? Would you swap with the undernourished Chinaman? Would you exchange places with the homeless Korean?

Do yourself a favor tomorrow. Forget the hunting trip or the bridge game and take a time-out to attend church. Thank the Good Lord for your so-called "few blessings."

KNEELING BEFORE THE crucifix of his God, this battle clad Marine takes time out during the vicious fighting near Bunker Hill and little Siberia to offer thankful prayer. Germans Having Big Thanksgiving

It's a long, full-scheduled Thanksgiving weekend that is in store for Carolina's six German students, with the itinerary including Princeton, Washington and New York City.

The Germans, all from the University of Goitingen, are Dr. Fritz Hartmann, Hans Lambers, Eberhard Kindiger, Martha Shaefer, Otto Vehrenkamp and Helmuth Deicher. They are being escorted on the lengthy tour by Assistant Dean of Students Roy Holsten and Ray Jeffries, also of the Dean of Students' office.

The entourage left Chapel Hill in two cars yesterday morning at 11.

Opportunities in Optometry

Optometry is a profession offering special advantages to ambitious young men and women. Its scope is constantly expanding. Eighty per cent of the Nation's millions depend upon the Doctor of Optometry and his professional skill in conserving vision. There is a shortage of optometrists in many States.

The Doctor of Optometry possesses the dignity of being a professional man. He renders an essential service to the health and well-being of his community. Substantial financial rewards are obtainable almost from the beginning of his practice.

U. S. Department of Defense and Selective Service grant optometry students the same consideration accorded medical students.

The Doctor of Optometry degree can be earned in three college years by a student having sixty or more semester hours of Liberal Arts credits. Such students will be admitted at mid-year by Chicago College of Optometry.

Chicago College of Optometry is centrally located in the heart of the world's greatest center for teaching in the healing arts. It is nationally accredited and is splendidly equipped. Clinical facilities are unsurpassed.

Bryant Freed By Court Of Fight Charges

Noted Trustee's Son Not Guilty, Says Local Court

By Neal Reichle

Alfred S. Bryant, University sophomore from Durham, was found not guilty in Recorder's Court yesterday of affray with Billy Warren Jones, a 21-year-old laborer from Carrboro.

Bryant is the son of Victor S. Bryant, a well known Durham lawyer and member of the University Board of Trustees. Mr. Bryant is also chairman of the Trustee Visiting Committee and is a member of the Executive Committee.

Young Bryant and Jones were arrested early Sunday morning, November 23, after a fight in front of the Marathon Sandwich Shop on Franklin Street. Officers Hester and Bush of the Chapel Hill Police Department made the arrests.

Hubert Taylor, the night man at the Marathon, testified that he saw Jones slapping Ted Mclaughlin, a senior from Breman, Germany. Taylor said the next time he looked, Bryant and Jones were fighting. He said he could not see what was going on in the street but that while they were scuffling on the sidewalk, one pushed the other into the window of the shop. The window was broken.

McLaughlin testified that he and Bryant were walking across the street to the Marathon when they glanced into the car in which Jones was sitting. He told the court that Jones started cussing and asked him why he was looking into the car. Then, McLaughlin testified, Jones started hitting him in the face with the palm of his hand. He said that when he wouldn't fight Jones, Jones turned on Bryant and started slapping him.

Judge William Stewart fined Jones $10 and costs and sentenced him to 60 days, suspended on condition that he pay the fine and pay for the broken window.

Henry A. Whitefield, attorney for Jones, appealed and Judge Stewart set bond at $150. Whitfield said he asked Jones to swear out a warrant for McLaughlin. The case will be tried at the next term of Orange Superior Court, which starts Monday.

Duke Singers Will Present English Music

The 22 Duke Madrigal Singers will present a varied program of English madrigals, choruses and Christmas music tonight at 8 o'clock in Gerrard Hall.

The singers include Duke students not only in the asthetics, art and music departments but in the other University departments as well. The UNC appearance is sponsored by the Graduate English Club.

The singers' emphasis is on the English madrigal, a type of unaccompanied song of at least four parts sung by a group of mixed voices. The interwoven patterns

Reasons Primarily Theological

Rev. Jones, 23 Churchmen Are Asked To Resign Posts

The Rev. Charles M. Jones, liberal and controversial minister of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian Church, has been asked to resign along with all elected officers of the church.

The request came this week from a 10-man Judicial Commission of Orange Presbytery who presented a lengthy report to the church officers, asking them to resign prior to a full congregational meeting with the commission next Sunday.

Although there was no direct request for the resignations, the ,000 word, 12-page report "recommended" that the minister resign. It was primarily critical of the minister's and officers' actions and beliefs and their alleged failure to conform to church doctrine by which they'd be bound under their ordinations vows.

The report's criticisms of Mr. Jones—who was called here 12 years ago from Brevard—were primarily theological. As for local opinions of him, it was pointed out that in the opinion of some, "He is a preacher without peer in American Protestantism today." The mmission found Jones' sermons "earnest, simple discussions of practical problems, largely ethical in content."

In recent years the minister has been the target of many criticisms for what have been termed his unusually liberal racial and theological views.

The church officers, the commission charged, felt it relatively unimportant that the church be Presbyterian "in the strictest sense" and most of them didn't adhere closely enough to the church's Confession of Faith and Book of Church Order.

The church's 23 elders and deacons are slated to act on the request at a meeting here tonight. The commission, under Southern Presbyterian Church government, has the power to remove church officers, whether or not they agree to resign volutnarily. Most of the officers are connected with the University.

Mr. Jones for the past year has been on leave—working as an area consultant for the Save The Children Foundation in the Kingsport, Tenn. area. He is expected to return here late this week to be home for awhile.

Pace Lauds Youth And Gordon Gray

"It is just as important that the economy of this country stay healthy as it is that fighting men be trained."

This was he opinion of Army Secretary Frank Pace, Jr. declared before an audience in Memorial Hall last night as the first in a series of outstanding speakers being sponsored here this year by the Carolina Forum.

Secretary Pace referred particularly to the problems of the Department of the Army in making more than 100,000 Army contracts a month, all calling for sizable expenditures.

Among them, he said, are making equitable distribution of procurement contracts among the maximum number of competent suppliers, the fullest use of small business concerns, the encouragement of subcontracting by prime contractors, the availability of manpower in distressed employment areas or in areas of manpower shortages, the reservation of special skills for difficult production tasks, and the dispersal of industry.

"This may give some idea of the impact of military procurement on our economy," he declared.

Secretary Pace paid high tribute to President Gray, whom he succeeded as Secretary of the Army, and credited him with the establishment of the Psychological Strategy Board, which President Gray chairmaned for six months on a part-time basis last year.

"The Board of Trustees of your University did great service to the country when it agreed to lend Gordon Gray to the Federal Government for the purpose of establishing this organization, in which lies the key to the effective utilization of all our resources to avoid World War III," he declared.

"Like all organizations, governmental agencies need new blood, new ideas—young men and women with talent and enthusiasm. I am certain that such persons will find in public service a career that is not only personally satisfying but which will contribute to the strength and stability of the world of the future." He also said that he believed in

Middies See Sunny Miami As Paradise

By Tom Parramore

A wide-open, rambling, money-made metropolis.

That's what the NROTC Drill Team found during its Thanksgiving field trip to Miami to perform at the football game. The big sunshine capital was found to be characterized by bars, hotels and palm trees, about as many of one as the other.

The team of 28 accompanied by the color guard, several other Midshipmen and members o fthe NROTC faculty, left Raleigh-Durham airport last Friday morning. They were flown south by two Navy R4D's. The group stepped aboard the planes and 5 hours later were in the spring-warm climate of southern Florida.

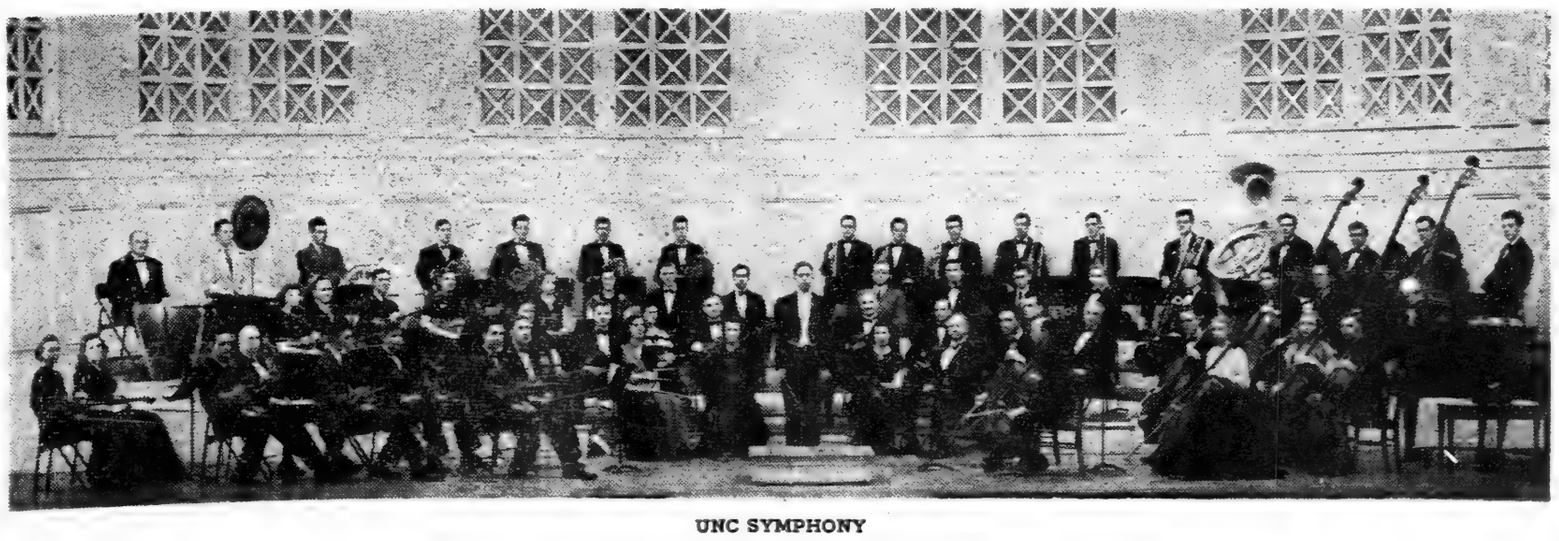
After a short rest, the team held a practice session to get the final kinks adjusted.

The actual performance, which was part of the pre-game ceremonies, came off satisfactorily with the team going through a special routine of precision marching and a fancy manual of arms.

Riotous revelry reigned following the game. Storming back to hotels and night spots the Tar Heel contingent made a valiant effort at turning the big town upside down. By sunrise, however, the great city had won the battle, having upended most of the Carolinians instead.

Symphony's Program Slated Tonight At 8:30

The University Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Earl Slocum, will give a concert in Hill Music Hall tonight at 8:30. The pubic is invited.



Made up of students, faculty members and townspeople, the orchestra was organized in the early 1920's and has grown until this year it has reached a record membership of 60 players, including the largest string section in its history and a full complement of woodwinds and brasses.

The program will include Mozart Symphony No. 35 in D major, the "Haffner," Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto in C minor, "The Swan of Tuonela" by Sibelius, and "Phedre" overture by Massenet.

Three students, all pupils of Prof. William S. Newman, will be featured as soloists in the concerto. They are Katherine Jente, Chahpel Hill, who will play the first movement; Lee Bostian, Raleigh, the second, and Marian Parkins, Chapel Hill, the third.

In her rendition of the first movement. Miss Jente will include a cadenza which she has written herself, a practice in the tradition of Beethoven's own time, when performers were expected to supply their own cadenzas.

Thomas Wheeler, graduate assistant in English and the orchestra's first oboist, as a feature of the concert will play the difficult English horn solo in Sibelius' "Swan of Tuonela."

Athletic Board Fails To Name His Successor

Gray Fox Closes 26 Year Career; May Teach Here

By Biff Roberts

DAILY TAR HEEL Sports Editor

Carl Snavely resigned last night as Carolina's head football coach, closing out an oft-called brilliant career but one which had been plagued with losses during the past three years.

The venerable Tar Heel coach submitted his resignation before the monthly meeting of the school's Athletic Council last night. After the reading of Snavely's letter by council member A. W. Hobbs, the board voted to accept his resignation.

No successor was named.

The Athletic Council decided to assign him to other duties in the Department of Athletics and Physical Education possibly teaching.

Snavely's letter read:

"My appraisal of the football situation at the University of North Carolina leads me to the conviction that I can best serve the interest of the University and its alumni by requesting that I be relieved of the responsibilities of football coaching and be assigned to other duties in the Department of Athletics and Physical Education.

"I hereby request such reassignment to take effect January 1, 1953.

Snavely's resignation came at the end of a season which had seen his Carolina team win but two of eight games. Two other games, with Georgia and N. C. State, were cancelled because of polio on the team. His teams during the last three years had won only seven games.

Snavely had served 26 years as a head football coach with 10 of those years devoted to Carolina. He sent three Tar Heel teams to bowl games, in 1946, 1948, and 1949, but was unsuccessful in all three attempts.

His over-all record included 147 victories, 77 losses and 16 ties. His 10-year mark at Carolina had 59 wins, 35 losses, and five ties.

Sparked by All-Americans Charlie Justice and Art Weiner. his teams from 1946-1949 made the three trips to the bowls, the 1946 and 1948 teams going to the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans and the 1949 squad playing Rice in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas, Texas.

In addition to coaching at Carolina Snavely served seven years at Bucknell and nine seasons at Cornell. He first coached at Carolina in 1934, when he won seven, lost one and tied one, and in 1935, when he won eight and lost one.

Because of his outstanding record with the Tar Heels in those two years he moved to Cornell and coached there before returning to Chapel Hill in 1945.

Snavely enjoyed one undefeated and untied season, this coming in 1939 when his Cornell team won eight while losing none. His best one-year record at Carolina was produced by his 1948 team which had a seasonal record of nine wins and a tie, but bowed to Oklahoma in the Sugar Bowl.

Although Snavely's successor was not named at the meeting last night, there has been wide speculation as to the new coach. Jim Tatum, a former Carolina coach, Art Guepe of Virginia, and Jim Gill and George Barclay, two of Snavely's assistants have been mentioned for the post, with Tatum probably having the greatest popularity.

The Rev. Jones

Charles Jones is a Christian. His Christianity and the Christianity of his congregation rise above the tenets of denominationalism. His preaching is the kind that sinks in, the kind that makes sense, the kind that makes religion a practical, intrinsic affair for many who wouldn't ordinarily have any thoughts about religion.

His real Christianity transcends the denomination.

What is important to any thinking Church official? Dividends gained from an unorthodox (in the technical sense) but thoroughly Christian approach, or listless conformity to rules, which produce so-called order, but do not produce alive Christians?

My views on the theological aspects of Presbyterianism are limited. But what Charles Jones has done for me and others is to present the problems about Christian faith, to discuss and suggest answers, to awaken my interest, to strengthen my belief.

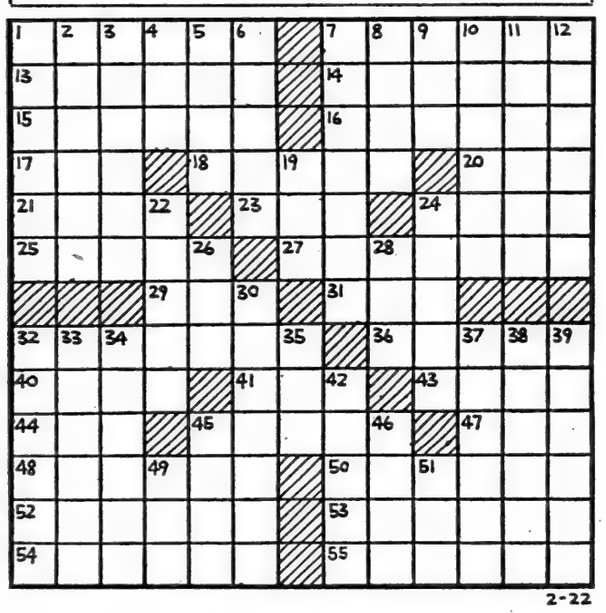
As a Presbyterian, I am concerned with the affairs of Presbyterianism. I am concerned with the problem of the Church's relation to the community—its place and participation. To me, the Church should be not just a place for weekly communicants and Sunday Christians. Rev. Jones has made his church a rich center of spiritual life.

What higher tribute can the Commission pay Mr. Jones than this: that the Chapel Hill Presbyterian Church "seems to depend for its vitality, to an unusual degree . . . upon the person of its minister . . . whose humility and devotion to humanity are at once a personification of true religion to its members, and the ideal towards which they strive." Mr. Jones does represent the true Christian spirit and sets a good example as all good ministers should do.

I realize that the Commission thinks the denomination isn't stressed as much as other aspects of the Christian experience, but doesn't the Commission consider the total imprint of the Presbyterian minister and the Church's program on the minds of students, faculty, and townspeople, more important than technical impression which may be disputed by theologians. The Commission is throwing away a vital, growing religious community. For it to shake the foundations of this church which has meant so much to students particularly, is a disservice to the community.

Is this not a case where the stress should be laid on the total results and the genuine Christian approach rather than on the stricter, more narrow approach?

I wonder if the fact that Mr. Jones is a man actually practicing Christianity and the implications involved in such practice is more of concern to the Commission than his theological reasoning. Is the Commission recommending a resignation because of his views on problems confronting us all, or on other grounds?



Listen to this philosophy of religion which is printed on the weekly Church bulletin: "Our bond is a seeking of the mind of Christ and the will of God for our lives and the life of the world.

"We aim to have toward others unqualified good will. As God sends His mercies on the just and unjust, we will show our good will to the grateful and the ungrateful, the friendly and unfriendly.

"We will have absolute confidence in God. Our faith consists not in conforming to ritual nor in intellectual assent to a creed, but a serene experience of our fellowship with the Unseen God Revealed to us in Jesus Christ. Giving ourselves primarily to seeking His will on earth, we can be confident about lesser matters."

Hoax by Hux

North Carolina has done it again! This time it's in the field of anthropology. Living evidence has been discovered in Rocky Mount which proves conclusively Darwin's theory that man is descended from a lower animal form—namely, the monkey.

During the past ten days, a minister in Rocky Mount has taken a strong stand in opposition to the new "Revised Standard Version" of the Bible. Having made his objections known at an earlier date ("I object to the attempt to eliminate the doctrine of the virgin birth . . . I reject the modernistic interpretation of the Revised Standard Version . . . there is a Jew on the committee"), the minister, Mr. M. Luther Hux (rhymes with Klux) burned a copy of the newly translated Bible at Sunday services held in his church.

This I call small-time stuff! Hold a meeting to burn just one books? Why I can remember tales of real pep rallies held in Germany not too many years ago. Those were the days when an exhibition was an exhibition! No one-Bible bonfires for them. No sir! It was every Bible in the city, then all torches to the library, followed by a short riot for the massacre of all available Jews.

I believe that if I were in doubt as to the accuracy of the Revised Standard Version, I would hesitate before voicing my opinion as vociferously as has Mr. Hux. For the fact remains that the International Council of Religious Education, representing forty Protestant denominations and countless leading theologians and scholars, has labored over the Revised Standard Version since 1929.

But then again, I can readily understsand Mr. Hux's concern over a Jew on the committee supervising the work. Everyone knows that in studying an ancient manuscript written in Hebrew, it is indispsensible to have a student of Lower Slobovia as translator and interpreter of the work. I don't know it for a fact, Mr. Hux, but I'd be willing to wager my old King James Version against any spare copy of the RSV you might have that when the committee undertook the translation of the Greek manuscripts, it even had the audacity to request that Greek scholars study the manuscripts with them.

Obviously, Mr. Hux is not a man easily won over to "new-fangled contraptions" or ideas. For when one discovers a word (the Hebrew word meaning "young woman," in this case) that had been mistranslated previously, does Mr. Hux favor its correction? Certainly not! What was wrong enough for Mr. Hux's pappy is wrong enough for Mr. Hux.

What concerns me most in the statements Mr. Hux has made, however, is his opposition to any change in religious thoughts or concepts. Too many people today want the latest Cadillac when it comes to transportation, but are content for their religion to travel in a long-since outmoded Model T. One's religion should undergo growth and development constantly, just as does every other aspect of one's life. Naturally, there are concepts in religion, as there are in other phases of life, which will stand the tests of time and never change, but in no instsance should Truth be burned on the altar of Tradition.

Cosmic Scheme?

Although we haven't yet figured out their place in the overall worldly cosmic scheme, we offer the following intelligence gleaned during the holidays:

In Pittsboro, N. C. the hospital is next to the graveyard.

In Atlanta a hamburger heaven is beside a dog and cat hospital.

And in Old West Dorm, right here on campus, one of the janitors wears an Olympic sweater.

voting rights for 18-year-olds.

Pointing out civilian careers in the Department of the Army Secretary Pace cited the development of a new career plan which will begin operation the first of the year and which, through its special training course, will provide civilians with "far better opportunities for building an interesting and rewarding career in the Army.

'It is my hope," he said, "that from the pattern we have established there will come eventually the Assistant Secretaries, the Under Secretary, and even the Secretary of the War."

Basketball Team Meets W&L In Second SC Contest Tonight

The North Carolina basketball team will be looking for its second straight of the season tonight at 8:00 when it meets Washington & Lee in Woollen Gym in a Southern Conference contest.

The Tar Heels won their opener Monday night, 70-50, against The Citadel, with Frank Maguire, the new Carolina coach, making a successful debut.

Another newcomer, freshman Jerry Vayda, led the Carolina win with 21 points and sparkling floor play. The six-foot, three-inch forward from Bayonne, N. J. started for ailing Paul Lickens and quickly established himself as the man to watch in the Carolina lineup.

Other standouts in Carolina's win were Co-captains Vince Grimaldi and Jack Wallace, Ernie Schartz, and Bud Maddie.

Tar Babies Lose To Duke, 35-21

Carolina's junior varsity dropped a 35-21 decision to the Duke Blue Imps in a scoring free-for-all at Duke Stadium Thanksgiving afternoon. A crowd of only 1,500 saw Duke capture its second win in the five game series.

Micky Riggs, a freshman halfback from Portsmouth, Va., stared for the winners, scoring a touchdown in each quarter. Bernie Blaney ran well for Duke also, and Bernie Jack kicked five extra points besides scoring the last Duke touchdown.

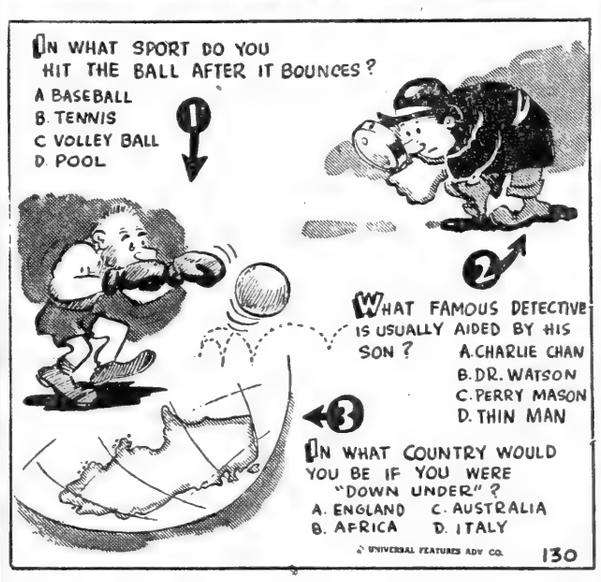
Tar Heels End Season By Toping Miami



MIAMI, Nov. 29.—Marshall Newman and Benny Walser paced North Carolina to a 34-7 victory over Miami here tonight, giving the Tar Heels a record of two wins and six defeats for the season.

Walser hauled in a pass from Newman in the second period to score the first Tar Heel touchdown on a play covering 52 yards. Walser scored again in the same quarter, as did George Wallin and George Norris as the Official From Dept. Of State Coming Friday

Moncrieff Spear Will Hold Talks With Students

Moncrieff J. Spear, who has just completed a State Department job in Berlin, will be on campus tomorrow to interview students interested in job opportunities with the U. S. Department of State.

Spear is visiting a number of southern colleges on a speaking tour in behalf of the forthcoming Foreign Service Officer examinations. These examinations, open on a once a year basis, will be given in September, 1953, and and successful candidates are eligible for a lifetime career in the Foreign Service of the United States.

The Foreign Service Officer examinations are open to young men and women regardless of race, creed or color between the ages of 21 and 30, who are American citizens of 10 years standing and who, if married, are married to American citizens. Women candidates can not be married.

Starting salaries are from $4,000 to $5,000 per year depending upon age and qualifications, and officers may advance to a salary of $14,300 per year with opportunities to be appointed to ministerial rank with salaries ranging up to $25,000 per year.

Successful candidates will be stationed at any one of this country's 300 embassies, legations and consulatees scattered throughout the world in some 77 counties.

For further information, students should contact Joe Galloway at the Placement Bureau Service, Room 209 South Building.

NEWS IN BRIEF

NEW YORK — Gov. Sherman Adams, one of President-elect Eisenhower's top advisers, was expected to reply yesterday to Sen. Robert A. Taft's sharp remarks on the appointment of Martin P. Durkin as secretary of labor. Adams, who will become assistant to the President when Eisenhower takes office next Jan. 20, headed a list of four callers at the general's Morningside Heights residence. The other callers were listed as Republican Reps. Hugh D. Scott of Pennsylvania and Clifford P. Case of New Jersey and Gov. John Lodge of Connecticut.

SEOUL — Tough South Korean riflemen scrambled up the icy slopes of Sniper Ridge last night and recaptured the crest after hours of savage hand-to-hand fighting against Chinese Communists who had held it for less than a day. American Sabre jets shot down two Communist MIG-15 jets as new air battles flared in northwest Korea's clearing skies. Republic of Korea troops, battered off dominating Pinpoint Hill on Sniper Tuesday night, launched a powerful counterattack at 2 p.m. yesterday (midnight EST) and surged back to the top after four hours of battle in freezing weather.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. — The United Nations General Assembly was expected to give its final approval quickly yesterday to India's compromise Korean peace plan. Assembly President Lester B. Pearson of Canada called a session of the 6-nation Assembly for yesterday afternoon to approve the plan, passed despite Russian objections by the Main Political Committee earlier this week. The final vote in committee was 54-5, with Russia and her four Cominform partners opposing and Nationalist China abstaining. This assured a comfortable margin beyond the two-thirds vote needed for passage of the plan in the Assembly.

Dr. Poteat Will Address Group In Y

"The Philosophical Significance of Blaise Pascal" will be Dr. William Poteat's topic when he addresses members of the Y "Lazy Literates" group this afternoon at the Y lounge.

Dr. Poteat, of the UNC Philosophy Department, will present his talk in the form of a lecture-discussion with a question and answer period following.

"Programs so far have been very successful as far as student response is concerned, with a turnout of over 70 students at the last meeting," said Paula Jones, "Lazy Literates" chairman.

All students are invited to the discussions. Refreshments will be served.

Cornell's Murphy To Talk Tomorrow

Dr. Arthur Murphy, chairman of Cornell's Saga School of Philosophy, will lecture tomorrow afternoon in Horace Williams Room of Graham Memorial on "The Rational Resolution of Moral Conflicts."

Dr. Murphy, who has held positions as professor in philosophy at many universsities, will speak at 4 o'clock.

He is past president of the Eastern Division of the American Philosophical Association. He acted as chairman of the Commission on the Function of Philosophy in Liberal Education."

From 1931 to 1939, Dr. Murphy was professor of philosophy at the University of Chicago. In 1939, he was made head of the Department of Philosophy at the University of Illinois.

The public is invited.

UNC Prof Given Post With Government Unit

Dr. Olin T. Mouzon, professor of economics in the School of Business Administration, has been appointed consultant to the Public Advisory Board for Mutual Security.

It is a bipartisan advisory group attached to the executive office of the president. Currently the board has been assigned the problem of studying the foreign trade policies of the United States, particularly as they affect efforts to achcieve economic strength among the free nations. The board is to report its findings and recommendations on trade policy to the incoming administration.

This report will supplement Gordon Gray's study of foreign economic policies in 1950 and the 1952 report of the President's Materials Policy Commission, Resources for Freedom, which emphasized our national dependence on overseas sources of raw materials.

Dr. Mouzon has already submitted to the Public Advisory Board a detailed study with recommendations on the United States Petroleum Trade Policy.

During World War II he was with the War Department in the planning and supply of petroleum to the armed serices. For this work he was given the highest War Department civilian award, the Medal for Exceptional Civilian Services.

Dr. Mouzon has served as consultant to the Standard Oil Company (New Jersey).

Hogarth Art Being Shown In Person

A special exhibition of original prints by the 18th century artist, William Hogarth, presented to the University by Dr. William G. Morgan, associate physician of the Infirmary, will be shown this month in the Person Hall Gallery.

The collection, which will be on view in the main gallery until Dec. 28, gives an insight into 18th century England, its preoccupation with morals and sentiment, enlivened by the satiric wit of Hogarth.

A series of explanatory notes to accompany the prints has been prepared by Mrs. William Mowser of the Art Department staff. Among selections from the famous satiric series are "The Rake's Progress" and "Marrigae a la Mode."

Munched Peanut

Long Way To Bushy's Hangout

By Bob Slough

The sheriff looked at the two reporters standing in the doorway and said, "Lookin' for 'Bushy' Cook, huh? Sure, I can tell you where he lives. It's easy to get there."

It was the reporters' second journey to the wilderness of Orange County. The first trip had ended abruptly when darkness forced them to return to Chapel Hill. Bushy is in charge of Rameses at all the home games.

"Yeh, old 'Bushy' Cook's place is pretty easy to find," the sheriff said. "If you're parked on that street over there, just follow it down by the railroad station, go under the overpass and follow the tracks. You go out that road about four miles and turn left at a place where a house burned down. Follow that road about two miles and you can't miss it. His house sets on a curve."

A county politician interrupted to give his way of "gittin' to Bushy's" but the sheriff waved him aside saying, "Now Tom, I just give them the easiest way."

The reporters left the office and drove through historic old Hillsboro. Soon, they were "following the railroad tracks" but somewhere between Efland and Dobson's X Roads, they got lost.

They stopped at a little roadside building that served as gasoline station and general store. One reporter asked the woman attendant if he could get some gas.

She munched on a peanut and looked at the car. "Sure, you can get some gas," she said. "You mind gettin' it yourself?"

The woman watched the needle spin on the gasoline pump and asked, "Where you going, over to Efland?"

One of the reporters told her he was looking for "Bushy" Cook and she asked, "What do you want 'Bushy' for?"

He explained that he wanted to get a story for The Daily Tar Heel and she said, "Well, you ought to get a pretty good one. I understand his son's letting his face grow out too."

After leaving the general self service store, the reporters followed a road Gov. Scott would describe as needing a 10 million dollar repair job. The largest rock on the roadbed was a boulder—the smallest pebble was the size of a golf ball.

The reporters never saw "the burned-down house" but they eventually found a house "settin' on a curve." Outside the frame building was a blue and white Trailer. They drove into the yard and got out of the car.

Bushy met them on the front steps.

Lettermen Meet

The Monogram Club will meet tonight at 7:15 in the club room to make final selection of the Dixie Classic Queen.

Loesser To Give Unusual Concert In Hill Tonight

Arthur Loesser, famous Cleveland pianist and teacher, will play the entire first book of Bach's "Well-Tempered Clavier" in an unusual concert in Hill Hall tonight.

Because of the length of the work, it will be divided into two parts with an hour's intermission between—the first part being given at 6:30 and the second at 8:30. There is no admission charge and the public is invited.

Announcing the concert here, Music Department officials describe Loesser as occupying a leading position in the world of music today. A native of New York, he graduated from Julliard School of Music, and has made extensive tours as a concert pianist throughout the United States, in Germany, Australia and the Far East. He has lived in Cleveland for a number of years and has long served as head of the piano department of the Cleveland Institute of Music.

The first part of the "Well-Tempered Clavier," which Loesser will perform, consists of 24 preludes and fugues each in a different key. It was designed by Bach to include all the major and minor keys in order to encourage equal temperament tuning in his own time, the only tuning which makes all keys available and which has since become standard for modern keyboard instruments.

The program is described as providing a rare opportunity for music lovers for an integral hearing of the work, "for only in such a hearing can its marvelous variety, both in technical resources and emotional range be realized."

ARTHUR LOESSER

Local Choice Tonight For Coed Queen

Nominees for Dixie Classics queen were entertained last night by members of the UNC Monogram Club.

One girl will be selected tonight from these nominees to represent Carolina in the Big Four contest for Dixie Classics queen. Wake Forest, Duke and State Colleges will each select one girl and the queen will be chosen from pictures of these four girls.

The classics queen will act as official hostess for the Dixie Classics tournament in Raleigh Dec. 29-31 and will have all expenses paid at the hotel of her choice during her stay. She will have a place of honor in the guest box during games and be presented with a corsage each day. Her only duty will be to award trophies at the half-times of games.

Bob Phillips, Chapel Hill Monogram club member, has been in charge of the Dixie classics contest at UNC.

Ford Offers Asia Study Fellowships

The Ford Foundation yesterday announced it is offering fellowships to young Americans who wish to devote from one to three years to intensive study pertaining to Asia and the Near and Middle East.

This is the second fellowship offering under the Foreign Study and Research Fellowship Program initiated by the Foundation early in 1952.

The foundation stated that the program is intended to help meet the urgent need for more American men and women at home and abroad who are trained in business, education, government, agriculture, labor relations, communications and other professions and who have an understanding of the cultures and problems of Asia and the Near and Middle East. Through the award winners the Foundation hopes to stimulate increased knowledge of these critical areas on the part of Americans generally.

The Ford Foundation Board on Overseas Training and Research, which administers the Foreign Study and Research Fellowship Program, is under the chairmanship of Gordon Gray, president of the University.

Gray said the board expects to make the fellowship awards to persons drawn from a wide variety of educational and professional backgrounds. Students who will graduate from college next year are eligible to apply, as well as persons who have completed their formal training and are at work in their fields.

Applicants must be United States citizens under the age of 35, althoguh exceptions may be made to the age limitation in some cases. The fellowships are for periods of from one to three years and are available to:

a) Students completing undergraduate studies during this academic year;

b) Persons with experience in business, government, agriculture, labor relations, engineering, communications (journalism, radio, television, motion pictures, etc.), law and other fields, regardless of whether they have worked in the stated areas;

c) Persons who are doing or

Castor Oil In Red Heart For George, The Two Time Loser

By Sally Schindel

George is back in the doghouse again.

He pressed his wet nose against the "prison bars" and peered wistfully at the photographer taking his picture.

Then he scratched against the door of his cell, gave a mournful sigh and settled back into silence, probably to contemplate on the days before his bullet wound and his more recent grievance against coed Harriet Hill.

A two time loser, it looks like George's temporary address (c/o Dr. L. L. Vine, Chapel Hill) may become permanent even if it is unsatisfactory to George.

George is in the observation ward of Dr. Vine's hospital for suspicion of rabies. It's just to be on the safe side after his assault and battery charge of biting a coed two weeks ago. Although the quarantine period of 14 days isn't over, Dr. Vine has diagnosed the patient as "perfectly normal" and gives George several compensations.

For instance, he is allowed to go out during the day; and at night, when put back into his "semi-private" room, he's permitted to have visitors, his favorite being the small friend, Hurricane," that roamed with him on campus during his days of freedom.

But these privileges still do not make up for his present three-feet by four-feet prison, when he's used to a home consisting of class buildings, library and Y Court. And his restricted diet of castor oil mixed in Red Heart cramps his style after those malted milkshakes and chicken salad sandwiches leisurely devoured on the sunny Y Court steps.

George became a one time loser back around Oct. 9 when he got shot. At that time sympathetic students donated enough money to pay for the doctor's bill. He lost again when he bit Harriet Hill and returned once more to Dr. Vine for the two week observation period.

Does George have a Dr. Jekyl-Mr. Hyde personality that causes him to be friendly one day and avengeful the next? Dr. Vine explained that collies are high strung and occasionally get excited.

"Maybe he's having a nervous breakdown," said Dr. Vine, as an explanation for George.

Co-ordination?

This is intensive studying time, even for those who have given regular daily attention to their academic work.

In spite of this, there is a barrage of extracurriculars, most of them worthy of our time. Tuesday night, Secretary of the Army Frank Pace gave a rousing talk on the values of working for the government, and answered some important questions about the Army and the Korean War. Less than 200 students showed up. That same night, Will Herberg, philosopher, spoke on "Communism, Christianity, and Democracy." Last night you could take your choice: University Symphony, "The Inspector General" at the Playmakers' Theater, the Duke Madrigal Singers, and a basketball game. Tonight Arthur Loesser, distinguished pianist, performs at Hill Hall.

Perhaps this is a healthy rash of extracurricular activity. But it is unfair to ask students to attend all these events during the last few weeks of the quarter. We urge the Coordination Council of Graham Memorial, the group that handles the scheduling of activities on campus, to keep the last few weeks in the Winter and Spring quarters relatively free of a large scale extracurricular program.

In Season

We seldom compliment the merchants of Chapel Hill, students mostly complain.

However, the merchants of Chapel Hill deserve praise for restraining themselves on Christmas shopping. Some cities in the state have been boosting Christmas articles since July. Santa Claus parades are held on Thanksgiving Day. The lights, the music, the fanfare, and the other lures come out in October instead of December.

The candles on the lightposts here didn't go up until this week. We can enjoy Christmas shopping in Chapel Hill this season in season.

Joe Raff

A Star Is Reborn

What would you do if you had to get more laughs than Milton Berle or write funnier jokes than Joe Miller? You would probably fail—just like I am doing.

The Dearest (to the Frosh—our editor) fellow I know balled up to me not too many hours ago and questioned, "How would you like to do a review on the new Tarnation.' While I stuttered for an excuse Walt Dear was telling me where to pick up an early copy and giving me review instructions. The only instruction I got was "Make it funny!" He could have sooner thrown a copy of the Constitution of Bulgaria at me and made the same request.

Tom Alexander, mother of the giggle sheet, has given mirth to the reincarnated infant — The Tarnation. There is enough variety to shame the Junior Chamber of Commerce throughout the country. There is everything from "Filler" to a "Freshman Glossary" which explains to the neophytes that cheating is an unofficial eye-test.

For the legal beagles wiry recorder Bill Brown contributed Robert's Rules of Order — Revised giving living proof to the adage, there order be a law. Included also is the classical "Out Damned Spot" which narrates a young man's sentiments as he watches two tails disappear in the distance. Ham on Wry and a photographic story of Hook's Tour by Jim White compromise another feather for rib-tickling.

In addition to these departments the new Tarnation is not without out-and-out jaw-breakers. Here is a sampling: "There was a farm girl who returned from college after one quarter. Her father met her at the station, and they drove home in the family tractor. On the way the girl snuggled up to Papa and confessed: "I ain't at all pure as I used to be, Papa; I ain't even a virgin." The father's face fell, the horse neighed, and there was a prolonged silence. Finally the father turned to his wayward daughter and said: "After all your Mother and I have done for you — scrimped and saved to send you through college, worked our fingers to the bone and you still say ain't!"

R. Taylor, drawing with one of Charles Adams' blood-filled pens couldn't have done better with the cartoons than did Jerry McMahon. Art Einstein and other members who had their jokes tacked to the roaring-boards. They were arty, tarty, and fine pieces of work.

Any way you laugh at it, the Tarnation is well worth the buck for four issues.

Express Yourself

Editor:

Some people who read this may classify it as a gripe, ohers when they read it will say that the writer is a poor loser. I have written this letter neither to gripe nor to attack my opponent who won the election of the Freshman seat on the Honor Council. On the contrary, I congratulate him and wish him the best of luck.

However, I write this letter as a protest; a protest against an article under the General Elections Laws. This clause spelled defeat for me and automatically conceded the election to my opponent. The clause in the Elections Law states: "The candidates involved in the run-off shall submit a request in writing 24 hours after the results of the initial elections are announced officially for there to be a run-off." It is a law; clearly and definitely stated, and I shall abide by it. But here are my only complaints: why were the candidates for offices in the fall elections not told of this clause at the required meeting which was held at Gerrard Hall? Why, after the elections, if my opponent was informed of this ruling, why wasn't I.

I would like to enter a bill before the Student Legislature for the repeal of this law, or the adding of a provision to it stating that all candidates who are to be in run-offs be informed to that effect.

Pete Adams

To the Editor:

The failure of our fair university to make Senator McCarran's honor role, accusations of harboring Communists, is truly alarming. There must have been an oversight; and we must demand a re-accusation. Can't we have at least one Socrates; the next generation will be truly lost unless they are indoctrinated with some sort of ideas (and the risk is inherent in playing with ideas of poisoning the mind). Surely any University, worthy of the name, which isn't accused of radicalism, Communism, or un-orthodoxy of some sort is not fulfilling its teaching function and should be ashamed to take the poor taxpayers money.

O. L. Crawford

Ed. Note. Duke University was recently accused of having Communist sympathizers on its faculty.

Carolina Beats W&L, 67-48, For Second Straight SC Win

By Tom Peacock

North Carolina's basketball team sluggishly dealt the Washington and Lee Generals a 67-48 loss last night in Woollen Gym to give the Tar Heels their second straight Southern Conference victory.

The Generals led Carolina during the first quarter, but Tar Heel Jarry Vayda tied the score at 14-14 with a long set shot just as the period ended. Co-Captain Jack Wallace put Carolina in the lead, 16-14, and Washington and Lee never threatened again. Carolina enjoyed a 34-23 halftime lead.

Charlie Topp, a six-foot, two-inch sophomore from Wheeling, W. Va., paced both teams in scoring with a 20 point total for the losers. Topp made 12 out of 14 foul shot atempts, but scored only four times from the floor.

Vayda, a freshman who was high scorer in Carolina's opener, led the Tar Heels with six field goals and five foul shots for 17 points. Only one other Tar Heel, Bud Maddie with 13 points, scored in double figures.

The Carolina timing and shooting was way off, with the Tar Heels sinking only 22 of 75 field goal attempts. Carolina could score on one fast break in the first three quarters.

Phi Gams Win Volley Title

The Phi Gams, functioning like a well-oiled machine, trounced the Law School, 15-4 and 15-6, to win the campus volleyball championship yesterday afternoon.

The winners, led by Landy Griffen, who played outstanding as setup, and Steve Jones, started off fast to win the first game 15-4 and then go on to take the second easily, using a strong offense all the way. An alert defense saved several points for the winners who were never behind.

Playing without the services of Louis Evans, the Phi Gams regained the campus title which they lost last year. The winners have now won the Fraternity division for 12 straight years since 1940. They were undefeated this year, defeating the Sigma Chi's in the finals of the Fraternity playoffs to go into the campus finals.

The Phi Gams, winners of seven games this year, were also paced by Billy Brewer, Bernie Burnstan, Bill Smith and Sid Wood. Pacing the Lawyers, winners in the Dorm division, were John Culbertson at setup and Bob Byrd, spiker.

McCabe And Shores Pace Junior Varsity To 82-75 Victory Over Wake Forest

By Melvin Long

Carolina's junior varsity recovered from an erratic first half to finally get past a hard playing Wake Forest team, 82-75, in the preliminary contest to the varsity clash here last night.

Paced by the play of forwards Gerald McCabe and Tommy Shores and guard Jack Woods, the Tar Heel jayvees held on to a slim lead throughout most of the second half to take their first win of the season.

AND NOW—CHESTERFIELD FIRST TO GIVE YOU SCIENTIFIC FACTS IN SUPPORT OF SMOKING

A responsible consulting organization reports a study by a competent medical specialist and staff on the effects of smoking Chesterfields. For six months a group of men and women smoked only Chesterfield—10 to 40 a day—their normal amount. 45 percent of the group have smoked Chesterfields from one to thirty years for an average of ten years each.

At the beginning and end of the six-months, each smoker was given a thorough examination including X-rays, and covering the sinuses, nose, ears and throat. After these examinations, the medical specialist stated . . .

"It is my opinion that the ears, nose, throat and accessory organs of all participating subjects examined by me were not adversely affected in the six-months period by smoking the cigarettes provided."

Hospitality Out Of A Mason Jar

Beard-King Bushy Cook Got Start In End Zone

By Rolfe Neill

(Second in a series of 2 articles)

Bushy Cook, king of the beard ed men, stared at the smudge yellow pattern in the linoleum and took a long suck on a king sized cigaret ("they keep me from catching on fire.").

Now in his sixth growth o the magnificant hair, George Braxton Cook was trying to re call when he first allowed its course. "It was in 1936," he final ly said. "It was when Roosevel came in—1932 wasn't it? I hope Ike makes as good a president as Roosevelt did."

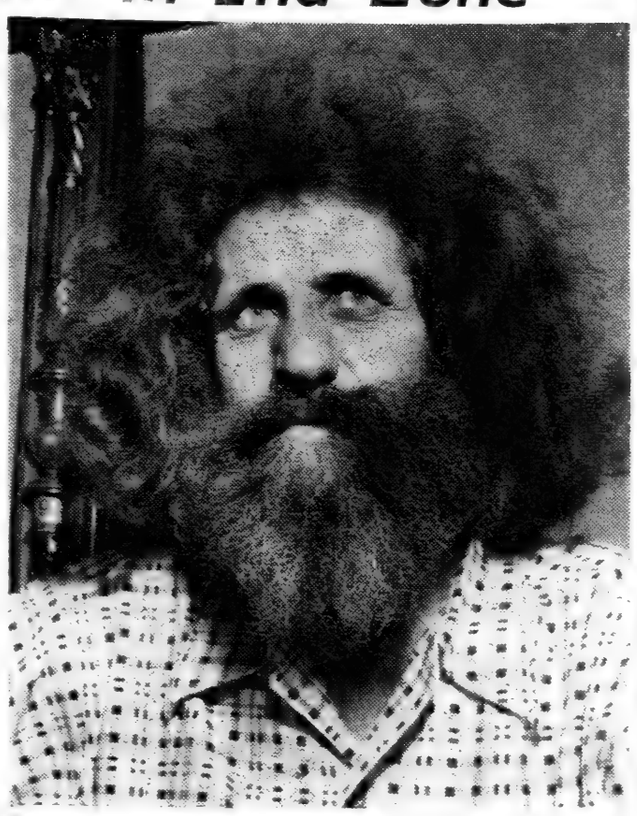
Satisfied that he now had the date right, Bushy left the living room and when he returned he handed a glass to each of us Then he poured us his farmer's hospitality from a Mason jar plopped himself into a big cherry wood chair, and began to tell more about himself.

Bushy popped into one year and out of another.

There was the time he saw his first train when the family moved from Bluff Mountain, N. C. to South Carolina back when the 20th century was just getting a toehold on the calendar.

There was work in a war plant in Connecticut in the 1940's and then the decision to "call a special family meeting and see whether they wanted me to eat up my $3,300 I'd saved or buy a farm." He bought the farm—a 69 acre job in Orange County which is home to his wife and 11 children.

Cook left the room again. This time he came back with a handfull of pictures which he proudly spread out on the double bed in the corner. The pictures told the story of Bushy Cook, keeper of Carolina's ram mascot.



According to Bushy, who let his beard grow "for the hell of it," it all started when he went to a football game in 1946. A photographer spotted him in the end zone ("best ticket I could get") and took a couple of novelty shots. "Next day my picture was in the paper. Soon they asked me to take care of Rameses at the games."

Since that time Bushy has missed few home games. He also took in New York when Carolina played Notre Dame there in 1949 when he and Rameses VII stopped traffic in Times Square at UNC's pre-game pep rally. He went onto the Cotton Bowl at Dallas the following January to strut under the eyes of Texas.

Bushy has the skull of Rameses VII who died last summer on the farm of George Hogan where he was kept. A faded Carolina blue may still be seen on the horns and Bushy plans to have the head mounted.

He couldn't get to the first University games this year because his wife was in the hospital. It was last weekend's game with Miami that Bushy really hated to miss, however.

"I sure wish I could have seen the boys do all that fine playing," he said as he passed the Mason jar toward an empty glass.

"THIS PICTURE WAS TAKEN while I was still on the train," Bushy Cook (above) said as he told about his trip to the Cotton Bowl, Jan. 1, 1950. Bushy, who prances around Kenan Stadium with Rameses during the home football games, is now in his sixth beard.—Photo by Dallas Morning News.

PB Okays Paper For Tomorrow

The Publications Board yesterday rescinded a move made last week and approved publication of The Daily Tar Heel for tomorrow.

The Saturday issue had been cancelled because of financial difficulties, but an influx of Christmas advertising made tomorrow's paper possible.

Tuesday's issue was not published this week for the same reason — a financial deficit which may necessitate a switch to tabloid size or discontinuation of various issues.

Chairman Walt Dear explained, "The Daily Tar Heel has been printed as a seven column newspaper strictly on an experimental basis since September. The board was informed that advertising revenues this year would be high enough to pay for the increased cost of printing the big sized newspaper. This hasn't worked out. The board voted to cut two issues as an emergency measure to insure publication of the seven column paper at least to the end of this quarter.

We're trying to do everything possible to insure students of a financial stable paper," he added.

Asked if the decision to return to a five column paper, made several days ago, could be changed, Dear commented, "I think the board would be happy to consider other proposals if they are financially sound."

Other members on the board include Peggie Goode, Joe Nelson, Tom McDonald, Jack Stillwell, Financial Coordinator Marshall Cline, and Faculty Advisers L. M. Pollander and J. L. Morrison, both from the School of Journalism.

Student Dies In Accident; Two Injured

Donald Williams McCollum, a junior whose home is at Guilford College, was killed early yesterday morning outside of Graham when the car in which he was riding overturned. He was 20.

Two other Carolina students were injured but are in satisfactory condition at the Universsity Infirmary. They are Max Glenn Snipes, Morganton junior, and Philip E. Buchanan, senior, Waynesboro, Va.

Funeral for Mr. McCollum will be held today at 2 p. m. at Hanes Chapel in Greensboro. Among those from the University attending the rites will be Roy Holsten, assistant dean of students, and representatives of student government and the NROTC of which Mr. McCollum was a member. He also belonged to the University Band.

UNC officials said the three boys apparently went to a movie here and then later left town for Winston-Salem.

According to Patrolman Carter, the boys' auto failed to make a curve just outside of Graham about 2 a. m., Wednesday and overturned several times throwing out all of the occupants. The car was demolished and Mr. McCollum died almost instantly, the patrolman said.

The car was driven by Snipes and it was owned by his father. It was a 1947 black Hudson.

Di Chooses Ken Penegar

Ken Penegar was elected president of the Di Senate in its quarterly elections Tuesday.

Penegar is a junior from Gastonia. He served last quarter as president pro-tempore of the Senate. For president pro-tem the Senate elected Gerald Parker, junior from Silerdale. Parker moved up from position of critic. Charlotte Davis, Chapel Hill junior, was elected critic for the winter quarter, having previously served as clerk. Bill Watt, junior from Richmond, was elected clerk, while Joe Fleishman was elected sergean-at-arms. David Reid, Asheville freshman, was chosen for chaplain.

NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON — Chairman Archibald Cox resigned from the Wage Stabilization Board yesterday in protest against President Truman's approval of a $1.90 daily wage increase for coal miners and the whole wage program came to a standstill. Resignation of other industry members of the wage board also were expected last night.

WASHINGTON—Adlai Stevenson said yesterday he and President Truman are in complete agreement not to wage war on Dwight Eisenhower's program simply for party advantage. And, he told reporters at a White House news conference, the Democratic Party's two major problems are: (1) to wipe out a deficit of more than half a million dollars and (2) to "serve the public interest."

Attacked Minister Is In Town

By Ernest Davis

"Charley" Jones came home ast night and found his congre-ation ready to resist a move to ust him as pastor of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian Church.

He arrived here at 7:30 last night and will depart early this morning for Kingsport, Tenn., where he is serving as a consultant for the Save the Children Foundation on a year's leave of absence from the local church.

While here, the minister met with various church officers and members to discuss the problems raised by a report from the Judicial Commission of the Orange Presbytery made public last Sunday which requested the resignation of all church elders and deacons. The report charged most of the officers "didn't adhere closely enough to the church's Confession of Faith and Book of Church Order."

The Commission had earlier asked the pastor for his resignation, and said in its report that "through his philosophy doctrines become what man thinks they ought to be, instead of what they are."

Eighteen new members will join the church at services Sunday, the Rev. Jones was told last night. This is only two less than the 20 members who several months ago petitioned the Presbytery for a new church, claim-being "unmet," and touched off being unmet," and touched off the investigation of the church.

The officers expressed their confidence in the Rev. Jones at a meeting Wednesday night. At the same time they refused to conceed to the Commission's request that they resign. They said they would carry through with their plans to elect new officers in accordance with the system authorized by the Presbytery in its Book of Church Order at the regular time in March.

Concerning their pastor, the officers issued a statement saying they were "unanimous in expressing their confidence" in him, but that "any action regarding Mr. Jones was the responsibility of the congregation."

Various members of the congregation had this to say of the Rev. Jones earlier in the week: "He is a preacher without peer in American Protestantism today. . . .He has not been stayed in his effort to present a picture of practical religion at work by criticism or threats" and "he has been a fearless champion of the ideal of the brotherhood of man."

The Commission, itself, in its report mentioned the esteem which the congregation holds toward their pastor. It is "possessed of a strong social concern" and "united above all other ties, by a common affection and regard for its pastor" the report said.

Meanwhile, student support for the Rev. Jones continued to grow. A spokesman for student members of the congregation urged other students to write Howard Newman, the Stated Clerk of the Orange Presbytery, about their convictions in regard to Mr. Jones. Newman's address is 416 East Main Street, Sanford, N. C.

Presbyterian students living in the vicinity of Orange Presbytery who have attended the church here were asked to write to parents, who can, in turn, talk to the ministers about Mr. Jones.

Kappa Psi's Meet Here

Fifty-two delegates of Kappa Psi, pharmacy fraternity, are expected in Chapel Hill this weekend for the convention of Providence III of the fraternity.

Business sessions will begin tomorrow at 9:30 a.m. in the Institute of Pharmacy. Steve Perrow, regent of the host chapter will give the welcoming address and introduce Dr. John Schermerhorn, province head officer, who will preside at the meeting.

Trustee Interviews Sound Encouraging

Horton Makes Plea To See Your Trustee

President Gives County-By-County List Of Members

The request went out yesterday for more students to visit Trustees as Trustees began to hark the sound of Tar Heel voices on the controversial Saturday class question.

President Ham Horton said,"We need more volunteers to visit Trustees in their hometowns." He spoke encouragingly of the results thus far, but urged students to lend a hand in the battle.

Only 35 of the 98 members of the Board of Trustees were visited over Thanksgiving holidays, Horton said. He stressed the importance of visits to the board members in issuing the request.

The Trustee interviews are being co-ordinated by the student government office. Those interested are requested to check with the office soon.

Horton issued the following list of Trustees to be visited:

George S. Coble of Davidson County, John G. Dawson of Lenoir County, Benjamin K. Lassiter of Granville County, Henry A. Lineberger of Gaston County, Reid A. Maynard of Alamance County, James Carlton Pittman of Lee County.

Kenneth Spencer Tanner of Rutherford County, Herbert Dalton Bateman of Wilson County, Wilbur H. Currie of Moore County, O. Max Gardner of Cleveland County, H. S. Gibbs of Carteret County, Willie Lee Lumpkin of Franklin County, Lennox Polk McClendon of Guilford County, Rudolph I. Mintz of New Hanover County, Vernon G. James of Pasquotank County.

T. E. Clemmons, southeastern manager of the International Business Machines Corporation and Carolina graduate, will speak at Gerrard Hall at 7:30 p. m.

The IBM executive's appearance is jointly sponsored by the University Placement Center and the Alpha Tau Chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi, national professional fraternity in business administration. Clemmons is an AK Psi alumnus. Introducing Clemmons will be M. E. Johnson, Raleigh manager of IBM.

While at UNC Clemmons was active with the Debating Team, THE DAILY TAR HEEL, and the Order of the Grail.

Tryouts For 'Princess Ida'

Tryouts for the Carolina Playmakers' annual musical, "Princess Ida," will be held Tuesday in Memorial Hall at 4 and 7:30 p. m.

The Gilbert and Sullivan operetta will be directed by William M. Hardy, assistant business manager of the Playmakers, and is scheduled for three performances, Feb. 6-8.

"Princess Ida" is the story of Prince Hilarion's attempts to persuade the princess, to whom he was betrothed in infancy, from academic seclusion in Castle Adamant. It requires a cast of eight men and seven women, with choruses. Scores are available at

Round 2 Begins For Carolina In 'The Big Fight'

By Louis Kraar

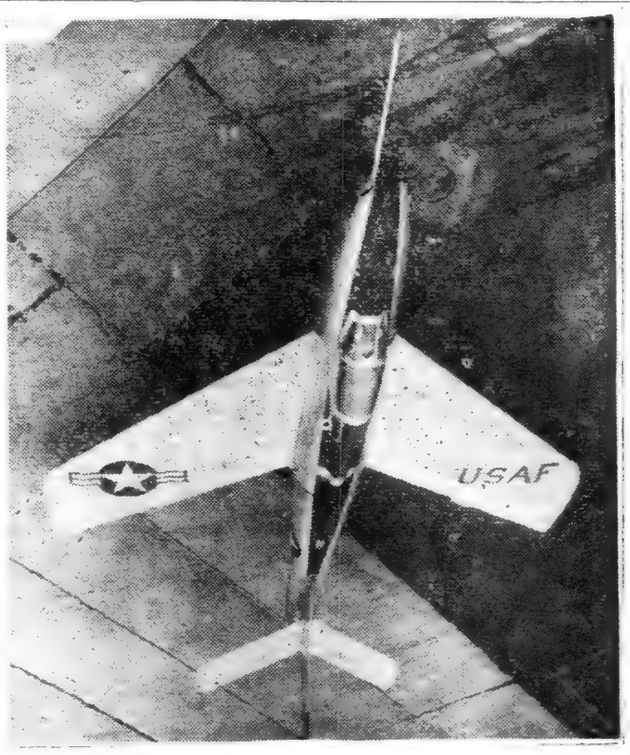
The fight against Saturday classes, sparked by student government, moved into its second round yesterday.

Results of interviews with Trustees showed that most of those visited are against a six day week. Many Trustees who supported the Saturday class move indicated that they would do nothing to conflict with student opinion, according to reports.

The Visiting Committe of the Board of Trustees will meet in Morehead Planatarium today with University administration officials.

The subject of Saturday classes is included on the agenda.

President Ham Horton, in evaluating Trustee reaction, said, "Although these results sound promising, there is still much to be done." He asked the 17 students who haven't reported on their talks with Trustees to notify him.



Two Trustees, A. Hugh Harris, Assistant Commissioner of Agriculture, and John W. Umstead, legislator, have openly sided with student opinion. Other prominent members of the board have indicated that they also oppose Saturday classes.

Future plans in the campaign, as outlined by Horton yesterday, call for continued appeal to Trustees. The 98-member board meets Feb. 28 to consider the issue.

A faculty poll, conducted by Anne Mackie, indicated that they are with students in opposing Saturday classes. Two hundred and seventy-one of the 378 polled were against them and only 88 supported them.

Those 88 who supported Saturday classes were split in opinions favoring or disfavoring the semester system. Twenty of those who participated in the poll said they didn't care or were undecided on the question.

Students who visited Trustees over Thanksgiving were equipped with printed briefs stating the case against Saturday classes.

FRESH OFF THE PRODUCTION line in Farmingdale, N. Y. is this first model of the Thunderstreak, sleek new high-speed, swept-wing F-84 jet fighter now being produced by Republic Aviation Corp. for the U. S. and NATO air forces. It is expected to set records for speed, range and lead-carrying ability—the speed is in the "more than 600-m.p.h. class.—NEA Telephoto.

Quarterly's New Issue Coming Soon

The Carolina Quarterly, University literary magazine, will be out this weekend and emphasizes student contributions, Editor Tom Lloyd said yesterday.

Two of the four stories in the issue are by students of Phillips Russell's creative writing course. In addition to the stories, "Piano Man," by Charles Scott Jarrett and a science fiction story, "A Measure of Immortality" by Joseph Puall, the magazine also contains a student-written poem, "Beachead—1942", by Robert Morris.

York Club

The York Club, an Episcopal club for graduate students and faculty, will hold its first meeting Sunday at 8:45 p.m. in the Chapel of the Cross Parish House.

Dr. H. R. Huse, professor of comparative literature, will be guest discussion leader. The topic for consideration is "Intellectual Honesty versus Religious Conviction."

An Alumnus Writes

Letter To The Athletic Council

3 December, 1952

The Athletic Council
University of North Carolina
Chapel Hill, North Carolina

Gentlemen:

It was without a great sense of elation that I read this morning of Carl Snavely's resignation as head football coach at UNC. I cannot know exactly how you feel about this matter but news reports don't indicate that any member of the Council was busting a trace to retain Snavely. On the contrary, there have been constant rumblings down Chapel Hill way for the past three years concerning Coach Snavely's handling of the Tar Heel football team.

Understand that I am not indicting the Athletic Council because of Snavely's resignation because I respect your decisions and look upon you as gentlemen of high character. In plain words, I do not think the Council is composed of little men who would force the resignation of a man of Snavely's ability.

However, the Council must have recognized immediately that the unqualified acceptance of the resignation placed it in a ticklish position and, at the same time, brought smug smiles of satisfaction to those big-mouthed, little-brained alumni and students who have howled, yelped and squealed so long and so loud for Snavely's scalp.

Two Fine Coaches Gone

In the past few months Carolina has stood quietly by while two of the finest men in the coaching profession stepped down from their positions for identical reasons—alumni grumbling and lack of cooperation on the part of alumni and University officials. The other gentleman to whom I refer is, of course, Tom Scott, our former basketball coach.

In my opinion, Tom Scott and Carl Snavely are gentlemen of the highest caliber and coaches who rank with the best in their field. And I'll stick by that despite hell, high water and a hundred and fifty consecutive losses!

Let's analyze the situation, if you please, Gentlemen.

First we'll consider briefly the resignation of Tom Scott. During his years as coach at Carolina, Scott never had the material to produce a top basketball team. Still he consistently strove to make the Tar Heels a winner and he threw plenty of scares into the finest teams in the conference. Our team, more often than not, was better than average during Scott's regime but certainly was not as good as the best.

Alumni And Students Howled

We played some of the nation's finest teams—Kentucky, Illinois, N. C. State, et al—during the past few years and never did too well in comparison. So the alumni and students howled. And you listened. Didn't you?

So now Scott is gone and to replace him you have brought in Frank McGuire, another of the nation's finest coaches and a man with a reputation built on success. Pardon my pessimism, gentlemen, but may I predict that five years hence McGuire's record will be no better than our record of the past five years—unless some changes are made.

In order to produce a basketball winner, Carolina can do one of two things, viz., play a "soft" schedule or bring in some top notch talent from the hinterlands. I believe we will bring in the talent. I hope we will bring in the talent. I want to win. I also want to know why Scott's continual pleas for better scholarships to offer top players were never heeded.

I know for a fact that we had several players on campus at one time or another who, being offered only a second or third rate scholarship, tipped their hats and slowly rode away—only to become all-conference, all-this-and-that and, in one or two instances, All-America at rival schools. Deny that if you will but I could name names were that necessary and could produce the most unimpeachable evidence to back up my statements.

Well, in the end Scott took as much as he could stand and very humbly resigned in the face of overwhelming odds and growing dissension from without and from within.

Snavely Forced To Resign

And now we see Snavely, the once-proud leader of titans, humbled, disappointed and forced to the point of resignation by the thundering mob. And do my eyes deceive me or is that the Athletic Council standing grimly by the the background and nodding sage heads in silent agreement?

Yes, Gentlemen, Snavely was great in his younger years. Remember in 1933 when he came in and took a team that had won only seven games in two years and compiled a 15-2-1 record in the following two years? And how about '45 when the "Grey Fox" stepped in again, took a team that won only one game (from Cherry Point) the year before and two years later went to the Sugar Bowl?

Of course Snavely has lost his touch now and his usefulness is over. At least that's what a lot of folks tell me.

Maybe he has lost his touch but my belief is that it would be more accurate to say that he has lost his material. Show me a coach—any coach anywhere — who could take the material that Snavely has had for the past three seasons, play the schedule that he has played, withstand the mounting pressures and still produce a winner.

Gentlemen, I don't believe there is any such man. I know you're going to look long and hard but I don't believe you'll find one. I have a hunch that Carolinas next head football coach will be Art Guepe (if he's "available") and I hope he is your selection. He's a fine coach and a real gentleman. He's not the pop-off alibi expert that some coaches are and he's not the fussing, cussing practice field tyrant that others are.

Guepe, like Snavely, is a man who can bring out the best in a boy. He, like Snavely, can take a wild kid, polish him up a bit and send him out into the world a graduate any school would be proud of. He, like Snavely, builds men not football bums. And he, like Snavely, will never hit the .500 mark until talent is provided for him to work with.

What Does Carolina Need?

What does Carolina need? Here's my prescription:

1. A generous helping of beef, brawn, brains and know how to wear the blue and white. (This is not to be confused with hometown pets that run wild against a cow pasture eleven and capture the hearts and fancy of ever-loving alumni who send them away to be made into All-Americas).

2. Time to regroup, rebuild and counterattack.

3. A minimum of injuries to key players.

4. A rekindling of student and alumni support and interest.

5. Patience, fortitude, forebearance.

And so, Gentlemen, I rest my case but let me add one other thing, this having to do with the much ballyhooed de-emphasis program.

If we are to have real de-emphasis (and I see no reason for it) let's not pull such stunts as dropping Texas and adding Oklahoma, dropping South Carolina and adding Maryland and the like (this, of course, being mere conjecture on my part). If we're going to play big-time football and basketball (and I'm all for it) let's provide players equal to the schedule, lend whole-hearted support to the coaches, discourage alumni quarterbacks (no reflection on Spike Saunders), and string along with a good man when we get one.

Is This De-emphasis?

And, just for the record, I wonder what Maryland and Clemson think about all this after our great crusade of last year. Does a school really fire two big name coaches only to hire two other big names in the interest of de-emphasis?

Let's clean our own kettles before we scold the pots!

What's done is, unfortunately, done, Gentlemen. But from now on, let's let our minds and not our emotions—or our disgruntled alumni—govern our actions, be they active or passive.

That's all, Gentlemen, and in closing may I remind you that "When the One Great Scorer comes to write beside your name, He writes not that you won or lost, but how you played the game."

Sincerely yours,

Zane Robbins, '52

Note: Zane Robbins, a former Daily Tar Heel sports editor and Publications Board chairman, now serving in the Armed Forces, is "galled" over the forced resignation of Football Coach Carl Snavely, as are, undoubtebly, other alumni.

In a personal note to the editor Robbins explains that he's "not out to grind an axe with anyone" and has "no hard feelings toward the Athletic Council since there is no need to cry over the proverbial spilt milk.

"I do think the Council was dead wrong in letting Snavely and Scott go," he adds. "I think they (the Council) will soon find themselves in an indefensible position when the rest of the conference starts crowing about the UNC-sponsored de-emphasis program of last year."

"My only objective (in writing the letter) is to assuage the wounds of a lot of students and faculty members—and alumni—who think, as I do, that Snavely and Scott got a raw deal," Robbins asserted.

We agree with many of the views he expresses above.

We, too, believe that the spactacle of a still-great football coach "forced to the point of resignation" is a saddening, event—especially when it happens in Chapel Hill.

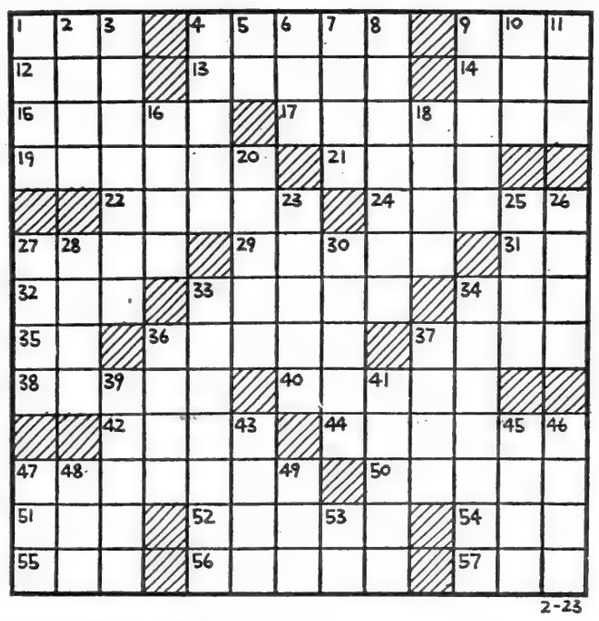
And we shall have more to say on this matter later . . .

John Taylor

Review

On Wednesday evening, the Playmakers presented their first performance of Gogol's "The Inspector General". The run will terminate with Sunday evening's performance.

Your reviewer was completely delighted with the first act of the Russian satire; it ran along at a merry pace and abounded with witty and pungent characterizations. Then two rather unfortunate things occurred—the second and third acts. There was a definite let-odwn. The pace dragged in many places, the characterizations lost much of their zip, and the entire production from that point on was disappointing. Although it was here too that two tremendously amusing cameos were delivered by Bill Trotman and Charles Hadley, for the most part, the less said about the second and third acts the better.



Appropriately enough to the traditions of the Moscow Art Theatre, it is in the ensemble playing that the most consistently high level of performing is achieved. As was mentioned earlier, there were some individual gems sprinkled throughout the play, but they were the exception, not the rule.

Fred Young's performance as Hlestakov was not quite up to his usual high standard, but nonetheless, he brought to the part his unique comic flair, complete with perfect timing, a droll tongue-in-cheek quality, and an elegant appearance that was a complete delight to those who had never seen him before.

In the arduous role of the mayor, Jim Pritchett was superb in the first act, but was not able to sustain this high level for the rest of the play. Nancy Green, playing the mayor's wife, turned in a wonderfully comic interpretation. Jan Carter was winning as the mayor's daughter, but played all her scenes on the same level and thus tended to become rather monotonous. Able performances were turned in by Don Wright, Milton Beyer, Bill Waddell, and the aforementioned Trotman and Hadley. But it is a shame that some of the performers were selected only because they looked their parts, for this was one of the factors that lowered the caliber of the overall production.

Harry Davis' direction was sometimes inventive, sometimes repetitious. The costumes, by Irene Smart, were colorful and fitted well into the mood of the piece. While not one of his best, William Long's set was more than acceptable.

Is it going to happen?

That's what students on campus ask when it comes to the Saturday class question. Most seem to think that it's a dead issue and the sixth class day is inevitable. But that's not true.

The wheels of student government, slow moving at the start like most intricate machines, have warmed up. An organized campaign against Saturday classes is being carried on every day by student government workers. Watching them at work, one can readily see that the fight isn't dead, but just moving into the second round.

Here's the latest work: Many students, the same ones that drink coffee in the Y court every morning and attend football games, went to see trustees over the holidays. President Ham Horton and his crew of workers, who are just as energetic over this as they are about politicing, kept a file on the reactions.

The results were great. The trustees, who are not all bearded, stoic conservatives, reacted favorably at the interviews. Even those who formerly were advocates of Saturday classes, spoke encouragingly.

So the rest is up to students, backed by their government. But the thing's not over. Drop in Graham Memorial and see. And, most important of all, sound off to everyone you know . . . parents, friends, and profs. Then we WON'T have Saturday classes.

ON THE FENCE: Politicians are screaming again. This time it's about money. Seems that some of the Student Party delegates to the State Student Legislature in Raleigh had to pay their own registration. They're shouting about it because Legislature appropriated them the funds. Prexy Ham Horton (UP) vetoed the bill, which was within his power. SP complainers say that he waited past the allowed time. Others say he didn't. At any rate, Horton reminds them—and they should be reminded—that they do not represent Carolina at the meeting. It is a worthy and wonderful liberal group though. But on my money and the rest of the student body's.

REMINDER: To all aspiring politicians—F. Scott Fizgerald, the poet of the twenties, once said, "To the spoils belongs the victor." That's a generous snack for thought.

Tar Heel Cagers Meet Richmond Tomorrow

By Tom Peacock

The North Carolina basketball team, winners of two Southern Conference games in as many starts this season, takes a two-day rest and then plays the University of Richmond here Saturday night in another Conference contest.

Carolina will be favored to extend its win streak against the Spiders, but Richmond is always tough and gave Carolina a scare last year before bowing, 62-56, on the Richmond court.

Tar Heel coach Frank McGuire is hoping for an improvement in his squad over the past two games. Carolina opened Monday night with a 70-50 victory over The Citadel, and then beat Washington and Lee, 67-48, on Wednesday. The Tar Heels started slow in both games, allowing the opponent to grab an early lead.

Carolina made 22 of 75 field goal attempts against Washington and Lee for a fair floor average, but did very poorly at the foul line. The new Southern Conference rule allowing a second try at a missed foul shot helped the Tar Heels little.

High scorer for the Tar Heels and their brightest new player is freshman Jarry Vayda who scored 21 and 17 points in the first two starts. Vayda started against The Citadel when Paul Likins was sick, and has been in the lineup since.

In addition to Vayda, Carolina is paced by the floor play of its two co-captains, forward Jack Wallace and guard Vince Grimaldi. The team is rounded out by Bud Maddie and Bob Phillips, with Likins and Ernie Schwarz seeing considerable action.

The Tar Heels are without the services of their high scorer in 1951, and two other top prospects because of scholastic difficulties. Sophomore Al Lifson, the high-scorer, Jippy Carter, and Pete Anisko are all given good chances to break into the lineup in January. Anisko has a slight ankle injury now, but will be ready soon.

Carolina Swimmers Go To VMI Tomorrow

Carolina's defending Southern Conference champion swimming team will open the season tomorrow with a meet against VMI at Lexington, Va.

The Tar Heels are heavily favored to repeat as champions this year with most of their swimmers back from last year.

The junior varsity will also open its season tomorrow with a meet against High Point High at Bowman Gray Memorial Pool.

Expected to lead the varsity are such swimmers as Buddy Baarck, Donnie Evans, Barry Wall and others who formed the nucleus of last year's undefeated squad.

NEWS IN BRIEF

EN ROUTE WITH EISENHOWER — President-elect Eisenhower got the "feel" of the Korean war in a three-day top-secret tour, which took him within sight of the fighting line, and started for home yesterday to study the possibilities of peace. The former five-star general conferred with top commanders and ate pork chops with GI's just in back of the battle line during his whirlwind tour, it was disclosed yesterday. "Much can be done to improve our position," he said. "Much will be done." Eisenhower headquartered with army commanders in Seoul, South Korea's blackened and dismal capital, traveling to the front in heavily guarded jeeps and in a two-seater airplane to inspect battle conditions and South Korean and United Nations troops. He was accompanied by Charles E. Wilson, his choice as defense secretary, and Herbert Brownell, who will be his attorney general.

SEOUL — President-elect Dwight Eisenhower told a crowd of 125 newspaper, radio and magazine corespondents yesterday he had no quick cure for ending the Korean War. He made it plain that he had come to Korea to study the situation. He permitted no questions at the news conference. Because of this, many newspapermen expressed disappointment. He talked rapidly and seriously for 10 minutes — and that was that. A newsman from a foreign land remarked: "Well — I don't like Ike anymore."

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. — U. N. sources said Secretary-General Trygve Lie fired nine American employees yesterday for refusing to answer McCarran committee questions about Communist affiliations and subversive connections. This brings to 19 the number dismissed in 1952 for this cause. Included in the nine was Dorothy Hope Eldridge, a former physical education instructor at Woman's College of the University of North Carolina. Lie, in a formal statement, warned his staff of 3,000 they face the same fate if they act similarly.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. — The CIO's new president, Walter P. Reuther, yesterday charted a fighting program to keep the labor organization an active factor in America's industrial life. Reuther, in a speech accepting the pose as successor to the late Philip Murray, said he would strive for the biggest possible gains for workers already organize workers who are now non-union.

Korean Casualties Won't Be Totaled

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5—The Pentagon will no longer report the grand total of casualties in the Korean War.

This was revealed yesterday when the Washington military headquarters also announced it is dropping the word "casualty" from its weekly report of wounds and fatalities incurred in the conflict. A Pentagon spokesman said the word is misleading and gives the impression everyone listed as a "casualty" has been killed or maimed.

The departure from reporting the total number of casualties was not explained. Totals have been reported since August, 1950, two months after the Korean War began. However, newsmen and press associations are not likely to be much bothered by it as they will simply add each week's report to the known total from the previous week.

AF, NROTC Rifle Teams In Tourney

Rifle teams representing the Air and Navy ROTC units of the University have smoothed out the rough edges over the past three weeks.

They are ready to shoot the works against strong competition at the first annual Southern Conference ROTC Rifle Tournament of North Carolina. The first leg will be fired in the spacious rifle range of North Carolina State beginning at 10 a.m. tomorrow.

Teams representing ROTC units at Davidson, Wake Forest, North Carolina State and Carolina will be on hand for the tournament.

Scores attained at the first leg tomorrow will be compiled and added to the second and final leg to be fired at the rifle range at Davidson College on Feb. 14. The cumulative scores will determine the individual and team winners of the highly coveted awards and trophies for the 1952-53 school year.

Davidson is favored to cop the tournament due to experience and veteran shooters.

T/Sgt John A. Quinn, USMC and M/Sgt Michael Pennella, USAF, are coaches of the local Navy and Air teams.

Members of the NROTC team are Elon A. Abernethy Jr., team captain, Blowing Rock; Donald L. Harley, Haddenfield, N. J.; James N. Wilfert, Tenafly, N. J.; Raymond L. White, Columbus, Ga.; John P. Jackson, Barnesville, Ga.; and Joseph F. Rosenberg, Troy, Ala.

Members of the AFROTC team are Bryan T. Watlington, Reidsville; Earl M. Page, Wilmington; David W. Aderholt, Charlotte; Larry H. Addington, Asheville; John McN. Dubose, Chapel Hill; and Robert E. Massie, Waynesville.

Why? Why?

Trustees Surveying Extra Day

By John Jamison

"Should your institution have classes on Saturday? If so, why? If not, why not?"

These and other questions presumably were put to administrative officials of the University yesterday by the Trustees' Visiting Committee during its day-long executive session at the Morehead Building.

This committee's function is not to decide upon the advisability of a six-day class week but to investigate and gather information for the benefit of the Board of Trustees. The information will be incorporated into a report on the six-day week at the three branches of the University.

The Board of Trustees will make its decision on the basis of this report at the regular winter meeting in February.

The Visiting Committee, headed by Victor S. Bryant of Durham, held separate conferences throughout the day with President Gordon Grav, Vice-President Logan Wilson, Controller William Carmichael, and Chancellors R. B. House, E. K. Graham and J. W. Harrelson.

Committee members present besides Bryant were Mrs. Virginia Lathrop of Asheville, Mrs. E. M. Anderson of West Jefferson, Mrs. Sue Ramsay Ferguson of Taylorsville, D. L. Ward of Newbern, Percy Ferebee of Andrews, Charles Cannon of Kannapolis and J. Benton Stacy of Ruffin.

GORDON GRAY will be principal speaker this afternoon in Greensboro at a meeting of the Methodist Church Foundation. On the foundation's business agenda is the selection of a chairman to replace UNC Trustee James A. Gray, who recently died.

Czech Man, Gray Open N.C. Crusade

Hearlding the Crusade for Freedom campaign in North Carolina which opens Sunday, the state's airways began last night a concentrated drive with a variety of programs.

The program last night, broadcast from 8:30 to 9 p.m. throughout the state, was originated by Charles Crutchfield, station WBT, Charlotte, with the a sistance of Harold Essex, of station WSJS, Winston-Salem.

Featured on the program was an address by Dr. Jan Papanek, former Czechoslovakian ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary, and President Gordon Gray of the University. Gray is state chairman of the Crusade for Freedom.

Robert Lang, one of the originators of Radio Free Europe and a former producer of the Fred Waring show, and Kay Kyser shared honors on the half-hour program.

State Department Exams Are Eased

Contrary to popular belief, the Foreign Service language exams are not very difficult and the applicant has five chances to pass them, according to Moncrieff J. Spear, a member of the Foreign Service.

Spear, who just completed a tour of duty in Berlin, spoke to about 50 students yesterday on opportunities with the Foreign Service.

As regards language requirements, Spear said anyone wishing to enter the Foreign Service has five chances to pass the exam. The last three chances are while the applicant is working for the service in the country which speaks the language he must pass.

Written exams for the service are comprehensive, covering reading, vocabulary, map reading, languages, political science, economics, and history. Spear said time organization is important in taking the exams, which last two and a half days.

When asked about draft deferments for people in the Foreign Service, Spear said that the State Department can not obtain a deferment for its members.

To obtain further information about the Foreign Service, Spear said write the Division of Recruitment, Field Recruitment Section, Department of State, Washington, 25.

Final Rites For McCollum Are Held

Special To THE DAILY TAR HEEL

GREENSBORO, Dec. 5—Funeral for Donald William McCollum, a 20-year-old University of North Carolina junior killed Thursday in an automobile accident, was held here this afternoon.

Dr. T. Henry Patterson, executive secretary of Orange Presbytery, conducted the service. Burial was in Forest Lawn Cemetery. Mr. McCollum lived on Rt. 1, Guilford College.

Two others riding in the car with Mr. McCollum at the time of the accident are in the UNC Infirmary where their condition is reported satisfactory.

Patrol Sgt. W. C. Carter, who investigated the accident early Thursday morning, blamed it on excessive speed. The car, headed west, skidded on a curve and turned over several times, the patrolman said. The mishap occurred on Highway 54, eight miles east of Graham.

Philip E. Buchanan, driver of the car, was quoted by patrolmen as saying the three students had attended a party in Chapel Hill Wednesday night and having no early morning classes decided to go to Winston-Salem and return for a 10 a.m. class Thursday. Reason for the Winston trip was not given.

Surviving Mr. McCollum are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Troy S. McCollum, and a brother, Kenneth Earl, Winston-Salem.

York Club

The York Club will meet Sunday at 8:45 in the Chapel of the Cross Parish House. Dr. H. R. Huse will be guest speaker.

WALTER REUTHER, head of the Auto Workers Union, stands before a portrait of Philip Murray, late leader of the CIO during a meeting of the organization in Atlantic City, N. J. Reuther's election as new president of the union was virtually assured.—NEA Telephoto.

State College Grad In Fatal Plane Crash

Blankets And Bids

Averett Junior College for Women, in Danville, Va., has issued blanket bids to UNC men for its semi-formal dance tonight at 8:30.

Bids for the dance may be picked up at Graham Memorial or at the office of the Dean of Women. A Trailway Bus leaves Chapel Hill at 2:40 p.m. and arrives in Danville at 5:35 p.m.

Jones In Chapel Hill

Pastor Hopes For Agreement; Commission Here Tomorrow

Reverend Charles M. Jones during a brief visit to Chapel Hill Thursday evening said he hoped that his church could reconcile its alleged differences with a Judicial Commission of the Orange Presbytery which has called for the resignation of the pastor and all church officers.

The Rev. Mr. Jones said that there really wasn't as much variance between the demands of the commission and the practices of the local church as was commonly thought. "Reason can meet reason," Jones said, and explained that he believed all concerned wanted to do what was best for both Presbyterians and the local church.

He quashed a suggestion that the Chapel Hill church might withdraw from the Presbytery if the Commission's demands are realized.

The pastor said that such a move would be in the best interests of neither the denomination nor the local church. Such a move shouldn't be based on personalities, but on religious beliefs, he said.

The Rev. Mr. Jones was here for a brief conference with various church officers and members when contacted by The Daily Tar Heel. He is currently serving with the Save the Children Foundation in Kingsport, Tenn., and is on a year's leave of absence from his ministerial duties. He is expected to return to Chapel Hill for his regularly scheduled Christmas sermon on December 21.

The Presbyterian Judicial Commission which earlier this week asked the pastor and officers of the church to resign will meet sometime this week-end to decide what to do about their refusal.

This session will be held prior to a meeting here Sunday afternoon when the commission makes its full report to the congregation.

Members of the commission said in Greensboro that they would have no further statements to make public "until the matter has been presented to the Presbytery and made a part of the record."

Next meeting of the Presbytery is scheduled for January, but attempts are being made to call a special session to consider the status of the local church.

The pastor, Reverend Charles M. Jones, and officers of the church were asked to resign earlier this week because of alleged doctrinal variances with Presbyterianism. They all refused.

The Woman's Point Of View

The Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees has lowered the boom on the University of Chapel Hill. There is a mass exodus from the campus every week end, say the Trustees; and the remedy, they claim, is Saturday classes. Therefore they have resolved that our Chapel Hill brethren stretch their working week from five to six days. After all, they say, this is a Consolidated University; and since Woman's College and State have Saturday classes, why not Carolina?

As one might expect, there has been much weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth. Petitions have been circulated and demonstrations held. The students protest that they need the extra day for catching up on study, sleep, work, and social life. The faculty is not at all happy about the new development. And administrative officials have expressed the conviction that this should be an administrative matter.

Having endured four years of mournful Saturday mornings, we feel that we can understand the problems involved in this situation. And having considered the situation rather carefully, we feel justified in supporting our friends at Carolina. We believe there are fundamental arguments against this innovation. Here they are:

1. We do not believe that the lack of Saturday classes is the only reason for a mass exodus. Other campuses (including our own) dwindle each week end at a rate only slightly smaller than that of the UNC campus. It has been suggested that some of the factors contributing to the week-end exodus in Chapel Hill are the barrenness of the dormitory rooms; the lack of recreational facilities on the campus; and the fact that a number of students are able to obtain work at home on week ends.

2. The argument that UNC should go to class on Saturday because State and Woman's College do is illogical. Woman's College is on the semester system; and State is a technical school with an unusual proportion of lab courses, a situation which requires more time in class. A more logical step, toward greater consolidation, we believe, would be putting Woman's College on the quarter system.

3. It seems to us that the administrative officials, who have been trained to meet such problems, who will work more closely with them, and will be directly affected by them, are the ones to decide whether such a program should be put into effect. According to Ham Horton, President of Student Government at Chapel Hill, not a single member of the Executive Committee is a professional educator.

4. Having struggled through Saturday classes for four years, we believe we are entitled to express the opinion that they are not exactly a panacea for educational ills. The arguments for more leisure for sleep, study, work, social life, etc., although overly-emphasized by more agitated members of the Carolina student body, are not invalid. And why stretch classes over six days that can be scheduled in five?

The Carolinian, WCUNC

Express Yourself

Editor:

In the United States we have a Northern Presbyterian Church and a Southern Presbyterian Church. They are two distinct bodies, and the former is usually felt to be characterized by more liberalism than the latter. When you speak of yourself "as a Presbyterian . . . concerned with Presbyterianism" and with the "problem of the church's relation to the community," you neglect to mention that you are of the former church.

In the Southern church we hold dear the teaching of Jesus and are striving toward fulfilling his will on earth, but we hold as equally important his being the son of God and being of divine origin.

If you speak with a member of the commission you will find that Mr. Jones is not in complete sympathy with the Southern church in this respect. It is not so much what has been preached at Mr. Jones's church but rather what has been neglected and the doctrine that is crucial to the commission's carefully made decision.

The decision was presented to the church officers at a secret meeting and was to be disclosed to the congregation calmly next Sunday. Unfortunately, one of the officers is a reporter for a Durham newspaper. This publicity is unfortunate for Chapel Hill.

Name withheld by Request

Editor's note: I haven't had the opportunity to speak with members from the Commission, but I have spoken to Mr. Jones recently. And I believe that he is in basic agreement with the fundamental doctrines of the Southern Presbyterian church. A minister, when ordained, agrees to uphold the doctrines of his church.

The Northern and Southern churches are closer than you might believe. A move to unite both branches of Presbyterianism will be made soon.

A Very Sad Story

"Be sure to be here Monday, gentlemen, or you'll have to fill out one of these little yellow cards."

I took heed, because I knew that to fill out one of the little yellow cards would mean I would fork over $2.50 to South Building, the penalty for missing a class after holidays.

And off I went to my home for the holidays in my little Crosley, affectionately called Anastasia. Though the drive down was bumpy at times, it was a delightful trip, as was the whole week-end.

Then I started back, never dreaming that Anastasia would betray my trust. But betray it she did, about 150 miles from Chapel Hill.

She began smoking and skipping. I patted her soothingly on the dash-board and said, "Now, now, Anastasia."

"Foo!" said Anastasia.

"Anastasia!" I exclaimed, "What's come over you?"

"Fwttt!" said Anastasia.

"But Anastasia," I said thinking quickly, "If you quit now, I'll have to pay that nasty old South Building $7.50, and you won't have any nice gasoline to drink."

"Sqweet!" said Anastasia.

"Come on you ★"?$?/◧★," I said banging the dashboard.

"Ka-pow! Ssssst! Foo!" said Anastasia. And then all was silent.

I sighed philosophically and began the task of flagging down cars, which was pretty tough, for it was at night and I guess I'm pretty ugly. Presently, however, a guy uglier than I stopped and said, "Having trouble?"

I stifled an appropriate answer and explained the situation to him. He told me that inasmuch as the next town was but one he would push me. This maneuver was executed without mishap to a service station.

After an hour of tinkering, a sadistic attendent advised me that the situation was hopeless unless I could find a Crosley dealer. I discovered that the nearest Crosley dealer was 50 miles away, and since it was the night of the Sabbath anyhow, the idea of getting the little beast fixed that night disappeared.

Arrangements were made whereby the sadist was to chaperone Anatasia until I could get down there again the next week-end. (I still don't know what I'm going to do when I get there.) I inquired about the bus schedule, and was told, though quite cheerfully, that the next bus wasn't until six-thirty Monday morning; so out came the thumb and the toothy smile (which I managed by saying "whiskey"). After an hour's wait, I was picked up by a man of some 105 years or so, and we hadn't gone 20 miles before the right-rear tire went "ka-pow" and being my companion's junior by some 80-odd years I was ethically obligated to change the tire. This took a while because the bumper-jack was rusty and the lug-wrench was rusty and the old man had not finished his rusty joke which led to two more, rustier than the first.

A little weary from my evening's activities, I slept. When I awoke, it was daylight and we were in Roxboro. I asked why, and the old man said that he plumb forgot I was with him. I mumbled something, he let me out, and I began thumbing back. I made it just as the bell dismissing my last class was ringing.

South Building was unmoved, and since I wanted very much to receive my diploma so that I can still get a cup of coffee for a nickle, I coughed up the $7.50.

I never did fill out those little yellow cards, though; I just paid the money.

TB SEAL SALE

Christmas seals for the fight against tuberculosis were mailed this week to some 9,300 students and residents in the Chapel Hill area.

Seventy-five cents of every dollar received in the drive will be used in this community.

William S. Stewart, chairman of the campaign here, asked recipients of the seals to mail their checks as promptly as convenient to Mrs. A. M. Jordan, drive treasurer.

The Old Man And The NC

AN UN-FITTING CLOSE came to one of the best coaching records in the nation last Tuesday night when Carl Grey Snavely announced his resignation as head football coach at Carolina. For 26 years as a head tutor he had been at the top of the coaching roster. It's a shame that he had to bow out after a season that had been shackled with ill luck from September to November.

Until the 1952 season, when his denouncement began, the Old Man had a brilliant record. His teams had won 140, lost 57, and tied 14. In the years between 1946 and 1949 he had sent three teams to bowl games. The nation acclaimed him as one of the best in the game.

But in the three years from that final great season in 1949, the Old Man and the NC declined. In that span of time his teams won but seven games—what would be considered good for one Snavely season. The wolves started howling after the 1950 season. This season it became unbearable. The Old Man stepped down. His reasons weren't announced, but there's no doubt the glum alums had something to do with it. Coaching has been Snavely's living for 26 years. A man doesn't treat his livelihood that lightly.

King Carl

BUT WHAT EVER his reason for stepping out, and whether you like his leaving or not, the fact remains that he's gone and the job of hiring a new coach is already moving. Snavely was criticised greatly during the past three seasons—for his coaching, handling of the boys, running of the team during a game, etc. Perhaps some complaints were justified. But one thing that can not be taken away from the Old Man, regardless of his losing streak, was his fairness on and off the field. He played his cards straight. When one of his boys needed help Snavely could always be counted on to lend a helping hand.

Snavely's story is almost one of riches-to-rags. In the Justice-Weiner days he was King Carl, but try to remember how many times he's been called that in the past three years. Back in the late forties he had men, tempered by war service, playing for him. When the last of the vets left he was confronted with the problem of going back to building boys, fresh out of high school, into college stars. Somewhere in that transition period something missed.

Less We Forget

HE'S BEEN TRYING to build those boys into stars during the past three years but the Carolina teams haven't materialized. Whether it was his fault, the players' fault, or the assistant coaches' fault will have to be decided in the next season—under a new head coach.

Snavely has been offered a position with the Department of Athletics and Physical Education, but whether he stays is still to be answered. His love for coaching may send him to another school. Then again, because of his age, he may stay here. The answer rests with Snavely himself.

Nothing is more disheartening than seeing a champion going down. Snavely contributed great records to Carolina in his 10-year reign as coach. Whether you are sorry to see him go or are in the group that feels it was time for a change, you must give the Old Man his credit. His contribution to Carolina has been a great one. Our sometimes too-short memories shouldn't forget that.

Tar Heels Play Richmond Here Tonight

Seek Third SC Victory Of Season

Unsatisfied with two Conference wins this week, Carolina's basketball team will be out to make it three at Woollen Gym tonight when it faces Richmond University.

The shooting begins at 8 o'clock.

The Tar Heels are not taking Richmond for granted. The Spiders reportedly looked surprisingly strong in a preseason scrimmage with Duke at Durham and are listed on some charts as a loop dark horse.

Coach Frank McGuire will probably start the same five that opened Wednesday night's win over Washington and Lee. That would place Jack Wallace and Jerry Vayda at the forwards, Bud Maddie at center and Vince Grimaldi and Bob Phillips at the guards.

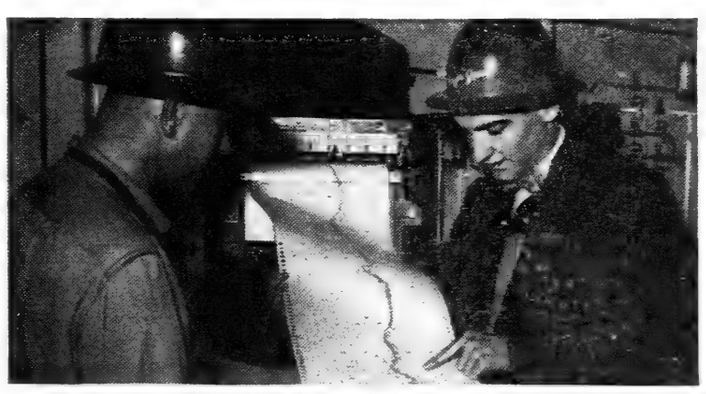
Paul Likins, reserve center, appears to be fully recovered from an illness that kept him out of the opening game with The Citadel. Against Washington and Lee, Likins showed good form in two limited appearances. He should be ready for full service tonight.

The Junior Varsity game will open at 6 oclock.

Swimming Team Meets VMI Today

The North Carolina swimming day at Lexington. Virginia against team opens its road season to-Virginia Military Institute in a Southern Conference dual meet.

Carolina, the Conference champions, wil start with a small but veteran team. Carolina has compiled a 12-0 record in the past two meets, and will be looking for their third straight win.



Coach Ralph Casey will direct the Tar Heels, taking over the job from Dick Jamerson who resigned last summer. Casey has served as Tar Heel coach on two previous occasions and formerly was coach at V.M.I.

The professor of Egypt's Al-Azhar, oldest existing Moslem university, came out against co-eds. Coeducation, they said is just plain promiscuity, "unsuitable to the Islamic way of life." This situation," they contended, "has turned certain male students from true scientific activity."

THE DU PONT DIGEST

Plant and Equipment Design and the Engineer

At Du Pont, men with many types of training translate laboratory developments into full-scale production

Roger Jones, B.S. in Chem., Haverford College '52 (right), and operator, check temperature control in the conversion of furfural to furan.

Among the most interesting fields for engineers at Du Pont is the design of plants and equipment.

It takes ingenuity of a high order to translate a small-scale laboratory operation into all-out commerical production. Design engineers cannot always use purchasable equipment to scale up research findings, even with considerable adaption. About half of the time at Du Pont, entirely new equipment must be designed because of the novelty of the process developed by research.

For example, a number of unusual problems were involved in designing the equipment and plant for a process in which hexamethylenediamine, one of the intermediates for nylon, is made from furfural, derived from such agricultural by-products as corncobs and hulls of cottonseed, oats and rice.

In this conversion, these steps are involved:

C_4H_3OCHO (furfural) —Heat, catalyst→ C_4H_4O (furan)

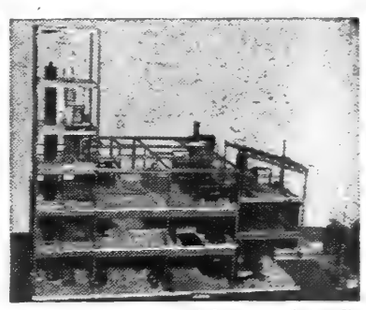
$2H_2$ → C_4H_8O (tetrahydrofuran)

$2HCl$ → $Cl(CH_2)_4Cl$ (dichlorobutane)

$2NaCN$ → $NC(CH_2)_4CN$ (adiponitrile)

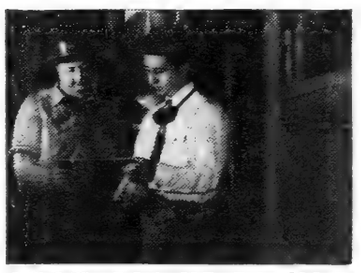
$4H_2$ → $H_2N(CH_2)_6NH_2$ (hexamethylenediamine)

Here are some of the special problems that were encountered:



1. Design of equipment with close temperature control for converting furfural to furan. The design finally settled on employs a large number of tubes containing a catalyst, with a coolant circulated around them. Special sequence timers were devised for operation of the valves controlling production and regeneration cycles.

2. Design of high-pressure agitated autoclaves for the hydrogenation of furan to tetrahydrofuran.



3. Selection of corrosion-resistant equipment for the hydrochlorination of tetrahydrofuran to dichlorobutane at high temperatures.

4. Design of a unique five-step distillation train to obtain high-grade adiponitrile without trace impurities.

Although most of these problems involve a great deal of chemical engineering, also needed on the designing team were mechanical, electrical, civil, metallurgical and industrial engineers. Thus design work at Du Pont is open to men with many types of training, and there is abundant opportunity for all.

Scale model of a part of the plant where adiponitrile is made from furfural.

E. W. Griffin, B.S. in M.E., Duke; M.S. in Ind. Mgt., Georgia Tech '52 (right), instructs operator in handling of vapor-tight horizontal vacuum filter used in separating adiponitrile from sodium chloride.

NEW BOOK. Send for "Chemical Engineers at Du Pont," just off the press. Explains opportunities in research, development, production, sales, administration and management. Address: 2521 Nemours Bldg., Wilmington, Del.

CONFERENCE IN THE CLOUDS

Among the undergraduates on any college campus, you'll find the talk reaching up to the clouds. And once in a while—in a classroom, around a study table, or even in a bull session—a really big idea is born.

Big ideas come, too, from the men and women in laboratories, business offices, shops. But often these professionals are exploring a path first glimpsed in college.

How do we know? Because of the many college people who have come into the Bell System, where big ideas and a lot of dreams have taken their place in progress. The human voice, carried along a wire, first across a town, then a state, a nation, and now the world. Music and pictures and things happening delivered into cities and hamlets all across the land by radio and television networks.

We're always looking for the men and women who get big ideas—whether they're about people, or machines, or ways of doing things. Your Placement Officer can give you details about opportunities for employment in the Bell System.

Men's, Coeds' Glee Clubs List Concert Works

Christmas Concert Scheduled Tuesday By Choral Groups

By Dick Wallace

The Men's Glee Club and Women's Glee Club, under the direction of Joel Carter, will present their annual Christmas concert at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday in Hill Hall.

A program ranging from traditional carols to Christmas folk of various lands will be presented by the clubs. As a prelude and a postlude to the concert a trombone quartet directed by Joe Wood will play a selection of chorales.

The program will open with the combined glee clubs singing "Gloria" (in Latin) by Dufay, "Noel de Frere Jacques" (in French) by Pendleton, and the Fred Waring arrangement of "Susanni."

The Men's Glee Club will remain on stage after this first group to present four selections by the classic composers, Ruffo, Bach, Beethoven and Wagner. The Women's Glee Club will follow with a group of Christmas folk songs from Czechoslovakia, Germany, Brazil, Scotland and England. After this there will be a short intermission.

Right after intermission the a Ceremony of Carols. This work, by the contemporary English composer, Benjamin Britten, was done by the club in 1950 and is being presented again this year in response to many requests. It is sung in middle English.

The next group will be a candlelight carol service. Featured will be "Cantique de Noel," a tenor solo by William Whitesides, "Lo How A Rose 'Ere Blooming," sung by the Women's sextet, and "The Virgin's Slumber Song," done by the men's octet.

The glee clubs will leave the auditorium singing "Adeste Fideles' and other familiar carols.

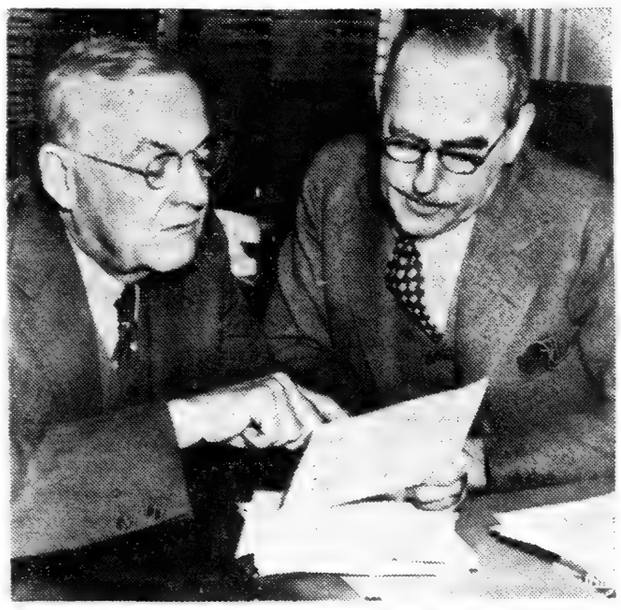
Crowd Of 100 Attend Talk

By Charlie Schley

About 100 people crowded into Williams-Wolfe Lounge Friday afternoon to hear Dr. Arthur Murphy speak on "The Rational Resolution of Moral Conflict."

A moral conflict, the Cornell University philosopher said, is a conflict between black and white where black and white are not positively defined to the satisfaction of both parties concerned. A moral conflict then is a battle of criteria, but since criteria are basic, Dr. Murphy asked, "Is there a reasonable procedure to produce compatibility?"

This question he theoretically answered in two steps: First, that if there is to be a resolution, there must first be a conflict. That granted, the oppositional forces must then be willing to try to get together, meaning that each must be willing to recognize as valid any reason justifying the other's stand as if that same reason were in his own favor. Second, that this objectivity must be extended to the point where each party feels that he is part of a community to whom he is responsible for the justification of his moral stand, and that this justification must be rational.



500th Meeting

The 500th meeting of the Elisha Mitchell Society, long-established scientific organization at the University will be celebrated Tuesday night.

Dean Phillips Gives Advice To Educators

Special To THE DAILY TAR HEEL

HIGH POINT, Dec. 5—School superintendents were advised this week a University of North Carolina educator to take a "positive stand" on educational matters.

Dean Guy B. Phillips of the UNC School of Education spoke to the Winter meeting of the Division of Superintendents of the North Carolina Education Associatcion. He said superintendents should give more attention to their "key position" of community leadership and place less stress upon the negative, defensive aspect of their role in school affairs.

"The present trend of severe cicticisms directed against the schools is best defended by a strong offense," the educator told his fellow workers. He said many superintendents "spend too much of their time defending their

Judea Sky Recreation Is Problem

By R. H. Emmons

Science, history, art and music are combined to a remarkable degree to create new appreciation of the significance of the first Christmas in the Morehead Planetarium's Christmas presentation, "Star of Bethlehem," now being shown.

Evening performances are at 8:30 and matinees at 3 and 4 Saturdays and 2, 3, 4, Sundays. Six special presentations each week, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, at 10:30 a.m. and 2 p.m.

In order to reproduce the sky as it was seen over Judea at the time of Jesus' birth, Planetarium technicians have had to take into consideration a gradual movement of the earth's axis, called precession, which completes a cycle of celestial changes every 25,800 years.

As the earth spins daily on its axis, this axis drifts in slope relative to the stars. In a single human lifetime this has an almost negligible effect upon the appearance of the heavens, but in 20 centuries it has accumulated to produe a radical change.

Precession is due to the gravitational pull of the sun and moon on the bulge at the earth's equator. In time, various stars become the "north star" as the earth's axis tips toward them. Now it is the star Polaris. In another 3,000 years it will be Alpha Cephei; in 8,000 it will be Deneb; in 12,000 years, Vega. While the pyramids were being built in Egypt the "north star" was Alpha Draconis.

The famous constellation, the Southern Cross, now visible only to countries south of the United States, could be seen from Canada in the year 3,000 B.C. because of precession.

The seasons once began as the sun appeared to enter the constellations of Aries Cancer, Libra, and Capricornus. Now they begin while the sun is seen against the background constellations of Pisces, Gemini, Virgo, and Sagittarius.

A particular star will rise and set at different times on the same date, from one century to the next, as the result of precession. If our calendars were based on the stars instead of the sun, and precession were ignored, in time the coldest month would be July, instead of January.

Although the dynamics and consequences of precession are quite complicated, the necessary projector adjustments in order to duplicate the sky at the time of the Nativity are quickly accomplished. The precessional movement is already geared into the driving mechanism.

The Planetarium technician need only turn a few controls to order the sky for any date, past, present, or future, as seen from any place on earth.

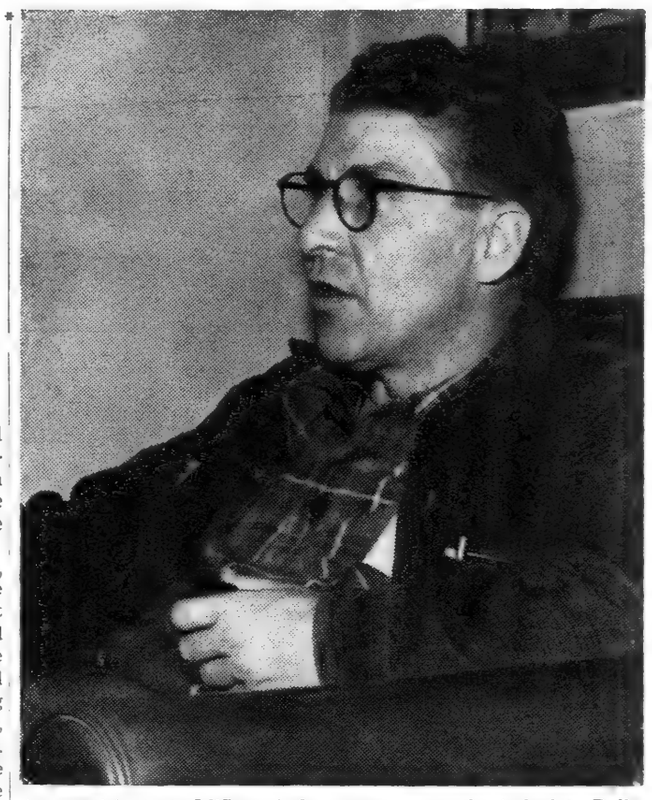
Judicial Body Meets With Presbyterians

Congregation To Get Report Of Complaints

No Action Slated On Doctrine Tiff Until Next Week

Members of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian Church meet today at 3 o'clock at the Church in a listening session with the Judicial Commission of the Orange Presbytery.

According to Church law, the agenda will be limited to the hearing of the report. But next week, another congregational meeting will be held in which the congregation can "discuss and take appropriate action regarding the report," said Acting Pastor, Rev. R. J. McMullen yesterday.



The officers of the church have been preparing motions for the congregation to consider, but such proposals will not be discussed today. They will, however, be available in mimeographed form at the Church.

Earlier in the week, the church officers and the pastor, Rev. Charles M. Jones, were asked to resign because of essential doctrinal variances with Presbyterianism. The church leaders declined to resign, but proposed to carry out election plans "already formulated," in accordance with Church law. It is felt that resignation by all the church elders and deacons would cripple the machinery of the church in carrying out necessary functions.

In the meeting today, as is customary with Presbyterian congregational gatherings, only Church members can vote or participate. However, students, townspeople, interested in the welfare of the Church are invited to attend.

The student group, meeting at 6 o'clock in the Church annex on Rosemary Street, will discuss "the Relationships Between the Presbyterian Church and Presbytery."

The Commission has decided to take no further action on the request for resignation until the Orange Presbytery has received the report of the Commission's findings.

THE REV. CHARLES M. JONES is shown as he talked to Daily Tar Heel reporters in the editor's office Thursday night. Mr. Jones was here on an overnight visit to confer with Presbyterian Church officials. He came from his work in the Tennessee mountains with the Save the Children Foundation at Kingsport.—Daily Tar Heel photo by Ruffin Woody.

In Your Church

By Tom Neal Jr.

Baptist

Is Christmas the time when you hear "White Christmas," "Rudolph, the Rednosed Reindeer," "Jolly Old Saint Nick," and other popular melodies? Yes, it is. Is Christmas the season of the year when you trim the cedar or pine, mail fancy cards to friends and send gifts to loved ones? Yes, again.

But Christmas is much more than this. It is helping the less fortunate discover the joys of the Yuletide season; it is taking a new outlook on life and doing something to achieve "Peace on earth, good will among men."

The true meaning and significance of Christmas will be brought to light when Dr. Maurice Kidder, University professor of Religion, speaks on the "Celebration of the Savior's Birth." His talk will follow the regular 6 o'clock supper. Thirty BSU members from Meredith College will direct recreation after the supper and talk; also, an equal number of boys from Camp Butner will be guests of the local BSU.

The annual Christmas party will be held at the Baptist Church one week from tonight. All are welcome.

Christian Science

"God, the Only Cause and Creator" is the topic of the Lesson-Science Church today. The Sunday service and Sunday School classes begin at 11 a.m. in New West.

Religious Society of Friends

The local Quaker organization will devote this morning's meeting to the monthly business session. The meeting will be held in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial at 11 a.m.

Episcopal

Holy communion will be administered at the Chapel of the Cross this morning at 8 and 11 a.m.

Mrs. Ethel M. Nash, marriage counsellor, will speak at the Canterbury Club meeting this evening at 6 o'clock. Her subpect is "Infatuation or Christian Love—Distinguishing Between Them." The discussion will follow the 6 o'clock supper meeting at the Parish House.

Jewish

A supper meeting for Hillel Foundation members will begin this evening at 5:45 at the Hillel House. A program will follow the supper.

Methodist

Dr. Bernard Boyd, head of the Religion Department here will be guest speaker tonight at the Wesley Foundation. A group of boys from Camp Butner will be guests at the program.

The weekly schedule for the Wesley Foundation follows: Thursday, 5:45 p.m., vespers; Friday, 7:30 p.m., fireside; Sunday, 9:45 a.m., doughnuts and coffee; 10 a.m., Sunday School, with Joel Savell; 5:30 p.m., fellowship and 6 p.m., supper and program.

Presbyterian

The choir will offer its annual Christmas Music Worship service this morning at both 9:45 and 11 o'clock. There will be no sermon, but the music will be set in the framework of the usual order of worship.

At 3 p.m. there will be a congregational meeting to hear the report of the Judicial Commission of Orange Presbytery. All persons interested in the welfare of the church have been invited to attend the meeting as observers. Voting and speaking will be limited to church members. Following the hearing of the report, a business session will be held when suggestions for action will be considered.

Sunday evening the student group will discuss the report of the commission and the local church's relationship with the Presbytery. Guests for supper and the discussion are members of the Camp Butner Youth Center.

The Sunday School class will meet as usual at the Manse for 9:30 breakfast, followed by informal Bible study.

Roman Catholic

The Newman Club is entertaining a group of orphans from Nazereth this afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock in the Rendezvous Room of Graham Memorial. Members of the club are asked to bring small toys to this party.

The Women's Guild is sponsoring a Christmas dinner Dec. 11 at 6 p.m. at the Lenoir Hall private dining room. Tickets are available after Sunday mass.

Mass is celebrated today in Gerrard Hall at 7 and 8 a.m.

SP Finale

The Student Party will hold its final meeting of the Fall Quarter tomorrow night at 8:30 in the Roland Parker Lounge in Graham Memorial. Officers will be elected.

Following, there will be a meeting of all SP legislators.

KOREAN POLICE AND PLAINCLOTHESMEN are stationed along the route to Seoul's airfield just before President-elect Eisenhower and his entourage whisk by. The Korean populace as well as police had numerous false alarms concerning Ike's visit but the former general finally showed up for a few days. He's en route home now with his Secretary of Defense, Charles E. Wilson, and Attorney-General, Herb Brownell Jr.—NEA Telephoto.

The Meeting Of Minds

While today's meeting of the Presbyterian Church is one in which the congregation will hear their report, it will bring the Judicial Commission face to face with the Church.

Out of this meeting, and others may come the kind of understanding that Christianity symbolizes.

In stating that "Reason could meet reason," and suggesting that his church could reconcile its differences with the Commission, Mr. Jones has indicated that perhaps the differences found in the report are in reality, not deviations from points of doctrine.

The letter of Rev. R. Murphy Williams, (appearing in the next column) is one assertion of Biblical belief that the local Church has accomplished the denominational aims as well as the broader Christian ones. Mr. Williams is a prominent Greensboro Presbyterian minister.

He has pointed out that "In writing to the Christians at Corinth (1 Cor.9:20-22) Paul said: 'And unto the Jews I became as a Jew, that I might gain the Jews: to them, that are under the law, as under the law, that I might gain them that are under the law: To them that are without law as without law, that I might gain them that are wihout law. To the weak I became as weak, that I might gain the weak, I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some."

We reemphasize the point made in our editorial a few days ago, and the point that Mr. Williams makes that the local church leadership has endeavored to follow the spirit of the laws.

Reviews And Previews

On Tuesday and Wednesday, the Carolina Theatre will be showing the much touted "The Snows of Kilimanjaro." Now, your reviewer is quite aware that his simply stating that it is not a good film, which it isn't, and that it is "a distortion" of the original Hemingway short story will not deter anyone from seeing it. After all it does contain a lot of African war scenes, Ava Gardener, all sorts of midnight life in gay Paree, Ava Gardner, beautiful scenery, and Ava Gardner. Because nothing that is said here will have any effect whatsoever, short shrift shall purposely be given to the film. Incidentally, Gregory Peck, Susan Hayward, Hildegarde Neff, Leo G. Carroll, and a rather attractive, young woman, whose name escapes me at the moment, are also staggering around in the African flora and fauna.

There is a movie coming to the Varsity Sunday and Monday and it is hoped that students will take this reviewer's word and see it. It is "Outcast of the Islands," the newest film of Carol Reed's, who directed "The Third Man", and "The Fallen Idol". It is the tale of a man, Peter Williams, who sacrifices all for a beautiful passionate native girl, Aissa.

Around this simple theme Joseph Conrad, the author of the book from which the movie was made, has woven all sorts of fascinating sub-plots laid in the South Seas, and Reed has brought most of them to the screen. Every character, whether villain or hero, is an intriguing, well-drawn personnage, and the conflicts between these living people are almost unbearable in their intensity. There are many unforgettable moments, such as the much publicized "marathon love scene" between Kerima, who is ten times as silent and sexy as Rita Gam, and Trevor Howard, and the frightening scene in which Robert Morley, as Almayer, the pig-headed trader, is almost barbecued by a group of revolting natives.

The entire production is superlative. An all-star British cast, headed by Howard, Ralph Richardson, Morley, Wendy Hiller, George Coulouris, and Kerima, turn in magnificient performances.

For a movie that students will not forget for a long, long time, "Outcast of the Islands" is given the highest recommendation.

Tomorrow night at 7:30 p.m. in Memorial Hall, "A Tree Grows In Brooklyn" will be shown, sponsored by Hiller Foundation and Y.M.C.A. Dr. Lee Brooks and Dr. Reuben Hill of the Sociology Department will lead the discussion that follows.

"A Tree Grows in Brooklyn", by Chapel Hill's Betty Smith, is the rare and tender story of a valient and sensitive little girl reaching hopefully for spiritual fulfillment in a wretching meager home. It is the story of the love she gathered from a father who was a cheerful ne'er-do-well and of the painful peace she made with her mother after the adored father had died.

Peggy Ann Garner, with her plain face and lank hair, is Miss Smith's Francie Nolan to the life. James Dunn plays her father, Johnny Dolan, with deep and sympathetic tenderness. In the performance by these two actors is achieved a demonstration of emotion that is eloquent. Perhaps the sequence representing the ambition of Francie to go to a better school and the innocent conspiracy with her father to arrange it is the best in the film.

But, as well as the pathetic attachment between father and daughter, the film transmits a deeply affection conception of the mother, Katie Nolan, whose life was a constant struggle against the family's poverty. As Dorothy McGuire plays her, she gains strength and clarity through the film until a beautiful and rewarding understanding of her troubled, noble nature is revealed.

Joan Blondell gives a sketchy conception of a warm character as Aunt Sissy. Ted Donaldson is enjoyable as the healthy, little tad of the brood. Lloyd Nolan ably portrays the policeman. James Gleason makes a vivid pub owner and Ferike Boros is fine as the grandmother in a generally excellent cast—typed by hand! —Herb Cohn

Letters On The Presbyterian Controversy

LETTERS
(Reprinted from Greensboro Daily News)

Editor of the Daily News:

The report submitted by the body of ten fine Christian men appointed by Orange Presbytery to investigate the condition of the Chapel Hill church, as reported in the press, was quite a shock to me; and I believe to thousands of Presbyterians in North Carolina.

I have not studied the report, but it seems to me that the action of the commission was drastic and that the suggestion that all the officers resign is enough to humiliate the personnel of the Chapel Hill church, as it would have been to any other church in the Synod.

For 40 years there have been criticisms hurled against the ministers of that church, notwithstanding the fact that many of them have been as sweet-spirited Christians as I have ever known, outstanding in character and ability.

I have not always shared all their views by any means, but that does not mean that they were not sincere and devout Christian men, who preached the everlasting gospel of the blessed God.

They have had a tremendous responsibility, as I well realize from my 40 years ministry at the door of one of our largest and greatest institutions of learning.

I feel sure that no church in North Carolina would appreciate being subjected to the scrutiny given to the Chapel Hill church by this committee of sincere Christian men.

If such were the case much might be found to criticize, both of ministers and officers, who do not always obey literally the letter of the law of procedure, but are endeavoring to obey the spirit of the law.

In thinking over this matter, there comes to my mind Barnabas, the first missionary of the Christian Church, and the Apostle Paul. It was said of Barnabas in Acts 11:25 "For he was a good man full of the Holy Ghost, and much people was added to the Lord." He was the instrument in God's hand, of saving the Apostle Paul for the church and the world, when most of the early Christians rejected him.

Their first missionary journey was made in company of a young man named John Mark, who for some reason deserted them when difficulties and hardships arose. When they started on their second missionary journey Barnabas wanted to take John Mark again, but Paul was adamant and would not consent to taking a "quitter." The contention was so bitter that they parted asunder and Barnabas took Mark, showing a tenderness, sympathy and forbearance that saved the man who became one of the pillars of church and wrote the Gospel that bears his name.

Paul realized his mistake for later, in his letter to Timothy when he was suffering in prison he called for this young man, declaring that "He is profitable for me for the ministry." II Tim. 4:11.

The point I am making is that tolerance and tenderness, forbearance and forgiveness were the wise policies as well as principles that saved the friendship and service of these three great leaders.

Who would dare say but that the Chapel Hill church through its ministry has honored and glorified Jesus Christ as the Savior of men and brought honor and blessing to our beloved church?

To remove this minister and these honored officers of this church in this unprecedented manner in my humble judgment would be a blot on Orange Presbytery and the Synod of North Carolina. "Be ye therefore wise as serpents and harmless as doves," was the instruction our Lord gave His disciples. Mat. 10:16.

Editor:

Since my concern is that of a Presbyterian theological student, I feel that the events of the past week demand that someone of my persuasion should speak forth in defense not only of Presbyterianism, but of Christianity itself. I speak not as a Presbyterian of narrow denominational tenacity (as I am a forthright Ecumenicist), but as a Presbyterian who sees his church as a part of the Holy Catholic Church and who wishes that his church remain within the Holy Catholic Church so that its role in propogating the Faith may not be lost.

Perhaps the fundamental problem in the local situation lies in a misconception on the part of Mr. Jones' supporters of what constitutes Christianity. Christianity, in the words of Dean Inge, is not a religion, it is religion. That is to say that Christianity involves both intellectual and ethical aspects, which are complementary and hence inseparable.

Although the ethical system of Christianity may be preached and practised by any number of people, they are not Christians unless they are committed intellectually to the basic propositions of Christian theism; and conversely, one is not a Christian simply because he gives intellectual assent to certain propositions without practising the ethics for which those propositions are the foundation. Christianity, then, ultimately stands or falls upon the validity of the basic propositions of Christian theism. One of the foremost of the propositions is the divinity of Jesus Christ. It is to this proposition, among others, that Mr. Jones does not subscribe. Therefore, when you speak of Mr. Jones as a Christian, I infer that you are unaware either of the fact that Christianity involves the acceptance of certain doctrines or of the fact that Mr. Jones does not accept one of the most fundamental of these.

That the Presbyterian Church, in its Sunday morning services at least, has been a significant center of religious activity is not to be denied. Nevertheless, I wonder if its disregard for church policy and Christian tenets, its inordinate emphasis upon only certain of the more debatable ethical aspects of Christianity, and its effort to make its conception of Christianity acceptable to many who cannot be called Christians have not actually succeeded in encouraging contempt for the Presbyterian Church in the United States (from which the local church derives considerable financial support), in promoting cynicism toward Christian theology (without which our great religion is not true Christianity), in suggesting that the only great commandment is "To love thy neighbor as thyself," and in weakening substantially the intellectual and spiritual elements seem that these are not important. These observations, I believe, are supported in part by consideration of the number of believing and practising Christians whose spiritual needs have not been met by the Chapel Hill Presbyterian Church. They are further supported by the consideration of the many members of the local church who cannot really be called Christians. This is not in any way to say, of course, that the mission of the church has been a complete failure. It is merely to point out that the church can be a significant center of religious activity only when it is measured by a few limited criteria, and when other and more important criteria, as I see, are neglected.

When the Commission of Orange Presbytery requested the resignation of Mr. Jones and the officers of the Chapel Hill church, it was not, as you im-

Carolina Cagers Cage Richmond For 3rd, 80-64

Girmaldi's 21 Points Tops Scoring

By Biff Roberts

A second half Carolina scoring deluge completely dis-entangled the defensive web of Richmond's Spiders last night in Woollen Gym and the Tar Heels, sparked by Vince Grimaldi and Jerry Vayda trailed him by a single tally.

The Tar Heels started slowly, heading the Spiders by only 12-11 at the end of the first quarter, but by the time the second half had gotten well under way they were streaking for the 16-point victory.

Reserve Ernie Schwarz had one of his best nights and contributed greatly to the second-half rampage. He hit five field goals and one free throw, all in the second half, for 11 points.

Carolina's shooting average was its best of the still-young season. The Tar Heels hit on 29 of 82 shots for a 34.6 percentage while Richmond could connect on only 19 of 71 for a 26.8 try.

It seemed for awhile that the Richmond zone defense, which prohibited effective Carolina rebounding, would hold the Tar Heels in their traces, but after the rest period the Woollen boys did every thing but parlor tricks to smash the Spiders.

The Richmond team, composed of one senior, two sophomores, and 13 freshmen, most of whom have played service basketball, appeared well-balanced, but couldn't cape with the second-half scoring wave.

Jim Gahagan, the lone senior, was the Spiders' high man with 15 points, followed closely by Gilbert Moran with 14 and Hugh O'Connell with 12.

The Tar Heels hit for more than 20 points in every period except the first. They garnered 21 in the second period for a 33-34 half-time lead. Their greatest edge came in the fourth period when they had the Spiders topped 73-52.

Richmond rallied then, however, to pull the score to 78-62 before Schwarz put in the eighteth poin on an easy layup with just a few seconds remaining in the game.

Swimmers Open Season With 47-37 Win Over V.M.I. In Conference Meet

Special To The Daily Tar Heel

LEXINGTON, Va., Dec. 6 — The North Carolina swimming team successfully opened its 1952 season here today by easily defeating V.M.I., 47-37 in a Southern Conference meet.

Caroliha was never pushed during the meet, but the Keydets did much better than they were expected.

Carolina co - captains Donnie Evans and Stan Tinkham figured prominently in the North Carolina win, as did diver Joe Kelso and breastroker Barry Wall. Jack Edwards, Larry Shannon, and Buddy Heins were also outstanding for the Blue Dolphins.

The day's best race came in the 100 - yard freestyle when VMI's Jack Edwards broke the pool record by two tenths of a second to edge Evans. His time was 53.7 and gave the Keydets one of the two firsts they made all day.

Al Konine, V.M.I. coach, said "Carolina was too good for us. They didn't have any trouble winning, but we gave them a much better fight than I expected."

Alpha Sigma chapter of Chi Psi fraternity held initiation services for seven boys last night.

New initiates are Clifford McKinley Ray, Mebane; James Oliver Lewis, Fayetteville; Douglas Young, Burlington; Richard Hallden, Salt Lake City, Utah; George McKinley, Marshall; Theodore Charles Steel Jr., Sumter, S. C.; and Glass Bowling Carrier, Jr., Charlotte.

Opportunities in Optometry

Optometry is a profession offering special advantages to ambitious young men and women. Its scope is constantly expanding. Eighty per cent of the Nation's millions depend upon the Doctor of Optometry and his professional skill in conserving vision. There is a shortage of optometrists in many States.

The Doctor of Optometry possesses the dignity of being a professional man. He renders an essential service to the health and well-being of his community. Substantial financial rewards are obtainable almost from the beginning of his practice.

U. S. Department of Defense and Selective Service grant optometry students the same consideration accorded medical students.

The Doctor of Optometry degree can be earned in three college years by a student having sixty or more semester hours of Liberal Arts credits. Such students will be admitted at mid-year by Chicago College of Optometry.

Chicago College of Optometry is centrally located in the heart of the world's greatest center for teaching in the healing arts. It is nationally accredited and is splendidly equipped Clinical facilities are unsurpassed.

Practically everybody who is anybody gave their pin to somebody else this week.

Wanna' hear a few? Jackie Krell, KD of Columbia, S. C. and Ed Williams, Chi Phi from Seven Springs, Md.; also Wanda Philpott, Beckley, W. Va. Chi O and Ken Barton, Chi Psi, Elizabeth City, N. J.

Randy Watson, Raleigh, gave his KA pin to Pi Phi Dee Breslow, Rahway, N. J.

Wearing a West Pointer's pin is Tri Delt Sara Bostick, Gainesville, Ga.

Sigma Chi Tom Coghill, Richmond, is on the list too. Gave his pin to Duke coed Martha Evans, Franklin.

How 'bout a few parties thrown for a switch? Like the one the Deke's gave the Tri Delts Tuesday at the Country Club . . . dinner, cocktails, dancing.

Or the Beta's beer-for-all party last nite for brothers and dates.

Quite a few fraternities are entertaining orphans and really showing the Christmas spirit. More power to you! Chi O's will bring presents and Phi Gams will serve dinner.

Kappa Sigs will entertain orphans with the Pi Phi's Thursday . . . Santa Claus, present and all.

Deke's and dates will entertain orphans from a Raleigh orphanage Tuesday night.

Is Billy Barnes pinned or isn't Billy Barnes pinned? Anyway, if he is, it's to Dotty Orr, Alexandria, Va. He's a Deke from Wilson.

Now some engagements . . . Julia Steed, ADPi from Richlands will marry Hubert Rodgers, former Kappa Psi here and from Fair Bluff.

Patsy Jones, Pi Phi from Greenville, S. C. is wearing a beautiful diamond given to her by Pika grad Lee Cain, Winston-Salem.

Another coed wearing a new diamond is Midge Ward, Chi O from Washington, D. C., who will marry Fred Munns, also of Washington.

Shep Rustin, Gastonia Chi O, will marry Charlie Smith from Gastonia.

Not through with the pinnings yet . . . Pi Kappa Phi Jim McKallum, Haddon Heights, N. J., is now without his pin. Wearing it is Arlene Morgan, Morganton.

A record week at the Chi Phi house. Two more pinnings. Howard Scotland, Towson, Md. pinned Flora Stewart, Uniersity of Vt. student. Bob Averett, Fayetteville, gave his pin to Mildred Parrish of Raleigh.

Sigma Chi's will entertain orphans from Wright Episcopal Children's home, Durham. Tuesday night.

Those Sigma Nu's are still entertaining Duke coeds . . . ADPi's this time . . . Thursday night.

Tri Delts are doing up their weekend in fine style. They had un huge party and dinner Friday night at the Ranch House.

Pledge parties given this week were the KD's and the Pi Phi's. KD's had theirs Thursday with a Kiddie Christmas theme and Pi Phi's had theirs Wednesday in Christmas style too.

ADPi's and dates partied at the Saddle club in Durham Friday night. For their Christmas party, pledges will entertain actives at Marilyn Habel's house Wednesday.

AKPsi brothers who will graduate this quarter were entertained last night . . . initation services will be held today.

Phi Delts and their dates had dinner and a party Friday night at the Holt Valley country club.

Kappa Sigs will have their annual chapter Christmas party with beer (what, no champagne?) Wednesday night at the house.

Beta Buck Byerly, Winston-Salem is another pinned one . . . the lucky gal is Aileen Pless of Newborn.

Kappa Psi pharmaceutical fraternity had its province convention here this weekend at the Institute of Pharmacy Building . . . election of officers was held at the Carolina Inn.

Only thing we could find out from the St. A's was that they've taken off on another of those fabulous hunting trips.

Word has it that the Semper Fidelis Society met Friday night at Watts Grill for beer.

Pi Phi's will have their annual Christmas party Wednesday night at the house. After this they'll Christmas Carol 'round the campus.

All right all right all right, that's it. Enjoy yourselves, it's later than you think.

ply, moved by narrow denominational considerations. It was rather concerned with preserving the spiritual life of the church. It must have felt that what is real Christianity (regardless of how we in Chapel Hill may concieve of Christianity) must be restored to the church here, and that this restoration can occur only as those who represent non-Christian positions are relieved of their offices, to be replaced by those who are Christians. In all fairness I should state that I am aware that some of the present officers meet this qualification. I should hope that they might be re-elected. But until they are matched by other officers of the same persuasion, the Chapel Hill Presbyterian Church may not expect to be a truly "rich center of spiritual life."

OK For Winners To Take Uprights

DURHAM, Dec 5 — Taking the goal posts is all part of taking the football game, Recorder's Judge A. R. Wilson ruled yesterday.

The judge said Winston-Salem, as victor in a game with Durham High School, was entitled to the goal posts at Durham Athletic Park. He made his ruling when he refused to prosecute the case of a Winston and Durham youth charged with affray.

"In a football championship game like that one . . . I suppose it is perfectly natural for the victors to want the goal posts and feel they are entitled to them," Judge Wilson said.

Golden Fleece Picks Two In Morning Rites

Robert Thomason, William Pregnall Tapped By Group

The Order of the Golden Fleece, oldest and highest men's honorary organization on campus, early this morning tapped William Stuart Pregnall, Charlotte, and Robert Hume Thomason, Flemington, N. J.

The organization, which has many distinguished alumni among its members, holds public tapping ceremonies at the end of spring quarter. Since Pregnall and Thomason are seniors graduating at the end of this quarter a special tapping was held.

The Fleece released the following citations:

"William Stuart Pregnall: In student government and in the religious activities of the Episcopal Student Congregation a leader of remarkable devotion, intelligent constancy of purpose and sensible opposition.

"Robert Hume Thomason: In Carolina Political Union, the Y.M.C.A., the Baptist Student Union, in many organizations and with many individuals, both students and faculty, conscientiously, unselfishly, and untiringly laboring for a greater understanding between men and greater kindness among them."

Poindexter Is Successor As Thorpe Exits

Head Cheerleader Bo Thorpe dropped out of school last week and will go to Fork Union Military Academy tomorrow to try out for an athletic scholarship.

Thorne, who transferred to Carolina last January from East Carolina College, was named head cheerleader in elections last spring. Johnny Poindexter was chosen yesterday to fill out Thorpe's term.

"I hope we have a winning team next year," Thorpe said yesterday, "and I hope the students get back the spirit they had in bygone days."

Thorpe said he would like to thank students for their cooperation and added, "Even in losing, the Carolina student cheer was louder and better than any other in the big four."

IBM Officials Will Discuss Sales Career

T. E. Clemmons, southeastern manager of the International Business Machines Corporation, will address students on "Careers In Selling" tonight at 7:30 in Gerrard Hall.

The IBM executive's appearance is co-sponsored by the University Placement Center and the Alpha Tau Chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi, national professional fraternity in business administration, of which he is an alumnus.

A dinner honoring Clemmons will be given before the program at the Carolina Inn. Faculty and student members invited to the dinner are Dean T. H. Carroll, Prof. A. M. Whitehill, Prof. W. A. Terrill, Dean James Parrish, and the Executive Committee of the local chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi.

Staff Stuff

The Daily Tar Heel will have a staff picture made Thursday afternoon at 4:30 in the newsroom.

All members are requested to be present. A picture taken earlier in the year didn't turn out.

Lingering Smack Is Deadly Germ Deal

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 8 — The lingering kiss is more dangerous than the two-second smack according to a Baltimore human lips expert.

"The regulation Hollywood 10-second kiss transferred about twice as many germs as a short, two-second affair," Bacteriologist Arthur H. Bryan states.

Bryan, who has just completed a series of kissing tests on human lips, said his findings also showed that almost all the germs that are transferred by a kiss are the type that do not cause illness.

He lauded the male volunteers who puckered up against plates of nutrient agar in the of the volunteers, however, said best interest of science. Most they "would rather kiss a blonde instead."

In counting the germs that were kissed onto the agar plates, Bryan found that the number of colonies of bacteria from a single kiss ranged from almost none to more than 250. Ninety-five per cent of these germs were found to be non-virulent.

Fresh lipstick lowered the germ count on a woman's lips, and recent smoking had the same effect. Dry lips tended to give a much purer kiss than wet ones.

Bryan was unable to draw any conclusions on the effect of alcoholic beverages on kissing. It was found that beer apparently raised the number of bacteria, while hard liquor lowered it.

NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON — Administration officials were trying yesterday to salvage the tottering stabilization program in the face of new strike threats and mounting pressure for decontrol of wages and prices. Economic Stabilizer Roger L. Putnam declared through a spokesman that he is determined to keep wage controls functioning despite the walkout of the seven industry members of the board in protest over Pres. Truman's decision granting coal miners a $1.90 daily pay increase.

WASHINGTON — Diplomats believed yesterday a new U. S. strategy for fighting Communism throughout Asia is taking shape in President-elect Eisenhower's shipboard conferences. Although few solid facts have been available on the meeting, diplomats said it seems evident Eisenhower is beginning to shape the basic policies he will follow in Korea and the entire Far East.

WASHINGTON—Plans appear to be in progress for a test firing, possibly in the spring, of a genuine atomic artillery shell. Pentagon reports indicate that test preparations are already under way in Nevada. Army Secretary Frank F. Pace Jr. told reporters at Aberdeen that a new gun, known as "Big Girl" among Army men, had belched a shell specially designed to carry an atomic warhead.

Alcohol Topic Of Hungarian Doctor Today

Alcoholism will be the topic of a movie and talk given at 4 o'clock this afternoon in the basement of the Library by Dr. Lorant Forizs of the Butner State Hospital.

Dr. Forizs, a native of Budapest, Hungary, was recently appointed clinical director of the hospital where he has been working primarily on alcoholism. He received all his medical training in Hungary, graduating from the medical faculty of the University of Sveped in 1936. He received his residency training in the department of neuropsychiatry at the University of Budapest.

In 1944 Dr. Forizs fled from the Russian occupation and became a displaced person in Germany. Here he worked in a refugee hospital until February, 1949 when he secured a position on the staff working with psychiatry, in the 98th General Hospital of the U. S. Army. He came to this country in 1949 and has been with the state hospital at Camp Butner since then.

He is speaking this afternoon under the auspices of the Y Hospital Service Committee.

Scholarship Tally Due Today

Every Grant Offered Here To Be Listed

Chancellor House To Get Committee Report On Money

By Rolfe Neill

Chancellor Robert B. House is scheduled to get a fat volume of information plunked on his desk today telling about every University scholarship offered.

The report is being compiled by the University Scholarship Committee and should be completed some time today, an official said. The report will list the name and amount of every academic and athletic scholarship available through the University. It will also compile background on each of the grants.

The subsidization granted Carolina athletes outside of their scholarships is not being included in the report as it is not considered as scholarship aid proper.

The UNC report comes close after one made by State College last week. In making his report, State Chancellor J. W. Harrelson called on each of the other Big Four schools to make public the amount of money going into scholarships. The Big Four is comprised of State, NC, Duke and Wake Forest.

Both Carolina and State were ordered by the Board of Trustees last spring to make a comprehensive survey of their scholarships.

While Chancellor Harrelson said it was his "personal feeling" that State College scholarships now show a disproportionate favor towards athletes, he added that "everything we have done is allowed under Southern Conference rules."

"What we have done is put it out in the open where folks can look at it instead of keeping it behind our back," he said.

State reported it had scholarships and grants-in-aid amounting to $93,748. The money is obtained from student book store profits and the Wolfpack club on a 50-50 basis.

Non - athletic scholarships at State, according to its report, total $16,250. This does not include 43 scholarships offered by foundations and private groups. The remaining $77,498 goes for athletic scholarships.

Seniors Get Alumni Offer

Seniors who expect to graduate at the end of the Fall Quarter will receive in the Wednesday mail an invitation to join the Alumni Association, Dan Perry, president of the senior class said yesterday.

"We are requesting that each person receiving an invitation to please give it special consideration," Perry said. "We hope to enlist 100 per cent of these graduates as members of the association."

Unique Book Barter Store Will Open Here On Monday

By Louis Kraar

Students can now put their books on the trading block and ask their own prices for the first time in the history of the school.

Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, and student government are responsible for the innovation which will swing into operation Monday in Graham Memorial's old kitchen.

The book trading post will operate like this: Students who want to sell their old text books bring them to the swap shop. They pay a fee of 10 cents and indicate what price sold from the shelves, the stu- they want. When the book is dent is notified and he picks up his money.

John McAllister, APO member, monitoring the project, said, "This swap shop will be operated purely for the convenience of students and faculty. The small fee charged is to cover handling and any profits will be turned over to worthy student organizations."

Over 25 colleges and univer- have similar trading posts op- sities throughout the country erated by their APO chapters. Georgia Tech, University of South Carolina, Brooklyn University, University of New souri are among the schools York and University of Mis- using the system.

Operations, which begin next week, will continue through the first 10 days of next quarter. McAllister said exact hours of the post would be announced as soon as details are arranged.

President Ham Horton, in endorsing the book trading post project, pointed out the small prices that the Book Exchange is able to offer and said, "We think the answer to the problem has been found in the APO project. He complimented Mr. Ritchie, manager of the Book Exchange for giving students a "well run and service-minded book store as possible."

"But," Horton added, "The individual student urgently needs to be able to sell his used texts at more than one half their original cost."

Officers May Stay, Pastor Has To Quit

A Judicial Commission of the Orange Presbytery repeated its demand here Sunday that the Rev. Charles M. Jones resign, but apparently withdrew its request that the church's elders and deacons step aside.

At the same time, the church officers expressed their confidence in Mr. Jones and asked that the church congregation pass a resolution expressing its confidence in the pastor. They also asked the commission to withdraw its recommendations concerning him.

The demand that Mr. Jones resign came in the paragraph of the commission's report that read:

"We have suggested to you that the restoring of confidence in the work being done here in this church is a matter of great importance, and according to our judgment it cannot be restored apart from a change in the pastoral leadership. We have suggested that you take action in keeping with that judgment."

After originally asking that the church officers resign, the commission indicated that it was receptive to a counter proposal by the church officers.

The proposal is that the church carry out "its plans already formulated to elect new officers in accordance with the rotary system" of the church.

Under this system, several elders and deacons would retire and new ones would be appointed.

Several mimeographed documents, including a telegram from Dr. Frank Graham, and three proposals by church officers and members were handed out to the members as they left the meeting Sunday.

If the congregation adopts a counterproposal to the officers' mass resignations as earlier requested by the Commission, Dr. Graham and 11 other officers will be retired at the end of their present six-year terms next March.

AAUP Elects Godfrey To Replace Spearman

James L. Godfrey was elected president of the University chapter of the American Association of University Professors at a meeting last week in Morehead Planetarium.

Godfrey, professor of English history, succeeds Walter Spearman of the School of Journalism.

Other new officers are Alexander Heard of the Political Science Department, vice-president; Robert Schenkkan of the Communications Center, secretary; S. Young Tyree Jr., of the Chemistry Department, treasurer, and W. L. Wiley of the Romance Language Department, member of the executive committee for a three-year term.

Retiring officers include Dorothy McCuskey of the School of Education, vice-president; C. O. Cathey of the History Department, secretary; and Emil Chanlett of the School of Public Health, treasurer.

Reports were made by Rupert Vance, Committee on Academic Freedom; John Couch, Promotion Policies; Claiborne Jones, Salary Policies; D. P. Costello, Scholarly Incentives; Fred Cleaveland, University Administration; William Cummings, Retirement Policies, and N. J. Demerath, Faculty Health Service.

Play Casts Are Named For One-Acts

Casts for three original one-act plays now in rehearsal were announced yesterday by their directors. They follow:

For "Uncross Those Stars," a comedy by Emily Crow Selden of Chapel Hill, Anne Edwards of New Bern will play Viola Hart; John Bonitz Jr. of Greensboro, Peter Hart; Nancy Green of Chapel Hill, Rosalind Hart; Carl Williams of Charlotte, Hershey Childress, and Philip Kennedy, also of Charlotte, Sandy Hart. James T. Pritchett of Lenoir will direct.

Sydney Litwack's problem play "The Silver Birch" is directed by William Bowser, with George Belk, Williamsburg, Va. as Papa; Betty Johnson, Staunton, Va., as Mama; Dan Reid, Raleigh, as Paul; Les Casey, Chapel Hill, as Marguerite; Dee Casey, Chapel Hill, as Joceline; and William Henderson Jr., Chapel Hill, as Louis.

George Boozer, Lexington, S. C., directs Tommy Rezzuto's folk comedy, "Buck," with Ig Heniford, Loris, S. C., as Buck; Catherine McDonald, Chapel Hill, as Emmy, and Ben Etheridge, Bailey, as Mort Higgins.

The plays, under the general supervision of Foster Fitz-Simons, assistant director of the Carolina Playmakers, will be presented Thursday and Friday at 7:30 p.m. There will be no admission charge.

Picture Orders

Today is the last day to pick up finished orders on Yack proofs.

Any orders not picked up by 8 o'clock tonight will be sent to one's home address. COD. Orders may be picked up in the Rendezvous Room of Graham Memorial between 1 and 5 p.m. and 6 and 8 p.m.

Capable Hands At A Reduced Rate

Clinical Operators Are Really Disguised Dentistry Students

By Sally Schindel

Time for the annual trip to the dentist? Short on money?

Then your answer lies in the clinical service at the new dental school. For a reduced rate, any individual—faculty, student or otherwise—can be treated by clinical operators who are really dental students in disguise.

But don't get the idea that these student operators are mere novices; your teeth are in capable hands. According to Dr. John B. Brauer, dean of the school, each student has had at least three years of predental work, two years of preclinical work and some boast a Master's Degree.

In addition to the experience backing up the operators are the faculty advisers who may or may not perform the actual operation. Most of the time, Dean Brauer explained, the students do the work themselves with supervision only from the older men. "However, each step is checked very thoroughly," he stressed.

As yet there are only 34 student operators out of the total enrollment of 118, but the dean expects the number to increase next year to about 74 and in two years to over 100.

Although this clinical service didn't open until Sept. 29, the dean is proud of the 600 pa-

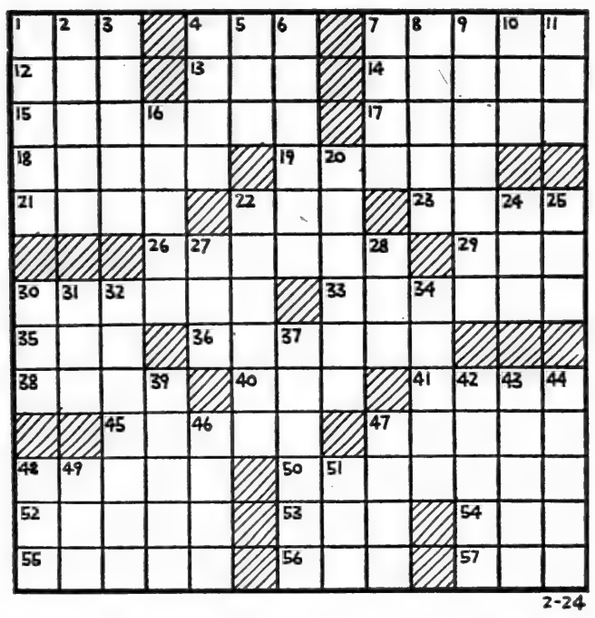
Inspection Parties In Dorms

They come in at all times of the day. Some carry nothing but a sheet of paper and a pencil. They scrutinize the walls, the closets, the bureau drawers, the beds, everything.

They are an army of dorm managers, health inspectors, administration officials. Their purpose? To see that people abide by the rules. We are pleased that the University is making sure that the dormitories are kept in good physical condition.

We are concerned, however, that an organized array of men are continually walking through the men's dormitories. This is legal. Yet the privacy of over 2500 men is being disturbed.

We suggest that this team of inspectors post bulletins in a conspicuous place in each dormitory, with such notice giving the time the squad will be around.



As for the cooking, coffee drinking, and after dinner snacks in dorms, we suggest that dorm men consider the cockroach plagues before their stomachs. Some dorms are already overrun by the hungry creatures. And once they start, even in a new dorm, they're hard to stop.

X-Word And Pearson

Readers have been missing Drew Pearson's column, the Herblock cartoon, and even the crossword puzzle occasionally. We are glad to hear that people are reading our outside feature material.

The volume of student copy turned into the editor's office is gratifying, and we think we ought to run student material before we use our syndicated features. We will try to run both as much as space allows.

To those students who have been contributing to our columns, thanks. Keep them coming.

Tennis Anyone?

Some time ago an irritated undergraduate, enmeshed in the wicked, grinding wheels of physical education, clearly expressed his opinion of the physical education department. His contention was that boxing, tumbling, wrestling and swimming are useless and that if students are to be compelled to take six quarters of physical education, they should be allowed to choose something that is more useful to them and that they like better.

Three days later came a direct reply from the physical education department smugly stating that if the only effect the present physical education system had on students was to make them take a shower twice a week, the whole system was completely justified. Accompanying this there appeared to be an indirect reply irrelevantly commenting on the fact that fewer boys are going out for swimming now than ten years ago.

These two articles, especially the first one, hardly seem an adequate answer to a very reasonable question. The complaining student did not actually say so, but what he implied in his article was the question, "Why must we be made to take boxing, wrestling, and tumbling?" He has a good point. Why must a person who is planning to spend most of his life at a desk, have to learn to box and tumble and wrestle?

Those who argue that a healthy body is an advantage regardless of occupation are not being unreasonable, but on the other hand does not fencing or swimming keep one in shape as well as tumbling or wrestling? The department is not showing much intelligence, it appears, in saying that one is made to take six quarters of athletics just to insure one's taking a shower twice a week. Further, the apparent inability of the department to give a straight answer to a straight question does not strengthen their assumption that people who complain of the present system are wrong in doing so.

—Dentists—

tients admitted since then, especially because they represent "a large cross-section of University students and faculty from all areas of the campus."

Dr. Brauer is equally proud of the building facilities—no wonder. In accordance with his opinion that "dentistry is an integral function working with medicine, pharmacy, nursing, and public health," the dental school adjoins the University Hospital. It has extensive modern equipment for all departments—10 chairs each in the oral surgery, children and prosthetic clinics and 54 chairs in the graduate clinics. It has separate Negro clinics, laboratories for all classes, graduate, postgraduate and refresher courses.

"An individual who does not take a refresher loses a lot," Dean Brauer believes.

One of the school's most unique facilities is that it has provided space for the faculty to carry on individual private practice.

The school is also widening the opportunities in the dentistry field to women by starting a course in dental hygiene next fall. The course will be two years or four years long and can be entered from either high school or after two years of college. The longer course will contain a broader curriculum although the two year program will be sufficient for certification.

Although the new dental school has been occupied only since Sept. 22, Dr. Brauer is already "pleased not only with the structural part of the building but with the functionability of it." The dental school is doing all it can "to give adequate facilities to the dentists

Express Yourself

Editor:

May I clarify a point regarding the present Presbyterian investigation in Chapel Hill, as mentioned in a letter to you printed Saturday from a person who asked that his name be withheld.

I quote from his letter: "The decision was presented to the church officers at a secret meeting and was to be disclosed to the congregation calmly next Sunday. Unfortunately, one of the officers is a reporter for a Durham newspaper. . . ."

An officer of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian Church and also as Chapel Hill Bureau for the Durham Herald and Sun, I am and have been keenly aware of both my professional and lay man's responsibilities. At no time, I believe, have I taken unethical advantage of my church position in writing for our newspaper about it.

The officers of the church were told last Sunday that the report of the Presbytery's Commission was being presented to them as a public document. The church officers themselves endeavored to procure additional copies of the report for distribution to the congregation before Sunday's meeting, in order that members might be better able to comprehend its content when formally presented. Finding additional copies were not immediately available from the Commission in large number they had several hundred specially mimeographed here in Chapel Hill and have distributed them this week to members of the congregation.

The writer of the letter to you would have been a much fairer reporter had he checked on the background for his facts before taking his pen in hand.

Blue Dolphins Trounce Duke Swimmers, 47-35

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL

DURHAM, Dec. 8—Carolina's Blue Dophins, led by Donnie Evans and Buddy Baarcke, easily defeated the Duke swimmers for their second win of the young season, 47-35, this afternoon in a Southern Conference swimming meet in the Duke pool.

The Blue Dophins started off fast to build up a strong lead by winning first place in six of the first seven events and never were pushed by the losers. Smith Jule won the medley relay for Duke with the time of 3:08.

After losing six straight events, the Duke swimmers put on a mild rally to take second in the seventh and first in the last two events of the meet. It was to no avail however as the Blue Dophins had built up an unsermountable lead.

The best race of the day came in the 200 yard back stroke with a close duel between Baarcke and Paul Heemann of Carolina for first place. The race was won by Baarcke for honors in the event.

Others leading Carolina to victory in the Duke meet were Barry Wall, diver Joe Kelso, Jack Edwards and Buddy Hines. The losers were led by Jule, the winner of the medley relay, who looked particularly good in edging Wall and Stan Tinkham.

In winning their second straight victory of the season the Blue Dophins looked stronger against the Blue Devils than in their first match with Virginia Military Institute. Co-captain Donnie Evans has been impressive in leading his team to two straight Southern Conference wins.

The first place winners in each event and their time: medley relay, Jule (D), 3:08; 220, Shannon (UNC), 2:20.9; 50 yard dash, Hinns (UNC), .24.2; 150 yard individual medley, Donnie Evans (UNC), 1:36.3; Diving, Kelso (UNC), 101.5 points; 100 yard freestyle, Edwards (UNC), .54.1; 200 yard back stroke, Baarcke (UNC), 2:17; 200 yard breast stroke, Wall (UNC), 2:42; 440, Roberts (D), 5:21.5; 400 yard relay, Duke with the time of 3:54.5.

A WAR STORY WITH A NEW TWIST

When Stanley Kramer wanted to make a movie about prizefighting, he made "The Champion"—one of the great movies.

When Stanley Kramer wanted to make a movie about The West, he made "High Noon"—one of the very great westerns.

Now Stanley Kramer brings you EIGHT IRON MEN—his kind of soldier story.

EIGHT IRON MEN gives you the story of all G.I.'s—the humor and heroics, the horseplay and the unheralded gallantry.

Yes, here's war with a brand new twist—and wait till you meet her!

2 From Here Hopeful For Rhodes Grant

Fifteen applicants for Rhodes scholarships, including two from UNC, will be interviewed by the state committee today at 10 a.m. in the Morehead Building.

Students approved by the state committee here today will appear before a district committee Saturday in Charlotte. State committee members are Bishop Edwin A. Penick, Robert L. Humber, Dr. Ernest Criage and Dean C. P. Spruill.

The applicants represent eight colleges and four different home states. They are George Francis Bason Jr., Chapel Hill, representing Davidson College; Rodney Lee Borum, High Point, United States Naval Academy; Lawrence Bowles, Garden City, N. Y., Duke University; Randolph Bulgin, Franklin, Davidson.

Larry Jones Dagenhart, Fayetteville, Davidson; William Boyd Hood Jr., Wallace, Davidson; Hamilton Horton Jr., Winston - Salem, UNC; Ivory Lee Lyons, Durham, Morehouse College; Virgil Moorefield Jr., Hopkinsville, Ky., Wake Forest.

William Brown Patterson Jr., Greensboro, University of the South; John Martin Schorrenberg, Asheville, UNC; Robert Atwood Spivey, Suffolk, Va., Duke; Richard Lee Staley, Liberty, Guilford College; William Vaughn Wright, Wilson, Duke University, and Karl Adams Zener, Durham, Harvard.

UNC Artists Enter Work In Exhibition

The Art Department is well represented in the 15th annual Exhibition of North Carolina artists being held at the State Art Gallery in Raleigh through Dec. 20.

Prof. Kenneth Ness is represented by his "Automotive Assemblage;" Prof. George Kachergis is showing "Images;" Robert Howard, visiting sculptor, presents "Space Forms No. 1" and John Rembert, formerly of the faculty has sent his "The Tower."

Jerry Caplan, whose "Carousel" has been recommended for purchase consideration; Eugene Langford, whose "Abstract Landscape" has won the same honor, and David Huntley, Jeff Hill and Neal Thomas are a group of students and former students who are seen in the exhibition.

Guilty And Costs

Two University students were fined in Chapel Hill Recorder's Court last week on speeding charges and another was fined $10 and costs for parking at a fire hydrant.

Students tried last week were Thomas B. Peacock, speeding, $10 and costs; Charles C. Meltger, speeding, $5 and costs and John Peeble Watts, parking at a fire hydrant, $10 and costs.

Charges of affray against Ted McLaughlin were dropped last week. Billy Warren Jones, who was tried for affray several weeks ago, had sworn out the warrant against McLaughlin.

SP Chooses Southern As New Leader

Lew Southern is the new Student Party Chairman, SP officials said yesterday.

Other officers elected to serve with Southern include Joel Fleishman, vice-chairman, Jerry Snider, secretary, Gordon Forrester, treasurer, and Herb Cohn, coordinator.

In accepting the office Southern declared, "I am anxiously looking forward to working with and for the party in its efforts to better student government. I believe the party will realize the fullfillment of their goals, for never in my previous years on campus have I seen a larger or more active membership than has already proved itself this fall."

Kappa Psi's Elect Brown President

Earl Brown, a graduate pharmacy student from Leicester, was elected head of Province Three of Kappa Psi at the National pharmaceutical fraternity's meeting here over the weekend.

Other officers chosen include Dr. Fred Semeniuk, of the Pharmacy School here, as treasurer. Gene Hackney, Sanford, another UNC student, was chosen as Province Three's delegate to the national convention next year in St. Louis.

Old Student Book-X Flopped

By Louis Kraar

The student book trading post which opens Monday isn't any new idea.

But if it succeeds, it will be the first to do so in campus history.

H. R. Ritchie, Book Exchange manager, said yesterday, "I wish the swap shop the best of luck in their project." Then he went on to explain how similar projects were attempted in former years and failed.

The last project of this type was started in March of 1942 by student government, headed by President Truman Hobbs. The book swap shop, then tagged "co-op student book exchange" was maintained in Graham Memorial basement. Curry Jones, head cheerleader, managed the store.

The co-op store lasted less than a quarter. When it died, student government leaders went to Ritchie and held a post mortem. After thanking him for his support, they explained why the idea had failed.

The old student book swapping center failed according to Hobbs and Jones, because:

1. Students wanted too much for their used text books.

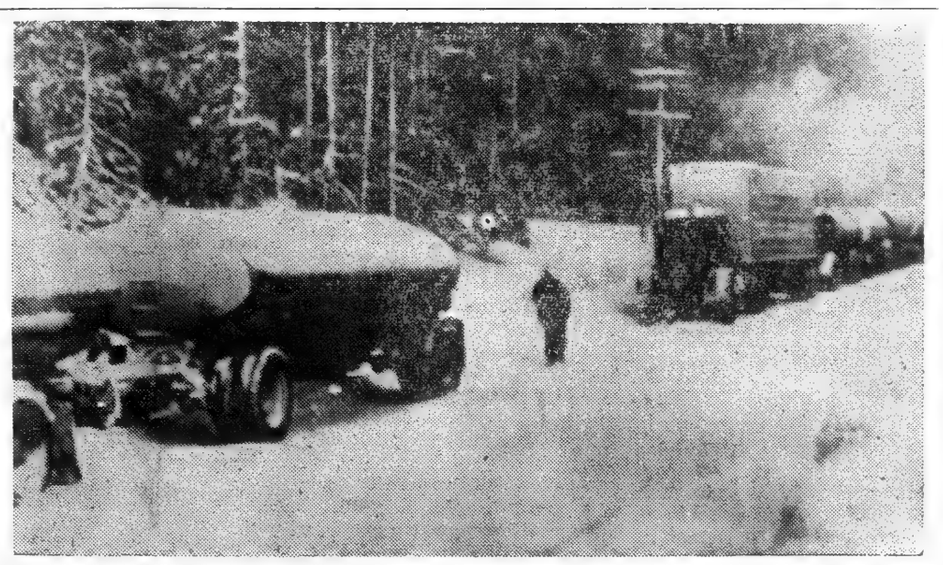
2. Many of the books placed in the shop were old, outdated books.

3. Leaders of the project didn't realize the time and skill required to maintain the shop.

The question facing sponsors of the student swap shop now is: can the project be carried out? Leaders in student government and Alpha Phi Omega, sponsors of the project, seem to think the idea can succeed and serve students.

The new plan appears to have remedied most of the faults of former ones that failed. This swap shop will only be maintained during the first 10 days of the quarter. The former ones were set up to operate for the entire year.

The swap shop will succeed, say student government leaders, if students don't ask too high a price for their books.



President Ham Horton said yesterday, "We are very happy to have the blessings of Mr. Ritchie. We believe that any faults of old student swap shops have been corrected and that this one will fill the needs of students."

'Orpheus' To Be Shown Thursday In Memorial

NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON — Administration officials attempted to pump new life yesterday into the floundering Wage Stabilization Board, pledging that wage curbs will be kept with or without a board. Mobilization Directocr Henry Fowler and Economic Stabilizer Roger L. Putnam said last night they were hopeful of persuading a new set of industry members take seats on the WSB with public and labor members. The industry members quit as a group last week, thereby preventing the WSB from operating, as a protest against President Truman's reversal of the board ruling on a pay raise for coal miners.

ABOARD USS HELENA — President-elect Eisenhower discussed Korean war policy with key cabinet members yesterday in an atmosphere of secrecy rivaling that which surrounded his trip to the battle zone. Eisenhower's press secretary, James C. Hagerty, refused to give any information about the talks to curious newsmen aboard this 17,000 ton cruiser and the men who have been designated cabinet members shunned questioners.

CASABLANCA, French Morocco — Five thousand French troops stood guard yesterday against fresh outbreaks of nationalist rioting that took a reported 57 lives Monday. Tension ran high throughout all French North Africa—Morocco, Tunisia and Algeria—as a result of the murder of a nationalist union leader in Tunisia last Friday.

December 'Heat Wave'

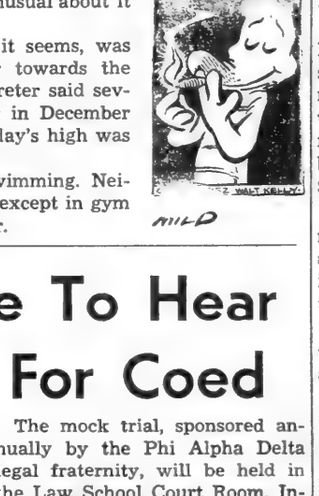
Spring For Sure?

As traditionally sunny California and Pacific Coast cities braced themselves for another week of heavy snows, Carolina campusers yesterday enjoyed spring weather—reminiscent of Miami.

Raleigh weatherman D. D. Stone was somewhat less surprised about the short sleeve temperatures than most students. "There's nothing unusual about it all," he said.

The December "heat wave," it seems, was due to "a flow of warmer air towards the south." The Raleigh cloud interpreter said several unusually warm days occur in December in this part of the country. The day's high was 68.

At any rate, no one went swimming. Neither did coeds jump into shorts—except in gym classes. But spring was in the air.



Judge Olive To Hear Mock Trial For Coed

Coed Virginia Wilson faces trial for murder Friday night at 7 in the poisoning of Miss Carman Nahm of this University. Presiding judge will be Hubert Olive, former Superior Court judge and gubernatorial candidate from Lexington.

The mock trial, sponsored annually by the Phi Alpha Delta legal fraternity, will be held in the Law School Court Room. Interested observers are invited to attend.

Judge Olive, a successful attorney, has served in North Carolina for many years. He was a member of the Superior Court bench for more than ten years, resigning that position in order to devote his energies to full-time political service in the state. He is presently engaged in the general practice of law in his home town.

The prosecution, headed by Harry Faggart, has announced its intention to seek the maximum penalty for the alleged first degree murder. Representing Miss Wilson as chief counsel for the defense is Roger Hendrix. He says he is confident his client will be acquitted.

Jews To Mark Old Festival Here Friday

Jewish communities everywhere will begin the observance of the eight-day Festival of Hanukkah on Friday.

The word "Hanukkah" means dedication, and refers to the rededication of the Temple in Jerusalem, in the year 165 B.C.E., at the conclusion of a war between the Jews and the Syrian-Greek king Antiochus, occasioned by his effort to force the Jews to violate their religious principles, by worshipping him.

The festival is observed through the lighting of candles each night of the eight days, beginning with one the first night, two the second, etc. It has long been a practice also to exchange gifts.

The Jewish students will mark the occasion by holding a Hanukkah party Saturday night. Jewish students at Woman's College, State College and Duke, have been invited.

A party for the local Jewish children will be held the next day. the local Jewish residents are planning a party for next Tuesday.

Total Up To $40,000 Seen For One Year

UNC Pay Raise, However, Would Decrease Amount

By Rolfe Neill

Students soon will have a ripe financial melon sliced for them.

It's the profit—estimated at from $30,000 to $40,000—from this year's operation of University-owned campus stores. All of the money is to be put into scholarships.

The Trustees, in action last spring, directed the University to ply the profit from the student-supported stores back to the students. The money comes from the operation of the Scuttlebutt, Circus Room in the Monogram Club, Book Exchange (Steele Dorm basement and Y), cigar counter in Lenoir Hall and most of the proceeds from soft drink vending machines on campus.

Previously the profit had been turned into the University's operating fund.

Business Manager Claude Teague, who made the estimate of $30,000 to $40,000, said other things must be taken into consideration. He stressed that this is an estimate and not "sure fire."

He also pointed out that Gov.-Elect W. B. Umstead has promised state employees a 10 per cent pay raise, retroactive to July 1. If this is put through, the money for campus store employees will be drawn from this hypothetical $40,000, Teague reminded.

Chancellor Robert B. House announced yesterday he is awaiting a committee report to aid him in setting up an organization to utilize the profits.

He said the findings of the three-man group will be taken and added to information he already has and a plan presented to Consolidated University President Gordon Gray. Finally, the plan will be submitted to the Board of Trustees meeting, probably in February.

On the committee are O. K. Cornell, director of physical education, Claude Teague, University business manager, and Dean Thomas H. Carroll of the School of Business Administration.

Scholarship Aids Report Not Finished

The Scholarship Committee has not yet finished its lengthy report concerning the financial aids offered through the University.

Originally expected to be completed yesterday, it may be several more days before it goes to Chancellor Robert B. House, a spokesman said yesterday.

Chancellor House said the report will be made public as soon as it is given him. "We are being very careful to be accurate and it is taking a long time to compile the report," he said. The report will list every scholarship offer-

Unready Kilowatt

The case of the off and on lights around the University yesterday had nothing to do with the delinquency of anybody's bill.

Merely, electricians were checking for a ground that has been acting up and had to douse the lights sporadically to facilitate their work.

Whipple's New Ripple

Physicists Hear About Comets; 'Dirty Icebergs,' Davis Claims

By Tom Parramore

Ever know that a comet was nothing but a "dirty iceberg"?

Neither did the UNC Physics department until thus informed recently in a talk by Dr. Morris S. Davis.

Dr. Davis is an astronomer here and his talk was given in connection with the department's joint colloquium. The colloquium is a series of meetings among members of the physics staff of Carolina, Duke and State, at which talks are made on the many fields in physics by experts in the fields.

Dr. Davis' talk concerned a comet model, devised by Dr. F. L. Whipple of Harvard, which seems to explain many features in a comet which had not been previously explained.

Whipple's basic idea, according to Dr. Davis, is that a comet is composed of a matrix of meteoric material having a high melting point, which is surrounded by the gases methane, ammonia, carbon dioxide and water. Normally these gases are frozen into ices in space so that a comet may be thought of as a ball of ice.

Dr. Davis went on to explain that the comet travels in an elliptical orbit around the sun and that the sun melts these ices when the comet comes too near. Furthermore, the gases around the comet are repelled by the sun, which is the reason a comet's tail always points away from the sun.

Among other noted speakers engaged in the past by the joint colloquium were Dr. A. deShalit from Israel, who spoke on nuclear shell structure; Dr. C. D. Moak of Oak Ridge, whose topic was problems in nuclear physics and Dr. Hans Dehmelt of Germany speaking on microwave spechoscopy.

Chairman of the group's planning committee here is Dr. Joseph W. Straley, U.N.C.

Express Yourself

Editor:

First, let me say that my "smug" answer to the "irritated undergraduate, enmeshed in the wicked, grinding wheels of Physical Education" was wholly my answer and no way a reply from the Physical Education Department. The Department would never stoop to answer such a letter. Secondly, Coach Jamerson's letter was in no way a reply either. It just happened to appear above mine on the same day. Neither would Coach Jamerson stoop so low.

There is a case of a boy here who made zero on the motor ability test you took as a freshman. I have had boys in my classes who cannot kick a football at all, cannot do one chin up or push up—feats that probably even you think are very simple—and these cases are not uncommon. Just look in any Fundamentals class. The Physical Education Department is not concerned with the athlete (about 10 percent of the enrollment). It is more concerned with the 90 per cent of average and below average boys. It teaches a boy different skills, giving him a variety of exercise and muscular activity. It is a proven fact that the life expectancy of a physically fit person is longer, his life more wholesome, happier, and cleaner. If you are doomed to a life at a desk with no physical activity, I pity you.

But why must you take such thing as boxing, tumbling, and wrestling? In each of these activities there are exercises and coordination particular to them and to no other sport which one must learn for all-around physical fitness and well-being. Do you take Algebra because you are going to be a mathematician? Language because you are going to be a linguist, English, science, and so on? Physicial Education fits in with these as an important part of a liberal education. Educators (not physical educators) recognize this. I put my faith in these men who are far wiser than you or I? Why don't you?

We can't make you exercise once you graduate, but I sincerely hope that we've taught you the importance of physical activity—all-around activity—in later life.

A Proclamation to All
Christian Peoples

Rejoice, all you Christians, and be thankful. For it has been granted to you to see, in your days on earth, the end of all quarrels and misunderstandings among the followers of Jesus Christ. This year you may celebrate the birth of Our Lord while resting in the firm assurance that all Christians will soon be bound into one, inseparable body.

For there is among us a sage, newly discovered, who, by some strange action of Divine Providence, has been enabled to discern exactly what things are the necessary attributes of a true Christian. It is therefore within the power of this sage, known to his fellow men as Wilbur Boice, '55, to put an end to the many struggles which have been waged almost incessantly for the past two thousand years among people who believe themselves to be Christians.

The numerous tracts and discourses which must surely follow the brilliant epistle published in the Daily Tar Heel on Sunday, December seventh, will no doubt answer all of the theological questions which have puzzled the last sixty or seventy generations.

Joe Raff
Riff .... By Raff

Everybody who has ever penciled a flourishing signature on the last page of a short story or English theme has done so probably with the aid of a kick in the pants by his ego. Some of these Saunders Saroyans would most likely get an additional boot from their respective ids if they could see their verbal blood in print. The author of this Riff is just so constructed, and he was not satisfied over the summer months to vacation in typewritten obscurity. He had to try to become obscure on a national level. All of this has to do with the headline in the December 2nd Durham Sun and the egomania of one of its readers.

The headline of that issue read, "Taft Hits Ceiling Over Cabinet." It seemed to strike a humorous note somewhere and the chuckle sounded a thoughtful note in another place. Right away the idea presented itself that that newspaper streamer might appeal to a magazine like the Readers Digest which collects printed words of double-entente. I had recalled that one of the requirements of the Digest is that before they publish it, it must have previously been in print. I learned this by the ditty I sent in to the Readers Digest editors this summer and the rejection I received from them for the same reason—that it had not previously been in print. It is understandable why it had never before appeared as willfully published by someone (you will also understand by the end of this column).

I am sending the headline to Readers Digest, but I am once again including a copy of this summer's offering. (And English students ask how the writer takes advantage of the reader!) Here it is:

Fritz Hops To It

Listen to me, my darlings,
About a boy named Fritz.
He sat down on Anheuser Bush
And tore his pants to Schlitz.
Pabst you won't believe me.
Pabst, but it's the truth.
I know he's learned his lesson
—and

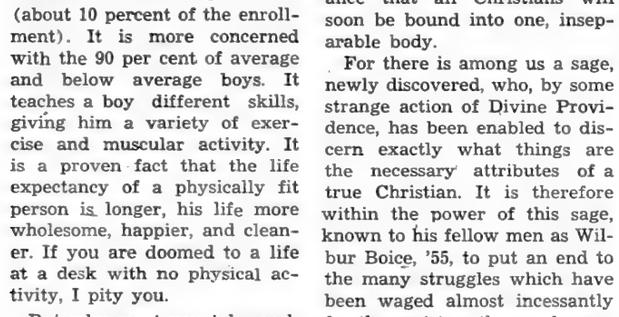
He's a sad Budweiser youth.

Readers Digest realizes the necessity of humor (that's why I think this poem was rejected). I also think that humor is something that a college newspaper or presidential candidate should not be without. I would like to see the day when the campus participated in this by sending in their Odgen Gnashery or anecdotes which they think are worthy of print. If The Daily Tar Heel proper won't use them, the author of this column would be glad to incorporate them in his Riff and accept credit for them.

Off Campus

"Have you ever had a wild desire to scream in the library? Or jump up and down on the dining room tables? Or go to class barefooted?" asks the Alabamian of Alabama College. In an effort to raise money for various charities, Alabama College is letting its students fulfill all their "wild desires"—for a price. They make a contribution to charity and do what they please.

The following ad appeared in the UCLA Daily Bruin: "Will the blonde young lady who wore sun glasses Thursday morning (besides other things) be in the cafeteria between 11 and 12 a.m.?"

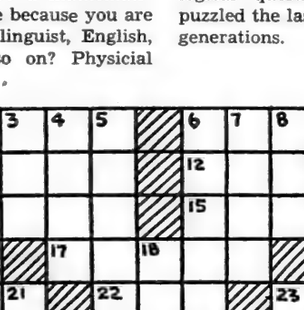


Maybe we ought to start a tradition like this one.

"It is said that if a Wellesley College girl walks her beau around the lake and garden three times without proposal, she has a perfect right to push him in the drink." The garden was designed by a math professor whose love was thwarted for a president of Wellesley (the presidents there are always women).

"If you keep a careful written record of your dream," said the University of Nebraska English instructor, "you will find that you dream of the future."

A student, whose sleep was evidently undisturbed, queried, "But what if you don't dream?"



A lazy voice from the back of the room drawled the prophetic pronouncement, "No future."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON — One significant report sent to General Eisenhower in mid-Pacific is from the British, vigorously opposing any expansion of the Korean war.

The British protest came when the U. S. sent a message to the U.N. shortly before Ike left for Korea, stating that we had under consideration a broadening of the Korean operation by:

1. A blockade of Chinese ports
1 — A blockade of Chinese ports.
2 — Air Force intruder missions against the Chinese mainland; in brief, bombing beyond the Yalu River.

This proposal caused the British to have fits. Prime Minister Churchill was adamant, furious, and would have no part of it.

While the reasons for British opposition were not set forth in detail, the reasons are well known both in the Pentagon and to those aboard the USS Helena. First, the British fear any blockade of the China ports would finish their sizable trade with China. Second, it would bring an abrupt termination of their lease on Hong Kong which still has 40 years to run.

This exchange with the British was partly for exploratory purposes, so that President-Elect Eisenhower would have all points of view on hand during his Pacific trip.

The opposite point of view is undoubtedly in the secret MacArthur plan for ending the Korean war — namely, bombing the Chinese mainland and blockading Chinese ports. General MacArthur has always favored these two moves, unquestionably had them in mind when he told the National Association of Manufacturers he had a secret plan for ending the Korean war.

These are two of the conflicting, difficult alternatives, which the president-elect is certain to be discussing in mid-Pacific with his Secretary of State, his Secretary of Defense, and top military advisers.

President Truman invited every cabinet member who had ever served with him, except two, to his big farewell dinner last week. The guest of honor was Adlai Stevenson.

Looking around the giant horseshoe table at which were seated such old-timers as Henry Wallace, Henry Morgenthau, Fanny Perkins and Frank Walker, Secretary of Defense Bob Lovett remarked:

"It looks like the Lord's farewell supper."

Several cabinet members, once fired by Truman, were invited back for the last dinner, among them ex-Secretary of Defense Louey Johnson and former Attorney General Howard McGrath.

"Everyone's here who ever served with me," the president remarked to Louey Johnson, "except for two—Jimmie Byrnes and Krug. I just didn't think I wanted them here."

Julius Krug was a Secretary of the Interior recommended by Bernie Baruch, with whom Truman broke; ex-Secreary of State Byrnes, also a Baruch man, was bitterly critical of Truman during the recent campaign.

After the dinner, the president rose and proposed a toast to the "best cabinet anyone could have."

He also made a brief speech about the future. Recalling that the atomic age was just beginning—an age which would bring forth new miracles—the president said:

"I wish I could live for another 50 years. Sometimes I wish I could be 18 again. In fact, I'd like to live my whole life over again—if I could only have my wife and daughter to live it over with me."

Chief Justice Fred Vinson then made a little speech in tribute to Truman, pointing out that present-day critics seldom see things in proper perspective. But historians, he said, do. And he predicted that historians would give Harry Truman a great place in history.

Pulque

The Daily Tar Heel needs a new column about as much as the American public needs a new chlorophyll toothpaste. Never-the-less, as in the case of the latter, the temptation to put out an old thing under a new name is often too great for a mere human to resist. At any rate, it is in our case. And like other insignificant things (e.g. chlorophyll toothpastes) columns have to have names. This one is called Pulque for the following reasons. Pulque is a substance (liquid) which in small doses can be stimulating. In large quantities, especially to someone unfamiliar with its characteristics, it can be quite sickening. The metaphor seems obvious. Also, Pulque is rather unrefined. So am I.

I shall try to do a couple of things in my writing. I shall first of all survey the local, national, and international world and comment on it as I please. Just like everybody else. More specifically, however, I shall try to represent the graduate student approach to things, especially as they affect the campus. All graduate students are encouraged to write, or talk about matters which bother them, or matters which don't bother them. When something important is happening which is of concern to grad students, I shall try to bring it to their attention.

However, I shall deal also with things of interest (we hope) to all students. In that way perhaps a few undergrads, faculty, etc. will be trapped into giving us a look from time to time.

I noted with interest Mr. Wilbur Boice's letter to the Editor in the Sunday Tar Heel in regard to the going's on at the Presbyterian Church. While it is possible (though we will give you an argument on this point) to equate religion with Christianity, it does not seem justified to equate Christianity with Presbyterianism. That is, all Presbyterians are indeed Christians (in theory) but certainly not all Christians are Presbyterians (in theory or fact). Similarily, while it might be possible to challange Mr. Jones and the officers of his church on their Presbyterianism (though we will give you an argument on this point too) there are very few indeed who would challange these people on their Christianity. You stand alone Mr. Boice, in the belief that this is a controversy between Christian and non-Christian.

While on the subject of Christianity, I should like to mention that Saturday night, for the third time, I saw the "Star of Bethlehem" show at Planetarium. It was still as impressive as ever. It is trite to comment that few people ever make use of the wonderful things present in their own back yards, yet it is certainly the case in regard to the Planetarium. There are fewer Planetarium's in the world than there are Beer joints in Orange county, yet students will drive several miles to the latter, and won't walk around the corner to get to the former. Everyone who possibly can should avail themselves of the opportunity to see this performance. Or, phrased in the student language, if you don't go to see the "Star of Bethlehem" you've got rocks in your head.

Following the vacation, I intend to go into the Saturday class situation, presenting both the Pros and the Cons of the situation, as they seem to me. (Believe it or not, there are some favorable things in the proposed shift). A quick solution, however, might be that which was overheard in the Y court last week. That is, arrange for Saturday classes simply by moving all of Monday's classes to Saturday!

Football Fever

Carolina has had a lousy football season—the third in a row. And, oh, such misery! Freshmen are disillusioned; cheerleaders are crest-fallen because nobody will say "rah"; alumni are indignant and ashamed; and out-of-staters are afraid to go home lest they be subjected to humiliating remarks.

"Get some ball-players!" 'Lower the admission standards!" And on and on and on . . .

During the week the Carolina students bewail the fact that we are 69th in the Williamson System and arent even mentioned in the AP and UP polls; professors, trying to be popular with the students, make jocular remarks about the high-school team that played at Kenan Stadium Saturday; and local newspapers speculate on what's to be done with the Gray Fox.

Is this a university, a high-school, or a football factory? You'd thing Carolina had failed in its primary goals — to teach people how to be pro football players and, in the process, to gross $140,000 on those Saturdays when Jones advertises its sausage, highway patrolmen get ulcers, and 40,000 souls choose to spend two tedius hours plunked down on concrete slabs to watch twenty-two potential All - Americans maul hell out of each other.

Nobody much seems concerned with or proud of the fact that UNC is rated high as an institution of learning—that eleven of its departments are rated in the top ten in the country. Nor does anybody seem concerned with the fact that Chapel Hill is one of the culture centers of the United States, and that first class professors are attracted even for low salaries. And I don't remember anybody remarking on how pretty the place is either.

Personally, I'm sick of football. It's no longer a game. And I'm looking forword to Carolina's losing a few more games until the "sport' gets knocked down a couple of pegs, and the bookies go broke, the scalpers get stuck, and people play for the fun of it, just like ping-pong, hop-scotch, and mumbley-peg.

Tar Heels Meet Clemson In Woollen Tonight

Seek Fourth SC Victory Of Season

By Tom Peacock

The Carolina basketball team plays its last game before the Christmas holidays here tonight at 8:00 against the Clemson Tigers in a Southern Conference contest.

The Tar Heels will be favored to take their fourth straight win of the season in as many games, but Clemson, with a veteran team, could easily upset Carolina.

The Tigers have virtually the same team that finished an excellent season last year with a 17-7 record. Clemson will be without the services of John Snee, last year's high scorer, but the rest of the squad is intact.

Vayda Leads

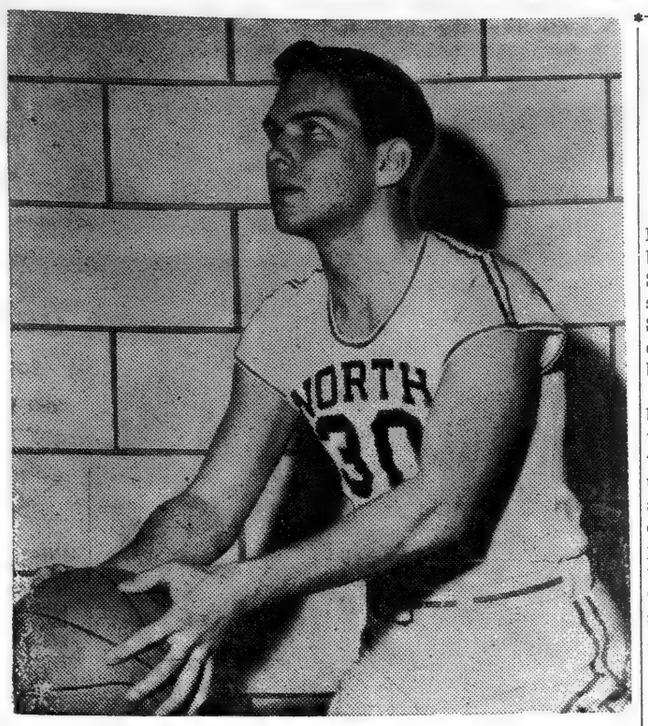
Leading the Tar Heels will be freshman Jerry Vayda of Bayonee, N. J., who has scored 58 points in Carolina's three games. Vayda was high scorer for Carolina in its first two starts with 21 points against The Citadel, and 17 against Washington and Lee. Co-captain Vince Grimaldi edged out the six-foot, three-inch forward for honors against Richmond, 21-20.

Carolina's freshman coach, Frank McGuire, who hasn't lost a game as the Tar Heel pilot, will go along with the usual starting lineup tonight. Co-captain Jack Wallace and Vayda at forwards, Paul Likins at center, and Grimaldi and Bob Phillips at guards.

Lost Two

Clemson has lost two games to powerful Georgia and has defeated Presbyterian this year. Coach Banks McFadden's charges will be opening their Conference slate against Carolina. The Tigers hopes rest with Tommy McCullough, John McGraw, Marvin Robinson, Sunny Moorer, and Joe Murray, all senior veterans. Billy Yarborough of Walhalla, S. C., a McFadden discovery, is an outstanding freshman on the Clemson team.

Trailing Vayda in Carolina scoring by 19 points is Grimaldi with 39 for three games, and center Bud Maddie is third by two with 37. Wallace is next with 29, and reserve Ernie Schwarz has scored 20.



Without Three

Carolina, playing without the services of three probable starters because of academic troubles, will depend largely on speed, height, and a tight, man-to-man defense to stop the Tigers.

The Tar Heel jayvee squad, coached by Buck Freeman, will play a preliminary game with Raleigh High School at 6:30. The jayvees defeated Wake Forest's jayvees in their last outing.

The Carolina gymnastic team will present a special show tonight during the half.

Tickets are on sale at Woollen Gym.

Heels Tie Duke, 2-2, In Chess

The U.N.C. chess team tied Duke, 2-2, in its first match of the year.

Tar Heel Kit Crittendon defeated Duke's Bill Chapman on first board to give Carolina an early lead, and Doug Kahn added another point for the Tar Heels by taking Mercello Mollinay Vedia in a short match on second board.

Duke rallied on the bottom two boards, with Blue Devil Bill Crowder defeating Robert Hubbard, and David Lane stopping Carolina's Bill Beard, to tie the score.

In Carolina chess club activity, Mike Rauhut defeated Joe Levin, 2-0, to win the club-sponsored tournament.

ed through UNC.

Nothing not previously known is expected in the report, as the report itself will be merely an elaboration of one prepared last Spring for the Trustees, at their direction.

State College last week released a similar report through its chancellor, J. W. Harrelson. Harrelson called on all Big Four schools to make public their scholarship setups. His plea seemed to be aimed at ferreting out the amount given to athletes.

Medics, Sigma Chi Lead Mural Teams

Med School and Sigma Chi took first place honors in the organizational point totals for the fall quarter in intramural play.

Leading point winners in both tag football and wrestling, Med school ran away from its nearest competitor in the dormitory division with 337.07 points. Emerson was second in the division, with a total of 277.64, while Law School came in with 255.84 points and third place. Ruffin was the only other dorm to finish with more than 200 points, 218.47, to their credit.

The point race in the fraternity division was more closely contested, however, with the winners taking a 27 point advantage over second place Zeta Psi. Sigma Chi racked up 358.58 points to 331.82 for Zeta Psi. Third place Phi Gamma Delta recorded 328.34 points, while 311.05 went to fourth place Sigma Nu. The remainder of the fraternity teams finished with less than 233 points.

In taking their point title, Med School teams led the point makers in two divisions—160 to their credit in football and 115.07 in wrestling. The only division which they failed to carry was in volleyball play, which was won by the Law School, who amassed a total of 130 points.

Emerson, the second place dorm in the point totals, tied for second in football and wrestling and took down second spot honors going away in the volleyball bracket. They were tied by Manley in football with 122.67 points for each dorm, and played to 43.97 stalemate with Ruffin in wrestling.

Sigma Chi did not win a single division in the fraternity bracket, although they amassed the largest point total. It finished second to Sigma Nu in tag football, with 132.71 points to a total of 150 for Sigma Nu. Zeta Psi scored 125 in wrestling, while Sigma Chi registered 112.20 for second place honors. Sigma Chi also placed second in volleyball, with 113.67 points to Phi Gam's 130.

Completing the top ten in the dormitory division, with their point totals, are: fifth—Winston, 187.96; sixth — Manley, 184.67; seventh — Joyner, 153.17; eighth —Lewis, 139.33; ninth — Stacy, 129.33; and tenth—Everett, 123.80.

The remainder of the top ten in the fraternity division are: fifth —Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 234.72; sixth — Chi Psi, 232.34; seventh —Kappa Alpha, 221.35; eighth—Delta Kappa Epsilon, 216.64; ninth —Beta Theta Pi, 214.22; and tenth —Chi Phi, 181.41.

Air Raid

Woollen Gym air wardens requested that all paper air planes be kept in their hangers during tonight's game with Clemson.

Gym officials also asked that students curb the booing of officials that has been evident during the past three games.

Irv Holdash, Billy Hayes Named By Armed Forces Press Service Poll

Two former Carolina stars, Irv Holdash and Billy Hayes, have been selected for the Service All-Star football team which was chosen by the Armed Forces Press Service. Both Holdash, All-America center, and Hayes, star fullback, graduated in 1950.

Hayes was named to the fullback position on the offensive team while Holdash was placed at the center slot on the defensive unit. Hayes, now with the Marines at Paris Island, played four years of varsity football at UNC and participated in two bowl games, the Sugar Bowl in 1948 and the Cotton Bowl in 1949, in which he starred. Holdash played for the Army at Ft. Eustis, Virginia.

After starring in the Cotton Bowl in 1948 in which he gained 107 yards rushing and completed two passes, Hayes led the Tar Heels offensively through the 1950 season. Holdash, who had his best year of varsity ball in 1950 was named to many All-America teams.

Ex-Prof To Lead Religions Study

Dr. Maurice Kidder, former religion professor at UNC, will lead discussions in a group study of American religions here beginning Jan. 6.

Dr. Kidder, currently rector of the Church of the Holy Family, will prepare the discussions along the same lines as his Religion 92 course which was discontinued at UNC this fall. Such speakers as Rabbi E. M. Rosenzweig and Father John A. Weidinger will speak at the various programs. All students are invited to join the group which will be in the form of a Y committee and meet twice monthly.

"Each meeting will include a question and answer period so that students may air any doubts or beliefs they may have," said Jane Berryhill, Chapel Hill, chairman of the group.

"I always smoked Chesterfields in college just like my friends" says New York secretary, Elizabeth Lydon, "and here in New York it seems like almost everyone smokes them."
Elizabeth Lydon DUKE '51
AND NOW– CHESTERFIELD FIRST TO GIVE YOU SCIENTIFIC FACTS IN SUPPORT OF SMOKING
A responsible consulting organization reports a study by a competent medical specialist and staff on the effects of smoking Chesterfields. For six months a group of men and women smoked only Chesterfield—10 to 40 a day—their normal amount. 45 percent of the group have smoked Chesterfields from one to thirty years for an average of ten years each.
At the beginning and end of the six-months, each smoker was given a thorough examination including X-rays, and covering the sinuses, nose, ears and throat. After these examinations, the medical specialist stated . . .
"It is my opinion that the ears, nose, throat and accessory organs of all participating subjects examined by me were not adversely affected in the six-months period by smoking the cigarettes provided."

LAX STUDENTS ARE BLASTED

THE SUPREME COURT WENT INTO its second day yesterday of hearings on one of the most explosive issues in American life—the Constitutionality of racial segregation in public schools. With less than 50 seats available to the public, it's a first come, first served basis and this long line formed early in the corridor of the court building waiting for the chamber to open. Suits challenging segregation in five states are to be aired.—NEA Telephoto.

NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON—John W. Davis, veteran New York attorney, argued before the Supreme Court yesterday that framers of the 14th Amendment never intended it as a bar to separate schools for white and Negro students. Davis told the court it was inconceivable that the Congress which submitted the amendment to the states for ratification intended to make segregated schools unlawful. The amendment says that no state shall deny any citizen the equal protection of the laws.

ABOARD USS HELENA—President-elect Eisenhower cleared the way for a meeting between himself and Gen. MacArthur Tuesday. An exchange of messages announced yesterday disclosed that Ike is willing to hear any plan his old commander may have for ending the Korean War.

CASABLANCA—French troops stood ready yesterday to smash any new demonstrations by Moroccans now burying the dead from three straight days of rioting. Two more rioters were killed Tuesday when police opened fire on a mob storming a jail at Beni Mellal, 100 miles southeast of here.

SEOUL—A US Navy raid yesterday sent carrier-based fighter-bombers farther north than any bombers have ever been before in the Korean war. This raid was also the biggest so far in the conflict. The planes blasted four major Communist rail centers close to the Soviet and Manchurian borders. Some of the raiders came as close as 15 miles to the Russian border.

NEW YORK—Seven men were shot down yesterday as a Cleveland gunman fought a running gun battle with metropolitan police in the Times Square area. Clarence Sims, wanted on several armed robbery charges, was finally dropped to the pavement by a cooly firing patrolman. Three policemen were seriously wounded and three passers-by were nicked as they scampered for cover.

Student Robbers Put On Probation

Special To THE DAILY TAR HEEL

HILLSBORO, Dec. 10—Three University of North Carolina students received probationary sentences in Superior Court here yesterday after they pleaded nolo contendere to seven charges of larceny.

They were Thomas Richardson, 19, Boone; John Norman III, 19, Cherry Lane, and John Woodruff, 20, Laurel Springs.

Judge W. I. Halstead of South Mills ordered prayer for judgment continued to Alleghany County Superior Court. The three youths were ordered to report to the court every six months for the next five years to show that they were either still in school or else gainfully employed.

Chapel Hill Police said the students admitted pulling three robberies there and in Carrboro and Pittsboro a month ago. They were charged with burglaries at two service stations and a drugstore and were captured shortly after the drugstore theft Nov. 8.

Playmakers Triple Bill Is Tonight, Tomorrow

A comedy of adolescence, a problem plan, and a folk comedy make up a bill of three original one-act plays on tonight and Friday at the Playmakers Theater.

Thomas Patterson, Kai Jurgensen and Foster Fitz-Simons of the Dramatic Art Department act in an advisory capacity for student directors James T. Pritchett of Lenoir, William Bowser of Chapel Hill and George Boozer of Lexington, S. C.

Cast in Emily Crow Selden's "Uncross Those Stars," a hearts-and-flowers comedy of adolescent complications, are Anne Edwards of New Bern, John Bonitz Jr., of Greensboro, Nancy Green, Chapel Hill, Carl Williams and Philip Kennedy of Charlotte.

"The Silver Birch," a drama of prejudice among French-Canadians, includes in its cast George Belk, Williamsburg, Va., Betty Johnson, Staunton, Va., Dan Reid, Raleigh, and Les Casey, Dee Casey and William Henderson Jr., of Chapel Hill. The play is the work of Sydney Litwack of Los Angeles.

Tommy Rezzuto's folk comedy, "Buck," has Ig Heniford, Loris, S. C. Catherine McDonald, Chapel Hill, and Ben Etheridge, Bailey, in its cast.

Settings for the three plays are by Betty Vickery, Gadsden, Ala., with lighting by Fred Young, Chapel Hill. There will be no admission charge for the plays; curtains are at 7:30.

Exhibit On Atom Opens On Campus

Atomic Energy, an exhibition prepared by the editors of Life Magazine, will be on view at Graham Memorial beginning today and continuing through Dec. 15.

Scotty Hester, chairman of the SUAB display committee, said the display was prepared in consultation with the United States Atomic Energy Commission which has urged nation-wide education on the subject.

The thesis of the exhibition is that science is truly international; and that atomic energy is not exclusively scientific matter but will inevitably involve social and political questions. More concerned with the practical use of atomic energy to date than with nuclear physics, the numerous photographs emphasize the importance of the layman's understanding the social and political aspects of this great new source of energy.

Atomic Energy opens with the seven scientists whose peacetime research led to wartime developments. Then follow panels of Hiroshima, Nagasaki, Bikini, experiments with animals, radiation sickness and mutation.

The second section is devoted to postwar use: the development of atomic power and continuing research. Here are seen pictures of a plutonium laboratory, the new California cyclotron, work in the production of radioactive isotopes at Oak Ridge, and the new uses of radioactive isotopes in therapy, industry and commerce.

The last section is devoted to the problem of atomic energy control. This involves the world sources of uranium, the mining of uranium, Oak Ridge separation plant, and the possible diversion of atomic energy to use as a weapon of war. The exhibition closes with panels describing the problem in education, in statecraft and as it is manifested in the ways of the human spirit.

Five Art Films Scheduled For Next Quarter

Series Includes Only Opera Ever Filmed Complete

Five art films will be brought to the campus Winter Quarter in the third series of films sponsored by the Student Union Board.

"Metamorphosis," produced at the University of Michigan, will be the first film in the series. The film, based on Franz Kafka's story, will be shown Friday, Jan. 16. Earl Stevens, faculty adviser to the Film Committee, explained that the film is scheduled for Friday night due to a conflict. All other films will be shown on Thursday nights.

"Anna Christie," starring Greta Garbo and Charles Bickford, will be shown on Jan. 29. Filmed in 1933, the movie is based on the famous Eugene O'Neill play.

A 1951 German production of "The Marriage of Figaro" will be presented Feb. 12. It is the only complete version of the opera ever filmed and stars Erna Berger and Tiana Lemnitz. The music is done by the Berlin State Opera, Chorus and Orchestra.

Another German film, "M," will be shown Feb. 26. "M" is a psychological story of a murderer and stars Peter Lorre.

The last film in the series in a French production entitled "Carnival In Flanders" which will be here March 12. The leads are played by Francois Rosay and Louis Jouvet. "Carnival in Flanders" was awarded the gold medal in the Venice competition and received the New York Critics award for the best foreign film of the year.

Admission cards for the series cost $1.50 and no single tickets will be sold. The films will be shown in Gerrard Hall until better facilities can be arranged, Stevens said.

For Not Working In Six-Day Fracas

By Louis Kraar

"I'm sick and tired of the whole damn mess."

That's what Attorney-General Phin Horton had to say yesterday as he blasted the student body for not supporting the fight against Saturday classes.

Speaking in curt tones, Horton, who is co-ordinating activities in the battle, said, "This is everybody's job, not just that of three or four student government workers."

The bitter condemnation was directed toward lack of interest among students in the campaign against the six-day week. Student government officials issued a request before Thanksgiving holidays for as many students as possible to see trustees in their areas. Only 15 reportedly responded.

Horton, a cousin of President Ham Horton, emphasized the need for students to visit Trustees over the Christmas holidays saying, "Only individual personal contact will help."

The campaign has centered around student visits to Trustees early in the battle. Executive Committee Member John W. Umstead of Chapel Hill told student government leaders then he had no doubt "we can beat this thing." He agreed that Trustee visits were the best plan.

Student government swung into action and handled arrangements by printing statements against Saturday classes and keeping a file on Trustee reactions.

Sol Cherry, Ham and Phin Horton and Ed Gross plan to make trips over the holidays to Trustees near their homes.

Any student who wishes to answer Horton's "urgent plea" is asked to check by the student government offices this week.

The Board of Trustees will meet in February. However, there is no decision to be made for an extra class day as Saturday classes definitely have been ordered up for the University. Any action the board would take would be a new policy. This is what student leaders are trying to bring about.

Life In Slum Brings Forth New Morals

In a sociological discussion following the movie "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," Dr. Lee Brooks said he was "simply fascinated with its realism."

Novelist Betty Smith's Brooklyn story "struck a responsive chord," Dr. Brooks said, as he told of Boston and slum areas in other large cities. He spoke to about 25 people who remained after the movie. All of the movie was not shown due to a faulty projector.

The picture was shown Monday night in Memorial Hall as the first of a series depicting man's struggle. This phase, to be completed with "The Late George Appleby" early next quarter, is entitled "Man and His Environment."

Dr. Brooks, who is associate chairman of the Sociology Department, will lead a discussion after each movie. The programs are sponsored by the Hillel Foundation and the YMCA.

One member of the audience asked Dr. Brooks the effect of a slum environment over the rural environment.

"It (slum environment) certainly doesn't develop the Golden Rule," Dr. Brooks answered. "Rather it's do others before they do you.

"At the risk of a bold assertion . . . I'd say the city has produced immorality. . . . They have built up a new code of 'If you can get away with it, get away with it.'"

"The city," the sociology professor said later," "is a tremendous artificiality." He pointed out the excitement of Brooklyn residents over the cutting of their one tree, as contrasted with the reaction in a rural communnity.

Trustee List For Holiday Is Released

Trustees who should be visited over the holidays were named yesterday by student government officials along with the plea "see your Trustee."

Students were asked to call or come by the student government office and report who they are going to visit.

The list follows:

H. P. Taylor of Anson County, Ed Anderson of Ashe County, Ira Johnston of Ashe County, John Rodman of Beaufort County, H. L. Riddle of Burke County, H. S. Gibbs of Carteret County, John Geitner of Catawba County, A. H. London of Chatham County, O. Max Gardner Jr. of Cleveland County, Clyde Council of Columbus County, Claude Rankin of Cumberland County.

George S. Coble of Davidson County, William G. Clark of Edgecombe County, Willie Lee Lumpkin of Franklin County, Henry Lineberger of Gaston County, Benjamin K. Lassiter of Granville County, Lennox P. McLendon of Guilford County, J. Roboert Young of Harnett County, R. Lee Whitmire of Henderson County, Harry A. Greene of Hoke County.

Jim Pittman of Lee County, F. E. Wallace of Lenoir County, John G. Dawson of Lenoir County, Hugh Horton of Martin County, J. J. Parker of Mecklenburg County, W. T. Harris of Montgomery County, William P. Saunders of Moore County, Wilbur H. Currie of Moore County, Kemp D. Battle of Nash County, William G. Barfield of New Hanover County.

Rudolph I. Mintz of New Hanover County, Vernon G. James of Pasquotank County, Paul E. Jones of Pitt County, James S. Ficklin of Pitt County, James L. Woodson of Rowan County, John C. Kesler of Rowan County, Kenneth S. Tanner of Rutherford County.

Arch T. Allen of Wake County, A. L. Monroe of Wake County, W. Frank Taylor of Wayne County, Herman Weil of Wayne County, Herbert D. Bateman of Wilson County, and F. D. B. Harding of Yadkin County.

Honor Council Suspends Six For Cheating

Students Ousted During Summer And Fall Sessions

Six students were suspended from the University during the Summer and Fall Quarters for violations of the Honor Code.

Chairman of the Honor Council Frank Daniels yesterday said all of the suspensions came as a result of cheating on quizzes or final exams. An equal number of students were readmitted during the same period.

"When a student is suspended from school it is for an indefinite period of time," Daniels said, "however, there is a minimum of one full quarter necessary to be out of school."

Generally speaking, he added, if a boy is suspended "with a recommendation that leniency be shown on application for readmittance" he is usually readmitted after one full quarter out of school.

Two students were placed on dance probation this Fall when their cases were referred to the Men's Council by the Dance Committee. At the same time, two boys were removed from probation.

"The probationary sentence has by precedent come to be one which lasts usually for two full quarters," Daniels said. "If a person is found guilty of a violation of the Honor Code or Campus Code while on probation he is usually suspended."

While a student is on probation he cannot represent the University in any way and cannot participate in any extra-curricular activities.

Eleven students who came before the Council during the Fall and Summer were found not guilty of Honor Code violations. Charges against two of the students were dropped for insufficient evidence.

Creighton Brinson acted as chairman of the council during the first session of Summer School and Frank Daniels, regular chairman, served during the second session and Fall quarter.

Clerks during the summer sessions and Fall quarter were George McLeod, Cecil Pless and Ken Myers.

Late Change In Housing? See Office

Students who reserved rooms for the Winter Quarter but do not plan to occupy them are asked to notify the Housing Office, James Wadsworth said yesterday.

There is much clerical work involved when the boys sign up for a room and then do not occupy them, Wadsworth said. He asked that students come by the office as soon as possible if they do not plan to occupy the rooms and have not notified the Housing Office.

The housing shortage has eased since the beginning of the Fall Quarter when students were being housed in basements in the lower quadrangle.

At present there are no vacancies in the upper quadrangle, Wadsworth said. "We do have a few vacancies in Alexander, Winston, Lewis, Everett, Graham, Stacy, Aycock and Cobb," he added.

Boost In Meal Prices Causes Student Strike

Special To THE DAILY TAR HEEL

PARIS, Dec. 10—University of Paris students, living on the much-fabled shoestring, went on a hunger strike recently when the Ministry of Finance boosted the price of meals at the student dining hall by one and one-third cents.

As a result, several thousand meals went unsold during the strike.

The University has six cafeterias where meals are served at about 17 cents a student. Many students are said to get by on one of these repasts every 24 hours. This practice, however, is not encouraged by officials of the university.

A typical meal in the P. U. chow halls consists of sardines and grated carrot, steak (horsemeat), mashed potatoes, string beans, cream cheese and brick ice cream—and six ounces of wine.

With the rise in food prices in Paris, American down-and-outers frequently purchase meal tickets from French students. Only students are allowed to buy tickets through regular channels.

Many of those attending the University depend on government subsidies to put them through school.

Swapping The Book

Establishment of a book swap shop to give students a better break on second hand book sales symbolizes dissatisfaction with the present Book-X system.

A $6 accounting book, after three month's use, nets $3. Resentment to the present plan was pinpointed in an October editorial: "The present policy of 'We don't need that one—sorry—tough luck' aggravates everybody. . . . and discriminates against those students taking uncommon or 'off-brand' courses such as country journalism, obscure political science courses, Russian, and Portuguese."

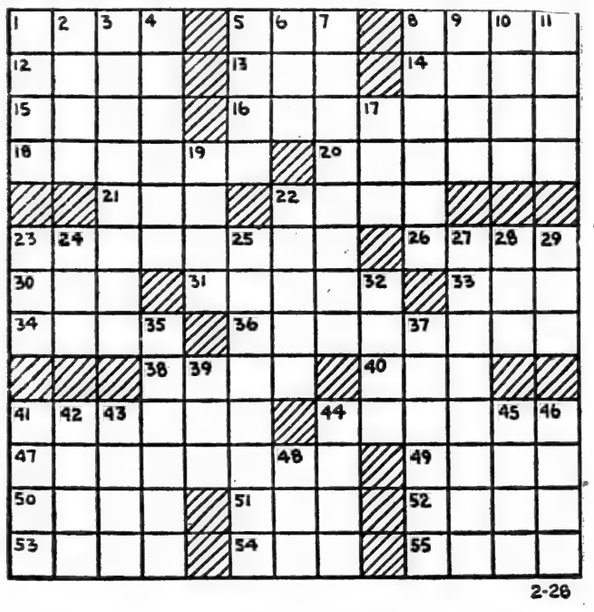
The Visiting Committee of the Board of Trustees was confronted with the problem a few weeks ago when Al Bryant, a student member of the Campus Stores Committee, asked for more exchange value on books handled by the Book-X. Bryant also asked that the 10 per cent rebate system be reinstated.

In spite of the work done by the trustees to solve the Book-X profits problem, and in spite of their efforts to work out a fair program for all three parts of the Consolidated University, we feel that the complaints on return books are valid. Think of the courses which change books twice a year. The students are left holding the books.

Bryant pointed out to the trustees that in four years time, student who gets $300 a year on a Campus Stores grant-in-aid spends about $60 a year on books anyway. How many students will get the scholarships? Profits expected from this year's academic year's operation range from $30,000 to $40,000 according to Business Manager Teague. If the Book-X instituted a program whereby students could get more money for their used books, this trading post would be unnecessary.

The swap shop will stay open only as long as students utilize it, and only as long as it is skillfully directed. Alpha Phi Omega has taken on a difficult job. We wish the service fraternity success.

In yesterday's front page story, two of the reasons listed why the old store failed were: "Students wanted too much for their used text books, and many of the books placed in the shop were old, and outdated."



The fact that this plan has actually worked in several other universities successfully should be encouraging to APO.

The Road Tour

We didn't see "The Inspector General," the latest Playmaker production. We've heard enough comment about the play, though, to be disappointed that this show has been chosen for the annual Playmaker tour.

The Playmakers take to the road each year, performing to various groups, but mostly high schools. We had hoped that "Death of A Salesman" could have been presented, because we feel even high school students could grasp and appreciate some of the great human elements in the play, the economic problems presented, and the outstanding performances by many in the cast.

Evidently, comedy wins out over tragedy for the secondary school generation. That's unfortunate. It shows that high school groups are shown the mediocre, instead of the best, in this particular case.

Party Line

Newspapers are not run by all the people. They are monitored by strong, thoughtful men who are looked to as leaders.

These leaders have a responsibility to the millions of readers who look to them for news, information, and interpretation of complicated current events. For many readers the pages of newsprint are the only means of education. They are in a sense the textbook of the contemporary scene.

A Negro newspaper, one with many readers, has distorted truth and betrayed the trust of the people. This isn't any sin, according to tabloid editors and proponents of yellow journalism. But others don't agree.

The Pittsburgh Courier "reported" on the recent State Student Legislatur in Raleigh by saying in a headline "Chapel Hill Students Reflect Jim Crow Pressures." The story that followed was a perfect example of how not to write an unbiased newstory.

"The 'Jim-Crow' pressure of the administration at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill has apparently seeped through to intimidate some of the school's white male students," said the "account." The rest of the story sang of the same slanted prejudice in a consistent off-key manner.

Those who have watched State Student Legislature know that it has paved the way in expressing students' liberal and democratic views, particularly on the question of racial equality.

Leaders from colleges and universities throughout the state sat side by side in Raleigh last month. Some had liberal ideas. Others were more conservative. Many students wore blue suits, while others preferred gray. And some had black skin. Others had white.

It was just that casual. No one said, "Look at us. Now aren't we being liberal." But instead leaders worked side by side in a way that personified such glorious and much-used phrases as the American way-of-life and "all men are created equal."

Skip the flagwaving and look at the State Student Legislature. That's democracy in action.

But one reporter betrayed his trust and distorted the facts. It is regretable.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON—Inside reason why General Eisenhower sent his apologies to the U. S. troops which were kept standing for inspection in the Korean cold was because an overzealous brass hat had ordered the men to wear dress uniforms, not winter uniforms.

Dress uniforms have no ear flaps and, as a result of waiting two hours and fifteen minutes in bitter cold, a lot of ears and noses were frozen.

Naturally when the troops saw their visitors in nondress uniforms with ear flaps, while they wore dress uniforms, there was resentment.

Eisenhower hit the ceiling when he heard what had happened, sent his apologies for keeping the troops waiting.

Modest Uncle Omar—When Charles E. Wilson was up at the front with ROK troops, he saw them shooting tracer bullets into the side of a hill. "What are those little red balls?" asked the new Secretary of Defense, who apparently has a lot to learn about defense but is learning the hard way. . . . Meeting his son, Maj. John Eisenhower, in Korea, Ike told him he celebrated his election as president by buying Mrs. John a new fur coat. . . . In Seoul, Ike slept in General Van Fleet's own bedroom, while Van Fleet slept on a cot in the laundry. Gen. Omar Bradley slept in the guest room which is on the street side. The Secret Service didn't consider it safe for Ike to sleep in a room on the street, but didn't seem to mind what happened to Uncle Omar. . . . Uncle Omar, incidentally, got pushed around more than any other VIP in the party—chiefly as a result of his own modesty, partly because some officers in Korea didn't recognize him. The unassuming man from Moberly, Mo., usually found himself looking over the shoulders of photographers. . . . Herb Brownell, the new Attorney General, left his clothes in Seoul because of the hurried getaway.

Ike's Security—It was Jim Rowley, head of Ike's Secret Service squad, who vetoed the proposed parade through Seoul. . . . Despite the fact that President Rhee had arrested 20,000 people as security risks, Rowley learned that the Communinsts had smuggled about 200 agents into the capital. So he decreed: "No parade." . . . On the last day of Ike's visit, Dr. Syngman Rhee was frantic because Gen. Eisenhower had not returned Rhee's call. The President of Korea had called on Ike, but Ike had not called on him or posed for a photo with him. So Rhee kept sending the head of the Korean Army to see Eisenhower, urging that he call on the Korean president. Finally Ike did so, and, on his last day, their pictures were published sitting together. . . . Though Rhee is strong with the Korean people he is not so strong with the politicians. For Ike to have left without posing for a picture would have meant loss of face for the president of Korea.

Some people are still laughing and some are still chewing nails over Gringo politics at the inauguration of the new President of Mexico.

The hospitable Mexicans have a habit of inviting all sorts of people to their inauguration, regardless of government protocol. Thus Gen. Alberto Salinas, Mexican military attache, sent a special plane for Gen. Harry Vaughan, aide to the president, for Gen. C. J. Mara, aide to Vaughan, and Gen. Wallace Graham, doctor to the President. They weren't picked as delegates by the State Department, but the Mexicans brought them down anyway.

Likewise Mexico invited the new Veep-elect, Senator Nixon. However, Nixon was not an official delegate, so he telephoned Assistant Secretary of State Ed Miller, asking that he be officially appointed.

On top of this, the new Secretary of State, John Foster Dulles, also called Miller asking that Nixon be appointed; while Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge called John Steelman at the White House, saying that it would be embarrassing to Nixon if he were not an official member of the U. S. delegation.

So Nixon was appointed.

However, arriving in Mexico, Nixon proceeded to give the American delegation, of which he was by that time an official member, a wide berth. He snubbed Secretary of Agriculture Brannan, head of the delegation, never phoned or even spoke to him.

Finally Brannan, in turn, declined to stand in the same receiving line at the American Embassy with Nixon.

However, the Mexican government gave Nixon four bodyguards and he had a good time seeing the sights.

The people who had the best time of all, however, were the Mexicans, watching the gringos snub each other.

The Ram Sees

A bio-science teacher at Michigan State told his class that he was disgusted because so few of his students believed in flying saucers. Then he reached into a bag and started hurling china plates across the lecture room.

Express Yourself

Editor:

It certainly is a good thing that the "swap shop" will open Monday.

On Wednesday we both went to Steele Dorm to retrieve whatever money we could for various books that had been previously purchased there. We went knowing well that we would receive very little in return for the amount that we had paid for them at first.

We showed the man behind the counter the books, and he replied that they already had more than enough of those books in stock. Naturally, we didn't feel too happy about the situation. However, there was no other recourse open to us but to save the books which were now useless to us. The books had cost more than they were worth in the first place, but we don't intend to discard them now.

We write this letter in hope that this new system of re-selling books will be cooperated in by all the students. We definitely, as college students, should not be the victims of unfair business practice.

Christmas Seals

Although the annual Christmas Seal Sale has done much towards cutting the death rate due to tuberculosis in the United States, the road ahead is still a long one. This year 40,000 more people died from TB than died from any other infectious disease. Right here in North Carolina, 2,088 beds are currently occupied by TB victims, and hundreds of others are waiting for space: many of these will never recover because of the wait.

Here on the campus, Alpha Phi Omega has generously donated time and effort to the distribution of Christmas Seals to the student body. Out of every dollar received as a result of this effort, seventy-five cents will be used locally, the remainder going to national and state associations for research and organization.

So please be generous. A dollar isn't much if you spend it these days, but a dollar donated can save a life.

Carolina Takes Tigers, 82-56

Grimaldi Scores 26 For Tar Heels

By Tom Peacock

Led by co-captain Vince Grimaldi's near-perfect play, Carolina's basketball team whipped the Clemson Tigers, 82-56, last night in Woollen Gym for its fourth straight Southern Conference victory.

Grimaldi made 11 of 12 field goal attempts and added four foul shots in as many tries to lead the Tar Heels in scoring with 26 points. The six-foot senior guard from Philadelphia didn't commit any personal fouls, making his work for the night almost perfect.

Carolina was never behind in the easy win. After Clemson tied the score at 2-2 in the first minute of play, a quick Tar Heel field goal gave Carolina the lead that was never threatened.

Freshman sensation Jerry Vayda trailed Grimaldi in scoring by 9 points, making eight field goals and one foul shot for a 17 point total. Carolina co-captain Jack Wallace hit in double figures, scoring 10 points, and John McGraw and Barry Ryan led the visitors with 14 and 10 points respectively.

The speedy Tar Heels made 32 of 62 field goal attempts for a 51.5 percent shooting average, their best of the season.

Tar Babies Lose 74-68 Game To Raleigh Caps

By Melvin Lang

Raleigh High staved off a determined drive by the Carolina jayvees last night to register a hard-won 74-68 upset victory over the lax Tar Babies.

Playing one of their poorest games so far this season, Carolina was never in the game except for the last two minutes of the first half and in the closing minutes of the final period. Despite the fact that Carolina controlled the ball throughout most of the first half, the alert Caps took advantage of every break thrown their way.

Raleigh entered the hectic fourth period with a 13-point spread in their favor, 54-41. Julian Adams quickly increased the Raleigh lead with a layup soon after the tip-off. Raleigh maintained its wide margin until midway of the quarter when Gerald McCabe and Glen Stephenson began to hit for the Tar Babies.

Trailing 62-48 after three and one-half minutes of play, McCabe connected on a one-handed push from the right corner and Stephenson hit on a free throw to narrow the margin to eleven. Charlie Wickham made a layup for the losers to cut the score to 62-53. Still on their scoring spree, Stephenson and McCabe pushed in a basket apiece to bring the margin down to five, 62-57. Adams finally broke the Raleigh scoring drought at that point with a snowbird, but McCabe came back with a push and Wickham hit on a shot from the free throw line to make it 64-60 with 3:20 left in the game.

Thomas King and Lennox Johnson hit for Raleigh to carry the margin back to six, but Wickham connected on two free throws and McCabe hit again from the right corner to place the score at 67-64, Raleigh. After Johnson had hit on a free throw, Don Neilson came back with two free tosses for the Tar Babies, making the score read 68-66. King made a layup for Raleigh, but Stephenson connected once again with his push shot to bring it back to two points, but Raleigh took over from that point to take command of the game and went on to win, 74-68.

Science, Art Are Kindred, Not Opposite

Science and art, far from being opposite and alien to each other, "are cognate and kindred, in method and in essence."

This is the conclusion of Dr. Archibald Henderson, widely known mathematician and longtime head of the Mathematics Department in the University. He delivered the principal address at the 500th meeting of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society this week.

This conclusion, Dr. Henderson said, is the result of "50 years of study and reflection.

"The discoveries of natural science, the divinations of literature, the theories of philosophy, tend anew to establish an inescapable 'rapprochement' between art and science, and to recognize in the Creator both artist and scientist," he declared.

Dr. Henderson quoted passages, from Aristotle to Einstein, in support of his thesis. Furthermore, to illustrate the close kinship of science and art, he cited such historical figures who were eminent in both fields as Goethe, Poe, Echegaray, Schnitzler, Lewis Carroll, S. F. B. and Marston Morse, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Osler, H. G. Wells, W. B. Smith, Einstein, Eddington, Jeans, Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin.

The occasion of the 500th meeting of the famed Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society at the University was marked by a dinner party especially for Dr. Henderson and members preceding the address given in Phillips Hall. Dr. Henderson was presented by Dr. Paul E. Shearin, head of the Physics Department, president of the society this year. Dr. Wayne A. Bowers of the Physics Department is secretary-treasurer.

Dr. Henderson called attention to some of the scientific achievements of men associated with the Society, the first being Elisha Mitchell, an eminent geologist for whom the organization was named, who lost his life while engaged in research on Mount Mitchell.

Dr. Henderson expressed an "unpayable debt of gratitude for the stimulating influence of this Society for the past 69 years in the promotion of research."

Working Chorus

Volunteers In Graham Sing, Seal

The magnetic Christmas music of singing students in an upstairs room of Graham Memorial recently attracted over 30 onlookers who stayed to harmonize with the chorus of workers.

Jerry Campbell, Alpha Phi Omega president, watched the group that joined the service fraternity in preparing Christmas seals for the mails and remarked with a laugh, "It's great. Everyone that stops by stays to help us get these seals out." The last words of his sentence competed with the loud voices.

"I just came up to pop some pop corn," said coed Shirley Gee, looking up over the mountain of white envelopes decorated with Santa samplings. "But I'm sure glad that I stayed," she managed "Jingle Bells."
to shout above the strains of

Lynn Chandler, who "just came up to get a drink of water," was stuffing the Yule stickers into an envelope and bellowing a tune in a husky alto voice. Tish Rodman, a late comer, added a few more tunes to the group's repertoire and a big hand to the work.

Workers representing Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity, Alpha Gam sorority, dorm dwellers and almost all other campus groups, participated in the singing work session.—LK.

Bishop Wright Will Preach Here Sunday

The Rt. Rev. Thomas H. Wright, East Carolina bishop and former UNC Episcopal student chaplain, will lead several services here Sunday.

Bishop Wright will preach and administer confirmation at the Chapel of the Cross Sunday at 11 a.m. He will celebrate Holy Communion at 8 a.m. and at this service corporate communion will be held for all Episcopal students from East Carolina.

The bishop will address the Canterbury Club Sunday night at 6 o'clock.

After being student chaplain here in 1930 and 1931, Bishop Wright served at Lexington, Va., San Francisco and San Antonio before he was appointed bishop. He is the grand chaplain of Sigma Nu social fraternity and a member of the Episcopal general convention's Program and Budget Commission.

Mock Trial Tonight At 7

Judge Hubert Olive of Lexington will preside over the mock trial tonight of coed Virginia Wilson who is charged with the "murder" of Carman Nahm.

The trial will be held at 7 o'clock in the Law School court room.

The prosecution will be headed by Harry Faggart Jr., Concord. The defendant will be represented by Roger Hendrix, Winston-Salem.

The alleged "murder" took place in Miss Nahm's room several weeks ago. Miss Nahm, chairman of the Women's Council, was supposed to have facts on a case relating to Miss Wilson.

Miss Nahm died of poisoning, the coroner ruled.

Staying Here?

Already the Y has heard from some people who would like to have international students visit them over the vacation.

Someone In Korea Will Die For You Today

NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON — President Truman said yesterday that Gen. Douglas MacArthur, like any decent man, should give him his solution to the Korean War. Truman told a news conference that MacArthur and President - elect Eisenhower both have a duty to come forward immediately with any solution they may have which will end the conflict and save American lives.

WITH EISENHOWER, Aboard USS Helena — President - elect Eisenhower arrived yesterday in Pearl Harbor for high-level military talks before going on to New York to confer with Gen. Douglas MacArthur on the former Far East commander's "solution" to the Korean war. No date has been set for the meeting with MacArthur, but Eisenhower is due in New York Sunday and it was believed the meeting would take place early next week.

ABOARD USS HELENA — An authoritative source disclosed yesterday that Atty. Gen.-Designate Herbert Brownell has completed plans for a giant housecleaning in the Department of Justice. Brownell, the informant said, plans to fire anyone whose name has been even remotely linked with government scandal.

WASHINGTON—The Supreme Court yesterday was still hearing public school segregation cases. The high court ruling, which may come next spring, will affect not only the five areas whose cases are being argued, but 17 states in all which require completely or partly separate school systems for white and Negro children, and four more where segregation is permitted.

Yule Pageant To Be Given On Saturday

An original 16th century German Christmas play, spoken and sung in German, will be presented by the German and Music Departments in the University tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the Playmakers Theater.

The play, which deals with the story of the Nativity, will include numerous old German Christmas carols which will be sung by soloists and a chorus. A musical background will be furnished by a string orchestra under the direction of Edgar Alden of the Music Department.

The production is under the direction of Herbert W. Reichert of the German Department, assisted by the instructoral staff.

Reichert said the presentation is "an attempt to bring to Chapel Hill one of he most colorful aspects of the German Christmas tradition, and at the same time provide a means of developing a facility in beginning students of German for the spoken language.

Only beginning students in German were selected for the roles.

The leading roles will be played by Jean Herring, Winston-Salem, as Mary; Wade Williams, Savannah, Ga., as Joseph; the Rev. Joel Savall, Chapel Hill, as Gabriel, and Joe Sturdevant, Cary, as the innkeeper.

U. N. Model Assembly Is Planned Here

Organizing Meets Will Be Conducted In Winter Quarter

A model United Nations Assembly will be organized here after Christmas to give students the opportunity to study problems facing the UN, John Faust said yesterday.

Faust, who is chairman of the YMCA Committee on the United Nations, said all campus organizations will be asked to have delegations to the assembly.

Individual students wishing to participate in the organization are asked to attend planning meetings which will take place weekly next quarter. At these meetings all the particulars of the model assembly will be worked out. Students to represent each country will be selected from among those interested. Such model assemblies have been held in different schools around the country, but this will be the first program of its type in this area, Faust said.

Actual sessions of the model assembly will not begin until Spring Quarter. All available information will be obtained from the UN so that sessions will run as true to form as possible with actual problems being discussed. Other members of the original forming group are Sue Fink, Judy Alexander and Purabi Bose.

"It is hoped," Faust said, "that all students interested in the work of the United Nations will take part and that such a program as this will become an annual attraction on the University campus."

Faust said further information may be obtained by writing Miss Alexander, Box 310, McIver Dormitory.

CAP Planes To Bombard Chapel Hill

Chapel Hill will be bombed tomorrow with 2,500 Freedomgrams as part of the state-wide Crusade For Freedom campaign.

The bombardment will take place at 2:15 p.m. and will be conducted by planes of the Civil Aeronautics Patrol.

Gordon Gray is state chairman of the crusade.

It is hoped that these Freedomgrams will be retrieved and signed by Chapel Hill residents and students, officials say. In signing, one pledges his moral and financial support to the halt of the spread of communism throughout the world.

Conference Meeting Is Today At Clemson

Jones Resignation Not Best Solution

Presbyterian Outlook, widely read but unofficial church magazine, declared editorially yesterday that the "forced resignation" of the Rev. Charles M. Jones, Presbyterian pastor here, was not the "wisest solution" of problems confronting the church.

The magazine also pointed out that the Judicial Commission which recently issued a report on the church was not empowered to dismiss the pastor or officers, but was told to "investigate thoroughly the total situation in the Chapel Hil church and to report back to the Orange Presbytery."

The commission evidently realized this at last Sunday's meeting when it accepted a counter proposal from the church officers to hold election of officers soon. The commission had asked that all the officers resign.

Commenting on the report, the Outlook noted that the findings would be true of practically any other church in the Presbytery.

The magazine also observed. '. . .Take the statement that being a Christian is more important than being a Presbyterian which the commission looks upon as being the crux of the matter. We should like to think that all Presbyterian ministers might be guilty of the same charge."

The magazine questioned why the Orange Presbytery had not taken action on "irregularities", which have "marked the life of this congregation for many years, before this time." The magazine also urged that the Presbytery establish a second Presbyterian church here to create a place of worship for those not satisfied with the present one.

SAM SELDEN

Selden Reads Dickens Tale Sunday Night

Samuel Selden, chairman of the Dramatic Art Department and Playmakers director, will give his annual reading of Dickens' famous "A Christmas Carol" Sunday at 8 p. m.

The reading wil be given in the Playmakers Theater.

Selden has made this an annual reading for Chapel Hill and University audiences since 1944, following the tradition set by the late Prof. Frederick H. Koch, founder of the Playmakers. Koch read the classic to audiences from 1918 until his death in 1944. Koch gave a total of 278 readings in all sections of the country.

A feature of the traditional program will be the singing of familiar Christmas carols by a 100-voice children's chorus under the direction of Mrs. Jan Philip Schinhan and Mrs. John Newell of the Chapel Hill public schools. The chorus wil be accompanied by piano and organ.

Special stage decorations will be designed and executed by William I. Long, technical director of the Playmakers.

Prior to the reading, Chapel Hill and University residents will be given an opportunity to contribute to the Orange County Empty Stocking Fund, sponsored by the Chapel Hill Junior Service League.

Congregation Will Decide About Jones

The Presbyterian Church congregation will meet Sunday to act on a recommendation to "express confidence" in the Rev. Charles M. Jones, pastor.

Mr. Jones has been asked to resign by the Judicial Commission of the Orange Presbytery. The commission presented its case last Sunday.

In a resolution suggested for adoption at this meeting, a group of members of the church say, "We deplore what seem to us unsupported assumptions and unjustified conclusions in the Commission's report . . . we deplore the commission's belief that the welfare of the church and the glory of God can be served by depriving us of the leadership under which we have grown in the grace and knowledge of our Lord . . . We urge that representatives of the Presbytery and of the church seek a constructive solution of the present situation."

In reporting to the congregation last Sunday, the commission issued a request that if Jones

Biggest Items Not Included For Discussion

Issue Of Bowls Looms As Tough Confab Question

Special To THE DAILY TAR HEEL

CLEMSON, S. C., Dec. 11 — The annual Southern Conference Winter meeting opens here tomorrow and its foremost problems are not even listed on the agenda.

Among prickly issues likely to be raised are bowl games, eligibility of freshmen on varsity teams, and a possible breakup of the 17-member conference.

Duke has submitted a proposal of control for the grants-in-aid worry that has confronted the conference and speculation has it that it will be accepted.

The solution is patterned somewhat after the one used in the Southeastern Conference. If it passes, then an athlete who after graduation from high school or prep school has agreed in writing to accept financial aid from one SC school, would be ineligible to compete at any other member school under grants-in-aid.

The proposal is an attempt to curb bidding among the conference schols for outstanding high school athletes.

After the 1952-53 school year freshmen will not be allowed to compete on varsity teams and discussion as to whether or not the rule will be put in effect during the next year will probably be brought up.

Most of the college presidents in the conference are on record as being opposed to allowing the frosh to compete on varsity teams again, but the small-school members of the conference claim that they cannot operate unless freshmen are allowed to play.

The bowl question will undoubtedly be discussed but it is doubtful whether any change will be made in the present SC stand on the matter.

Last year the conference ruled against accepting bowl bids and Maryland and Clemson were both put on a year's suspension for playing in the Sugar and Gator Bowls. Since that time many of the members have altered or reversed their stands on the situation.

President Gordon Gray of North Carolina, a staunch leader in the ban drive last winter, has altered his position on enforcement somewhat and now is in favor of the member schools "letting their conscience be their guides."

The final problem which may be brought before the members concerns the spliting of the unwidely 17-member conference into two more workable groups, not an entirely new idea

Previous attempts at the same idea have gone little past the discussion stage but there is a feeling here that more positive action may be taken during this meeting with a strong possibility of a committee being set up to study the problem and to report back at the annual spring meeting.

Carolina is being represented at the meeting by Chancellor Robert B. House.

A Fatal Game Of Cops And Robbers

Korean Vets Divided On Way To End War; All For A-Bomb

By Rolfe Neill and Elaine Gibson

Korea.

The guys who've been there are tired of "a game of cops and robbers that leaves people dead. Let's get it over with."

The GI's who served their time peaceably want it settled "with the peace talks. War is the worst thing we can have."

However, the vets all are agreed that an ultimatum should be delivered to the Reds—signed and glued with atomic power. If the Communists won't settle without it, drop the bomb, the vets say.

After 15 months in Korea, Pete Moore said, "I know what they're going through. If we're going to try to settle it verbally, I definitely think our men over there should have more authority in their peace talking. This lack of authority in the cease-fire talks, I think, is the cause of the stalemate.

"I do not khow whether the fault lies in the UN or NATO, but I do approve of agreement through authority—or else."

James McNeill, who put in a year in Germany, said, "I'm for settling it by any peaceable means . . . I have no end-all solution for the Korean situation, but I am frankly against all-out war."

Another veteran (there are now 98 in school on the Korean GI Bill), Archie Barksdale, talked of NATO, the mutual security organization set up in Europe by the West.

We've got NATO, the UN and another section which comes under NATO which is called MD AP," he said. "Out of these organizations, it seems to me we should be able to gain enough strength to act with some authority over there. I think that an ultimatum should be issued to the Chinese Communists in North Korea with the A-bomb influencing their acceptance or denial of our ultimatum."

If they don't accept, he added, it's the "or else."

Both positions were summed up in the opinion of Frank Lukiski: "I am for authority backed by a strong display of action. It is time matters were settled."

Meanwhile yesterday, the dirty war on the dirty peninsula went on as 3,000 Communists succeeded in taking the crest of Little Nori Hill.

Korea.

And It Came To Pass

As final exams draw nearer, as gay decorations begin to fill the store windows, as pines and firs blossom with bright lights in churchyards and homes, and as news of holiday plans arrive from home, many of us will turn again to that familiar passage in the second chapter of Luke.

Many of us remember with nostalgic longing the times we've heard and thrilled to the Christmas story, in words in a family group, in pageants at Church, and in carols sung from house to house.

Many of us, too, will wonder, perhaps, at certain parts of the story. Many of us will seek the true meaning and significance of this story. Did Jesus come to bring "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace good will toward men?" If so, what has happened to peace and good will? Or is this story mis-translated.

We seem to be a long way from peace this Christmas. We have observed Christmas in this country through the blackness of two great wars and several years of a great depression, and still we seek the spirit of Christmas; still we seek peace.

Some of us can look down at draft cards this Christmas and wonder how long we have and what it all adds up to. Some of us can remember friends and loved ones only in war memorials or airmail letters. Some of us can remember the poverty and despair seen in other lands.

Some of us will spend our time this Christmas in fragments of passages from Isaiah; some of us with Church doctrine.

All of us will do well to spend some of our time this Christmas during the peace and leisure pondering over the meaning of our personal philosophy, why do we do what we do; our personal religion, our relationship to God or a higher power; and our deeds and actions, our relationship with a human and changing world.

As New Years is a time for new resolutions, perhaps the weeks of Christmas should be a time for examination and evaluation of what we as individuals, and, as a nation, have done and where we stand now. "As I am, so is my nation. If I am weak, my government will also be weak; if I am corrupt, my government will also be corrupt."—are good words to consider.

It might also be well to consider some of the words of our new Secretary of State this Christmas. "The political leaders of the so-called "democratic" nations, who depend on popular choice, seldom try to develop moral power and a sacrificial spirit until war is upon them and when the task is no longer one of averting war but winning it. If this time we wait that long we shall have waited too long. No one will be able to 'win' the next war."

Yes, Christmas wrappings and decorations are important; passages in Isaiah and Church disciplines are important. But how much more important would it be this Christmas to develop, in the words of John Foster Dulles, "a faith with spiritual appeal that translates itself into practices which, in our modern, complex society, get rid of the osrdid, degrading conditions of life in which the spirit cannot grow."

A happy and creative Christmas to all!

—Fred Crawford

Let's Remember Polk

"Who is James K. Polk?" was a common question in 1844, when the Democratic party nominated the first dark horse candidate in presidential history. That generation of Americans soon got an answer, however, as Polk proved himself the strongest man in the White House from the era of Jackson to the turbulent days of Lincoln.

"Who was James K. Polk?" is a question which few people around this campus can answer with any degree of accuracy, even though Polk heads the list of successful University alumni. He is the forgotten man at Carolina; his name appears on no building; there is no public marker in honor of this great Tar Heel.

He was a native Carolinian whose parents moved to Tennessee when he was still a youth, yet he returned to Chapel Hill for schooling, graduated with the highest honors in 1818.

Only seven years later he was in the House of Representatives, where he served for 14 years. The last four of these were spent in the Speaker's chair, which he left to become governor of Tennessee.

He was the youngest man ever to become president in 1844, and his administration freed more continental territory from foreign flags than the administration of any other president, save Jefferson's. In 1847 he journeyed here to deliver the commencement address, and demonstrated that he had no bitterness towards his state of birth, a Whig state which had failed to support him for the office. It was during this visit that he advocated placing a marble marker over the graves of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Caldwell, then poorly marked. (Caldwell was the first president of UNC). That monument stands today on the North campus, but nowhere is there a marker or reminder of Polk, except a small slab of cold marble in Memorial Hall. Is this a suitable way to honor one of the greatest son's of this university?

One hollow honor was bestowed upon Polk when the Board of Trustees decreed that the stretch of grass between South Building and the Library be known as "Polk Place." They made no provisions to erect a marker, monument, or statue on this lawn to signify its name, but merely published a small notice and then promptly forgot the matter.

The trustees meet in February to handle University matters, including the selection of names for new buildings. We suggest that the name of James K. Polk be placed on the list of possibilities.

Polk should not only be on the list, but be placed at the top. And in addition, the board should take definite steps to erect an appropriate marker on Polk Place.

A Shepherd Leading His Flock

"Don't you know it's the Sabbath, Mr. Pringle?" asked Z.T.

"I was just helping Mr. O'-Leary get his car out of the ditch," said Mr. Pringle looking like the little boy who had been caught with his hands in the jam jar.

"Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy," said Z.T. crisply, "The earth was created in six days; the Lord rested on the seventh. We must do likewise, Mr. Pringle."

Mr. Pringle scurried off trembling, and Z.T. walked on, looking straight ahead. "Mr. Pringle should read his Bible more carefully," thought Z.T. with a frown . . .

"Mr. Flowers! May I see you a moment?" sparks flew from Z.T.'s eyes.

What is it, sir?" asked Mr. Flowers apprehensively.

"What do you think you're doing?"

"I was just talking to Bessie about her husband; he's sick and . . ."

"You were addressing her as if she were a white woman, Mr. Flowers. Kindly remember the problem we have in keeping the niggers in their place."

"The Bible says to love your neighbor as yourself," ventured the bold Mr. Flowers.

"The Bible says nothing about the niggers, Mr. Flowers! If we don't keep them in their place, they'll soon want to marry our daughters. Would you like that, Mr. Flowers?"

"No," said Mr. Flowers looking at the ground.

Z.T. walked on. He thought Mr. Flowers would have had more sense . . .

"Mr. Pepys!" said Z.T.

"Yes sir."

"What's the idea?" Z.T.'s lips were tight and his voice was shrill.

"I was just talking to Mr. Hirshberg about . . ."

"You were laughing and joking with a Jew," said Z.T. "And on the Sabbath."

"Mr. Hirshberg's a pretty good fellow . . ." started Mr. Pepys, his voice a bit unsteady.

"Don't you realize that the Jews repudiated Christ, Mr. Pepys? That they crucified him." Z.T.'s face was dark.

"Yes sir," said Mr. Pepys sadly.

Z.T. walked on. He felt worried and a little tired. His job was difficult—keeping his flock on the right path. Why were men so stupid? Particularly when it was all written down in black and white. If men would only read their Bible more carefully and use a little sense! Z.T. speculated on what kind of a place this would be if he were suddenly removed as leader of his flock. Shuddering a bit at the thought, Z.T. pulled his overcoat tighter and strode briskly up the steps leading to his house.

"You Fellows Want One More Of Me?"

Pick Any Bowl

From now till January 1, 1953, there will be much ado about the coming bowl games. Various systems and theories will be expounded by the great prophets and seers of the sports world. I've got a system, too, which I will appropriately label the "Wood System". My system is more scientific than the others who rely on hunches as well as statistics. I shall not divulge the secrets of my near infallible system other than to say that it is based partly on comparative scores.

Let's see now . . . Furman beat West Virginia which beat Penn State which beat Pitt which beat Notre Dame which beat Southern California . . . I guess I'm ready now.

Rose Bowl: Southern California 6, Wisconsin 4. (All points scored on safeties by these defensive stalwarts)

Cotton Bowl: Texas 30, Tennessee 29. (10 field goals by Texas — Tennessee makes prodigious goal line stands; Tennessee makes four T.D.s and four extra points — extra point for breaking a Texan's neck.)

Sugar Bowl: Georgia Tech 186, Mississippi 11. (If the score seems high, you must remember that Tech is noted for its razzle-dazzle offense.)

Orange Bowl: Alabama 1, Syracuse 0. (Default: too many sportswriters predicted an Alabama victory; Syracuse didn't see any sense in making the long trip for nothing — forgot about the money, didn't they?)

Gater Bowl: Florida 16, Tulsa 15. (Florida cheer-leaders the difference. Tulsan cheer-leaders were too busy enjoying the alcoholic amenities which their own state does not afford.)

There exists the remote possibility that one or two of my prognostications may be in error, either in whole or in part. Do not dismiss the Wood System as fallacious however, for the greatest seer of them all, Drew (rhymes with "skew") Pearson, missed eight out of nine of Eisenhower's cabinet.

Stewpot

They all sat around the tables drinking, complete with toasts for each round. And they had had enough rounds that they had run out of toasts to propose.

Then one had a thought. "I have it," he said. "Let's have a toast to sin!"

This met with everyone's approval. "To sin," they cried! But Jack, at one of the tables, did not join the toast. This caused a murmur of amazement.

"What? Aren't you joining in our toast to sin, Jack?" asked the one who had proposed it. For Jack had always been with them in everything through the years.

"No, I shan't join," he replied. And then he told them why.

"I have always believed in knowing what one believes, and the true essence of his belief. Before I came to college I had thought I would be against sin. But I did not really know what sin was.

"So, through my first three years of college, I have drunk deep of the cup, and I have experienced sin in all of its phases, from the greatest to the least.

"Now I am experienced in the ways of sin. And after all my experiences with this part of life called sin, I have decided I was right in the beginning. I am against sin, and I know what I am against. Now I do not speak as one who thinks he is against sin. I am an opponent of sin because I know what it is.

"This must be our cardinal rule: If we are going to be against sin, we should know exactly what we are fighting."

And the toast was changed. It became a toast to knowledge, and Jack was acclaimed as the wisest of all those who drank that day. And rightly so. For he was a senior.

And from that day forward, a new attitude was born. For all who indulged in sin were looked upon with pride. Because everyone knew it was only in the interests of true knowledge.

And all, from the lowest to the highest, proclaimed:

"How can one be against what he has not experienced? Persons in this category work only on hearsay."

And the educators were happy to the highest degree, because true knowledge was finally becoming the goal of all college love of carousing and hell-raising. It was all for the cause of knowledge, you know.

Way Off Campus

As the last hours before finals grow shorter and shorter, do you find yourself in a panic? Do you see latin verbs jumping over a fence when you close your eyes? Do you imagine your beloved Professor John "Physics" Energy gloating over his newest quiz? Do you know what happens when you mix hydrogen, the cost of living, and Hamlet? If you can answer yes to one tenth of these questions, relax, you'll be a straight "A" student by December 20.

If, however, you are absolutely abnormal and have no worries (after all, exams don't really begin until Saturday), let's take some time to check on the BF (before finals) activities of students studying elsewhere in the U. S.

This week, a rambling wreck of Georgia Tech fame came out in favor of no more true-false problems, an end to multiple choice horrors, and freedom from discussion questions. No quizzes for the engineers? The Tech junior who proposed the plan says that exams will take the form of favored crossword puzzles prepared by enthused instructors. Anyone for ye olde objective type?

Nine o'clock office management class was just too early for one Michigan State coed. She had noticeably flaked out over her desk when the amused professor noticed. Writing "Rock-a-Bye Baby" on the board he conducted the class in a loud rendition of the lullaby. A more red-faced coed has never been serenaded.

The first love of a college organization is a contest. Proof has been garnered from the exchange papers of the following institutes of Higher learning.

The APO's at the University of Maryland are sponsoring an Ugly Man contest to select the most repulsive monster on the campus.

Out in sunny California a "Penny-A-Vote" Santa Claus contest is raging over the University.

Sophomore men at the University of Oregon have put their razors on the shelf until December 16 when the superior beard will be chosen.

Hillbillies at West Virginia University competed to see if they still upheld the mountaineer tradition of being terriffic sharp-shooters. At last word the Turkey Shoot was underway outside the city limits.

California's San Jose State is awarded the blue ribbon for the most unique contest. Several weeks ago the freshmen and sophomores staged a giant mud brawl behind the baseball diamond bleachers. The struggle was to determine the superior class — but how could you tell?

As coaches chewed fingernails and paced floors wondering whose team was to occupy the Rose, the Orange, the Sugar Bowls, Maryland knew who was playing in their Powder Puff bowl. The Kappa Delta and the Kappa Kappa Gamma teams are entering the bowl for the fourth straight year. Says the KD coach, "My boys — I mean girls — are the roughest, toughest bunch of football players ever to set foot on a gridiron." Perchance we could borrow these Amazons as our J-V team next season.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL can be thankful that its readers have not yet submitted letters like this one sent to the editor of the Vermont University paper:

"To the Editor; I like your newspaper. It is good. It is sometimes funny. My roommate lets me read it. I read it. I have a dog. His name is Rusty. He likes to read it. I have a cat. Her name is Kitty. She reads it. I am in the 1st grade. I am 69 years old. Mother says I'm crazy and Mother is always right. I like your newspaper. I am crazy. A friend."

However, your letters are welcomed.

Teaching Teachers

There is a very good reason why a shortage of school teachers exists. To obtain a teaching certificate it is necessary to take four courses in the School of Education. It's ridiculous that people who aspire to teach have to take some of these courses.

I have been listening to my friend Frank, and others complain about their education courses being asinine. I finally asked Frank what was wrong. He pointed to his book-shelf and said, "Just pick out any education book and see for yourself." I selected a book entitled "Psychology in Education" by a man named Sorenson from the University of Kentucky. It is used in Education 71, a course required of every student graduating from the Division of Teacher Education.

I glanced through the book and immediately found some gems. "Girls acquire the body that is characteristically womanly, and boys acquire the characteristics of a man!" That's an example of the enlightening statements in this book. How many college students who have the privilege of taking this course would have known that? Where else is such intriguing information to be found? Prospective teachers would never be able to tell the boys from the girls in their classes had they not read that statement.

"There is a wide range of human intelligence." No! Who'd have thought it? You can see there is much to be learned in Education 71.

Now here's a little gem: "The term growth refers to increase by becoming larger and heavier." Very informative, isn't it? The beauty and simplicity of such discerning thoughts, found throughout the book, is magnificent. Obviously our would-be teachers are getting a wonderful insight into their profession.

The crowning statement is this: "Teachers are no crazier than other people." This can set the prospective teacher's mind at rest. How nice for him to know this. Now they don't have to fear winding up on Dix Hill in Raleigh any more than others.

Is it any wonder that students shy away from becoming teachers when they are required to take courses like this? It's torture to have to sit and listen to garbage such as the above statements. It would be funny if it were not so tragic. I've met many students on the campus who started in the School of Education and shifted because they were required to take such courses as Education 71.

If a man is going to teach, say History, is he more able to teach it by taking Education 71 rather than by taking an extra history

Chilean Professor Likes Planetarium

A professor of history and political science in the University of Chile, Dr. Guillermo Feliu Cruz, said here recently that a visit to the Morehead Planetarium was "one of the biggest thrills of my life."

Dr. Feliu, who is spending a week on the University of North Carolina campus as part of his "intellectual goodwill tour" of a number of American institution of higher learning, attended the current Planetarium presentation "Star of Bethlehem," and termed it a "remarkable performance."

What Are You Doing New Year's?

Once there was a Girl who was the Prettiest Pigeon in Town. She stood out like a well-constructed Swan amid a Gaggle of Geese. So, during the Christmas holidays, Our Girl had a hatful of Invitations. Eighteen just for the big New Year's Eve dance. Her Problem was which Swain to accept. She summoned her small sister, aged 10.

"Chick," she said, "here is a lesson in Practical Psychology. See these eighteen invitations? Only one is from a man of Poise, Personality and Perception. Masterful . . . considerate . . . enterprising . . . subtle . . . sophisticated . . . a Man of Promise. Do you know which one it is?"

"Jeepers no," said the wee Sister, "I don't." From the heap Our Heroine selected One Invitation—on a yellow Blank. "Always," she said, "pick one that comes by Telegram." The Small Fry gulped, "Golly, can you tell all that from a Telegram?"

Big Sister closed one lustrous Eye. "Never forget it," she said. "You can't miss."

VA Lists Yule Gifts For Hospitals

Persons who wish to send Christmas gifts to patients in VA ospitals are reminded by the Veterans Administration that certain presents are inappropriate or medical reasons, and that ertain others are not needed.

The VA said candies, cookies and other sweets are not permitted in the diet of diabetics, and that certain other foods are restricted according to the individual medical requirements of other patients.

However, bulk gifts of Yuletide goodies and seasonal package foods are acceptable for distribution to patients by the managers, the announcement said.

Since VA hospitals normally buy sufficient quantities of magazines, playing cards, puzzles and games, gifts of this kind are not in demand.

The VA is not permitted to make public the names of veteran-patients, so gift donors are requested by the agency not to ask for the names of patients for use in sending gifts and correspondence. The VA said such persons may send their gifts to the hospital managers for presentation to patients.

Because of numerous requests for a listing of Christmas presents that are considered most appropriate for veteran-patients, the VA suggested the following items:

Books of canteen tickets (in denominations of $1 and $5), which veterans can use in shopping at VA canteens. These books can be bought from the canteen or Special Service office at any VA hospital, domiciliary or other sizable VA installation. The purchaser should request the selling office to deliver the books to the recipient.

Cigarettes, cigars, pipe tobacco and smoking utilities, such as lighters.

Sundry toilet articles, such as shaving lotion and hairdressing.

Stationery, fountain pens, automatic pencils, etc.

Handkerchiefs, socks and other suitable haberdashery.

New or selected phonograph records, to suit the patient's musical tastes.

Frank McDonald, sophomore end at U of Miami, caught his 13th forward pass of the year late in the Marquette game when Don James, trapped behind his line of scrimmage, tossed an underhand heave upfield. It put McDonald into an eight place tie in the Hurricane record books for most number of passes caught in a season.

'John Brown's Body' Took Nearly 2 Months Rehearsal

By Betty Johnson

Nearly two months of intensive rehearsals went into the production of Stephen Vincent Benet's towering American epic, "John Brown's Body."

The play comes to Memorial Hall Jan. 9-10, under the sponsorship of the Carolina Playmakers.

Working out a method carefully conceived by Paul Gregory, producer and Charles Laughton, top-ranking stage and screen star who did the necessary editing and condensing of the poem, the three members of the cast — Tyrone Power, Judith Anderson, and Raymond Massey — performed a prodigious feat of memory alone.

Each of the two men had to master five parts, Miss Anderson seven. In addition, Laughton individualized each of Benet's epic characters so that the lines about him are delivered in a particular rhythm.

Over and above the immense task of the players was that of the chorus, directed by Walter Schumann. Laughton worked arduously with Schumann on the musical contribution, setting the cues, rhythms and choral effects for the Civil War songs, of both North and South, that are brought in to heighten the effect.

"Needless to point out," declares Laughton, "this had to be a genuine labor not only of love but of devotion and of faith. All of the individuals who accepted the major responsibilities of the enterprise approached their tasks with dedication and a quiet pride and a sense of privilege.

"It is not too surprising that out of such consecrated efforts as these something of beauty and nobility should have come. Something that will cause all patriotic Americans who view 'John Brown's Body' to thrill with pride in their country, its pioneers, its men and women of heroic stature, its glowing role in the onward-marching pageant of history and the grandeur of its manifest destiny."

CO-STARS RAYMOND Massey (left) and Tyrone Power confer with director Charles Laughton (right) over the script of "John Brown's Body." The Paul Gregory production, sponsored by the Carolina Playmakers, will be presented in Chapel Hill Jan. 9-10. Tickets are now on sale at the Playmakers' office in Swain Hall.

2 Views On Russia; Says N.Y. Author

NEW YORK, Dec. 11—A new study of the Soviet Union by Dr. Corliss Lamont of Columbia University, authority on Russian affairs, is expected to precipitate a controversy among diplomats during the current session of the United Nations.

This new work by Dr. Lamont, entitled "Soviet Civilization," has been published by Philosophical Library in New York. It seeks to give an evaluation of Soviet affairs, domestic and foreign. It is based on Dr. Lamont's study of Soviet Russia over the past 20 years.

The book attempts to steer a middle course between the view that Soviet Russia is an inferno of evil and the view that it already has brought into being a paradise beyond all criticism. Dr. Lamont reports that the Soviet Republic is a complex mixture of good and bad, of achievements and failures, of reforms and dictatorship.

Vet Priority In Hospitals Announced

Veterans who have served in the armed forces anywhere in the world since June 27, 1950 are entitled to Veterans Administration hospitalization under a priority system.

The VA yesterday released the following system of classification which entitles:

1. Those needing hospitalization because of injuries or diseases incurred or aggravated in line of armed service duty since the start of the Korean War.

2. Those with non-service-connected disabilities who state under oath that they are financially unable to pay hospital charges elsewhere. These veterans must wait until a bed becomes available.

Patients requiring emergency medical treatment may be taken directly to the nearest VA hospital.

Milford Again Coming Here; Topic: Religion

Chancellor T. R. Milford of Lincoln Cathedral, London, England will deliver the first of a series of three lectures on the doctrines of the Trinity at 4:30 p.m., Jan. 7 in the Faculty Lounge of the Morehead Planetarium.

He will be here the entire month of January as guest lecturer in Religion 45, Religions of the Modern World. His phase of the subject will be the religions of India and the Near East.

As Chancellor of Lincoln Cathedral he is the Canon in charge of educational activities, is therefore head of the theological seminary and he is titular guardian of the Magna Charta.

This is not Chancellor Milford's first visit to our campus. In 1950 he was Fulbright Professor in the Department of Religion. He lectured on Biblical Theology and Comparative Religions.

CAMPUS CAROUSEL

Dennie Schoeppe

Dear Santa Claus, (well that's the way everything else starts at this time of year, isn't it?).

Chi Phi's will celebrate Christmas tomorrow night with a party for members and dates at the house.

Alpha Gams' Christmas party Wednesday night ended in a caroling session 'round the campus.

Chi Psi's also started out partying last night and ended up caroling, here, Duke and everywhere.

Overheard conversation at the Phi Delt house, Leroy Townsend: "I think I'll go over and hear that Messiah." Don Harley: "Messiah? Who's he?"

Tri Delts held their Christmas party Monday at the house after a buffet supper given for the chapter. Had another Wednesday at which pledges serenaded actives and gave them presents.

Chi O actives and pledges will exchange presents at their Christmas party Monday.

Many congrats to Carolina's Dixie Classics representative Sue Cheek, Pi Phi of Shelby, N. C.

No, Billy Barnes isn't pinned. Thank you Deke's.

Tonia Rowe, Burgal, Alpha Gam of last year and now at St. Mary's, married Phi Gam Lewis Bryan, Goldsboro.

A dinner party in honor of alums Carl Kirby and Lawrence Windley, and George Harris was given at the Phi Delta Chi house Wednesday.

Tri Delt Sally Trowbridge, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., and Phi Delt grad George Blackwelder have set the date of their wedding at Dec. 27.

Not to be outdone, the old moss faces in the Tar Heel office are actually taking off for a Christmas party of their own, Saturday nite at Watts. Egg nog, presents and Biff Roberts, too.

Lambda Chi's recently serenaded pinups Doris Casey, Marcia Zachary and Margaret Dickinson, who are pinned to Bob Leonard, John Rendleman and Buddy Streetman. Hope we got those names in the right order.

AKPsi's Christmas banuet was held last night and ended with Christmas caroling.

Theta Chi's will have their Christmas party for brothers and pledges tomorrow night at the house.

TEP's Christmas party will also be at the house tomorrow night.

Alpha Gam's and Spencer girls entertained cerebral palsy victims last Saturday with two parties at the house. That's the real Christmas spirit.

KD pledge Hilda Simpson, Buie's Creek, is pinned to SAE Buck Massey, also of Buie's Creek. KD actives and pledges celebrated Christmas with a party Wednesday. They exshanged toys which were later given to orphans.

Think you're all wonderful for giving those orphans parties, good luck on the exams, Merry Christmas, Happy New Year and see you next year.

Opportunities in Optometry

Optometry is a profession offering special advantages to ambitious young men and women. Its scope is constantly expanding. Eighty per cent of the Nation's millions depend upon the Doctor of Optometry and his professional skill in conserving vision. There is a shortage of optometrists in many States.

The Doctor of Optometry possesses the dignity of being a professional man. He renders an essential service to the health and well-being of his community. Substantial financial rewards are obtainable almost from the beginning of his practice.

U. S. Department of Defense and Selective Service grant optometry students the same consideration accorded medical students.

The Doctor of Optometry degree can be earned in three college years by a student having sixty or more semester hours of Liberal Arts credits. Such students will be admitted at mid-year by Chicago College of Optometry.

Chicago College of Optometry is centrally located in the heart of the world's greatest center for teaching in the healing arts. It is nationally accredited and is splendidly equipped. Clinical facilities are unsurpassed.

Run-Off Set Next Quarter For Council

A run-off election between Art Einstein and Bill Patterson for a junior seat on Men's Council will be held early next quarter, Student Council President Ted Frankel said yesterday.

Jerry Cook, chairman of the Elections Board, and Einstein were present at the council meeting.

The council stated, "In the election held Nov. 18 Arthur Einstein Jr. was unconstitutionally denied a run-off for junior seat in Men's Honor Council . . ." The statement listed the sections of the Elections Laws and constitution that the statement was based on.

In essence, the laws state that if there are more than one seat open in the race for a given post, a run-off is automatically held. Other races require special requests.

AID NEEDED

Three Negro elementary school children will go without a Christmas unless Carolina students come to their aid. Any students wishing to contribute toys or money are urged to contact SG President Ham Horton in the SG office in Graham Memorial.

8 Beers In 2 Hours Slows College Senior

TROY, N. Y., Dec. 11.—Drinking eight cans of beer in less than two hours didn't befuddle him, a college senior says, but it certainly slowed his driving reactions.

It was all part of a campus safe-driving campaign.

Richard Somers Jr., 21, guzzled the eight cans yesterday at intervals of 15 minutes. His reactions were tested on a machine that simulated highway driving conditions.

After the first can, Somers' reaction time was .382 of a second. After the eighth, it was .475.

Somers, 6 feet 3, is co-captain of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institutes football team and president of the senior class. He's from West Orange, N. J.

After the test, he insisted he wasn't drunk, only "very tired."

His girl friend drove him home.

Holy Cross Is First Carolina Foe In Classic

Carolina Swimmers To Meet Bainbridge On January 10

Carolina's Southern Conference swimming champs will put their perfect record on the line when they meet the powerful Bainbridge Naval Training Station on January 10, 1953.

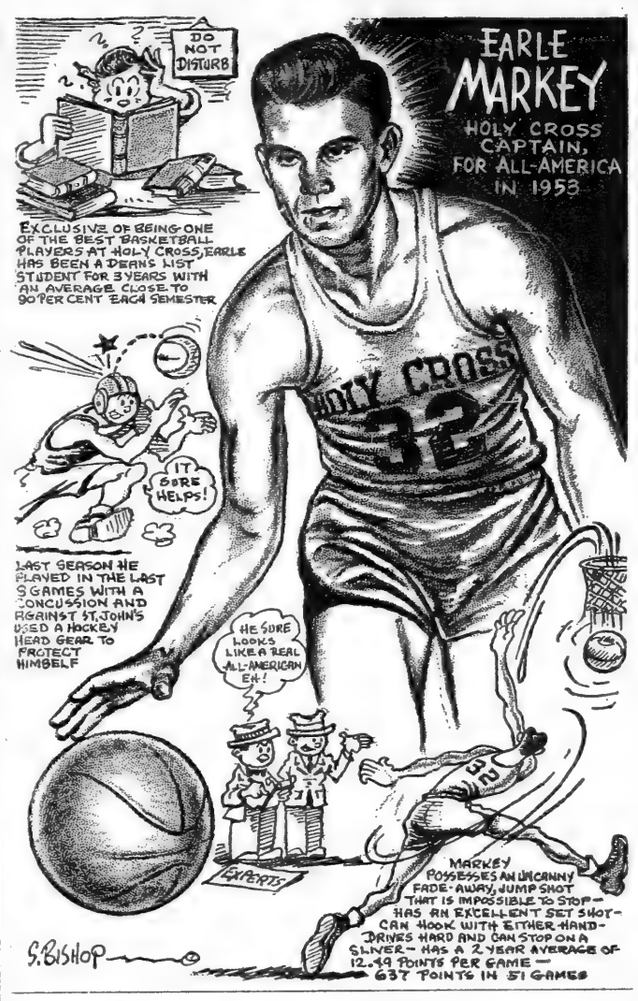
The Tar Heel swimmers have had two meets thus far this season — defeating both Virginia Military Institute and Duke. Members of the squad will cut short their Christmas holidays and return to Chapel Hill on Dec. 29 to begin preparations for the Bainbridge meet.

In winning their tenth consecutive conference title last year, Carolina went through its second straight undefeated season with a perfect 12-0 record. In the last 14 seasons, the Tar Heel club has compiled a record of 102 wins and only 12 defeats.

Included in the string of wins last season was a 54-30 decision over the Bainbridge club. The Naval swimmers consistently put out a competitive squad, and are expected to put up another stiff battle for Carolina.

Thus far this season, Co-captain Donnie Evans and Buddy Baarce have led Coach Ralph Casey's Tar Heels. Other leaders have been Barry Wall, Joe Kelso, Jack Edwards, and Buddy Heins.

Coach Casey is in his first season as head coach for the Carolina squad. He succeeded veteran coach Dick Jamerson when the latter resigned last summer.



Edwards was one of the outstanding performers in the 47-37 victory over V. M. I. for the Blue Dolphins. He broke the old V.M.I. pool record in the 100-yard freestyle, chipping off two tenths of a second as he edged past Evans.

The Bainbridge meet will be held in the Naval team's home pool. The Tar Heels will make their first appearance in Chapel Hill on Jan. 16, when they meet Georgia Tech. Other games with Virginia Tech, Davidson, Florida, Emory, Georgia, and Virginia remain on the schedule.

Coed Register

A directory of Carolina coeds and their local and home addresses is now on sale in the Y.

The directory was compiled by the YWCA Cabinet. The directories are selling for 50 cents.

Tar Heels To Be Idle Until Raleigh Tourney Dec. 29-31

By Tom Peacock

The Carolina basketball team, winner of its first four starts in the Southern Conference, will remain idle until December 29 when it plays its first non-Conference rival, Holy Cross, in the first round of the Dixie Classic.

The Crusaders have been the number one team in New England for the past five years, and although they lost four starters through graduation, they are still rated tops in their district.

Holy Cross will play three games during the holidays, and the experts will wait for the outcome before declaring odds on the Classic battle in Raleigh. On the strength of Carolina's four wins and the Crusaders one start, the game is rated a tossup.

Show Speed

The Tar Heels have shown speed and the ability to score under the direction of Frank McGuire in his first year as the Carolina pilot. Carolina finished its pre-Christmas season Wednesday night by defeating Clemson, 82-56, for its best scoring effort of the season.

Carolina has averaged better than 70 points per game this season, taking The Citadel, 70-50, Washington and Lee, 67-48, and University of Richmond, 80-64, in its other three starts.

Sparking the Tar Heels this season is six-foot, three-inch freshman forward Jerry Vayda. Vayda has been high scorer in two of Carolina's games, and leads the team in the scoring department with a total of 75 points. Co-captain and guard Vince Grimaldi follows Vayda with 65 points, and scored 26 against Clemson for the highest individual effort of the year.

All-America Candidate

Most of Holy Cross' hopes rest on its All-America candidate, captain Earle Markey, a six-foot, one-inch guard that made honorable mention on every All-America squad last year. Markey is the Holy Cross high scorer, and was All-Catholic, All-American last year.

The Crusaders had an excellent 24-4 record last year, and coach Lester "Gus" Sheary will be out to make a good showing the school's first try in the Dixie Classic. Holy Cross has never played Carolina, but has a 1-2 record against N. C. State in tournament games.

State Meets Eastern Ky.

Special To The Daily Tar Heel

RALEIGH, Dec. 11 — Eastern Kentucky's powerful cage squad invades Reynolds Coliseum here tomorrow night to take on N. C. State's Wolfpack in one of the leading intersectional attractions to be played over the weekend.

The two clubs have met in only two games previously. State defeated the Maroons, 65-64, in an overtime contest two years ago, and came back again last year to take a 70-58 victory after trailing throughout the entire first half.

Both clubs will be at full strength for the game. Eastern Kentucky is paced by the scoring of their 6-7 center, Elmer Tolson, and guards Roger Geyer and Bill Bales. Bill Kukoy and Bobby Speight will open at forward for State, with Mel Thompson in the center slot and Dave Gotkin and Eddie Morris at the guards.

would resign, the Presbytery would grant more money for student work in the church.

Dr. Frank P. Graham, former president of the Consolidated University and an elder of the church wired another officer recently. In supporting Mr. Jones he commented, "We hold that the Presbyterian Church has a deep personal, spiritual and historic meaning identified for us with the . . . meaning and mission of Christianity. We find in the Chapel Hill church, under our spiritually devout, personally humble, and selfishly dedicated minister, a Christ-centered church devoted to the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man . . ."

Gymnastics Team Announces Slate

Director of Athletics Chuck Erickson yesterday released a six-meet schedule for Carolina's 1952 gymnastics team.

The Tar Heels, coached by William T. Meade, open the season with the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis on January 10. The first home meet for the Tar Heels is scheduled for January 29 with Duke University's Blue Devils in Woollen Gymnasium. The Tar Heels also meet Army, West Virginia and Mississippi Southern.

The Tar Heels won two and lost four last season.

James (Chuck) Goodin of Waynesville and Andy Bell of Greensboro have been elected co-captains of the 1953 Tar Heels.

The schedule:

January 10—Navy at Annapolis, Md.

January 29—Duke at Chapel Hill.

February 7—West Virginiat at Morgantown, W. Va.

February 14 — Army at West Point, N. Y.

February 20 — Mississippi Southern at Chapel Hill.

February 28 — Duke at Durham.

March 7 — Southern Intercollegiate championships at Hattiesburg, Miss.

March 20 — N.C.A.A. championships at Syracuse, N. Y.

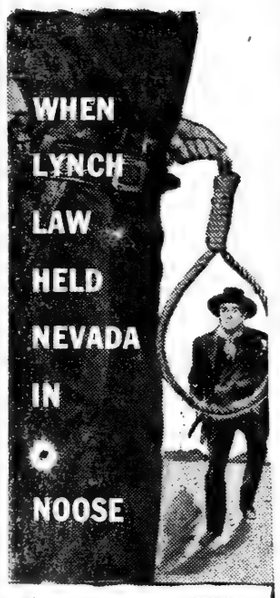
Society Hears Local Doctor

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Dec. 11—Dr. Ernest H. Wood of Chapel Hill, N. C. this week described the perfection of a new type of diagnostic X-ray tube.

Called the "fractional focus tube," the new development allows enlargements of X-ray pictures without loss of detail. Dr. Wood spoke before the Radiological Society of North America.



Large pictures are valuable, Dr. Wood said, because they often give information to the radiologist which cannot be learned from conventional films. In particular, bone diseases may be better examined by these enlargements. The new tube has not been thoroughly tested on other parts of the body.

The society's meeting ends Sunday.

Chancellor House Goes Back A Few Years

N. C. Progress Due To Looking 'Outward And Forward'—Johnson

Despite numerous handicaps due largely to bad government in its first century and a half, North Carolina has forged ahead to become one of the most progressive states.

It is because, as Gerald Johnson said recently, it has always "looked outward and forward instead of backward and inward."

That view was emphasized by Chancellor Robert B. House in an address before the Faculty Club at its meeting this week. He cited some of the highlights in the State's history.

In existence for approximately 150 years, North Carolina was ruled by the Lords Proprietors for the first 75 years and by the Royalty Colony during the next 75, Chancellor House pointed out. Most of the governors during that period were shiftless, inefficient and dishonest, he said.

"But the State has never had a poor governor since the State became free as a result of the Revolutionary War," the Chancellor asserted. "Our governors since that time have been magnificent public servants, and our public institutions as a whole have been well run."

University graduates, he said, have played leading roles in the organization and functioning of most of our public and private institutions and other state agencies. It is a record in which University alumni can take great pride, he added.

The present day University is touching the lives, in one way or another, of 770,000 of its four million citizens, the Chancellor said.

Ascribing the State's early handicap largely to its political boundaries, Chancellor House said that in the early years North Carolina was looked down upon by Virginia and South Carolina and regarded by those two states as "lazy and unprogressive."

The State was also greatly handicapped, he said, because it had no important seaports or east-west trunk railways. The situation became so discouraging between 1800 and 1860 that one-third of the population moved to other states.

A great deal of the state's progress since the turn of the century must "be credited to the wisdom and foresight of our industrial leaders who have played a major role in giving us diversification and in developing the State. For the first time our farms are not being mortgaged to New York banks.

Our ancestors were not mostly rogues or shiftless people as some Virginians or South Carolinians will try to tell you—but they were a conservative people made up of English, Scots and Germans in about equal proportions. There was little immigration to this State after 1775."

MANILAL GANDHI, son of Mohandas K. Gandhi, was arrested in Johannesburg, S. Africa, along with 37 others, six of them whites, for taking part in organized defiance of the race segregation laws. Patrick Duncan, son of Sir Patrick Duncan, former Governor General of the Union of South Africa, was also among the whites arrested.—NEA Telephoto.

Watch Cardinals

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 11—Enos Slaughter warned the National League to watch out for the Cardinals this summer after he had spiked rumors of his retirement at a press conference here today.

The venerable Card outfielder said he had no idea of quitting the game. "I've taken care of myself," he said. "My legs are good and I still have a lot of games left."

Practice For Teachers Set In 19 Schools

Student teachers from the senior class at the University will be allotted to practice teaching assignments at 19 schools throughout the state during the winter term.

The 34 student teachers, 26 women and eight men, will devote the entire winter term, January 5 to March 19, in residence in the community where they will be assigned.

Twenty-one will practice at high schools, teaching in their chosen subject-matter areas, and 13 in elementary schools where they will work in one of the grades of their choice.

This practice teaching constitutes a full load of credits under the University system of scheduling, and is a required course for all education students who have not previously taught under a state certification.

When Stanley Kramer wanted to make a movie about prizefighting, he made "The Champion"—one of the great movies.

When Stanley Kramer wanted to make a movie about The West, he made "High Noon"—one of the very great westerns.

When Stanley Kramer wanted to make a movie on prison life, he made "My Six Convicts," certainly the best of its type.

Now Stanley Kramer brings you EIGHT IRON MEN—his kind of soldier story.

EIGHT IRON MEN gives you the story of all G.I.s—the humor and heroics, the horseplay and the unheralded gallantry. Yes, here's war with a brand new twist—and wait till you meet her!

And wait till you meet the eight great and gutty guys who dated her in their dreams . . . Sergeant Mooney, who could always spare a couple of stripes to save a buddy . . . Collucci, with his tall tales of the big girls that didn't get away . . . Coke, the hothead, and Sapiros, the clown . . . Small, the little man who wasn't all there . . . Carter, who'd bat 1.000 in any man's league . . . Ferguson, too lazy to dream his own dreams . . . and Muller, whose sister kept them all in fruitcake—and cheesecake.

There's not one phoney foot of film in this whole magnificent story. EIGHT IRON MEN is all true. It's all tremendous. And it's all tremendously exciting!

Coach Emily Post

WHILE THUMBING THROUGH the latest edition of Emily Post's diatribe on human behavior at the dinner table, I happened upon a chapter entitled basquette—or how to watch a basketball game and enjoy it. A few simple rules, apparently foreign to the Woollen Gym hoop society, were laid down by the cagey dowager, which, if followed, promise to afford all an enjoyable four quarters of peaceful basketball—if not a winning team.

Point number one on Miss Post's list of rules concerned the stripe-shirt phenomena known as officials. Contrary to popular belief, the officials, as Miss Post points out, do have fathers and should be treated in the same kindly manner as other wayward waifs. During the years since Dr. Naismith first threw a lop-sided sphere through a rickety peck basket, a fable has been handed down that the officials are on the floor for the sole purpose of cheating the home team. Their job, according to Miss Post, is to call the plays as they see them. Although most fans, from their vantage points high up in the corner of row triple Z can see the plays better than the officials on the floor, basketball custom has it that these glass-eyed thieves must stay on the floor, close to the players, and try to call the fouls, etc., from there.

Peeling Off

THEN, TOO, MISS POST asks us to remember that basketball officials are at a disadvantage in comparison with their football brethren. Those who call the same misplays of the gridiron sport are protected from the fanatics by a stretch of green grass and an armed array of policemen. They, unlike the basketball referees, are not subjected to violent bronichial Bronx salutes because the howling patrons are forced to sit in seats roped off a safe distance from the field of combat. Then, too, with all the pileups and mingling of human limbs, many of their mistakes go undetected. Those who are careful purveyors of the basketball error are sometimes too involved with the spirits of the game to catch the same mistakes at Kenan Stadium. Thus we have point one of basquette—forget the point spread and remember the officials. Most of them are henpecked, anyhow.

Miss Post's second point concerns the flying of paper airplanes. Admittedly, the vast Woollen Gym could easily be mistaken for a converted hanger, but it is hardly the place for juvenile test pilots to try their aeronautical ability with sharp-pointed dive bombers. The players have a hard enough time watching the ball without having to bother to drag off an aerial inspiration that has cracked up at mid-court. A program is something you can't tell the players without and should only be used as such (except when you want to bean the poor soul in front of you after Carolina has gone out front by one point with only three seconds remaining in the game). There's no sense throwing the programs to the players on the court to read. They already know who's in the game.

Sitting Pretty

THE BASQUETTE CHAPTER'S final point concerns baby sitting. The coaches, members of the opposing teams, and already cussed and discussed officials are concerned with the game. As much as they might enjoy it, they have little time to tote a tad upon their knee pads during the fracas. Children at basketball games should be heard and not seen. It seems that the Chapel Hill practice has been to dump all of the young 'uns off at Woollen Gym on basketball nights and then pick them up after two hours of leisure—their frantic energies completely spent in games of tag, follow the leader, and the newest and most popular one, Trip-'Em-When - They - Drive - For-Crips,-Boys-They-Fall-So-Hard-That-Way. They're all ready for beddy-bye by then.

Although each game presents new harrassing experiences for officials, players, and the coaches, Miss Post claims that if her three simple rules are followed, the game of basketball can be enjoyed by all.

Davidson Is First Foe At 8 O'Clock

The Carolina wrestling team, building for one of its most successful seasons in recent years, meets Davidson College here tonight in a Southern Conference match.

The Wildcats come to Woollen Gymnasium to open the season at 8 p.m.

Coach Sam Barnes' Tar Heels have been impressive in pre-season workouts and figure to be greatly improved over last season's freshman and sophomore-dominated team.

Missing from the starting lineup is ace Tommy Coxe but most of last year's team returns intact. Several regulars may miss the opening meet, including Earl Kendric, Miles Gregory and Tommy Stokes, but the Tar Heels will put a strong team on the mat for the opening encounter.

Harry Pawlik, captain, and Eddie Haines, Pete McGehee, Harvey Bradshaw and Andy Holt return from the 1951-52 team and will get good help from several newcomers. Arthur Gregory, Norman Lane, Phil Woods, and Gordon Forester are the best looking first year men.

The Davidson match is the Tar Heels' only test before the first of the year when they tackle the strongest schedule in the Southern Conference. Barnes' team meets every loop wrestling team with Duke, West Virginia, Maryland and Virginia Tech among the toughest. The Citadel, V.M.I., N. C. State, Virginia and Washington and Lee, all winners over the Tar Heels last season, are among other upcoming opponents.

NROTC Riflemen Second In Meet

Led by Raymon L. White and Elon A. Abernethy, the Carolina NROTC Rifle Team placed second in the first leg of the annual Southern Conference ROTC Rifle Tournament fired in the Frank Thompson Gymnasium at State College Saturday and are now in a good position to take the tournament for the 1953 year.

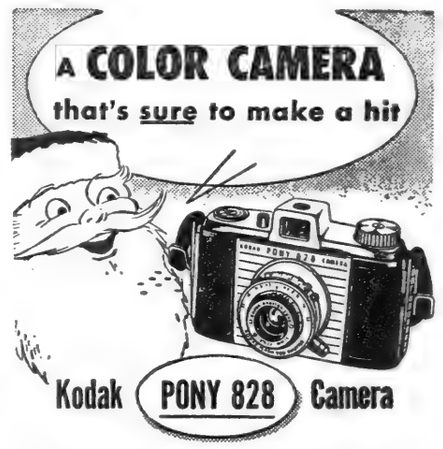
Ed Patterson Selected For Chem All-American

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 — Ed Patterson, outstanding guard and defensive linebacker for Carolina, was named to the first All-Chemical All-American football team today by the magazine "Chemical and Engineering News."

Made up of chemistry and chemical engineering students who excel on the gridiron, the team was named as a tribute to "those boys in the colleges and universities of the nation who have been able to combine the demands of high-powered, precision football with the even greater demands of the classroom and laboratory required for a degree in chemistry or chemical engineering," the magazine explains in announcing its first All-American selections.

Patterson, a sophomore at Carolina, played at an offensive guard position throughout the season. When Junior Seawell, regular defensive linebacker, was injured in the UNC-Tennessee contest, Patterson stepped into his shoes and became a defensive star also.

Other members of the team — all students at institutions accredited by the American Chemical Society—are: backs—Frey Wyant, West Virginia; Earl Byrne, Princeton; Bob Engel, Cornell, and Dick Balzhiser, Michigan; linemen — John Steinberg, Stanford; John Hall, Vanderbilt; Bob Burkhart, Case Institute of Technology; Tom Fieldson, Washington and Lee; Dick Pakos, Carnegie Tech; and Roy Ritter, Case.



Honorable mention was given to Jarvis Watson, Stanford back; Jim Lucas, Case lineman; Dale Peoples and Tom Warner, Carnegie Tech backs, and Frank Wengryzn, a Carnegie Tech lineman.

Fraternities Give Parties For Children

Christmas was brightened for 268 orphans and underprivileged children in the Chapel Hill area this year as fraternities entertained them with various types of Christmas parties.

This custom, started several years ago, has proved to be most successful for everybody concerned. Coeds cooperate with the fraternities in giving the parties, and such gifts as footballs, dolls and other toys are given the children who seem to enjoy themselves even more than their hosts and hostesses. Many a fraternity boy can be seen playing "horsey" to one or two small children beating him over the head with toy guns to spur him on.

Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity entertained 30 orphans from the Meta orphanage in Raleigh on Tuesday. The small guests played parlor games around the Christmas tree and Santa Claus, in the person of Osborne Lee, Lumberton, distributed gifts to each one. They were then given dinner after which a magician from Raleigh performed tricks.

Fifty negro children from four to six years of age took over the Kappa Alpha house yesterday as KA's and Tri Delts entertained. Ice cream, cake and candy were given the children and Santa Claus gave each a gift.

Sigma Chi actives and alumni held a Christmas party for 20 orphans from the Wright Episcopal orphanage in Raleigh. Renny Biggers as Santa Claus presented each child with a gift. Dinner was served, after which everyone had Christmas candy and played games.

At the Phi Kappa Sigma house, Alpha Delta Pi sorority aided members in providing Christmas fun for 50 negro children Thursday. Each fraternity member gave a child a gift and extra gifts were distributed as door prizes. Refreshments were ice cream and cake for all.

Kappa Sigma fraternity in conjunction with Pi Beta Phi sorority entertained 20 orphans from the Durham Methodist orphanage. Each child received two gifts from Santa Claus Gaither Walser. Refreshments were served around the tree amid Christmas caroling and game playing.

Alpha Tau Omega fraternity members and dates brought Christmas to 35 underprivileged colored children who are first graders at the Northside school. Mike VanSicklen was their Santa Claus and distributed gifts from beneath a huge tree.

Sigma Nu's and Kappa Delta's had a weiner roast and party for 30 children from the Methodist Orphanage in Raleigh, also. Bill "Pops" Page donned the Santa Claus outfit and beard to give them their gifts.

Beta Theta Pi's entertained 33 children from the Northside Elementary school yesterday. In addition to Christmas caroling and a party complete with Santa Claus and refreshments, they were shown movies. — DS.

Study And Sleep

If psychologists at Georgetown University are right, it may be possible for the next generation of students to study and sleep at the same time. All one would need is a dormiphone—that is, a record player with an automatic repeating mechanism. It has a built-in loudspeaker, an under-pillow speaker and an ear-piece.

The idea is that, while you sleep, the dormiphone repeats your algebra lesson to you throughout the night, grinding it into your subconscious.

At this stage, however, the dormiphone isn't very helpful to students studying for examinations. The Georgetown scientists are experimenting with nonsense syllables, not Shakespeare.

Here's a British Comedy That's Truly Sparkling

If you like your fun served with finesse rather than with loud noises, here's a delightfully entertaining movie.

In the hands of a less expert cast, and without a facile script, the story wouldn't add up to much, but this group of actors makes every minute of the film refreshingly diverting.

A horrible old character, noted for his practical jokes, expires while gaily setting fire to his nurse's newspaper, and leaves a will that perpetuates his particular brand of humor. A stony-faced spinster, renowned for her acid tongue and sadistic treatment of her servants, must, in order to reap her share of the old joker's fortune, work as a maid in a middle class home. If she's fired, she's cut out of the will.

A timid bank clerk, a slick ne'er do well playboy, and a very proper soul who furtively writes blood and thunder tales under a variety of names, are meted out similarly distasteful sentences. Their struggles to reverse their natural characteristics are wonderful to behold. Alastair Sim is an old hand at this sort of thing and his efforts to get himself arrested are hilarious, but Fay Compton, Guy Middleton, and Hugh Griffith are equally good.

The timing thruout is perfect, nothing is belabored and the story has many beautifully unexpected twists. Joyce Grenfell is another asset, as she always is, contributing a role at a toothy, flatfooted woman of a riotously revolting sort.

I would suggest that you make an effort to see this if you're in the mood for some unusually efficient comedy of a superior kind.

This movie will be playing Tuesday and Wednesday at the Varsity Theatre.

DTH Cuts To 5 Days

The Daily Tar Heel will publish five days a week for the remainder of the year at The News Inc. printshop in Hillsboro, Walt Dear, chairman of the Publications Board, announced yesterday.

The student newspaper will appear everyday except Saturday and Monday, and will remain a seven columns. The new printer ly, the paper published everyday except Monday.

"It was a question of size and cost. The board voted to remain sveen columns. The new printer was secured at a reduction in cost, but because of insufficient student fees, the board was forced to cut to five days a week," the chairman pointed out.

Student fees have decreased proportionately since the academic year 1947-48 when they reached $25,446.42. In '48-'49, they amounted to $24,714.37; in '49-'50, $22,828.53; in '50-'51, $18,949.86, and in '51-'52 $21,386.89. This year there is an estimated decrease from the figure $19,128.63 budget figure.

The need for a new printer arose when Orville Campbell, president of Colonial Press, Inc., in Carrboro, told the board he would be unable to continue printing the newspaper in the Winter Quarter.

Negotiations were opened for a new printer in the middle of Decmeber and The News Inc. turned in the lowest bid for a seven column paper. Hillsboro, the county seat of Orange County, is 14 miles from Chapel Hill and is a half-hour's drive from here, via the new road.

In the last two years, The Daily Tar Heel has switched sizes twice. In 1950-51 it cut its number of issues from six to four times a week. The board hopes that the five day arrangement will be a permanent one.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

NEW YORK—Winston Churchill said yesterday that resisting communism in Korea has "done more to improve the chances of world peace than anything else." The British prime minister, arriving here for talks with President-elect Eisenhower, said the danger of World War III "has receded during the last year." Churchill declined to indicate what subjects his talks with Eisenhower will cover.

—o—

WASHINGTON — Sen. Ellender (D-La) predicted yesterday that a projected move to revise Senate rules so as to make it easier to halt filibusters "will be beaten by better than a 2 to 1 margin." The test may come today or tomorrow. The Senate, after organizing under Republican control Saturday, recessed until today. Sen. Taft (R-Ohio), new GOP leader, apparently was in position to cut off debate and obtain a quick test at any time he wishes.

—o—

SEOUL. Korea—United States B-29 superforts bombed and flattened twin Communist key supply bridges to the Korean battlefront Sunday night—just as they were rebuilt after a raid three weeks ago. The Air Force described the bridges in the Huichon area of central North Korea as a "key link" in the Red supply line from the Kanggye Gateway south to Pyongyang and the battle sectors. Fires from tons of bombs indicated the Communists were moving supplies over the rebuilt bridges when the superforts hit their targets.

—o—

WASHINGTON — The federal budget which President Truman will send to Congress Friday includes about $41,000,000,000 for the Defense Department, informed sources said yesterday. They said the final budget figure is very close to the amount which the department asked for spending during the fiscal year 1954 which begins next July 1. Thus defense spending will represent over half of the reported $79,000,000,000 total of Truman's budget.

—o—

WASHINGTON—GOP leaders of Congress yesterday held out some hope of tax relief this year but they were not making any promises. Their "maybe" attitude was summed by House GOP Floor Leader Charles Halleck of Indiana. He told a reporter that tax cut legislation will get the green light if—and only if—Republican strategists are convinced it won't jeopardize a balanced budget.

—o—

CHICAGO—The traffic death toll for the long, four-day New Year's holiday passed the 400 mark as late accident reports were tabulated yesterday and safety experts said they believed it was a new record for the holiday. National Safety Council spokesmen said they were sure that 400 deaths were an all-time record for a New Year's holiday but added they will have to study their files to determine how much it surpassed the previous record. The all-time record for traffic deaths in any holiday was set during the recent Christmas period when 588 persons were killed.

Book Swap

The Textbook Trading Post will be open from 2 o'clock to 6 p.m. today through Friday in Graham Memorial.

The Trading Pos,t sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega fraternity, will buy and sell used textbooks.

Registration To End Today; 5,000 Seen

Registration for winter quarter will close at noon today.

Some 5,000 students, including those who registered before leaving for the holidays, are expected to enroll for the quarter. Class work began this morning.

All students not previously registered met last night to hear C. P. Spruill, dean of General College, and Ray Jefferies of the dean of students office, talk to them on student government.

Six orientation classes for new students will be conducted by Roy Holsten, assistant dean of students, on Tuesday and Thursday nights for the next three weeks.

Entertainment features during the coming week scheduled on the campus include "The Festival of Song," to be presented by Fred Waring's orchestra, on Thursday at 8 p.m., and two performances of "John Brown's Body," in Memorial Hall Friday and Saturday nights at 8:30.

14 Graduates Commissioned Ensigns, USN

Fourteen University graduates were among 777 men receiving ensigns' commissions recently at the Navy's officer candidate school at Newport, R. I.

The course leading to a commission was completed in four months and emphasized the same subjects taught in the NROTC curriculum throughout the country.

Three former Daily Tar Heel staff members were among the 14 from UNC getting their stripe. They were William T. Peacock Jr., Arlington, Va., former sports editor; Robert Bruce Melton, Chapel Hill, former managing editor, and William Jack Brown, Durham, ex-editorial assistant.

Others getting commissioned were Richard B. Allsbrook, Roanoke Rapids; Claude R. Wilson, Robersonville; Earl R. Betts Jr., Greensboro; Richard W. Cartland, Greensboro; James N. Sowell, Charlotte; Jerome C. Thompson, High Point; Robert H. Strickland, Carolina Beach.

Irvin M. Cohen, Lincolnton; Charles W. Dalton, Asheville; Fred L. Garner, High Point, and Karl N. Hill Jr., Charlotte.

Ballet Group Will Perform In Durham

DURHAM, Jan. 5.—Ballet Theater, recognized as the best ballet company in the United States, will be presented in Duke University's Page Auditorium Thursday as the first extra attraction on the Duke all-star concert program.

The ballet performance will be the first of three off-the-series features for which tickets are still available, manager J. Foster Barnes said. Others in this group are the Amreican Savoyards production of the Gilbert and Sullivan "Mikado" on Jan. 19, and the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra on March 5.

Stars of the Ballet Theater company are Alicia Alonso; Igor Youskevitch, acclaimed as the greatest male dancer today; John Kriza and Mary Ellen Moylan, all of whom were featured in the ballet's appearance here last year.

Always given a high critical rating during its opening New York run at the Metropolitan Opera House, Ballet Theater this year was recognized as "better than ever" primarily because of a much improved corps de ballet.

At Duke the dancers will perform an all new program of four ballets—two classical and two modern.

They will be the classical "Les Sylphides" set to the music of Chopin; an American ballet, "Billy the Kid," with music by Aaron Copland; the Grand Pas de Deux from Tchaikowsky's "The Nutcracker Suite" and the modern "Interplay" scored by Morton Gould.

The dance company of 100 travels with its own symphony orchestra, Joseph Levine, conductor. Now in its 14th season, the group will perform in 92 American and Canadian cities before leaving for a six-month tour of Europe next Summer.

Presbyterian Case Is Now Set Jan. 20

The final round in the Rev. Charlie Jones vs. Orange Presbytery fight still is to be fought.

A special meeting of the governing body has been called for Jan. 20 in Burlington. Originally the meeting was set for today but was postponed at the request of Mr. Jones and a church officer.

The meeting will be held at 11 a.m. at the First Presbyterian Church in Burlington.

Mr. Jones, pastor of Chapel Hill's First Presbyterian Church, has been under fire for his so-called radical views, particularly on the race question. Specifically, a Presbytery investigating group last fall cited that the minister's teachings in some cases were at variance with orthodox Presbyterian doctrines.

The church membership voted 156 to 14 not to ask for Mr. Jones' resignation and thus forced the problem back to the Presbytery. The Presbytery dropped one of its original demands when along with the firing of Mr. Jones, it asked that all of the local church's officers resign. The group later rescinded the latter request.

The church has a membership of about 400 people and has proved very popular with students.

MRS. DANZIGER DIES

Mrs. Edward G. Danziger, who with her husband operated Danziger's Candy Kitchen and Old World Restaurant here, died Friday, Dec. 26, in New York City following a heart attack.

Funeral was held Sunday, Dec. 28, at the Chapel Hill Methodist Church. Surviving are her husband and two sons, Edwin M. and Theodore M. Danziger, all of Chapel Hill.

Song Festival Coming Here For Thursday

The "Festival of Song" will be presented here Thursday at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall under the auspices of the Student Entertainment Committee.

The Chapel Hill performance is part of the festival's first nation-wide tour which will take the company of 33 people 16,000 miles through 36 states. The conductor is Dr. Lara Hoggard.

Dr. Hoggard is well known throughout the United States for his activities with choral clinics in universities, colleges, and high schools. His work is known to an even wider audience through his role as choral conductor for Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians on TV and as conductor of the Fred Waring Choral Workshop. He is on leave of absence from the Pennsylvanians while directing the Waring production of the Festival of Song on its current tour.

The Festival of Song is exactly what its name indicates. It is truly a festival, for the presentation stresses colorful costuming, imaginative staging and subtle lighting — techniques conceived and developed for the Waring television show. The music that local concert goers will hear includes some of the greatest choral music of all time. The program includes sacred and secular songs, classical and popular music, folk songs and "standards."

Admission is free upon presentation of ID card.

Only 1 Structure Approved; Meet Called For Today

By Rolfe Neill

Residents of 35 fraternity and sorority houses spent last night in condemned quarters.

They returned to school yesterday to find that formal "CONDEMNED" fire-hazzard notices were tacked to the front doors of all but one Greek letter house. The Chi Psi Lodge, which recently underwent remodeling, was the only house to escape the building inspectors' disapproval. The buildings are condemned above the first floor.

Local firemen and officials of the State Department of Fire Insurance who conducted the inspection found, in the main, one major thing wrong. Two methods of exit are required from every floor, and none, with the exception of Chi Psi, met the specification.

The inspectors also suggested that the town electrical inspector make a check of wiring in the buildings.

"The wiring in the older buildings apparently wasn't designed to take care of the load imposed on it," wrote State Engineer Kern Church. "These wiring systems are dangerous because of overloaded circuits."

The inspection was held in November but the results didn't come out until the latter part of exam week, Dec. 13-18.

Roy W. Holsten, assistant dean of students, called a meeting today for all fraternity-sorority presidents. The meeting is scheduled for 2 p.m. in the Morehead Lounge of the Morehead Building. Holsten will address the presidents and said he would discuss methods of complying wiht the requests as quickly as possible.

He pointed out that under state law 90 days is allowed for compliance with building regulations after a structure has been condemned. However, if the work is not complete at hte end of that time, an extension may be applied for, Holsten added.

The 90-day period began yesterday.

The findings of the check in each case were handed to the house residents along with a diagram showing how the defects might best be remedied.

Citing the general statutes covering fire precautions, the notices pointed out that a second means of exit for all rooms above the first floors would have to be provided so that should one stairway be closed by a fire or other emergencies, all occupants of rooms above the first floor would have another means of escape without having to pass the one involved.

P. L. Burch, local building inspector, said the inspection will be extended to all lodging houses in the town itself. Those not complying with the statutes will be required to swing into line just as the houses on campus, Burch said.

BA School's New Buildings About Ready

The School of Business Administration is expected to move into its new quarters sometime after the middle of this month.

Two of the three buildings are complete and the third should be ready by about January 15. Work remaining to be done is mostly concerned with outfitting the south building, officials say. This includes installation of chairs, desks and bookshelves. All of the seats in the auditorium of the center building have been installed.

None of the buildings have yet been named. This job falls to the Trustees. At present, the Business Administration School occupies Bingham Hall. No final disposition of Bingham has yet been made.

The three new BA buildings are behind on their completion schedule. They were hampered in December-January, 1950-51, by a strike of bricklayers, whose work shutdown at that time also affected some $15,000,000 worth of other UNC building underway. Later shortages of materials also prolonged the buildings' completion.

F. J. leClair, University landscape gardener, recently reported that some 4,000 plants are being set out in front of the three new buildings and the hospital. In the open spaces, leClair said, he is using mostly oaks, maples, poplars and dogwoods, utilizing broadleaf evergreens near the buildings.

For the court of the BA school. leClair said he is selecting trees that will match as nearly as possible those in the Manning-Saunder-Murphey court on the opposite side of the mall that runs from South Building to the Library.

The new BA buildings stand behind Memorial Hall on ground formerly used as a parking area.

Duke Artist Has Exhibit In Morehead

A collection of watercolors of North Carolina and other scenes by a Duke University artist, Robert L. Blake, are now on view in South Gallery of the Morehead Building.

A member of the Durham Art Guild and of the art faculty of Duke, Blake has exhibited in many Durham and local art shows and has won the popular award the last two years in the guild's spring exhibit. He also has won five awards from the North Carolina State Fair over the last three years, and early last spring he had a one-man show at the Bek Art Galleries in Durham.

A native of New Jersey, Blake studied at the Graphic Sketch Club, a Philadelphia art school, and has for a time head photographer and fashion artist for Kraft and Phillips, a men's fashion company in Philadelphia.

During the war he served with the armed forces and was stationed at Duke for a time where he assisted in the medical illustration department. Following the war he remained to become a member of the Duke Art Department as instructor in medical art and illustration.

A New Face In 1953

The first thing you'll notice about the new year's Daily Tar Heel is its new look.

We're proud of our new printer in Hillsboro. New equipment installed at the plant of The News Inc. will insure students of having a daily newspaper for the remainder of the year.

While you were prepping for exams right before Christmas, the Publications Board was facing a crisis—no printer and a financial problem. Colonial Press, our old printer, was unable to continue publication. The board was fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Ed Hamlin, a former Daily Tar Heel staffer himself. Working with the new printer is J. B. Holland, a topnotch mechanical superintendent, who has spent three years in handling the mechanical operation of your newspaper.

The printing problem was solved but the financial one was not. The Daily Tar Heel had a difficult first quarter financially. If you'll remember, we changed in September from a tabloid to a seven column newspaper, which we are still maintaining. But that costs money, a lot more than the tabloid. And student fees have not increased since 1948. Thye've decreased substantially. To have the kind of daily newspaper that students deserve, the Student Legislature must give more funds to The Daily Tar Heel or the newspaper will have to stop serving students in the way it does now.

The new Daily Tar Heel will print daily except for Saturdays and Mondays. That's a decrease from six to five days a week. But it's a decrease in number not in size. And we want to continue giving you all the news that is possible.

Hazzard In 1953, Too

"CONDEMNED" is not a pleasant greeting for either Christmas or the New Year. Usually we think of condemnation as a sentence for punishment. "Condemned to die, condemned to prison," are common expressions.

But when men and women of 35 out of 36 fraternity and sorority houses see the large typed "CONDEMNED" sign posted on the front door and look at the smaller type, they find that their houses are unfit. In the eyes of the state law, their campus homes are unliveable.

The law is the law and as the presidents of the Greek organizations meet with Dean Roy Holsten today, we are sure that adequate programs will be launched to put the houses in shape to conform with fire regulations. The 90 days allowed for compliance with the building regulations should give the fraternities some time to improve their houses.

An aroused parent of a student made the inquiry on houses. The parent thought that the houses were fire hazzards. We don't understand why the University and the town government takes action now when they were hazzards for so many years, under the law.

We are happy to see that the University and the town are concerned with any fire hazzards in the community. Yet some dormitories need fire extinguishers. They have none. Shouldn't the fire regulations extend to the dormitories, too?

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON—British sources close to Winston Churchill say that while his initial reason for coming to see Eisenhower was the dynamite-laden situation in Iran, the prime minister has become equally steamed up over reports of Eisenhower's proposed strategy in Korea.

This strategy, as relayed to London by British observers, follows:

1. Send two divisions of Chiang Kai-Shek's troops to Korea from Formosa.

2. Blockade the China ports.

3. Turn over a certain number of American naval vessels to South Korea and the Chinese Nationalists in order to form Korean and Chinese navies, which in turn would harass the coast of China.

4. Lift the present ban against Chiang Kai-Shek's sending military expeditions to the Chinese mainland.

5. Possible use of atomic weapons in Korea.

6. Send three U.S. divisions to Japan, presumably to prepare for a Korean offensive next Spring.

The first five of these cut squarely across British policy in the past—not only the policy of the Labor government, but the Conservatives. In fact, Ex-Prime Minister Clement Attlee rushed across the Atlantic on a somewhat similar mission when President Truman dropped an off-the-cuff remark about using the A-Bomb in Korea.

Churchill is reported by friends to be particularly upset over Ike's reported plan to use Chiang Kai-Shek's troops and also the reported plan to blockade the China coast. The British have long argued that Chiang Kai-Shek is completely discredited, that he can never stage a comeback, and that using his troops either in Korea or on the Chinese mainland would be like a red flag to the Chinese. It might, they argue, prolong the war indefinitely.

The British also claim that any blockade of the China coast would be tantamount to an act of war. If U.S. warships should blockade Russian-held Dairen, for instance, it might easily provoke war.

Churchill's advisers say that since he and Eisenhower are old comrades from World War II during which they enjoyed an extremely close relationship, Winston may tactfully suggest that the new president should not move merely for the sake of movement, but that his moves be carefully thought out so as not to alienate this country's allies.

Note — it's interesting that while Eisenhower was aboard the U.S.S. Helena some of his advisers hashed over the prospect that Churchill might use his old friendship with Ike to influence policy. Churchill's hurry-up trip to New York had not been announced at that time. But even then, Ike-men worried over the intimate relationship between the two, and persuasive influence of the prime minister.

Note 2—It was British hesitancy over Roosevelt's proposed naval blockade or "quarantine" in the Far East in 1936 which finally upset his attempt to stop Japanese aggression. It was also the lobbying of British and American oil companies which helped break up the League of Nations sanctions imposed on Mussolini when he invaded Ethiopia in 1935. Each postponement of a showdown, however, built up for a greater and more tragic eventual showdown with the Axis.

President Truman had a farewell luncheon with Democratic Senators right after New Year's Day. There were moments of sadness and also moments of mirth as he said good-bye to colleagues with whom he had served and with whom he had sometimes differed.

Sen. Ernest McFarland, retiring not only as Democratic leader but as Senator from Arizona, made a speech which touched his colleagues. Referring to the fact that he had been mentioned as ambassador to Mexico, McFarland said:

"I don't think the Republicans owe me anything, and I don't expect anything. I've battled them as hard as I could and have done the best job I know how. I'm going down with the team.

"When the team comes up again, I'll be there playing right guard—if they want me to."

President Truman also spoke, and got a laugh when he chidded new Sen. Stuart Symington of Missouri, whom Truman tried to have defeated in the Democratic primary there.

"I want to warn you, Stu," said the president, "that about 20 days from now I'll be one of your constituents. And you'd better watch out. I'm quite a letter-writer and I'm going to write you some letters."

The president also told about the Missouri Senatorial race in which Symington defeated Republican Sen. James Kem, and the picture of a cow which Kem had circulated indicating that he understood farm problems.

"Kem doesn't know how to milk a cow," said the president. "The only thing he knows how to milk is corporation."

One piece of "unfinished business" Harry Truman may tackle after leaving the White House concerns Joe Stalin. While president of the United States, Truman cannot tee off on the Soviet dictator for Stalin's betrayal of the Potsdam agreement.

But as ex-president he is more free. And Harry is thinking seriously of taking off the protocol gloves and telling the world in general and Stalin in particular what he really thinks of him.

In a recent chat with his close friend, Joseph Keenan of the American Federation of Labor, Truman said he planned to "take it easy" for six months after leaving the White House, devote part of the vacation to a trip around the world; also promote the Truman Memorial library in Independence.

After that, he told Keenan:

"I'm going to do some writing. I don't know how it will work out because writing isn't my long suit, but the American public hasn't been given a fair appraisal of my administration — there's still some confusion about certain matters, foreign and domestic—and I would like to get the record straight for future historians."

The president didn't elaborate, but in talks with advisers he has strongly indicated that, among other things, he would like to tell the whole, unvarnished story of the controversial Potsdam conference and Stalin's betrayal of trust.

The Livespike

Every now and then you read where some writer is sick of this and sick of that. I'd like to go on record.

My gripe is about a number of our entertainment stars who risk their life and press agent to go to Korea, ostensibly to "do my bit for our boys." Now I'm all for our better entertainers doing their bit in Korea, and from press reports, the soldiers enjoy it. But what I'm irked about are the ones who come back and capitalize on their visits.

They never miss a radio opportunity to tell about when "I was in Korea." They don't seem to be able to pass up any chance to grab a newspaper headline with a personal account of Korea.

Naturally, there are many who entertain our troops in Korea and expect no publicity reward. It would be a good thing for this spirit to infect their darling cohorts.

Ever wondered where the historical markers along N. C. highways and in its towns come from? It all goes back to 1935. In that year the Legislature began the state's historical marker program and since then 676 have been erected throughout Tar Heelia.

The markers cost about $85 each and are manufactured under a state competitive bidding contract. The 1951 Legislature made $5,000 a year available for markers—or about 60 a year. Of this 60, about 20 percent are replacements.

Selecting a personage to be honored by a marker is done by a committee of historians from Davidson, State, Wake Forest, UNC and Duke. Of the state's 100 counties, only Hoke, Pamlico and Alexander lack at least one of the black and silver signs. Wake has 42 markers and Hanover is second with 22.

Edwin A. Miles, archives and history researcher, says the historical committee is attempting to get away from emphasizing political and military leaders. "We're trying to put more emphasis on social, cultural, educational and religious leaders," he said.

Tar Heels At ECC Will Play In Dedication Tilt

Carolina's basketball team meets East Carolina in Greenville tonight at 8 o'clock in the official dedication of East Carolina's new gymnasium.

The game will be the first for hte Tar Heels in the Winter Quarter. Carolina defeated Maryland in Chapel Hill Saturday to take undisputed first place in the Southern Conference standings with a 5-0 record.

In tonight's program Dr. O. K. Cornwell, chairman of the University's Department of Physical Education and Athletics, will make the dedicatory address.

Carolina left the undefeated list over the Christmas holidays, losing its first game of the season in the first round of the Dixie Classic against Holy Cross. Penn later came from behind to hand the Tar Heels their second defeat.

The Tar Heels won't play in Woollen Gym again until January 13, with road contests against VMI and Washington and Lee scheduled for Thursday and Friday.

Co-Captain Vince Grimaldi and freshman Jerry Vayda are leading the Tar Heels in scoring, with Grimaldi holding a 17-point per game average and Vyada a shade behind him with 16.

Al Lifson, the Carolina high-scorer last year who has been ineligible because of grades, is back with the team to give Tar Heel coach Frank McGuire added strength on his squad. Jack Wallace, six-foot, four-inch co-capatin is lost to the team now because of an appendectomy. Two other team members, freshman Jack Powell and Paul Anisko, have been lost to the team.

FOUR BOOTERS ON SC SQUAD

Four Carolina soccer players earned first string berths on the 1952 Southern Conference soccer team, which was released recently.

The Tar Heels and their positions are as follows: Barry Kalb, left fullback; Thomas Hopkins, right halfback; Gerry Russell, center forward; and Renny Randolph, inside right.

The team, selected by the conference soccer coaches, also includes four Duke booters and two representatives from N. C. State. Other schools represented were W.&L. and Maryland.

Honorary captain of the team was Duke's Fred James.

GIDUZ JOINS WEEKLY STAFF

Roland (Foo) Giduz, a journalism graduate of the University in 1948, has resigned his post with the Durham Herald and Sun to go with the Chapel Hill Weekly.

Giduz is a former managing editor of The Daily Tar Heel. He was with the Durham papers for two and one half years. His father is a retired French professor here.

Louis Graves of the Weekly said of Giduz' new job: "He will not have his activities confined to any one department. He will do editorial and advertising and circulation work. He will make photographs. If conveniently nearby, he will no doubt be dragooned into helping the editor-owner sweep snow off the steps or pick up stray pieces of paper in the yard. In short, like the rest of us, he will turn his hand to anything."

Giduz is married and has one child.

Carolina Five Paces S C Standings

With a 59-49 victory over Maryland last Saturday night Carolina's basketball team brought its Christmas holiday record to two wins and two losses and now finds itself at the top of the Southern Conference standings.

The Tar Heel cagers performed well in the Dixie Classic at Raleigh, December 29-31, although they were able to win only one of their three games.

Pitted against a strong Holy Cross team in the first round of the tournament, the Tar Heels bowed by a 12-point margin, even though they scored 73 points, 85-73.

The consolation bracket found them winning over Princeton, 73-59, but then in the final game they lost to Pennsylvania, 70-62.

The win over Maryland, a good defensive team, gave Carolina five wins without a defeat in Conference play and put the team at the top of the SC race.

The Tar Heels were successful enough in their Christmas crusades considering the fact that co-captain Jack Wallace was forced out of action by an appendectomy on Dec. 20 and two players, Paul Anisko and Jack Powell, were dropped from the squad.

This left Coach Frank McGuire short of reserve strength, something which hurt him, especially in the Penn and Maryland games.

Vince Grimaldi, who, along with Bud Maddie, was probably the most prolific player in the Classic, now leads the Tar Heel scoring with 134 points in eight games for an average of almost 17 points per game.

Freshman Jerry Vayda is second with 116 while Maddie has scored 87 from his center position. Vayda, who paced the Tar Heels in their four pre-Christmas games has an average of just under 16 per game.

With a record of 6-2 the Tar Heels will have a busy week of it with tonight's game against Eastern Carolina and games against Washington and Lee and VMI Thursday and Friday nights.

CHEST DRIVE SHORT

The Chapel Hill Community Chest drive fell $1,800 short of its goal, according to Chairman William S. Stewart.

When the December drive ended, the chest had $16,000 in donations and pledges. The goal was $17,800. Last year's campaign realized about $13,000 of its $14,500 goal.

C. P. LYONS ELECTED

Dr. Clifford P. Lyons, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, was elected to the Executive Council of the Modern Language Association of America at the recent 68th annual meeting of the Associatino in Boston.

The term is for three years.

Two performers on the 1951 Duke grid team, one a regular, were kept out of competition during the past fall due to injuries They are Jim Logan of Asheville, a regular guard a year ago, and Fred Campbell of Swarthmore, Pa., a reserve tackle.

Fire Destroys Carolina Club

Students returned to school yesterday to find that a familiar night spot had burned.

The Carolina Club, a night club located three miles west on the the Greensboro highway, was destroyed by fire Saturday afternoon. The wood building was owned by J. C. Williams of Chapel Hill. Charlie Stancell and Donald Forbes, both of Chapel Hill, were co-owners of the business.

The fire was believed to have started from an oil stove. Stancell said about $5,000 worth of supplies and furnishings, partially insured, were destroyed.

Williams estimated the loss of the building at $7,000. It was not covered by insurance.

A fire last quarter temporarily put the club out of business. The blaze at that time was said to have resulted from a short in a compressor wire.

Durham Road Is Accepted; Costs Raised

For the first time since shortly after it was formally opened Sept. 19, motorists can now traverse the new Durham-Chapel Hill Highway without dodging cracks and holes in the pavement.

The eight and a half mile stretch was accepted last week by the State Highway Commission which agreed to pay the road builder $666,000 instead of the $430,732.50 which originally was bid. The contractor was Nello L. Teer of Durham.

Soon after the road was opened this fall, cracks began to appear. The state had not yet accepted the job as complete and said it would not until Teer repaired the highway. Teer maintained that the road trouble resulted from poor drainage which he blamed on the Highway Department's decision to omit drainage ditches along a stretch of the highway. Subsequently, the ditches were put in.

The contractor also contended that his company would be paid for the extra work it was called on to do in making the repairs. Part of the $222,300 difference resulted from a change in specificatoins. Apparently the rest went to reimburse Teer for filling in the holes.

Most of the patches on the road were applied on the New Hope Creek section near the Orange-Durham county line.

AM Station Going On Air This Month

Chapel Hill's AM radio station will go on the air "about the middle of this month," according to Sandy McClamroch, partner in WCHL.

The new station is one and a half miles from Chapel Hill on the Durham highway. It has a 200-foot tower erected and a small building under construction. The station will be powered with a 1,000-watt transmitter. The WCHL dial number will be 1360.

The operating hours will be from sunrise to sunset. Personnel include John Hill a UNC student, who will be a part-time engineer-announcer.

Already in operation here is WUNC, the University's student-run FM station which is on the air from 7 p.m. until 10 p.m. every day.

Glen Lennox Is Adding 94 Apartments

Sprawling Glen Lennox, a housing development on the Raleigh Road, will have 408 apartments by the end of February.

This will be the number available for occupancy after the 94 apartments in the 28 new buildings are completed.

Built three years ago, the original housing colony was designed to take care of some of the overflow of students and faculty in the University. Most of the apartments still are occupied by people connected with UNC.

A grammar school is being constructed on the south side of Raleigh Road for children in this residential area.

Pistol Theft

Thieves broke into the Naval Armory here sometime during the weekend preceding Monday, Dec. 29 and made off with eight pistols belonging to the NROTC outfit.

Chapel Hill police have not yet reported any leads. The pistols were locked in the armory, which was forcibly entered through a door.

"FESTIVAL OF SONG" COMPANY

Song Festival Includes Some Waring Talent

By J. Dominique

"Festival of Song," being presented here Thursday night for students, is a show of choral artistry.

Not only will an outstanding conductor present 33 singers, dancers and instrumentalists, but the audience will see the staging and lighting developed for the Fred Waring Television Show.

Students will be admitted free to the Memorial Hall entertainment upon presentation of their ID cards. The show is brought here by the Student Entertainment Committee and paid for from students' block fees.

The director, Dr. Lara Hoggard, is well-known for his work in choral clinics in schools and universities throughout the nation. He is also choral director for the CBS television Fred Waring Show, from which he is on leave of absence while taking the "Festival of Song" on its first concert tour.

Many of the musical selections on the program will be arrangements by Dr. Hoggard, Roy Ringwals and Livingston Gearhart, all of the Waring staff. The program material includes serious selections by Palestrina Debussy, Brahms, Mozart, Mendelssohn and contemporary works by Benjamin Britten and Normand Lockwood. There also will be humorous and novelty songs. Some of the music will be accompanied by instruments, while other works will be a-capella singing.

Wake Forest Publicist Named To UNC Post

Tom Bost Jr., presently director of the News Bureau of Wake Forest College, has been selected director of the Alumni Annual Giving Program being sponsored jointly by the University and the General Alumni Association.

R. Mayn Albright, Raleigh, chairman of the Annual Giving Executive Council, made the announcement yesterday.

Bost will assume his new duties February 1.

Meeting here, members of the Alumni Annual Giving Council reviewed the organization already effected and projected plans for activities of the next several months. Alumni Secretary J. Maryon Saunders is currently serving as acting director of the program.

Alumni Annual Giving will extend invitations to every former student of the University to share in increased support for meeting opportunities to be outlined by Chancellor R. B. House early in January.

The program is coordinated with general development planning initiated by President Gordon Gray at each of the three campuses comprising the Consolidated University.

At Chapel Hill a Development Council, on which is represented each of the several foundations and agencies seeking support for University activities, is headed currently by J. Spencer Love, who took over responsibility as vice-chairman following the death of James A. Gray of Winston-Salem, the first chairman.

Alumni Annual Giving as a program was launched officially last commencement when alumni endorsed plans presented by an Alumni Association committee headed by Albright.

Bost, a son of the late widely known Raleigh newspaperman, was graduated at the University in 1935. For a year he was sports editor of a Raleigh newspaper, returning to Chapel Hill in 1936 as an assistant in the University News Bureau. From 1942 he spent three years in the Signal Corps, 18 months in the European Theater. Following discharge he did promotional advertising work in New York for a year, returning to North Carolina to become director of the Wake Forest News Bureau in 1946.

At Wake Forest Bost handled all collgee publicity, both general news and sports. During seven football seasons he has travelled some 38,000 miles to publicize the Deacons.

Carolina Gets Polio Grant Of $21,942

A March of Dimes grant of $21,942 will enable scientists at the University to develop methods to distinguish between illnesses caused by Coxsackie and polio viruses.

Under the dircetion of Dr. Edward C. Curnen Jr., head of the Department of Pediatrics in the University School of Medicine, the project will seek to develop laboratory and clinical tests to differentiate between polio and illnesses caused by the Coxsackie viruses.

The similarity of symptoms produced by infection wiht a Coxsackie virus to poliomyelitis causes many diagnostic difficulties, especially as some patients also harbor polio virus.

Under the terms of the March of Dimes grant, Dr. Curnen and his associates will subject a selected number of appropriate patients to examinations in an effort to determine what diagnostic criteria are essential to differentiate Coxsackie virus infections from other illnesses.

Stuart Jones New Campus Chest Leader

Stuart Jones was named chairman of the Campus Chest yesterday by President Ham Horton, who dubbed it the "second most important appointment of the year."

Jones, a junior from Winston-Salem, plans tomorrow to announce the board of directors for this campus counterpart of the Community Chest and have them meet in the next few days.

The Campus Chest operates on the theme of "give once and serve all." It is the only authorized charity drive on campus and distributes funds collected among all worhty charities. No other charity can legally solicitate funds on campus, except the chest, by order of a legislative act passed several years ago.

The board of directors to be announced by Jones will have two main duties:

1. To decide what charities will be supported.

2. To determine how much will be contributed to each one.

In accepting the position Jones said, "I am looking forward with confident expectations to a united drive that will be successful for the efforts of the students and the value to the recipients."

During his career at the Universiyt, Jones has served on the Inter-Faith Council, Phi Assembly, Westminister Fellowship and The Daily Tar Heel staff.

Last year's Campus Chest campaign netted over $2,200 and supported five worthy organizations. Supported by the chest last years were the Amreican Cancer Society, the American Heart Association, the Red Cross, the North Carolina League for Crippled Children and the World Student Service Fund.

One dollar per student was the goal set up for last year's program. Jones and the board of directors are expected to determine the goal for this campaign in their meeting.

A variety show was presented by campus entertainers to spark the drive last year. Preliminary plans for a similar show are under way for this year. A shoe-shine stand in Y Court operated by campus leaders also primed the till in the last campaign. Similar stunts are expected in this campaign.

Town Buys Burial Tract

With only 40 plots left available for graves in the present cemetery, Chapel Hill aldermen have voted to buy a new tract of 25½ acres.

The new cemetery will be located on the Durham highway, a little over two miles from the Chapel Hill town limit. The purchase price was reported at about $17,000. The land was bought from Dr. Foy Roberson.

The sale of plots in the new cemetery will be directed by a committee of the aldermen. The present cemetery is located on Raleigh Road just beyond Winston Dormitory.

Houses May Ask For Change In Fire Law

By John Jamison

Fraternity and sorority officials yesterday resolved to attempt bringing about changes in the North Carolina code in an effort to avoid the "disastrous" expense of installing fire escape facilities in their houses.

However, they agreed something should be done about fire hazzards and corrective measures of some sort taken.
and corrective measures of some sort taken.

This action follows an official condemning of every fraternity and sorority house on campus except one.

Under existing Norht Carolina law (Chapter 69, section 8), all buildings other than private dwellings not over three stories in height, in which rooms are to be rented, shall be constructde so that the occupants of all rooms above the first floor shall have unobstructed access to two separate and distinct ways of egress extending from the uppermost floor to the ground.

The law also contains limitations regarding corridors and other means of access to the exits.

Compliance with the law, particularly the corridor specifications, will necessitate costly and extensive remodleing in many houses, it was stated. The group met in the Morehead Building.

The resolution, introduced by Margaret Johnston, Chi Omega house manager, was passed unanimously. Its passage initiates a collective effort by the fraternity and sorority officers to seek a legislative amendment to "make the law more flexible in regard to fraternity and sorority houses."

It also was resolved to investigate a possible reduction in installation costs by calling for "collective" bids. Under this plan a construction company would bid for contracts from a number of houses and thereby offer a lower price.

Asked if there were a possible loophole in the law, L. J. Phipps, former Chapel Hill Recorder's Court judge, said there seems to be none. The only solution which would avoid incurring construction costs, he added, would be to persuade the Legislature to amend this portion of the code.

Phipps said he thought he could get Orange County Legislator John W. Umstead to introduce the amendment at the next session.

Earlier in the meeting, Assistant Dean of Students Roy Holsten pointed out it is not necessary to follow the specific plan suggested by safety officials. Individual houses may devise any plan which provides two acceptable methods of egress from each floor. These alternate plans must be approved by the officials, however.

Holsten recommended that the fraternities and sororities "get to work as soon as possible." "I would also recommend that you call in alumni groups and faculty advisers in this matter," he added.

Holsten will call a meeting today or tomorrow in which the same group will discuss the problem with Mayor Ed Lanier and Town Manager Thomas Rose.

FOLLOWED BY ELDER STATESMAN Bernard Baruch (right) and Sir Roger Makins, new British ambassador to the U. S., Prime Minister Winston Churchill walks from the Queen Mary shortly after his New York arrival. Mentally Ill May Enter Hospital Now

The University Medical School and Hospital are now in a position for the first time to provide complete diagnosis and treatment for the mentally ill.

The Psychiatric Diagnostic Treatment and Research Center of the hospital has opened, and both outpatients and inpatients are being accepted. Dr. Edward C. Frank, formerly of the staff of the Psychosomatic Institute of Chicago, is serving as director of the Psychiatric Treatment Center.

Staff members in the Department of Psychiatry teach in the Medical School and see patients in the Psychiatric Clinic. Dr. George C. Ham is chairman of the Department of Psychiatry.

The function of the Psychiatric Diagnostic, Treatment Center, Dr. Frank explained, is the care of patients who have emotional difficulties. Patients are seen by previous appointment, except in the case of emergencies. Patients may be referred to the Center here by any physician, by a social agency.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON—Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis) made public yesterday a photographic copy of a 1948 letter signed by Presidnet Truman thanking Henry W. Grunewald for "generous" support in that election year. McCarthy handed reporters the copy shortly after he asked the Senate Rules Committee to look into political contributions to Sen. Monroney (D-Okla) which McCarthy said was solicited from Gruenwald. Gruenwald, a mysterious Washington figure, was reindicted here Monday by a federal grand jury for contempt of Congress for refusing to answer questions of a House committee investigating tax scandals.

Now Criticism Of Literary Sophisticated

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 6.—Present day literary criticism has a sophistication unknown 20 years ago when the critics did their lambasting in little magazines, radical journals and bohemina cafes.

This new look in literary criticism was explained by a University of North Carolina English professor, Dr. C. Hugh Holman who presented a paper, "American Literary Criticism: 1930-1952," before the American Literature Group of the Modern Language Association meeting which ended here recently.

Dr. Holman said that the most significant trend in the past few years has been "the movement of literary criticism onto our college and university campuses.

"In 1930," he added, "a person reading a paper like this at MLA would not have had the embarrassment of speaking directly to the subject authors.

GOOD, BETTER AND BEST

It's Coeds 6 To 1, And Date Bureau Can't Find Enough Men

Special To The Daily Tar Heel

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 6.—Dates may come and dates may go, but never have the lads at the University of Minnesota had it so good—so much.

They have a dating agency that has six girls to every guy. What more could a guy ask?

The girls thought a dating agency might be fun, so this fall they called the social chairman of the men's dorms and things began to roll.

It takes only a simple request to get a date. All the boys have to do is call up the agency and place their order.

The boys who run the agency brag that their girls come in three grades—good, better and best. The agency keeps information cards on the 60 girls who are members of the agency. The service, or girls as they are better known, comes in all sizes, ages and temperatures.

In case the fellows are interested, other statistics such as home town, major etc. are catalogued.

The men fill out information cards also, so the girls can do a little checking, too.

The date bureau was set up to "supplement" the regular exchange parties between men's and women's dormitories.

If a customer isn't a gentleman, the girls turn in their complaint to the bureau. The customer can not receive the services of the bureau after that. So far the only complaint the girls have made is that there are not enough men who want to order them.

Report

Students who visited trustees over Christmas holidays about the Saturday class issue are requested to notify President Ham Horton immediately.

Horton explained that unless the students report "we cannot know where we stand in the fight against Saturday classes."

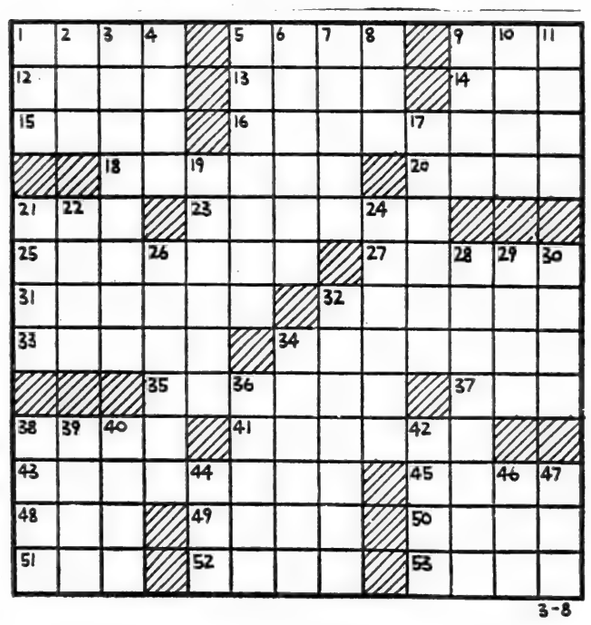
An Investigating Com ittee

The nation's colleges are bound to get a going over from some part of Congress.

Enthusiasm for investigation—almost any investigation will do (Pearl Harbor included) but particularly one that can smell out Communists—has reached an "unprecedented" level with the announcement that 199 Congressmen are seeking seats on the House Un-American Activities Committee. Speaker Joseph Marrtin calls this extra interest highly unusual and is considering enlarging he committee.



The Congressmen took a look at the election returns and saw who won. Heading the lists were Nixon, Potter of Michigan, and McCarthy, all out—and out Communists investigators. They evidently see political gravy and are ambitious to get some of the publicity and ballot payoff. It's smart politics.

Senator Homer Ferguson of Michigan is readying for another investigation of Pearl Harbor, Representative Harold Velde, chairman of the Un-American Activities committee is interested in the college investigations too.

Alhough he thinks the job would be unpleasant," Senator Joseph McCarthy believes he must investigate "Communist thinkers" in colleges. We can get some idea of what he will do if we read his booklet called "McCarthyism, The Fight For America.' He advises readers who are interested in fighting Communism with these words: "Every man and woman in America can appoint himself or herself to undo the damage which is being done by Communist infiltration of our schools and colleges through Communist-minded teachers and Communist-line textbooks. . . . The educational system of this country cannot be cleansed of Communist influence by legislation. It can only be scrubbed and flushed and swept clean if the mothers and fathers and the sons and daughters of this nation individually decide to do this job. . . ."

American colleges have financial problems, enrollment troubles, and soon they'll have investigatis. We suggest that the Congressmen first find out what the colleges themselves have already done to root out Communism.

TOhe Michigan Daily, commenting on the fact that the University Young Progressives couldn't get 30 students to admit they were members, pointed out, "The real tragedy of YP's demise lies no only in the fact that one shade of opinion no longer has a vehicle for expression. It is a tragedy because it is a sympton . . . of the end of an era when a man's political beliefs were his own and when he was not afraid to adhere to them publicly nor prevented from holding them privately."

No Glowworms

O, we're substituting rubber for the linen at the frat, and we're busy nailing rock
wool to the wall,

And we'll all have rubber hoses
in the closets after that,
and we'll set up water hydrants in the hall.

O, we're throwing out the lighters and the matches all around,
and we're running out the heating units too.

We have taken out the wiring
from the attic to the ground, and we're flailing at the fireplace and the flue.

In fact, the chimney's got to go to satisfy the brothers,
they are laying tile and marble on the floor.

We'll all beat the merest spark henceforth to make sure that it smothers, and they won't condemn the frat house anymore.

New Year's

I went to bed at 11:45 on New Year's Eve. No, I wasn't sick or passed out. I was just a little sleepy as I usually am at that hour; so I went to bed.

I understand there were lots of other people who were being festive, pensive, or prayerful around that time. And for some time now I've wondered why. "It's a new year," they say, "A fresh slate."

But, is it? For the people who live on the Eastern seaboard of the United States, the people in South America, and some people in Canada it is as far as the calender is concerned. But what about the calender?

It takes 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes, and 46 seconds for the earth to go around the sun. Ancient pundits tried in vain to fit a calender to this perverse time span. When Julius Caesar came along January was falling in the spring. Taking a little from here and adding a little there, old Julius fixed it up pretty good, and was duly rewarded by having a month named after him. But his calender wasn't quite right. It came out to be 365 days and 6 hours and that's too long. In the sixteenth century, they found that the March equinox was falling on the eleventh instead of the twenty-first; so Pope Gregory the Thirteenth thought he'd fix that up. He declared that on years divisible by 400 there wouldn't be any leap year, and struck out the extra ten days. Well, this was O.K. for some of the Catholics, but it wasn't until 1752 that England, for instance, grudgingly accepted Gregory's edict. The Eastern Church didn't accept it until the twentieth century.

Then, there's the Moslems. They had no more idea of accepting the Christian Calendar than they had of converting to monogamy. Their year is calculated by the moon revolutions around the earth, and is but 354 days, eight hours and 48 minutes long (12 lunar months).

The Moslems are probably the smartest. They realize the futility of trying to reconcile the number of days with the revolution of the earth around the sun. It just won't come out even. And the calendar, obviously, is still not quite right.

Yet, at twenty-four different times at the end of December Christians (who comprise less than half of the world's population) toot horns, drink, nake resolutions which they'll break in a week, kiss ugly females, wax philosophical, and sing Auld Lang Syne off-key. The Jews celebrate Yom Kippur sometime in September. The Chinese shoot off fire crackers (and maybe burp guns) sometime between January 10 and February 19. You never know just what day they'll do it. They probably don't either.

But no matter how you figure it, January 1 never falls at the same time that it did the year before. As for me, I don't have to find an excuse to have a drinking orgy. I just do it when I feel like it.

—DREW PEARSON—

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON — The inside story on the Senate elections committee report on Senator McCarthy's weird financial transactions is in itself a weird matter. It involved months of delay, many attempts by McCarthy at bulldozing committee members, and many gray hairs in the head of the lone Republican committee member, Sen. Robert Hendrickson of New Jersey.

Hendrickson, an honest senator, but subject to human pressures, went along with the two democratic mmebers of the committee until near the end. Then he almost did not sign the report. In fact, before he would sign it, perhaps the most important part of all—the recommendations—were taken out.

This was why the elections committee was in the embarrassing position of submitting a report containing 238 exhibits of McCarthy's bank statements, canceled checks and other data, giving amazing evidence of concealed misuse of funds, yet made no recommendation to the senate for action.

Senators Tom Hennings of Missouri and Carl Hayden of Arizona, the two Democratic members, felt it was important to have a unanimous report, so they bowed to their Republican colleague.

McCarthy's first attempt to bulldoze came when he threatened Senator Hennings of Missouri with exposing Communist members on Hennings' staff if he proceeded with the investigation. Hennings laughed this one off. He not only had no Communists on his staff, but was a former member of the House of Representatives and respected former district attorney of St. Louis.

Next delay came when Sen. Mike Monroney of Oklahoma left for Europe last November without telling committee members of his plans. This got stalwart Senator Hayden of Arizona so irked that he called Monroney by telephone in Italy, told him either to come home or get off the committee. Monroney resigned. Thereupon, Hayden, one of the most respected members of the Senate, took his place.

By this time, the committee had selected Paul Cotter as counsel, a dynamic lawyer determined to bring out a thorough report.

During this period, Hendrickson of New Jersey had cooperated conscientiously. But, toward the end, he came under terrific pressure from both McCarthy and his friends, Jenner of Indiana, Welker of Idaho, and Dirksen of Illinois. It was to appease them that Hendrickson demanded that the recommendations be omitted from the report.

Just before the report was issued, however, Hendrickson even delayed signing the amended report without the recommendations. This was when the most hectic Republican wire-pulling of all took place.

A committee meeting had been called for Monday, Dec. 29 at which the final draft was to be OK'd. Hendrickson, however, failed to show. Telephoning from Camden, N. J., he said he had been held up by urgent personal business, would not be able to get to Washington.

This left the committee only two days before the new year in which to get the report to senators. And since it was 400 pages long, at least a day was necessary to get it finished by the government printing office. So Senators Hennings and Hayden told Hendrickson they would send the report up to him to read. This was done by special messenger.

Next day, Hendrickson phoned to say he had received the report but hadn't had time to study it. He had been interrupted by callers, he explained, but promised definite word the day following, Wednesday, Dec. 31.

This was the last day of the year. If the report was held up until then, the government printing office would not be open to print it on Jan. 1, a holiday. Also there would be no time for other senators to study McCarthy's complicated financial details and take action when Congress convened Saturday.

By this time the Democratic Senators began ot suspect that Hendrickson was trying to stall until it was too late for the Senate to act.

So on Wednesday, Dec. 31, Hennings and Hayden got on the telephone to their Republican colleague in New Jersey and held a five-hour conversation with him. Frequently the call was interrupted by Hendrickson's taking time off to confer with people in his office or to receive other long-distance calls. However, the telephone line was kept open for five full hours.

Later it was learned that McCarthy had flown up to see Hendrickson to beg, cajole, and bulldoze him. Other Republican Senators got on the phone to urge him not to sign.

Finally Hayden and Hennings concluded that it was impossible to argue details and make minute changes in the report by telephone. They asked their New Jersey colleague to come to Washington next day. He agreed

Express Yourself

Editor:

The recent stories in the daily newspapers about the White House being picketed by people demanding clemency for Julius and Ethel Rosenberg must make citizens wonder if justice has been done in this case. Personally I can't believe that it has. These two Jewish people were tried for "conspiring to commit espionage" in an atmosphere of press hysteria which undoubtedly made it difficult, if not impossible, for a jury to render a fair decision.

Many Jewish people feel this case can set a precedent to deprive them of their civil liberties and their very lives. Even conservative Jewish national publications have expressed their alarm at the severity of the sentence. The Jewish Day urged that either Supreme Court action or Presidential clemency be exercised to spare them. The Jewish Daily Forward termed the death sentence "horrible".

It is only that they were tried in such an atmosphere and as Jews, but that for this alleged conspiracy to pass atomic secrets to the Soviet Union during World War II (when that country was our ally against fascism) they are sentenced to die.

Never before in our history has a civil court given a death sentence for espionage. Axis Sally and Tokyo Rose were given ten years for their crimes and the eight Nazi saboteurs have already been set free.

The many discrepancies in the evidence lead to serious doubt that they are guilty at all. The prosecution based its case almost entirely on the uncorroborated testimony of a free-lance spy, who by envolving the Rosenbergs managed to secure for himself a 15 year sentence which might otherwise have been a death penalty. Further evidence presented was:

(1) a Spanish Refugeee Appeal collection can be found in the Rosenberg apartment, and

(2) a nominating petition signed in 1941 by Ethel for Peter Cachione, successful Communist candidate for New York City Council (50,000 other New Yorkers also signed this petition). In a city whose population is 30 percent Jewish there were no Jews on the jury.

Moreover Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer ,Dr. Harold G. Urey and others testified in 1945 that there existed no basic atomic secrets, and that any nation could produce an atomic bomb. Actually the information which the Rosenbergs are charged with selling was of such a crude and scanty nature (as Scientific American and Life Magazine pointed out at the time) that it would be of no use to anyone.

Surely such inconclusive evidence warrants a new trial and a new chance for life for these people, who, if killed, will leave behind them two children robbed of both parents at a single blow! Unless something is done by January 12, this is exactly what will happen.

SOME CHANGES MADE

SEASONS CHANGE, QUARTERS CHANGE and so do Carolina teams, it seems. With a dismal football venture being forgotten, except for the selection of a new coach, basketball has taken over completely and has thus far shown a complete reversal of the success, or lack of it, that the grid counterpart turned in during the fall. Coach Frank McGuire and his cagers now find themselves as the top team in the Southern Conference with a 5-0 record, having knocked Maryland out of a tie for the number-one position by giving Terps a steady 59-49 licking in a game played before a small crowd of early back-to-school arrivals here last Saturday night.

The over-all record for the Tar Heels is just a shade less impessive than the Conference one and stands at 6-2, the two losses coming in the famed Dixie Classic at Raleigh just before the New Year came in. Carolina was forced to meet Holy Cross in the opening round of the tourney and it looked for a few minutes that we would keep the Classic Chalice from the Crusaders—but playing like the then seventh-ranked team that it was, Holy Cross pulled out to win by 12 points, 85-73. We grabbed the Princeton Tigers by the tail in the next game, as did everybody else in he tourney, and won our first game of the basketball fiesta, 73-59. But then in the final game when we had a chance to make a good showing in the consolation bracket, Pennsylvania and its great center Ernie Beck set us down, 70-62.

THIS YEAR AND LAST

Now, all this business of winning basketball games is well and good, bust just to put a damper on things you have to consider that at this time last year we were also leading the Conference with an identical 5-0 record. Then we blew a 55-53 game to Wake Forest and the deluge followed immediately. It doesn't look as though the 1953 5-0 record will take the same downward dip but last season's fate is worthy of keeping in mind as a sickening reminder. One reason it shouldn't fall as bad is the fact that we meet two comparatively easy SC teams before we get back in the big time. Thursday and Friday we play Washington and Lee and VMI at Lexington, Va. We beat the Generals handily before Christmas holidays and the Cadets are not reported as being too strong.

But the main reason that we shouldn't suffer the same fate that we did last season can be contributed to the fine job that Coaches McGuire and Buck Freeman have done with improving the ability, morale, and confidence of the team. The two ex-St. John's mentors have the same material, save for a few last year and the year before. What they've gotten out of that material has made the difference. Vince Grimaldi, who has always been considered an outstanding prospect, has never in the past two years shown consistent form. He had snatches of brilliance in those years but not until this season did he come into his own. He has led the Tar Heels as co-captain along with Jack Wallace to our six victories with an average of almost 17 points per game.

There are other instances, too, where the tutelage of McGuire and Freeman have payed off for us. Bob Phillips, heretofore had been just a mediocre sub, but this season he has worked himself into a starting role and in addition to his generally good floor game has contributed a good scoring punch. Ernie Schwarz has also blossomed from mediocrity during the past two years to be one of McGuire's best first line reserves. His insertion in the lineup during the Richmond game proved a vital factor in the Carolina victory.

McGuire and Freeman have built up what had been a sagging-moral. They have restored a team confidence—and on the other side have taken disciplinary action when they deemed it necessary. Their handling of a weak basketball situation has paid off thus far and there's no reason it shouldn't continue that way. I don't believe our '53 record of 5-0 will be wasted as was its predecessor.

Tar Heels Top ECC, 79-66

By Melvin Lang

GREENVILLE, N. C. Jan. 6 — Vince Grimaldi scored 24 points to pace a late game comeback for Carolina here tonight as the Tar Heels pulled away from a surprisingly strong East Carolina College quint, 79-66, in a dedicatory game for the Pirates' new Memorial gymnasium.

The Pirates, leading contenders for honors in the North State Conference, put up a stiff battle for the favored Tar Heels until the last six minutes. After East Carolina had taken a 56-54 lead midway of the final period, Grimaldi and Bud Maddie combined to tie the game and gradually push Carolina into its final margin of 13 points.

With less than seven minutes left in the game, and East Carolina ahead, 56-54, on a push shot by All-State forward Sonny Russell, Grmialdi hit on two long set shots to give Carolina a 58-56 lead that it never relinquished.

The Tar Heels scored first and held the lead until late in the third quarter, but the Pirates were never far behind Carolina and outscored the Tar Heels in the second period, 17-16. East Carolina first went into the lead, 42-41, on Charlie Huffman's free throw in the third quarter, but the Tar Heels quickly regained it.

Carolina, paced by Grimaldi and Maddie, ran away with the game in the last six minutes.

Swimmers Meet Bainbridge In Quest Of Third Victory

The Carolina swimmers will be seeking their third win of the season when they go against the Bainbridge Naval Training Station at Bainbridge, Md. Saturday night

Although the strength of the Bainbridge squad is unknown, the sailors will probably provide a tough test for the visiting Tar Heels.

The Tar Heels, captained by Donnie Evans and Stanley Tinkham, have triumphed easily in their two previous starts.

For their meet against the sailors, the Tar Heels will rely on Buddy Baarcke in the 200-yard back stroke, Donnie Evans in the 150-yard individual medley, and Joe Kelso in the diving events.

Others expected to star in the free-sytle sprints include Buddy Heins and Jack Edwards.

Edwards set the pool record in the Tar Heel's 47-37 triumph over V.M.I. at Lexington, Va. His time was 53.7 for the 100-yard free-style event.

The swimmers second win was over Duke by 47-34.

Mural Cage Entries Open

Carolina's intramural program for the winter quarter has been released with basketball and table tennis leading the immediate agenda.

The entries for the two tournies will be made at the meeting of dormitory and fraternity managers tomorrow night at 7:30 in room 301-A of Woollen Gym. No entries will be accepted after that.

Play will start for both tournaments next Tuesday.

CAN YOU "take it" 6 days a week? For 52 weeks? Can you meet the high standards required to be an Aviation Cadet? If you can—then here's a man-size opportunity! An opportunity to serve your country and build a personal career that will fit you for responsible positions both in military and commercial aviation.

It won't be easy! Training discipline for Aviation Cadets is rigid. You'll work hard, study hard, play hard—especially for the first few weeks. But when it's over, you'll be a pro—with a career ahead of you that will take you as far as you want to go. You graduate as a 2nd Lieutenant in the Air Force, with pay of $5,300.00 a year. And this is only the beginning—your opportunities for advancement are unlimited.

ARE YOU ELIGIBLE?

To qualify as an Aviation Cadet, you must have completed at least two years of college. This is a minimum requirement—it's best if you stay in school and graduate. In addition, you must be between 19 and 26½ years, unmarried, and in good physical condition.

YOU CAN CHOOSE BETWEEN PILOT OR AIRCRAFT OBSERVER

If you choose to be an Aircraft Observer, your training will be in Navigation, Bombardment, Radar Operation or Aircraft Performance Engineering.

New Aviation Cadet Training Classes Begin Every Few Weeks!

HERE'S WHAT TO DO:

1. Take a transcript of your college credits and a copy of your birth certificate to your nearest Air Force Base or Recruiting Station. Fill out the application they give you.
2. If application is accepted, the Air Force will arrange for you to take a physical examination.
3. Next, you will be given a written and manual aptitude test.
4. If you pass your physical and other tests, you will be scheduled for an Aviation Cadet Training Class. The Selective Service Act allows you a four-month deferment while waiting class assignment.

Where to get more details: Visit your nearest Air Force Base or Air Force Recruiting Officer.
OR WRITE TO: AVIATION CADET HEADQUARTERS, U. S. AIR FORCE, WASHINGTON 25, D. C.

"GREAT EXPECTATIONS"

Traffic Lights May Ease Med Center Jam

An acute problem of traffic regulation on the Pittsboro highway in front of the new medical center may be solved.

The town aldermen have studied the situation and ordered several lights to be placed at various intersections along that stretch of the road running from the Naval Armory to the Victory Village entrance.

There will be a standard stop-and-go light at the Victory Village-Pittsboro highway intersectoin.

At the triangle at the intersection of Raleigh Road and Columbia Street (Pittsboro highway) beside the Naval Armory, there will be three signal lights.

The speed limit along the stretch will be 20 miles an hour and no parking will be permitted on either side of the road.

GLEE CLUB TRYOUTS START; TO COVER HALF OF STATE

Men's Glee Club tryouts will be held in Hill Hall from today until next Wednesday. They will begin at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

The club will tour the eastern part of the state late in February, including Rocky Mount, Ahoskie, Elizabeth City, New Bern and Fayetteville in the six-day tour. In the Spring Quarter the club will tour the western part of the state.

Old as well as prospective members are asked to attend today's meeting.

OFFICIALS NEEDED

All students who are interested in working as basketball officials for the Intramural Department's basketball leagues should see Bill Kucyck in the Mural Department sometime before 4:00 tomorrow afternoon.

Law Student Dies In Crash

Percy Flowers Jr., 24, a first-year law student here, was killed Wednesday, Dec. 17, when his small two-seater plane went into a spin and crashed three miles north of town.

Mr. Flowers apparently was trying to bring his plane back to a private field near here when it crashed. The plane was drenched in gasoline but did not explode. The craft was demolished.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Flowers, and two sons, aged two and nine months. He was from Clayton, N. C.

Today's Inauguration Marks 27th Governor From UNC

Governor-elect William B. Umstead is the 27th alumnus of the University to attain the highest state office, and when he is inaugurated today many members of the class of 1916 will gather in Raleigh to pay tribute to their distinguished classmate.

The group will be seated in a special section on the inaugural platform in the capital city's Memorial Auditorium. Just before the formal rceeption, the group will attend a brief reunion at the Governor's Mansion.

The first University alumnus to serve the state as governor was William Miller in 1814-17.

Since that time there have been 44 governors.

Umstead's Class of 1916 is one of the University's outstanding classes. Chancellor Robert B. House is also a member of the class and in the 1916 Yackety Yack, pictures of Umstead and House are carried side by side. Umstead's picture is captioned "best debater" and House's is captioned "best student."

The Governor-elect's brother, John W. Umstead Jr., long-time Chapel Hill insurance executive and Representative in the State Legislautre, graduated from the University in 1909.

Governor-elect Umstead made an outstanding record during his undergraduate days at the University. He is regarded as one of the most brilliant student speakers in the history of the institution.

'Festival Of Song' To Be At 8 Tonight

DR. LARA HOGGARD

The "Festival of Song" will be presented tonight at 8 o'clock as the Student Entertainment Committee's second presentation of the year.

The local appearance of "Festival of Song" is one of some 85 performances which are being staged this season by Dr. Lara Hoggard. Dr. Hoggard is widely known through his role as choral conductor for Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians on TV and as conductor of the Fred Waring Choral Workshop. He is on leave of absence from the Pennsylvanians while directing the Waring production of the Festival of Song on its current tour.

Students will be admitted free upon presentation of ID cards. Auditorium doors will open at 7 p.m. Tickets for all seats not filled by students will go on sale to faculty and townspeople at 7:40 p.m. The price will be $1.

Members of the SEC are Chairman Bob Simmons, Bill Brain, Walt Ernst, Al Neely and Bill Watt. Faculyt advisers are Samuel Selden of the Dramatic Arts Department, William Newman of the Music Department and Olin Mouzon of the Commerce Department.

Other performances scheduled by the SEC for the Winter and Spring Quarters are Nadine Connor and Ogden Nash.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON—A warning of the United States' hydrogen superbomb was issued to Soviet Premier Josef Stalin yesterday by President Truman in his farewell State of the Union message to Congress. Truman said the bomb "dwarfs" those of Hiroshima and would mean "ruin for your regime and your homeland" in the event of World War III.

—o—

SEATTLE—A twin-engine C-46 Army transport plan,e bound for Fort Jackson, S. C., was reported missing somewhere over South Idaho yesterday. Aboard were 37 soldiers on rotation from Korea and a crew of four. Identity of those aboard was not available, but many were believed to be from the Carolinas.

—o—

RALEIGH—In its initial session yesterday the 1953 Legislature voted increased compensation for the office of governor and other top state officials. The bill increased the governor's expense account from $600 to $5,000 per year.

—o—

WASHINGTON — George W. Womack, Rutherfordton, N. C., yesterday received the Medal of Honor on behalf of his son, the late Pfc. Bryant H. Womack, killed in action while serving as a medical aid man in Korea. Womack died on the battlefield after refusing to be evacuated and continuing to direct aid for the wounded, according to his citation.

—o—

BURGAW—An ex-convict robbed the Bank of Burgaw of $1,751 with a toy pistol here Tuesday only to be nabbed by highway patrolmen after a 90-mile-per-hour automobile chase. The bandit, J. R. (Bobby) Campbell fo Wilmington, was an easy target for some three dozen state patrollmen grouped in Elizabethtown, 40 miles away, to guard a Negro on trial for a rape murder.

—o—

WASHINGTON — Congressional sources hinted yesterday that more data about mystery man Henry "The Dutchman" Grunewald may be forthcoming. Grunewald was recently indicted for refusal to answer questions in a tax scandal inquiry. He has been linked with many big names about Washington and was supposedly thanked by President Truman for his contributions during the 1948 election.

For Sale Now: 'Jingles', A Ring-Tailed Monkey

By Bob Slough

Jingles the experimental ring-tailed South American monkey is up for sale.

The small, wide-eyed monkey was purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Hyden Ramsey "because we wanted to experiment and just see what monkeys are like."

But now, th Ramsey's have experimented and are selling the ring-tail to make room for a wooley monkey they recently ordered from South America.

"Jingles is well behaved," Mrs. Ramsey said, "except when we let him out of the cage. Then he is mischievous."

"The monkey eats most anything," she said. Among the food items on the monkey's diet are raw eggs, grapes, apples and candy.

Entertainment for the monkey set is relatively simple. "Jingles sits for hours by the window and she loves to watch television," Mrs. Ramsey said.

Mrs. Ramsey said "We had no particular reason for buying the monkey. We wanted one so we just bought it."

"The wooley monkey was supposed to arrive before Christmas," Mrs. Ramsey said, "and we hope he will be here soon."

ITALIAN POLICE and newspapers are investigating photographs purported to be "interesting" nude poses of shapely actress Siivana Mangano. Copies of the pictures hvae been circulating in Italy for several months amid claims that the bosomy Italian film star actually posed for them. At least one leading newspaper has suggested that the photos are fakes. —NEA Telephoto.

Legislature To Consider Axed Budget

By John Jamison

The State Legislature next week will consider the Consolidated University's budget request, presumably axed in certain areas by the Advisory Budget Commission.

The original budget request, submitted by the University in September, totaled over 18 million dollars for physical improvements at the three institutions. However, this request was subject to review and possibly revision by the Advisory Budget Commission before being presented officially to the Legislature .

Because of the current public attention given to fire hazard conditions in fraternity and sorority houses on the campus, a question has arisen concerning similar conditions in University-owned buildings. Old West, Old East and Steele dormitories, specifically, have been termed hazardous.

The Legislature will be asked to appropriate funds for providing fire escapes for these buildings. Most other University buildings are already in compliance with the statute, Business Manager Claude Teague said yesterday.

An auditorium-armory, capable of seating the entire student body, and a new student union building were among the original budget items requested for the Universiyt at Chapel Hill. These two structures would cost $2,700,000. However, it is not known whether the Advisory Budget Commission saw fit to leave these items in its version of the budget request.

This version will not be known until it reaches the floor of the Legislature, probably next Tuesday night. Its secrecy is carefully guarded. The budget printer is bonded to prevent his revealing the contents to anyone.

TICKET EXCHANGE

Students, faculty members, and employees of the University who hold athletic passbooks will be required to exchange them for reserved seating assignments for the Wake Forest game on January 20.

Holders of passbooks bearing odd serial numbers can exchange their coupons at the Athletic office Monday through Wednesday, January 12-14. On Thursdav through Saturday, January 15-17, the remaining tickets will be issued to holders of even numbered passbooks.

First Movie In New Series Is Next Friday

"Metamorphosis," the first of five art films to be brought to the campus this quarter by the Student Union Board, will be shown Friday, Jan. 16 at Gerrard Hall.

The film, produced at the University of Michigan, is based on Franz Kafka's story. Admission cards for the series are $1.50 and no single tickets will be sold.

Other films in the series will be shown on Thursday nights.

"Anna Christie," starring Greta Garbo and Charles Bickford, will be shown on Jan. 29. Filmed in 1933, the movie is based on the Eugene O'Neill play.

A 1951 German production of "The Marriage of Figaro" will be presented Feb. 12. It is the only complete version of the opera ever filmed and stars Erna Berger and Tiana Lemnitz. The music is by the Berlin State Opera, Chorus and Orchestra.

Another German film, "M," will be shown Feb. 26. "M," is a psychological story of a murderer and stars Peter Lorre.

The last film in the series is a French production entitled "Carnival in Flanders" was awarded the gold medal in the Venice competition and received the New York Critics award for the best foreign film of the year.

Tickets may be bought at Gerrard Hall the night of the first performance.

BUS STATION GETS RATING

The Chapel Hill bus station was given a rating of 98 out of a possible 100 for the month of December.

The rating was announced yesterday in Raleigh by the State Utilities Commission.

Post Editor Will Address Press Meet

Demaree Bess, associate editor of the Saturday Evening Post, who calls Asheville home, will speak at the opening session of the Mid-Winter Press Institute here Jan. 22.

The annual sessions, which will continue through Saturday morning, are being sponsored by the North Carolina Press Association with the University and Duke University cooperating.

James S. Pope, managing editor of the Louisville, Ky. Courier-Journal, will be the principal speaker at the Friday morning session and will take part in a forum on the general theme of freedom of the press. This session will be held in Swain Hall.

To allow more time for the daily and weekly group meetings Friday afternoon, there will be no formal address at the University luncheon session Friday. There will be an entertainment program featuring Andy and Barbara Griffith, professional entertainers and Carolina Playmakers of the cast of The Lost Colony.

D. A. Rawley, High Point, chairman of the associated dailies, will be in charge of the afternoon session of the daily members Friday.

Weimar Jones, Franklin, chairman of the weekly contests committee, will preside over the meeting of the non-dailies. He has arranged for one of the contest judges to conduct a critical review of the entries and a question and-answer period.

Dr. Waldo Beach, a member of the faculty of the Duke University Divinity School, will be the principal speaker at the dinner session there Friday night. The annual awards will be presented at this time by the new Governor, William B. Umstead.

The past presidents' breakfast will be held in Chapel Hill Saturday morning with Thomas J. Lassiter of the UNC School of Journalism, immediate past president, in charge of the program.

Representatives Report On Quadrennial Study

Four Carolina representatives to the Quadrennial Study Conference of the United Student Christian Council reported yesterday on the meet they attended during the holidays at Morgan State College, Baltimore.

Representing Carolina at the eight day sessions were Stuart Jones, Eberhard Kindiger, Susan Fink and Joel Savell, director of the Wesley Foundation.

William H. Poteat, assistant professor of philosophy here and one of the conference leaderh, set the theme of th conference. "Man has lost his way because he has torn himself free of the relationships with which he used to be identified."

Students of all races and religions gathered to discuss the following topics: the church, the university and the world struggle.

"It was stimulating to observe the study groups in operations where earnest students of different races and different religious faiths were struggling with some of the basic issues which confront humanity today," declared Morgan College Dean George C. Grant.

Local Model Of UN Soon To Be Ready

"Students can be assured that final plans will be completed this week towards organizing a model UN assembly on campus," Judy Anderson, spokesman for a core group working in conjunction with the YMCA on this project, said yesterday.

Definite plans of how, when and where to join and participate will be announced early next week, Miss Alexander added.

Already plans include to have a model General Assembly, Security Council, Secretariat, Economic and Social Council, Trusteeship Council and perhaps even some of the major subcommittees, such as FAO and UNESCO.

Plans do not include an International Court.

It is believed that the model UN organization forming will be the first of its kind in the South. Wellesley College in Massachusetts already has such an organization.

LANGUAGE SPECIALISTS

Requests are made at the reference desk in the Library for the names of persons proficient in foreign languages to translate articles needed in research.

The reqests are often for the less common languages. Any student or Chapel Hill resident interested in commercial translating may leave his name wiht qualifications at the reference desk.

A Bomb For A Rope

One item about 1952—no lynching.

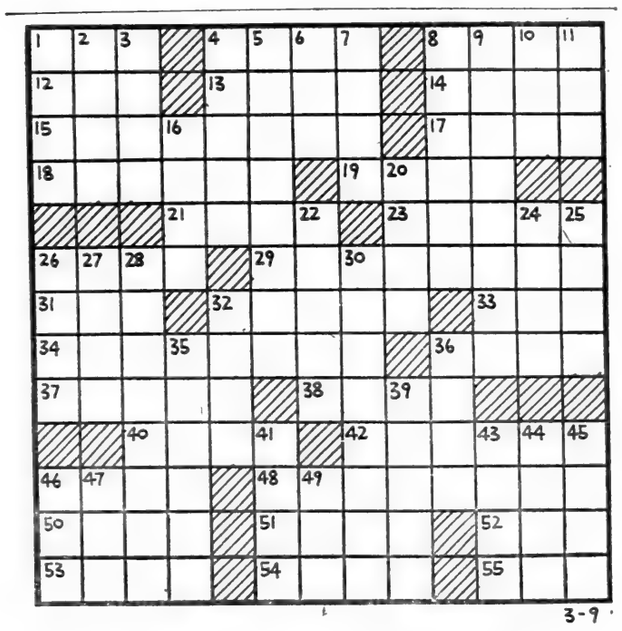
This is news because 4,726 people had died as a result of mob action in the 70-year period from 1882 to 1951, Tuskegee Institute reports.

There is a good trend. In 1892 there were 231 lynchings. In 1945, 1947, and 1951, there was one death each. Perhaps this blot on the American scene is being removed permanently.

Tusgekee believes that other forms of mob action are taking the place of the more primitive lynching method to censure people. From 1949 to 1952 there were 68 bombings or attempted bombings—49 against Negroes, ten against whites and public institutions, eight agains synagogues, schools and community centers, and one against a Catholic church. Only two people died.

The bomb has apparently replaced the rope for elimination of people who are "in the way" of society. Yet the report is encouraging and certainly is bad news for the hungry Communist propaganda specialists.

Marilyn's Passing Thought



When asked her opinion of sex, Marilyn Monroe replied, "I've nevgiven it a second thought."—News item.

Hail, all you Tar Heel lads and lasses!
Hail, you muse of back-seat passes!
Listen to the latest tale
About this queen of stardom's quail.

Miss Monroe, a newsman notes,
Won't be committed inside quotes
On how she feels toward indoor games
Between a young swain and his flames .

"I don't give sex a second thought,"
Is all that from her can be wrought.
In this dilemma, I think the worst:
Damn the second, what was the first?

Pulque

Besides being a time of celebration, New Year's is also a good occasion for some serious thinking. It is a fine time to review the past year, and consider the good and bad things one has done. Even 1952 had its good points, though they were few and far between. Therefore, I am going to take this opportunity to present the first annual Pulque awards for meritorious behavior. Besides the honor, each of these awards carries with it the cash value of an expired deferment.

GENERAL AWARDS

To Proctor and Gamble; who have succeeded in keeping Ivory Soap afloat without the use of cholorophyll.

To Thomas E. Dewey; who did not run for president in 1952.

To a (name-less) Chicago disk jockey; who steadfastly refused to play "I Saw Mommy Kissing Santa Claus," thereby almost losing his job.

To the defendant at the mock trial; who when asked if particular fellow was a friend of hers answered, "Well, he's a date!"

To Bull Durham; who has not put out roll-your-own packs in both the regular and king size.

To the American (Under-ware) manufacturers; who continue to function in spite of Marilyn Monroe.

To the unsung heroes of Chapel Hill; who in the face of much criticism take campus coeds to the Germans.

To the Orange County Presbytery; who have very graciously included Christianity as a branch of Presbyterianism.

To all professors; who do not ask questions during Masters and Doctors oral exams.

SPECIAL AWARDS

Best School: Duke University, noted primarily because it is located within a short distance of the UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA. It is connected some how or other with the tobacco business.

Most important expose: Colgate, Palmolive, Peet has finally had to admit that lo these many years it was chlorophyll that made Palmolive green. This was a direct result of the investigations made by the junior senator from Wisconsin, who is now working on the much more serious problem of what makes Lifebouy red.

Biggest Comeback: My Independence, Mo. spy states that he saw a store called Harry's Haberdashery with a sign in the window reading, will reopen Feb. 1.

Best Movie: "The Loon's Necklace," which is shown as a regular part of the course in Anthropology 41.

Best Play: "The Death of a Salesman," which will not be the presentation of the Playmakers road show.

Person of the Year: Adlai Stevenson, who has not become president of an American University.

Express Yourself

Editor:

I read with interest the article by Jim O'Connor on "Teaching Teachers."

Perhaps Mr. O'Connor has not realized that it is not the textbook but the teacher that makes a course good or poor. A teacher interprets the text, leaning as heavily or lightly on it as he wishes.

In my four years of college here, I had very few courses that I considered worthwhile, mainly because the teacher did not rise above the textbook. However, my Educational Psychology (Education 71) course was one of the few I had that was really inspiring. I took this course in the spring of 1950. The text was dull, but the teacher was dynamic and fascinating. Ours was an elevated class discussion—we never touched the text except to read the prescribed chapters. Our discussions in class rose far above the chapters we had read.

It was the type of class that probably none of us will soon forget—that which is a rarity on campuses today, a discussion group that was always reaching for ideas, never learning by rote.

We wrote three term papers for this class based on our own research. I don't believe there is a one of us that didn't leave Ed. Psych. enriched intellectually and emotionally. I say "emotionally" because each of us, by participating in and leading group discussions, gained a unique insight into ourselves and a feeling of intellectual independence. That class was an idea—and we were part of it.

Look back on the courses you had that helped to shape you as an individual, and you will find that you remmeber the teacher, but not the book. The textbook is often only a necessary evil, for the teacher and students may depend on it so much that all individual thinking is lost. Thus the class is a failure, but the book should not be condemned for the teacher's failure.

The inspiring teacher looks upon his class not as mental automatons to copy down the words as they fall from his lips—but as independent beings capable of thinking, of reaching for abstract ideas, of solving problems through free inquiry. The only teachers of this type that I was fortunate enough to encounter were in the departments of Philosophy and Education. So, let's not condemn departments—but instead judge individual teachers.

"WHAT WE WANT IS SORT OF A DIGEST VERSION"

DREW PEARSON

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON—One of the most sensational aspects of the McCarthy investigation was not known even to the Senate Elections Committee members themselves. It was the sudden flight from the U. S. of a key witness and friend of McCarthy's—wealthy divorcee Arvilla Bentley.

Mrs. Bentley, formerly married to the new GOP congressman from Michigan, Alvin Bentley, skipped out of the country under the assumed name of Mary Peterson. Reason for her hurried exit was because she had officially given $7,000 to McCarthy, which is more than the legal limit; in addition to which she told friends that she and her ex-husband had actually given around $75,000.

Naturally, she didn't want to be cross-examined by the Senate Elections Committee.

Mrs. Bentley is a society lady living next door to Averill Harriman on swank Foxhall Road in Washington. For a time her husband was in the State Department. For a time also, both he and Mrs. Bentley were great friends of McCarthy's. Now divorced, she is still a friend.

When the Senate Elections Committee got hold of some of Mrs. Bentley's canceled checks, they telephoned her, asked to see her. But she flew the coop before a subpoena could be served. Boarding an Eastern Airlines plane at 1 a.m. Nov. 28, she arrived in Miami, transferred to Pan American Airlines, and arrived in Nassau that afternoon.

Meanwhile, her Washington lawyer, Joseph Rafferty, claimed he didn't know where she was, though actually she was in touch with him and asked him to get certain records of canceled checks from the Riggs National Bank.

Mrs. Bentley was escorted to the Bahamas by a professional ex-Communist, Harvey Matuson, who then returned to New York, but flew back to the Bahamas after the storm had blown over in order to pick her up and escort her back to Washington.

It was $10,000 of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley's money given to McCarthy that the Senate Elections Committee found was carefully withdrawn by Jean Kerr, his secretary, then deposited through circuitous channels in Wisconsin where it was used to speculate on soy beans.

Congressman Bentley, when interviewed by the Senate Elections Committee, emphatically stated that he had not given the money to McCarthy to be used by him personally.

Eric Rios Bridoux, the Bolivian pilot who crashed into an Eastern Airlines Plane, killing 55 persons near the Washington Airport three years ago, almost made the headlines again last week.

Two Air Force officers nearly swung on the brash young Bolivian as he boasted about the tragic accident at the young men's store on F Street in Washington. Bridoux, who was charged with responsibility by the Civil Aeronautics Board, apparently became irked at a shoe clerk for not recognizing him.

"Why, I thought everybody knew me," the Pilot arrogantly told the clerk. "I'm famous. I was involved in the biggest air accident Washington ever had. It was my plane that collided with that airliner several years ago, killing 55 people."

When the clerk remarked that the tragedy was hardly a matter to brag or joke about, Bridoux laughingly replied:

"Oh, accidents will happen."

The two Air Force officers who overheard Bridoux sounding off were as shocked and angry as employees in the store, but decided not to spoil their Christmas leave by socking the crude pilot.

ROLFE NEILL

The Livespike

Corruption under Ike seems to have set in early. However, so far it doesn't seem to be at the taxpayer's expense. To wit:

The Radio Corp. of America lent 60 portable radios for use of the general's staff on the special campaign train. Thus far only eight have been turned in and it prompted a memorandum from Ike's business manager, who said:

". . . It is requested that the staff members concerned examine their effects and consciences and drop off at the business office any product of such description.

"RCA was doubtless taking the calculated risk and expected a certain attrition, but an 89 percent loss is perhaps a trifle high."

The State, an entertaining weekly mag catering the news of North Carolina, recently turned up an interesting story about communal living right here within our own Tar Heel borders. The article was by Bill Sharpe and the following information is from it.

Celo is its name and it lies within the shadow of the great Black Range in Yancey County. It is an experiment in communal living and began in 1936 when three men bought 1,200 acres in South Toe River Valley. The community is named for Mt. Celo which rises over it.

Members could buy land and build on it, but could not sell their holdings to outsiders. Now, some 15 years later, 80 people are in th egroup, representing about 25 families. They've had tough going for they have discovered it's not easy to raise one's own food; consequently only one of the 80 is a farmer—and he a native who joined the group.

Other problems? No one seemed to know where the co-operative tractor was left by its last user. No one could remember when the communal truck had its oil changed.

Finally this group had to come to terms with the very world from which it fled. Some took outside jobs, three being preachers. One is county librarian. Etc. Etc.

Sharpe summed it up with "Actually, Celo Community today day looks very much like a generous rich man's whim, with indulgence run its natural course (the rich man has quit subsidizing hte group), and the residue left high in the Carolina hills to weave its way back into a world too tumultous to conquer, too vital to abandon."

One of the more interesting residents of Celo Community is Col. Peter Schwintzer who was a German officer in World War II. The colonel, a young looking, blonde Teuton, runs the tiny coop store. He says the only America he knows is that stretch bounded by Marion, Asheville and Spruce Pine. And, he adds, he finds it quite adequate.

Tar Heels Travel To VMI And W & L

Play Tonight And Saturday At Lexington

By Tom Peacock

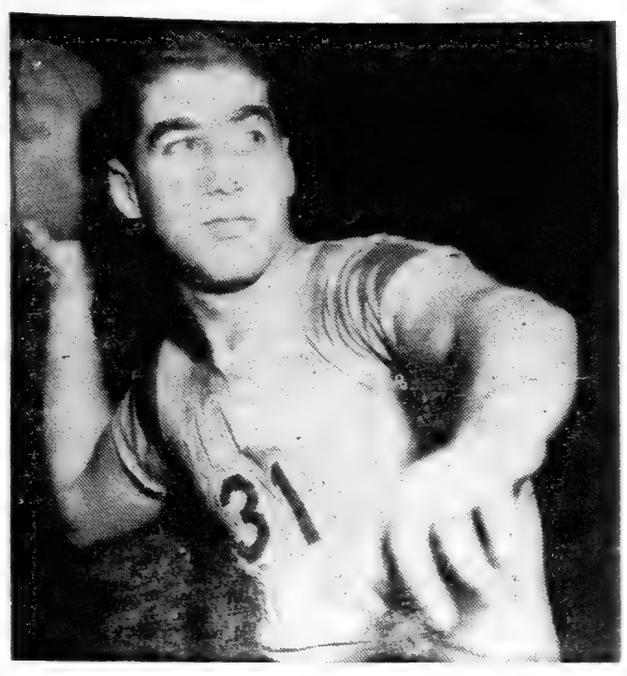
The Carolina basketball team plays VMI tonight in Lexington, Va. at 7:30 and plays again in Lexington Saturday night against Washington and Lee in two Southern Conference contests.

Carolina, with a 5-0 record in the Conference, is favored to extend its win streak and remain in the number one spot in the Conference. VMI is not rated in the same class with the Tar Heels, and Carolina has already administered a 67-48 licking to Washington and Lee.

Carolina will play its first home game of the winter quarter next Tuesday night against Davidson.

Co-Captain guard Vince Grimaldi, the Carolina high-scorer, is expected to lead the Tar Heels along with freshman forward Jerry Vayda, who closely follows Grimaldi in points scored.

Grimaldi upped a 17-point per game average Tuesday night when he scored 12 field goals to give the Tar Heels a win over East Carolina College.



Coach Chuck Noe's Keydets have failed to make the win column in Conference play this season, and Carolina is favored to take its 33rd contest from them. VMI has beaten Carolina only three times in the series that started in 1914. Tonight's game will be the first time the two teams have met since 1944.

Carolina's contest with Wandl earlier in the season was the first game between the two teams since 1943. The Tar Heels have a 21-11 margin in the matches since 1915.

In addition to Grimaldi and Vayda, center Bud Maddie, forward Al Lifson, and guard Bob Phillips are expected to complete a strong Carolina starting team. Ernie Schwarz, Paul Likins and Jippy Carter are also expected to see a lot of action.

In VMI's last outing, George Washington, one of the highest scoring teams in the nation, walloped the Keydets, 98-64, on the GW floor. VMI now has a 2-6 record.

North Carolina started slowly in its previous game with Washington and Lee, but accurate shooting by Grimaldi and Vayda in the last half enabled the Tar Heels to pull away. Carolina will be without the services of co-captain Jack Wallace in the games, but Lifson's return to the squad has eased the loss.

Haines & Pawlik Lead Matmen

Carolina's improved wrestling team, led by Captain Eddie Haines and Harry Pawlik, travel to Durham next Wednesday, January 14, in quest of their second victory of the season, taking on Duke's Blue Devils.

The Tar Heels won their only meet of the early season, defeating Davidson, 17-11, before Christmas, in a match in which Coach Sam Barnes' matmen showed up well.

This season, in addition to the varsity squad, there will be a Freshman team representing UNC. Johnny Guiton, a graduate student from Davidson, has been named the Freshman coach. Coach Guiton's team will play a four game schedule this season. Two dates have been set, Camp Lejeune on January 13 and Virginia on January 17. The other 2 meets with Goldsboro High and Raleigh School for the Blind will be announced later.

Mural Heads Meet Tonight

Dormitory and fraternity intramural managers will meet at 7:30 tonight in room 301-A of Woollen Gym to discuss the winter athletic program.

Entries for the upcoming basketball and table tennis tournaments will be accepted at this meeting only and at no other time

The basketball tournament will be the first of the intramural tournies to start with play beginning next Tuesday. Table tennis will follow next Thursday.

Soccer will be the other point system activity during the quarter. Entries will close on Feb. 5 and play will begin on Feb. 9.

The mural department also plans competition in handball and swimming and hopes to present the annual sports carnival later in the quarter.

Night Meets Start In Art

Imagination and $10 will get you into an evening art class.

The class is for people interested in drawing for pleasure, and sketches will be made from life and from imagination. Pencils, crayons and pen and ink will be used.

The first class meeting will be Jan. 14 in Person Hall, and the class will meet every Wednesday evening thereafter from 7 to 9 p.m. Classes last for 10 weeks, and will include talks on art of the past and present

Track Workouts Underway

Carolina's track team opened practice for the coming indoor season Tuesday afternoon in the tin can under the direction of head coach Dale Ranson and assistant Joe Hilton. About 100 athletes answered the call, with each boy expected to work out at least four times every week.

The squad is composed of about 50 returning varsity performers, and a like number of freshmen aspirants. Any additional varsity candidates and freshmen will be wlecomed by Coach Ranson.

Carolina will enter its first meet of the season this coming Saturday night, when several mmebers of the squad participate in the Washington Evening Star meet. A one mile relay team, one pole vaulter, and one hurdler have been invited to compete. The relay team will be sletd this afternoon.

Bobby Bell and Morris Osborne are slated to be co-captains of the squad. Osborne is an outstanding miler, while Bell is a performer in both the hurdles and the high jump

Several key members from last season's squad are returning this year Among these are Sam Jordan who is both a pole vaulter and a high jumper, Harry Brown, dashman and broad jumper, middle distance men John Bennett, Loyd Bostian, Don Wright, Earl Welch, distance runners Lee Bostian, Loyd Bostian, Osborne, and Bobby Barden, pole vaulters Bill Duke and Fred Mewhinney, hurdler Bill Cornlel, and shot putters Tom Higgins and Tom McCallister.

Albert Long is expected to participate in the broad jump if basketball duties don't interfere.

Meeting

Fraternity and sorority presidents and house managers will meet tonight at 8 in Town Hall to discuss the fire hazard question with Mayor Ed Lanier and Town Manager Thomas Rose.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION

All freshmen and sophomores who are registered for physical education and who have not yet been assigned to classes should report to room 311 of Woollen Gym tomorrow or Saturday to be assigned. Absences will be marked against those who do not report.

With final exams near at hand on some campuses, students working under the honor system must again make ready for the supreme test—the test of personal integrity.

The NSA Committee will meet in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial today at 4 p.m. A report will be made on the proceedings of the National Executive Committee meeting and activities for the Winter Quarter will be discussed.

Don't start that bonfire till the game is over

or

That was no crying towel; that was my old school tie!

Once there was a basketball team that was the Hottest Thing in the Conference—until its high-scoring center, a 6½-foot Lump, of dubious intellect, developed a bad attack of the Flunks, and wound up Number 1 on the Ineligible List. This with the team right up against the Crucial Game for the Conference Title.

The first half was Grim. Our boys limped off to the dressing room trailing by 30 points. The Coach had just embarked on a touching Word Picture of himself, his wife and three helpless dependents Starving in the Streets, when in burst the Assistant Manager, trundling an overflowing wheelbarrow. In it were telegrams—hundreds of 'em—from fraternities and sororities, the head of the Student Council, the Dean, the faculty, the janitor, from practically Every Student on Campus—all bearing the stirring exhortation "Win this one for Old Blackstrap!"

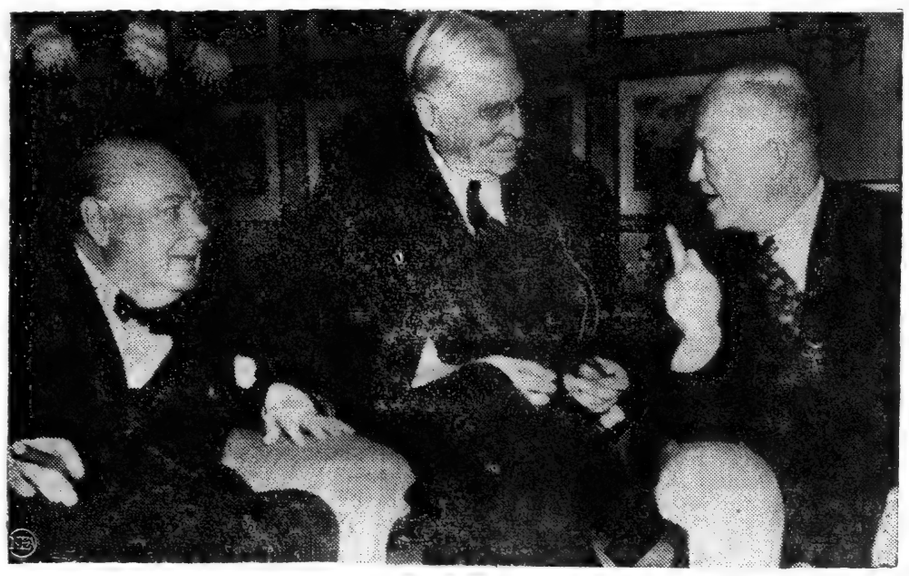
Was the team Buoyed Up? Oh buoy! Won by 4 points, in overtime. They're now known around the conference as the Western Union Wonders.

Seriously, there's nothing like a Telegram to put heart into the guy—or the team—that gets it. Likewise, there's no nicer way to say "Well Done!" In fact, for just about any communique . . . whether it's a Flash for Cash to the Folks Back Home or Soft Words to a Distant Damsel . . . it's better to make the pitch via Western Union.

Aspiring 'O. Henry' Hoaxes Publisher, Copies Best Seller

BOSTON, Jan. 7—A would-be O. Henry serving time here in the same prison in which that author wrote many of his famous short stories startled literary circles and prison authorities recently.

Robert E. Preyer Jr., 24 year old inmate of the Ohio Penitentiary serving a 15 year stretch for burglary, pulled one of the biggest literary hoaxes in years by selling a Boston publisher a book he had copied word for word from another book published eight years ago.



Preyer started the project merely to kill time. In April, he began sending the manuscript to Little Brown & Company under the title "Position Unknown," and the publishers liked the book so well they decided to publish it and send Preyerla a $600 advance.

The convict purchased a new typewriter and went to work.

Sharpeyed book reviewer Virginia Kirgus of New York got a copy the day after Christmas and decided, "I could use the same review for 'Position Unknown' that I used for 'Island in the Sky' eight years ago. They were the same, word for word."

Miss Kirkus informed the publishers of her discovery and the publishers saw their dreams of a best seller fly out the window. The original book, written by Ernest K. Gan, was published by Viking Press in 1944.

Meantime, there appeared to be little that Little Brown & Co. could do to get back its $600 advance. Preyer already had bought the typewrite rand spent the maximum $15 he is allowed each month at the prison commissary. He sent all but $1.50 of the remainder to his mother.

Large UNC Delegation Attend Holiday Meet

Faculty members of various departments at the University attended meetings of scholarly organizations at points throughout the country during the the Christmas holiday period.

The largest single delegation was from several language departments who participated in sessions of the 67th annual Modern Language Association of America in Boston. The English and Romance Language Departments sent eight representatives each and the German Department three.

From the English Department were Chairman Dougald MacMillan and Profs. Richmond P. Bond, Norman E. Eliason, Hugh Holman, A. P. Hudson, Dean Clifford P. Lyons, Robert A. Pratt and Floyd Stovall.

George R. Coffman, Boston, professor emeritus of English and former head of the Department here, presented a paper, "John Gower in his Most Significant Role — Once More" before the English section. He is a member of the bibliography and research committee of the Chaucer Discussion Group.

Prof. Bond was secretary of the 18th Century Discussion Group; Prof. Eliason was a member of the committee on the prebaration of "A Dictionary of Modern American Usage" Prof. Hudson was chairman of the advisory and nominating committee of the Popular Literature Discussion Group; Prof. Stovall was chairman of the American Literature Section, and Prof. Pratt was a member of the Book Publications Committee, the editorial committee for the Chaucer Library and the advisory and nominating committee of the English Section, and chairman of the Medieval Section.

The Romance Language Department was represented at the same meeting by Chairman S. A. Stoudemire, who heads the Modern Literature. Spanish Section; Profs. S. E. Leavitt, J. E. Keller and W. L. Wiley and Jacque Harde.

Acting Chairman George S. Lane of the Department of Germanic Languages and Profs. F. E. Coenen and W. P. Friederich attended the Modern Language Association meeting, and Prof Lane presided over sessions of the Linguistic Society of America of which he is president.

The next largest delegation was from the History Department to the American Historical Association meeting in Washington, D. C. Chairman W. Caldwell and Profs. L .C. MacKinney, Harold A. Bierck, Fletcher M .Green, Frank W. Klingberg, C. H. Pegg, C. O. Cathey, J. C. Sitterson, E. P. Douglass, Cecil Johnson James E. Kgin Hugh T. Lefler and James L. Godfrey.

Five members of the Department of Statistics attended sessions of the Institute of Mathematical Statistics the American Statistical Association, the Biometrics Society and the Econometric Society, in Chicago.

Department Chairman Harold Hotelling presided at a session of the Econometric Society as well as at a session of the Institute of Mathematical Statistics.

Prof. R. C. Bose and Prof. S. N. Roy presented two joint papers and Prof. N. L. Johnson, visiting lecturer from the University of London, also gave a paper.

A number of faculty members from several departments attended meetings of the National Society for the Study of Communication, Speech Association of America, the National University Extension Association, the American Educational Theatre and Assembly, and the National Theatre Assembly, all held in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Miss Gourley New Prof In Public Health

Miss Geraldine Gourley, director of the Social Service Department for the Denver (Colo.) General Hospital and the Renver Health Division for the last four years, has been named associate professor of medical social work in the Department of Maternal and Child Health, University School of Public Health.

Miss Gourley, who will assume her duties here this week, will work with students of the School of Public Health to help "develop a better understanding of the social factors influencing the health of the individual and the community, the place of medical social work in the community, and the agencies involved in helping people to help themselves."

Educated at Washburn College, Kansas, Miss Gourley took her M.A. degree in medical work at the University of Chicago in 1942. She taught six years in the public schools of Hutchinson, Kansas and has had four years of rural case work and general welfare experience in that state.

From 1942 to 1947 she was a medical socia lworker with the American Red Cross in Fitzsimons General Hospital, Denver; Camp Carson, Colorado Springs, and Bruno General Hospitalfi Sante Fe, New Mex.

RALEIGH Jan. 7.—Two State College football players who pleaded guilty in City Court here yesterday to shoplifting charges were placed on probation for a period of two years.

Donald Ray Langston, 19, a firststring fullback, and Percy Harper Riden, 20, a reserve tackle, each faced three charges of stealing men's clothing valued at $77.50 from three local stores during the Christmas shopping season.

6-Day Plan Will Be Talked; Umstead Asks For Pay Boost

New Governor Also Asks For Liquor Vote

RALEIGH, Jan. 8—Gov. William B. Umstead today advocated a 10 percent pay increase for teachers and state employees and asked that the increase be made retroactive to last July 1.

Although it would be "unwise and detrimental" to levy new taxes, Umstead suggested that the Legislature could reduce the number of exemptions to the sales tax if additional revenues are needed to provide essential services.

"I should like for all those who work for North Carolina, however humble their job may be, to be proud that they work for the state," Gov. Umstead said.

"I should like for them to feel that they are a part of the state government, and I seek their sympathetic understanding of the problems of our state, and their assistance in making it a better place in which to live," he continued.

"Due to the increase in the cost of living," Gov. Umstead said, "I have heretofore announced that I would favor a 10 percent increase in the salary and wages of all state employees, retroactive to July 1, 1952, and now recommend that this be done."

Gov. Umstead praised the institutions of higher learning in North Carolina and recommended that the General Assembly authorize a commission to be appointed by the Governor to study the matter of educational television and report its findings to this session of the state's lawmaking body.

"In this matter we shall be plowing in new ground, and it will require the talents, the time and the wisdom of able men and women to determine what course we should follow," he added.

Asserting that the liquor problem is not a financial one but "is a moral question," he called for a state-wide liquor referendum.

Gov. Umstead said, "Since the act was first passed legalizing the sale of intoxicating liquor in those counties in North Carolina voting in favor of it, there has existed a wide difference of opinion on this question."

"In the minds of many people it seems to have come to the question of revenue," he added. "Even though the amount of money collected in taxes from the sale of intoxicating liquor in North Carolina has come to constitute an important part of our revenue, the issue should not be disposed of on the basis of taxation."

"It is a moral question," he said, "and should be treated as such Prior to 1948 and in that year and again in 1952, I publicly stated that I favored a referendum on the liquor question."

"I now favor it, and therefore, recommend," he continued, "that the General Assembly submit this issue to the people of North Carolina."

MRS MARY D. CAIN DISPLAYS the hack-saw she used to cut a government padlock from the door of her newspaper plant in Summit, Miss. Faculty Group Then Reports To 2nd Body

By John Jamison

Members of a faculty Personnel Committee will assemble next week in answer to a "mandate from the Trustees to study ways and means of implementing Saturday classes," Dean Clifford P. Lyons said yesterday.

Asked if there would result a crystalization of faculty feeling about the six-day week, Dean Lyons said this was not the purpose of the meeting. The "mandate", it seems, is not to install Saturday classes, not to express opinions about their advisability.

The group scheduled to meet next week is known as the Committee on Instructional Personnel. Dr. Lyons is its chairman. Decisions made by this committee will be reported to the Faculty Council laagainst the extra class day conter this month.

Meanwhile, the student fight tinues — at times, half-heartedly, President Ham Horton believes. getting students to report on their Horton says he is having difficulty holiday conferences with University Trustees.

When the Executive Committee dropped the Saturday-class bombshell, students reacted with immediate bitterness. They were joined shortly in their fighting efforts by Executive Trustees John W. Umstead and A. Hugh Harris.

Numerous other Trustees have expressed disapproval of any change in the University's schedule.

The full Board of Trustees will meet in February. It is within their power to reverse the order of the Executive Committee. However, there has been no authoritative indication htat the subject will even be brought up.

The possibility of such a reversal, though, remains the inspiration behind student efforts.

Rankin Hits Way Trustees Are Appointed

RALEIGH, Jan. 8— Senator R. Grady Rankin of Gaston County said yesterday he is opposed to the practice of naming legislators to the Board of Trustees of the Consolidated University.

"It's getting worse" from session to session, Rankin declared in a meeting of the State Senate Rules Committee, as he touched off the discussion.

Trustees are named by the Legislature and quite a few law makers get on the board as a result.

He recalled that several sessions ago he was nominated to the board while a prominent man from Gaston who had been a member was left off. Rankin withdrew then and succeeded in persuading the Assembly to put the other Gaston man back in his place.

But when the Gaston man came up for reappointment, he was knocked off the board in favor of a member of the Assembly.

Several members of the Rules Committee rose to say they agreed with Rankin on the matter.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

RALEIGH—William B. Umstead of Durham, former Senator, Congressman and lawyer, took over lina here yesterday, climaxing day the executive reins of North Carolong inaugural pomp and ceremony. Umstead succeeds W. Kerr Scott, admitted country boy and friend of the farmer.

SEATTLE—Aviation was having a tough time of it yesterday as the second airliner crash in as many afire in a storm, a commercial air days was reported. Off course and liner from California carried seven persons to a flaming death at the foot of a mountain 15 miles east of here Wednesday night. Two of the victims were children and two were women. The three men aboard were crew members.

MONTPELIER, Idaho—A nine-man ground party struggled through the wild, rocky mountain wilderness near here yesterday in a search for a C-46 commando transport plane missing with 40 men and one woman aboard. The men were soldiers, tired but happy veterans of Korean fighting, returning to their homes. Many were Carolinians, headed for separation points in North Carolina.

SEOUL—An Allied raiding party turned a sector of the central front southeast of the truce village of Panmunjom into a fury of flames and explosions for nearly an hour yesterday and left at least 35 Chinese dead on the battlefeld. Another 15 were belived killd and at least 10 wounded.

WASHINGTON—Senate antifilibuster leaders yesterday claimed some benefits from their opening session fight despite ovrwhelming defeat by a combination of Republicans and Southern Democrats. But they made clear they were thinking of ultimate victory in another Congress and not counting on Republican promises of attempts later this year to make it easier to choke off filibusters.

RALEIGH—Outgoing Governor Kerr Scott on Wednesday reduced the prison sentence of Raymond Hair, former Wake Forest College student, who was convicted in April, 1950, of second degree murso a Wake student. 15 Fellowships Open To Coeds In Personnel

Fifteen $650 full tuition fellowships will be offered for the first time for the academic year 1953-1954 by the Radcliffe College management training program.

The management training program is a one-year graduate course in personnel and business administration tailored for the specific needs of women.

The program, now in its 16th year, trains young women for junior administrative positions in business, industry, government departments, social service and educational institutions. The curriculum consists of two fulltime job assignments which are integrated into six months of classroom work at Radcliffe.

Academic instruction is based on cases which have been compiled by the Harvard Business School. These cases are descriptions of actual operating situations drawn from business organizations. Among the courses offered are human relations, management methods and practices, marketing, accounting, and the functions of a personnel department.

The instructors are for the most part members of the faculty of the Harvard Business School.

Interested students, faculty and friends are invited to attend. Those who wish to eat with the group are asked to go through the cafeteria line by 5:30 and carry their trays to the second floor.

The discussion, which is sponsored by the YMCA World Understanding Commission, will begin at 6 o'clock.

Added Time

Carolina's radio station returned to the air this week with an added 45 minutes to its broadcast period.

WUNC began broadcasting Jan. 7, following the return of its student staff from Christmas vacations.

Program Manager Mike Healy yesterday announced two new programs, "An Evening Masterwork" and "The Ways of Mankind".

Press Club To Honor 4 With Writing Awards

Awards for the best editorial, sports, feature and straight-news writing published in The Daily Tar Heel during the Fall Quarter will be presented by the UNC Press Club Monday night.

The best-editorial award will go to former editor Barry Farber for his "Personally" column on sen Joseph McCarthy. Daily Tar Heel Editor Walt Dear will accept the award for Farber, who is now in the Army.

Sports Editor Biff Roberts will receive the sportswriting award for his coverage of the Notre Dame game. The feature writing award will go to Tom Parramore for his story on three freshmen who set up a radio station in Cobb Dormitory, and Managing Editor Rolfe Neill will receive the straight-news award for his first story on Saturday classes.

Runners-up for awards included Louis Kraar, who judges said did a good job on covering the campus political scene; Sally Schindel, who did several good features with a public service quality; John Jamison, Bob Slough, Elaine Gibson and Jody Levey.

The award-winning stories, and some of the runners-up, will be posted on the bulletin board in Bynum Hall.

The Press Club awards are given each quarter to encourage interest and quality in campus journalism. The criteria in the judging are not only originality and style in writing, but the presence of a nose for news and completeness of coverage.

Faculty judge in the contest was Thomas J. Lassiter, associate professor of journalism. Press Club judges were Jerry Epps, Sam Holmes, Wanda Philpott and Rollo Taylor.

A Check On Checks Shows A Red Face

By Louis Kraar

Check cashing services at Lenoir Hall will be streamlined early next week, student government officials announced yesterday.

The new system, which will supplement one which has been in use since September, will work like this:

Students will show checks and ID cards to the clerk at the cigar counter in Lenoir Hall lobby. The clerk will approve checks and indicate approval with a special stamp provided by student government. Then, cashiers in meal lines will accept checks as cash and without further checking of ID cards.

Stuart Jones, who originally was appointed to head a committee "to investigate the possibility of establishing check cashing services in Lenoir Hall," worked out the system with George Prillaman, Lenoir Hall manager.

Jones and student government officials ,obviously, didn't realize that Lenoir was already cashing checks.

"We've unofficially had a check cashing service ever since September," said Prillaman. He explained that, as before, only smaller checks would be cashed. Most checks that have been cashed haven't exceeded $5, he added.

Jones said yesterday the revamping plan started after it was learned that Lenoir had already been cashing checks.

Exact date of the inauguration of the new style service at Lenoir will be anounced as soon as final details have been arranged, said Prillaman.

A new check-mark appeared on President Ham Horton's framed copy of the University Party 1952 spring platform yesterday afternoon by the plank that promised to "establish a check cashing service in Lenoir Hall." The plank said that this service was to serve students during "odd hours" when the check cashing desk was closed. However, the Lenoir service will only operate during meal hours.

EPISCOPAL SERVICE

The annual Feast of Lights service will be held Sunday night at 8 o'clock at the Episcopal Church.

The service is an obsrevance of the Epiphany season and commemorates the visit of the Wise Men to the Christ Child.

'Cold War' Costs Both Sides, Has Northwestern Shivering

EVANSTON, Ill., Jan. 8—The students in Northwestern are up to their ears in hot water, and it is all due to cold weather.

It seems that the boys staged a two-night siege of snowball battles in the North quads and broke about 200 windows in the men's houses.

Now the incident has gone to a meeting of the executive board's of the Inter-Fraternity Council and Men's Inter-House Council. No one has even tried to determine the property damages. The most serious thing, according to the dean of men, is that in many instances the window breaking was deliberate.

The fellows at the Alpha Delta Phi house were counting on cutting cards to see who paid for the repairs, but the dean of men has different ideas. He says that everybody pays. The men, caught in the draft, soon got the same idea.

The SAE's and Phi Gam's got the biggest draft after the snow fight with a total loss of 47 windows between them. Seems the snow fight left the students out in the open, even in the houses.

One dormitory has a few panes left. It lost 64 windows.

Action is being taken to prevent htis from occuring again, although what kind of action they will take has not been decided. Maybe they'll ask the weather man to keep the snow away from Northwestern. With no snow, comes no trouble and no drafts.

Problem solved.

Memorial Hall—crammed—holds 2,000, less than half the student population.

That means only a minority of students has been allowed to enjoy the student financed Student Entertainment Committee's selections—ever.

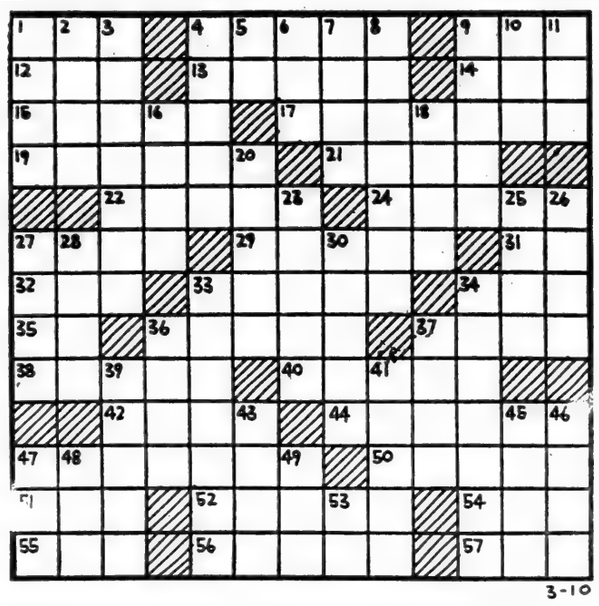
Perhaps you were one of those who enjoyed the Festival of Song program last night, the Fred Waring engineered production. Or you might have been a student, like your editor, who was unable to see the show because of other activities.

While there is real hope of securing a new armory-auditorium, such an enlarged structure would not be ready for years. While we wait, The Daily Tar Heel asks that a new policy for bringing high-salaried and highly entertaining programs be adopted—a voluntary, pay-as-you-want policy.

Let a committee be formed now to investigate how private but student-led ventures are successful in other schools in this area.

The level of program material has sunk in the last two years, chiefly because of budget cuts. And there's not much hope for budget increases in the future. A voluntary program would increase student interest, and at the same time give those students who are really interested in a particular program a chance to see it. If such a program was effected on a subscription basis, a permanent committee could arrange to have the performer stay for two nights, depending on the amount of subscriptions or advance sales for tickets.

The present setup is unfair to a large amount of students. It hits the pocketbooks of all when all cannot possibly get the benefit of their investments. Schools in this vicinity, Duke among them, have a better variety of talent under the subscription arrangement.



The Daily Tar Heel asks President Ham Horton to set up a committee to investigate a voluntary Student Entertainment Program.

EMMETT THOMPSON

It's All Over Now

To change a class from one hour to another is not too difficult if you have had navigation, celestial and instrument, logic, track, and for coordination, swimming.

To locate South Building is the easiest of all the many and varied requirements .Your adviser will keep you waiting about half an hour, but that's common practice. After giving all your very valid reasons for wanting to change the class and hearing all the folklore on the subject in return, you will finally receive permission to have the class in question changed if; and here begins the line of "ifs".

IF Dean Spruill's secretary is not too busy to fill out a drop and add request, you may get through to Archer House. But it will seem that half the campus is in line ahead of you at the secretary's desk, each with a life history to exchange for a form, with three copies, including carbons, attached, that will permit you to change the class.

IF you aren't already late for the class you should have been attending, and have two hours free, then trot (no one walks) over to Archer House and get in that line. If you've read all the books and magazines lying around, and conversation is dull, you might try to think of a theme due either in the next hour or next day. But this isn't recommended for it uses energy that will be useful later.

When your turn comes, present your slips meekly and hope the filing system is somewhat straightened and that the clerk will be able to find the right file. This is important as I've heard of students who end up taking subjects they've never even heard of, just because of some filing error like looking under "di" to "dt" instead of under "dy" to "dz", the student being so tired and beat that he gave up and took whatever was offered just to end the ordeal. But if you're lucky she will return with a card and you're all fixed up except for missing those couple of classes one of which you are dropping anyway. But if you're the rule instead of the exception, if you're not the one in ten, then you're just beginning and the battle is before you.

IF the clerk smiles and seems "terribly sorry but no-can-do", run, run like hell, for once she suggests that you see the department concerned, you have only two choices. Etiher you are a coward and give up or you have gone too far to retreat and raising your collection of slips before you as a shield, you move onward out the door into the fray.

To change or not to change is no longer the question, but rather whether you or any student, commercial, scholarship, or on the GI Bill can weather the storm of protests forthcoming from some waiting member of the faculty.

That the person you are to see has been forewarned by Archer House is the only logical explanation for the reception waiting for you when you so walk into the entanglement laid for students impudent enough to think that they can change fate in the guise of "predetermined classes".

IF the department concerned is English, then speak French. This gives you a little time to reconnoiter and thereby have a better chance to group your retorts. Of course the chance that the person so addressed speaks French also is present, but so few of one department will encroach on the lines of another that the chance is small and worth taking. If the department is French, speak German; if the department is German and you wish to take Russian, speak Russian but this is the only exception. They have a kindredship for anyone who voluntarily attempts this language, and too, apparently they need students.

Take advantage of all openings to show your contempt for the classes offered by other departments and stress how much you NEED and LOVE this department. To mention this department's subject as a major has some advantage but the disadvantages usually outweigh them as the department will expect you to make at least a "C" and probably will look up your record and see a couple of fat "Fs" and ignore hte fact that you are taking this department's courses in order to eradicate the "Fs" or at least modify them. So steer clear of "major" if possible. Of course circumstances alter the case, and if you are majoring in this subject they'll probably know it already.

After you've argued, using the term in its vulgarest sense, try nore the fact that you are taking making out by tactfully bringing up WHY you are there and insinuating that you have classes to attend. This usually brings the contest to a close with some decision.

Whether you win or lose is much determined by your attitude and aggressiveness, tempered by the reception of course. But in any event, you will have learned the first lesson any educational institute has to teach:

TO ERR IS HUMAN, BUT YOU'LL BE SORRY.

"Uh — This Doesn't Mean You're The Majority"

ROSENBERGS

'New Leader'

(Editor's note: In answer to queries about the convicted Rosenberg Atom bomb spy team, we reprint excerpts from The New Leader's article, "The Rosenberg Case: 'Hate-America' Weapon" by Lucy S. Dawidowicz.)

Communist organizations all over the world are directing protests to President Truman on behalf of Ethel and Julius Rosenberg, convicted on March 30, 1951, and sentenced to death for participating in an espionage ring that passed atomic secrets to Russia. After the failure of several appeals, their execution has been scheduled for next week.

The Communist press has reported the receipt of protests from All-China Federation of Labor, from Pietro Nenni ("speaking for millions of democratic Italians"), from Jacques Duclos and L'Humanite, from Communists and fellow-travelers in England, Belgium, Trieste and Japan, and even from 5,000 East Germans who voted "to demand the liberation of the persecuted couple who are victims of Washington's war hysteria." The Vienna Peace Congress last week featured the Rosenberg case.

The Rosenberg protests are part of international Communism's anti-American campaign. The Rosenberg case has superseded the Willie McGee case in the Communist war against America: First it was the Negroes, now the Jews. This so-called "defense" of the Rosenbergs serves only one purpose—to intensify the "hate America" campaign throughout the world.

. . . The Communists demand the Rosenberg's "liberation." They insist on "equal justice" for their "innocent" clients. They charge that anti-Semitism and race prejudice dominated the court proceedings. The trial is a "judicial outrage" an "uncivilized action" and a blot on American justice."

The irrelevance of such slogans to the facts is incredible. The fact that the Rosenbergs received a fair trial was confirmed by the Supreme Court and by the American Civil Liberties Union, an organization that has been quite frank on many other occasions in criticising U.S. courts. The evidence presented at the trial was so cumulative that additional testimony by more prosecution witnesses was rendered superfluous. The defendants were proven guilty beyond the slightest doubt of being spies for Soviet Russia. And finally, the Rosenbergs' legal counsel has never pressed any of the fantastic charges of the Rosenberg propaganda apparatus.

The proper description of the Rosenberg campaign is blackmail. The Rosenbergs are hostages for whom the Communists have little concern. Knowing that the United States will not submit to such blackmail, the operators of the campaign are cold-bloodedly sure of their success; hate for America and death for the Rosenbergs, who know a great deal about Soviet espionage which they have thus far withheld.

Many arguments have been advanced by non-Communists here as to why the death sentence should be commuted. They say: Klaus Fuchs was sentenced to a mere 14 years; the espionage was committed for a country which was then our ally; death is too severe. However, Fuchs received the maximum sentence under English law and, in the end, cooperated with the British Government. Further, our law does not differentiate espionage for an ally or for an enemy, and the Rosenbergs continued their spying into the cold war. Finally, only the Rosenbergs and their friend Morton Sobell, among the spies who were caught, refused to assist in uncovering further espionage rings. And let us remember that the purpose of a death penalty is to serve as a deterrent to the future commission of a serious crime.

Unless one is a principled opponent of capital punishment (for Goering and Slansky and Rosenberg), there seems to be only one valid reason why anti-Communists should have any interest in commutation of the Rosenbergs' death sentence. Once the Rosenbergs are dead, their knowledge of the several Soviet espoinage rings in this country dies with them. Although there is no reason to be sanguine about either of these two hard-core Communists' breaking down chance exists. Whether a demonstration of Communist propaganda power in achieving communtation would improve that chance is another matter.

DREW PEARSON

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON—Pentagon records show that Sen. Joe McCarthy is not the only politician to receive a decoration some time after the end of a war. Filed in the archives of the Army is a citation dated June 3, 1919—seven months after the armistice as compared wiht nine years after world war II for McCarthy—awarding Patrick J. Hurley a silver star.

Hurley, who became Secretary of War and twice candidate for senator from New Mexico, received this medal under interesting circumstances. In fact, the wording of the award in itself is interesting. It states that the medal is given for:

"Voluntarily making a reconnaissance under heavy fire on Nov. 11, 1918."

Nov. 11, 1918, as everyone knows, was the day World War I ended. And about one hour before the end, when there was no "heavy fire," here is what happened to Pat Hurley, as told by Col. Wilbur Rogers of the 77th Field Artillery, 3rd Division.

Rogers said that he was stationed 2,000 yards behind the front line when Lt. Col. Hurley and Col. St. John Greble, both members of the Judge Advocate General's office, came up from the rear en route to the front.

"I wondered what two members of the Judge Advocate General's office were doing up there and stopped them," Colonel Rogers recalls. "I told them the war was about over and that no one was wanted up there, especially Army lawyers. In fact, we had instructions to keep sightseers away.

"However, Hurley insisted on going forward," says Rogers. "He wanted to see the end of the big show."

And seven months later, he got cited for "gallantry in action for voluntarily making a reconnaissance under heavy fire on Nov. 11, 1918."

No wonder the Third Division Association to whom Hurley applied for membership refused to accept the ex-Secretary of War.

Senator McCarthy certainly deserved his medal more than Hurley, and more than Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan deserved the various medals handed him by Dictator Peron and other foreign governments merely because he was the President's military aide.

Because of the many queries received by this column regarding McCarthy's medal—especially since some veterans have been mailing their medals to the Senator—here are the exact facts about the McCarthy award as obtained from official sources:

1. The Navy declined to give Senator McCarthy the Purple Heart for alleged wounds in action. The refusal was based on the fact that McCarthy was not wounded, but incurred a slight injury to his foot while being initiated by "King Neptune" in a bit of horseplay aboard the Navy Seaplane Tender Chandeleur as the ship crossed the equator. McCarthy was climbing down a ladder with a bucket tied to his ankle during the shellback initiation, when he slipped and broke a bone in his foot.

McCarthy has stated that he carried "ten pounds of shrapnel" in his leg. But he was never wounded and the Navy so found when they refused him the Purple Heart.

2. The Distinguished Flying Cross, when awarded by the Navy during the early part of the war, was given only for rare and heroic action under fire. However, the Navy found that the Army Air Corps was handing out flying crosses at a rate of 100 to 1 compared with the Navy, so, on Dec. 18, 1944, the Navy decided to award the flying cross automatically to any man who had flown on 20 air missions.

3. McCarthy asked to be mustered out of the Marines in October, 1944—even though the pacific war was at its peak. Earlier he had got a leave of absence to run against Senator Wiley of Wisconsin though it was against the regulations to run for office while on active duty. Defeated by Wiley, McCarthy then wanted to run again for a judgeship. So finally the Marines discharged him, and it was at about this time that McCarthy first applied for a flying cross.

In sending in his application he stated "as an officer and a gentleman" that he had participated in 32 air missions.

However, when Marine Corps headquarters processed the application in Washington, it was noted in McCarthy's file that he had flown only in 9 missions. Therefore his application was refused.

4. Last year, McCarthy reapplied for his medal, and through some of his friends in the Marine Corps, got the application on the desk of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Floberg, who ok'd it. Floberg is a former member of the Chicago Tribune law firm, a paper vigorously supporting McCarthy. This was in August, 1952. For some unexplained reason, however, the award was held up until just the other day. Just why it was signed in 1952 when refused in 1944, and just why it was held up from August until December remains a mystery. Naval officials would give no explanation.

Carolina Trounces VMI, 79-62

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan. 8—In a game marred by 46 fouls, Carolina's Southern Conference leaders jumped their league record to 6-0 by whipping VMI's outmanned Cadets, 79-62 here tonight.

The Tar Heels will meet Washington and Lee at Lexington tonight before returning home tomorrow.

With their slight cocaptain Vinnie Grimaldi again leading the scoring, the Tar Heels held VMI at bay until the final period and then put on a scoring spree to clinch the victory over the underdog Cadets.

Grimaldi, whose season average is well over 17 points per game, hit on 10 field goals and one free throw here tonight to be the game's high scorer with 21 points.

Al Lifson was second high for the Tar Heels, getting 16 points. Bud Maddie was the only other Tar Heel to hit double figures, scoring 13 points, nine of them on free throws.

Although hampered by a cold Grimaldi was effective all the way against VMI: The Tar Heels entered the final period with only an 11-point lead, 59-48. But they followed Grimaldi's scoring example in the final quarter, outscored the Cadets, 20-14, to easily take their eighth win of the season.

VMI had the distinction of scoring the first basket, but the Tar Heels soon overtook that small lead and went out in front never to be headed again. The halftime score stood 43-32 in Carolina's favor. Only in the third period could the Cadets match the Tar Heels, both teams scoring 16 points.

A small crowd turned out for the game which was preceeded by a battle between the junior varsities of the two schools.

Carolina took that bame, too, with its jayvees winning handily, 80-71. Jerry McCabe and Harold Bowden paced the Tar Baby scoring with 22 points apiece.

VMI committed 26 of the 46 fouls in the varsity game and had two men, Tait and Klinar, to foul out. Paul Likins, Carolina's reserve center, was the only Tar Heel to be waived from the game.

Swimmers Go To Bainbridge Today For Meet Tomorrow

By Benny Stewart

The Carolina swimming team leaves early this morning for Bainbridge, Md. where it will face the Bainbridge Naval Training Station in a dual meet tomorrow night.

Coach Ralph Casey will take twelve men on the trip, with several of them being used in two or three events.

Carolina's chances of a victory in the 300-yard medley will depend on Buddy Baarcke, Donnie Evans, and Stanley Tinkham, who have shown up well in two previous meets.

In the individual medley, Evans and Tommy Gill will carry the Tar Heel hopes. Gill will also swim in the 440-meter event.

Jack Edwards and Buddy Heins will attempt to roll up points in the 50-meter, while Bob Linker and Charles Wolf are hopeful of a victory in the 100-meter.

Joe Kelso who has won easily in previous competition, will probably face a tougher test in the diving events.

In the back-stroke, Warren Heeman and Ed Jewell will be Coach Casey's choices: Chances for a win in the breast-stroke competition will depend on how well Evans and Wolf perform.

Edwards, Heins, Baarcke, and Tinkham carry the Tar Heel hopes n relay competition.

After the Bainbridge meet, Carolina returrns home, playing host to Ga. Tech on Jan. 17.

New Tickets Are Needed For Deac Tilt

Carolina students, instructors, and employees who hold athletic passbooks will have to exchange tickets from those passbooks for regular tickets for four upcoming basketball games.

For the Wake Forest game in Woollen Gym on Jan. 20 holders of passbooks ending in odd numbers will have first chance to exchange their passbooks for regular tickets. They should exchange them at the Gym ticket office next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Holders of passbooks ending in even numbers will then have a chance for the remaining tickets. They can exchange for regular tickets next Thursday, Friday,and Saturday.

The same system will be used for the N. C. State, New York University and Duke games here, too. Holders of passbooks ending in even numbers will have first chance to exchange for tickets for Duke and NYU while those with books ending in odd numbers will have first call for tickets to the State game.

Carolina plays Duke here on Feb. 6, NYU on Feb. 7, and State on Feb. 21. Exchhange dates for those games will be decided upon later.

Ticket officials urged that all who are interested in seeing the Wake Forest game exchange their passbook for tickets as soon as possible. The ticket office will be open all next week from 9-4:30.

Gym Team Meets Navy

The North Carolina gymnastic team goes on the road this morning and will meet Navy at Annapolis tonight in an intersectional match.

Navy, one of the strongest teams in the Eastern Intercollegiate League, is a heavy favorite to take the Tar Heels.

Coach Bill Meade's team is led by co-captains Check Goodin and Andy Bell. Goodin is expected to make a good score on the high bar, while Bell is also outstanding. Other Tar Heels expected to perform well are Gordon Hudson on the horse and Bill Rivera on the flying rings.

FROSH SWIMMERS

Freshman swimming practice has started again and Coach Dick Jamerson has asked that all freshmen interested report to the pool at 4:00 any afternoon next week.

State - Duke

Although the Tar Heels will be playing away this weekend, Carolina students will still have an opportunity to witness one of the state's better cage attractions when N. C. State and Duke square off tomorrow night at 8:00 in Duke Indoor Stadium. The Duke ticket office reports that plenty of seats are still available for the game.

"A powerful force in these difficult times"

says FRANKLIN D. MURPHY
Chancellor, University of Kansas

"In these days when much is said about 'adult education,' we too often forget that a great deal of adult education is daily carried on by such instruments of public information as The Reader's Digest. In my judgment, The Reader's Digest is one of the powerful and useful forces shaping the thinking of our people in these difficult times."

The articles in each issue of The Reader's Digest cover a broad range of subjects: from travel and politics to science and history, from humor and personal inspiration to headline news. Forty or more articles and a host of short subjects, carefully chosen from hundreds of publications, bring Digest readers more varied and more concentrated information than can be found in any other magazine.

Campus Carousel

By Deenie Schoeppe

Judging from the haggard faces and high fatality rate of fraternity pins round campus, the holidays were a success.

As far as sororities go, the Alpha Gams lead the list this week with six brand new engagements and one pinning. Alpha Gams about to go down the aisle are Bev Lively, Hinton, W. Va., who will marry Sgt. Sunny Meadows, also of Hinton and a former Deke here. Mary Anna Glod, Castle Hayne, is wearing a diamond given her by Ensign James Brown, Wilmington. He's a former AKPsi here. Also there's Carol Drake, Newsoce, Va., who'll marry Felton Parker, Weldon. One more and then we'll continue later—Ellen Downs, Winton, is engaged to Lt. John Barnes Jr., Jackson.

Nick Peck, Kappa Sig of Concord, has given his pin to home town gal Jane Mathews. More news at the Kappa Sig house is the engagement of Grahham Knott and Virginia Lewis, both of Kinston. Jack Cowan, Kappa Sig from Durham will marry Betty Oldham, WC and also from Durham.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Alpha Gam Tonia Rowe, Burgaw, to Phi Gam Lewis Bryan, Goldsboro. The marriage took place in November.

Round to the other quad and the Pika house. Pika's no longer single are Walter House, Tarboro, and Jim Neely, High Point. Mrs. House is the former Marcia Carmichael, Theta at Duke and from Glousterr, Va., and Mrs. Neely is the former Betty Summers of High Point.

Here's a surprise—Deke Hoagy Carmichael, Fayetteville, Conn. is pinned. 'Course this might be a surprise to Hoagy too. Anyway, never could find out who the lucky girl is.

Lamba Chi Tom Burkhead and Louise Allen, both of Candor, are now Mr. and Mrs. as of this Christmas.

And now a word (two hundred or so) from the Sigma Chi's. There must be something like four people in that house who aren't pinned, married or engaged. James Smitherman, brother from Winston-Salem, married Diane Davis, also of Winston; Sigma Chi Sonny Brannon will marry Catherine McLean. They're both frrom Greensboro. Tim Timberlake is engaged to Teeny Redwine. Both are from Lexington. Pinnings include Joe Freeman and Patsy Coble Greensboro; Dot Jones, Raleigh, is wearing the Sigma Chi pin of Doug Powell, Durham. And Tri Delt pledge Sandy Donaldson, Kinston, is now pinned to Z. A. Collins also of Kinston. And that's not all . . . there are some we haven't gotten yet.

Sigma Nu Jake Roberts will celebrate much big birthday Saturday night with a cabin party at his cabin in Hillsboro.

Oh yes. Two married Sigma Nu's. Bill Page, Tarboro married Janice Moore, Tarboro and Paul Edmundson, Goldsboro married Nancy Boussard, St. Martinsville, La. and a Duke student.

Another Christmas engagement is that of Chi Phi Bill Prouty, Media, Pa. who'll marry Mary Margaret Marsh a Pi Phi from Swarthmore, Pa.

One of the prettiest diamonds around is being worn by Bitty Schaeffer KD of Tuscaloosa, Ala., who will marry Bill Holton. Chevy Chase Md. and a 52 Pika grad.

On the social calendar for this week is a coffee given by ADPi's in honor of their pledge class this Sunday. This is the ADPi's pledge weekend and their formal will be tonight at the Carolina Inn. Preceding it will be an open house this afternoon at Margaret Padgett's house.

Shirley Cox, Chi O grad from Asheville, recently received an engagement ring from DKE John Hazlehurst, Henderson.

Chi O pledge Shep Rustin, Gastonia, is now Mrs. Charles Smith. He's also from Gastonia.

'Nother gorgeous diamond is Pi Phi Betty Ann Kirby's. She will marry St. A Phin Horton. They are both from Winston-Salem.

Not too many people have been able to plan parties for this weekend but never let it be said of the Chi Psi's. They'll be seen round the Saddle Club tomorrow nite.

This engagement business didn't miss the KA house either. Ray Deal, Morganton, is engaged to Lou Davis also of Morganton, and brother Bill Waggoner will marry Ann Garwood, Salisbury.

St. A Billy Walker has surprised everybody and gotten engaged this Christmas. He'll marry Barbara Jefferson, Norwood, Mass., who was a "Danny Grad" here last yead.

Chi Omega pledge weekend will be highlighted by a formal dance Saturday night at the Carolina Inn. More about that in Sunday's paper.

SAE's wish to announce that brothers Bob Gibbon, Charlotte and Geddings Crawford, Columbia, S. C. were fallgraduates.

Jim Bertron, are you engaged? If not please speak to your friends. If so I'll put it in next week.

Putt Davis, Phi Delt fame, will not be with us any more. The army calls.

While we're on the subject of Phi Delts, they're giving a party. For the Pi Phi's. Combo, dinner and the Legion Hut next Thursday.

Kappa Sig's will entertain the Tri Delt's Tuesday nite at the house.

Tri Delt Sally Towbridge, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., is now Mrs. George Blackwelder. George is a former Phi Delt here and from Hickory, N. C.

A welcome back party at the KD house yesterday was a get together for all sororities and enjoyed by everyone.

'52 Kappa Psi grad Monk Rogers, Fair Bluff, married ADPi Julia Steed this Christmas. Now Mrs. Hal Paderick, Kinston, is the former Carolyn Bonds, ECC student and from Kinston too.

Kappa Psi's will celebrate their weekend with a party at the Plantation Club in Greensboro tonight and a banquet and dance tomorrow at the Chapel Hill Country Club.

Oh, still more pinnings and engagements at the Alpha Gam house. AGD Bargara Braxton, Whiteville, is wearing the Pi Kappa Phi pin of Wint Wilkes, Richmond, Va. Pat Holmes, Alpha Gam from Scarsdale, N. Y. and Pvt. William Dutton, South Orange, N. J. are planning a February wedding. Anne Stewart and Lt. Rodge Harris, both of Sewannee, Tenn. are newly engaged, as are Alpha Gam Martha Bridger and W. D. "Buddy" Shipman, Bladenboro.

Lundie Lenoir, is engaged to Alan Bell, student at the N. Y. Theological Seminary. He's from Glen Ridge N. J.

TEP Buddy Meyer, Richmond and Helen Salisbury, Richmond, Va. plan to be married sometime in the near future.

"Whew!" is all I can say at this point. Congratulations to all six hundred of you and I'll see you next week.

Chi Phi Elects

Al Moore, Miami Beach, Fla. has been elected president of Al-Alpha chapter of Chi Phi fraternity for the coming year.

Other fraternity officers elected Wednesday night include Mike Brown, Anderson, S. C., vice president; Jack Stillwell, Charleston, S. C., secretary; Louie Patseavouras Rocky Mount trreasurer; Jerry Potts, Franklin, custodian; Tom Peacock, Arlington Va. rush chairman; and Bill Prouty Media, Pa., social chairman.

DOTS PREFERRED— Voluptuous Las Vegas lovely, Joann "Sandy" Sanders dries out her blonde limbs and polka-dot swim suit aboard a boat on Lake Mead at the Nevada resort. Sandy, earrings and all, is enjoying herself immensely, hopes to fish and swim "a lot" while in Las Vegas.

VOLUME LXI, NUMBER 71 | CHAPEL HILL, N. C., SUNDAY, JANUARY 11, 1953 | FOUR PAGES TODAY

Town Choral Group To Give Concert Friday

The Chapel Hill Choral Club, under the direction of Joel Carter, will present its first concert of the season Friday at 8:30 p.m. in Hill Hall.

The public is invited and there will be no admission charge.

The club, composed of townspeople, faculty and students, will feature a number of local soloists and the University Symphony Orchestra. The program will comprise three works, the Bach Cantatas No. 105 and 192 and the Handel "Dettingen Te Deum."

Bach's Cantata No. 105, "Lord, weigh us and just us not," written for the ninth Sunday after Trinity, is based on the text of Psalm 143. The Cantata No. 192, "Now Thank We All Our God," is one of Bach's best known, and contains the chorale melody of the same title, and is still used as a Protestant hymn.

Handel's "Dettingen Te Deum" is a work of pomp and splendor. Written for performance at the English Royal Chapel and St. Paul's to celebrate the British victory over the French at Dettingen, 1743, in the War of Austrian Succession, was received with enthusiasm by the English people.

The text is drawn from the "Book of Common Prayer" of the Church of England. Unusual brilliance is given the work by the use of high trumpets throughout most of the choruses. The first trumpet part will be performed by Gerald Einhorn, University freshman from Norfolk, Va., who will use the special high trumpets in D acquired by the Music Department for this performance.

Faculty Elected To High Posts During Holiday

A number of University Faculty members who attended meetings of scholarly organizations during the holidays were elected to important offices or appointed to committee chairmanships.

Dr. Sterling A. Stoudemire, chairman of the Department of Romance Languages, was elected chairman of the Spanish 18th and 19th Centruy section of the Modern Language Association of America, which met in Boston.

Dr. W. L. Wiley, professor of French, was elected secretary of the French Renaissance section.

Dean Clifford P. Lyons of the College of Arts and Sciences was elected to the Exectuive Council of the Modern Language Association, and Dr. Richmond P. Bond of the English Department was elected chairman of the English Group for "the Age of Johnson." Dr Robert A Pratt, also of the English Department, was elected chairman of the Association.

Dr. Walter Allen Jr. of the Classics Department, was reelected chairman of the Monography Committee of the American Philogical Association.

Dr. B. L. Ullman, chairman, Classics Department, was elected to membership on the nominating committee of the American Philological Association. He is a former president of the association.

Panel Monday

A panel discussion and forum "A United States of Europe?" will be held tomorrow from 5:30 to 7 o'clock in Lenoir Hall.

Moderator for the discussion will be Dr. J. C. Lyons of the Department of Romance Languages, who has toured Europe many times. Panel members who will present points of view from several European countries are Dr. Jacques Hardre, professor of French, France; Alfred Descloux, graduate student from Geneva, Switzerland, on Switzerland; and Helmuth Deicher, German student, on that country. Ted Shevcov, formerly of Yugoslavia, will introduce the panel members.

Horton Is Silent On Solon Agenda

By Louis Kraar

President Ham Horton and his cabinet met Friday behind locked doors "to discuss the method of carrying out the administration's program," according to Horton.

Topics discussed in the meeting were not disclosed, but it was indicated that most basic campus issues were talked over in three hour session.

Results of the meeting will be announced in the form of President Horton's address to Legislature at its opening session Thursday. Horton's talk, which is expected to be a "state of the campus" type speech, will probably outline the cabinet's plan for legislative action this quarter.

Horton said that allowing press representatives to sit in on the meeting would keep legislators from being the first to hear the cabinet's plans. His reply to questions concerning the nature of the issues discussed was a flat "no comment."

Actually, the cabinet's plans have no authority other than advising Legislature. Early indications of Horton's program show that it may be received warmly by both parties. Since the Student Party has legislative majority, University Party administrators are faced with the problem of presenting a program that will be fairly acceptable to both parties.

Members of the cabinet are Ed Gross, Virginia Hall, Phinn Horton, Jim McLeod, Martin Jordon, Sol Cherry, Jack Stilwell, Harry Philips, Wade Matthews and George McLeod.

Jack Stillwell, Martin Jordon, Harry Philips and Wade Matthews did not attend the meeting.

'Life' Exhibit Being Shown At Morehead

A new exhibit of some 50 photographs, some of them in color, on 18th century England, which was assembled by editors of Life Magazine, is exhibited in the Morehead Building and will continue through Jan. 23.

"Eighteenth Century England," title of the exhibit, is based on the article by that name which appeared in Life's History of Western Culture series. Much unpublished material has been added to the exhibition, however, and the result is a colorful panorama of that age of contrasts.

England of the 18th century saw daily life turned into an "art" of great elegance, and at the same time saw the drab beginning of the age of industrialism, Life editors point out. "It calls to mind not only the gentlemanly precepts of Lord Chesterfield and the stateliness of country houses, but also the ferment and squalor of London where a tenth of England's population lived," they say.

DTH Writers Will Be Given Press Awards

Awards for the best editorial, sports, feature and straight news writing published in The Daily Tar Heel during the Fall Quarter will be presented by Press Club tomorrow night.

Barry Farber, Greensboro, former editor who is now in the Army, will receive the best editorial award for his "Personally" column on Sen. Joseph McCarthy.

Sports Editor Biff Roberts, Louisville, Ky., will receive the sports writing award for his coverage of the Notre Dame game.

The feature writing award will go to Tom Parramore, Winton, for his story on three freshmen who set up a radio station in Cobb Dormitory.

Managing Editor Rolfe Neill, Chapel Hill, will receive the straight news award for his first story on Saturday classes.

Vets To Save On Insurance

Veterans holding National Service Life Insurance and other government life insurance are advised by the Veterans Administration they may save in premium payment if they are able to pay them in advance on a quarterly, semi-annual or annual basis instead of every month.

Veterans who are able to pay premiums in advance in this fashion will have a reduction over the regular monthly premium rates of 3 percent a year.

Houses May Map Own Plans To Comply With Fire Orders

BA School's Moving Date Set In Feb.

The School of Business Administration next month will move from its cramped quarters in Bingham Hall to a handsome battery of three new buildings across the way.

In design, the new school is similar to the Manning-Saunders-Murphey triangle on he opposite side of the mall that runs from South Building to the Library. Construction work began in 1950, but because of strikes and shortages of building materials completion was delayed.

The central unit of the three buildings will house the school's administrative and faculty offices, seminar and conference rooms and an auditorium with a seating capacity of 450.

The Business Foundation, of which Dr. I. G. Greer is executive vice-president, will have its headquarters office in the central building.

The other two buildings will contain a few offices and classrooms and laboratories for the specialized fields in business administration: accounting, statistics, personnel management, production management, finance and marketing.

The University Placement Service, now located in South Building, will be moved to the south classroom and laboratory building of the School of Business Administration. The University's Records and Registration office, Student Aid and Student Loan Fund offices, and Personnel office, which are also now in South Building, will be moved to the north classroom and laboratory building.

This shift will alleviate to some extent the crowded conditions in South Building and will facilitate registration of students. Archer House, which has been used by the registration office for some time, will not be used for this purpose after the move.

The North Carolina State Board of Certified Public Accountant Examiners, a State agency, will have headquarters in the north building of the group.

None of the buildings has been named as yet. This job falls to the Trustees.

The School of Business Administration has enjoyed a steady and substantial growth and has attained high rank among institutions providing training for business leadership since it was organized in the fall of 1919 under the direction of D. D. Carroll, who served as Dean from that time until he retired in 1950.

Dr. Thomas H. Carroll took over the deanship in 1950, coming here from Syracuse University where he was Dean of the College of Business Administration. He had served as Assistant Dean of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration prior to military service.

Originally called the School of Commerce, the school has grown from headquarters in a single office in Alumni Hall to its new three-building unit. Outgrowing its

Local Offical Must Approve Any Substitute

By John Jamison

There are "other ways" for fraternities and sororities to comply with the local interpretation of the state building code than the specifications handed down by the State Insurance Department.

These alternate plans would be devised by the individual houses, subject to the approval of P. L. Burch, Chapel Hill building inspector. What are some of these "other ways"? Burch refused to answer "hypothetical questions.

Rather, he said, he would prefer to tour each house and then decide whether or not the substitute plans were adequate.

The State Insurance Department expects the houses to be "reasonably safe."

The Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen was asked, "What would be done in case the hazards are not removed within the 90-day period?" The board expects the fraternities and sororities "to make bona fide and prompt effort to correct the hazards listed in the inspection report."

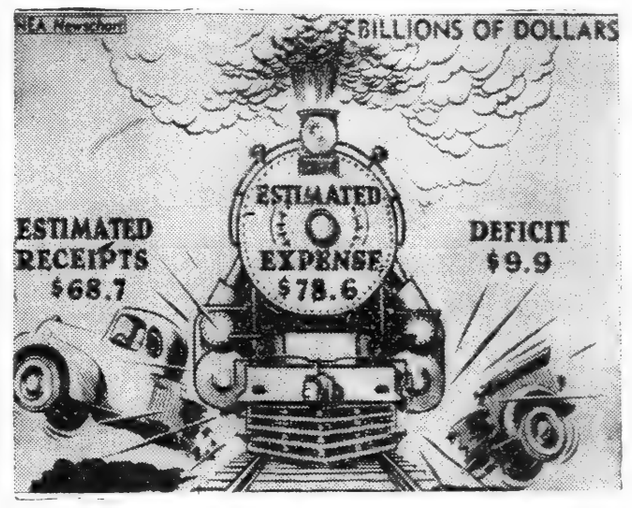
Chapter presidents met Thursday night with the town officials at which time Mayor E. S. Lanier pleaded "negligence in not making fire inspections of the fraternities and sororities—and other boarding houses—long ago."

The mayor continued, "Naturally 'condemnation' of your houses jolted you and led to just ordinary, human speculation about the municipality's motives. I want to assure you and the public that not one of the municipal officials had or has any desire whatsoever to 'persecute' you or to 'discriminate' against you in any degree at all—nor are they willing to let you sleep in quarters which might trap you into a screaming death from fire."

The town's aim, as the mayor sees it, is to make the houses "reasonably safe and in compliance with the spirit of the State's laws for safety."

Honorary Unit In Education Holds Smoker

The Beta Theta chapter of Phi Delta Kappa, honorary educational fraternity, recently launched its 1953 season with a smoker held at the home of Dr. Gordon Ellis, professor in the School of Education.



The fraternity, which meets regularly throughout the year to promote professional interest in educational leadership, research and service, voted on new membership of approximately 20 candidates from among the North Carolina men currently engaged in educational study, most of whom are enrolled as students at the University.

As a special feature of the evening's entertainment, a travelogue was shown of the 16 German school teachers who came to this country in September to observe American educational institutions. Six of the German teachers were present at the smoker and one of their number, Willi Boller of Hesse, Germany, showed pictures he had taken of his party since their departure from Europe.

The Germans were introduced to the fraternity members by Prof. Wilmer R. Jenkins of the School of Education, coordinator of the German teacher project for this state.

HOLSTEN IS FATHER

An 8-pound, 3 ounce future college boy was born at 4 a.m. yesterday to Mrs. Roy Holsten, wife of the assistant dean of students. The name: Robert Bruce Holsten. Mother is fine at Duke Hospital. Father is happy, R. B. being his second boy.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

SEOUL—Three hundred UN warplanes dealt the Communist war machine a devastating blow yesterday with a bomb, bullet and plane attack on a vital supply line between North Korea and Manchuria. F-84 Thunder jets dropped thousands of pounds of bombs on five rail bridges and four road bridges just north of Sinanju, one of the most heavily defended cities in North Korea.

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo.—Searchers for a C-46 transport plane which disappeared in the rugged mountain country near the Idaho-Uhah-Wyoming boundries began their fourth day of operations yesterday with hopes dimming that the plane would be located soon.

WASHINGTON—Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, the convicted atom spies, appealed to President Truman yesterday to spare their lives. They have been sentenced to die in the electric chair at New York's Sing Sing Prison next Wednesday for conspiring to give atom secrets to Russia. Marching pickets asking clemency have been patrolling outside the White House in recent days.

WASHINGTON — Key members of the House Armed Services Committee yesterday predicted that Congress would press for early action to break the Korean stalemate if President-elect Eisenhower does not do so. A survey of six Republican and four Democratic committee members showed the majority were convinced the Korean situation is difficult but not hopeless.

2nd Movie Of Series Slated

"The Late George Apley," based on the novel by J. P. Marquand, will be presented at 7:15 p.m. tomorrow in the Playmakers Theater.

Dr. John Honigmann, associate professor of anthropology, will lead the discussion following the movie.

The movie is the second in a series of shows being brought here by the YMCA and the Hillel Foundation. The series is built around man and his environment and will continue throughout this quarter. Admission is free.

Betty Smith's "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" was the first picture to be shown.

Advertising Examination Feb. 14, 21

The seventh nation-wide examination for advertising will be held in Charlotte on Feb. 14 and 21.

Tread Covington, UNC graduate who is advertising executive and chairman of the AAAA Examination Committee, said the test will be open to all who are considering advertising as a career, including college seniors.

"The examination is given annually throughout the country to attract high calibre young people to advertising," Covington said. "It provides a series of aptitude-temperament tests compiled by specialists in personnel testing and a group of tests of practical knowledge developed by advertising agency executives," he said. "Through these tests the relatively inexperienced person can see how his abilities compare with those of more than 4,500 people now employed in advertising. In this way we hope to encourage and guide people who show promise for advertising and save others from months, perhaps years in the wrong work."

Mrs. Durham's Funeral Today

Mrs. Carl T. Drham, wife of the Congressman of the Sixth N. C. congressional district, died at her home here Friday night after an illness of nine months. She had been critically ill since Sept. 15.

Funeral will be held at 2 p.m. today at the Chapel Hill Presbyterian Church.

Surviving besides her husband are five children, Mrs. Gregg Murray, Springfield, N. J., Mrs. M. M. Sessler, Asheville, Carl J., Cincinnati, and Peggy and Ann, Chapel Hill.

Mrs. Durham, a Guilford County native, married Rep. Durham on Dec. 30, 1918.

This Is It

If you're interested in working on the staff of The Daily Tar Heel you are invited to attend a meeting this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The congregating will be in the newsroom, second floor of Graham Memorial. Staffers are needed in everything but the Photography Department.

If you think you're interested, give it a try.—RN.

Draft Deferments Seen Becoming More Strict

Draft officials looked a little closer at college students recently as "a mathematical impossibility to stay within the law without substantial tightening of deferments" was foreseen.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, said, "We certainly must look toward the colleges with something more than an appraising eye. The time for appraising in that direction is about over and the time for action is almost here."

Deferments of college students for ROTC corps membership alone total "almost 100,000 more than the number we are deferring in agriculture and industry combined," Hershey said in an article in "Selective Service", a bulletin of his agency.

"Students will not be the only men affected by this tightening," he declared. But he also said Selective Service, "relatively speaking," had taken an "infinitesimal" number of men so far from the colleges, while inducting industrial works and farmers and facing "an imminent necessity in the not so distant future" of drafting fathers.

The Governor & UNC

Education is a most important topic for our new Governor.

In his inaugural address, Governor William Umstead placed education first on the list of major policy plans in his initial talk to the 1953 State Legislature.

But the kind of education he stressed was secondary education. The emphasis has shifted in the last two years. The governor's keynote will probably coincide with the feelings of many legislators that there should be a switch of "available" funds from higher education to elementary education.

Such emphasis is important. Our university cannot be great if the high schools and grammar schools don't adequately train the University's future students. But the University must have on hand the kind of facilities to give the student a well-rounded collegiate life.

In the last few sessions of the Legislature, multi-million dollar projects were authorized for the Consolidated University, worthwhile developments. Most of them are now in use and of service to the State and its citizens. Continued improvements to all segments of the Consolidated University are necessary, however.

The two major proposals for improvement of student activities submitted by the University to the Advisory Budget Committee—a giant, new student union, and an armory auditorium to replace Memorial Hall—are on the danger list of the financial surgeons.

We get a preview of what will happen tomorrow night as the Advisory Committee submits its report to legislators. Gov. Umstead says, "During the past few years there has been a tremendous building program for our institutions of higher learning, and other improvements are now and will continue to be needed. However, the lack of available funds makes any large sscale buildig program for our institutions impossible at this time. The buildings must be maintained and repaired. This alone is a large program and must be done for the preservation of the investment already made."

Gov. Umstead notes the need for the University to see the State's viewpoint in budget considerations. "Every effort should be made to see that these institutions understand the needs of the State and that hey seek always to meet these needs."

President Gray summed up the need for the physical improvements when he told the committee in September, "For some strange reason the State has done little for student activities at Chapel Hill."

There's a more hopeful item in the Governor's speech where he discusses educational television. He asks the Legislature to authorize a commission to investigate the whole problem. If such a Commission is established, it will have the work, facts, and suggestions on hand as a result of conference held here last June and sponsored by the Consolidated University, plus the able reports and recommendations made by Mr. Gray and Vice-President Logan Wilson.

THE AMERICAN FEDERALIST—I

The UN, UNC, And 1953

DAN DUKE

Nineteen hundred fifty-three is here. But what of it? What is different. Yes, we may have had a rip-roaring celebration of New Years' Eve. Maybe we even made a few resolutions. Or perhaps we even acquired a fresh outlook on life, a second wind of hope about the world situation. But how else is 1953 different from 1952?

Korea is still Korea. There's no doubt about that. The Russian imperialism and communism did not suddenly vanish with shouts of "Happy New Year." Nor did fear. Both Russia and the United States are still engaged in an all-out tussle for power and the security they hope to acquire thereby. No longer is it a question so much of why they are fighting as it is of what defense programs, what security measures. From fear and desire for self-preservation (plus a little touch of imperialism, too, maybe), both Russia and America take more and more radical security measures—even at the expense of ideological sacrifices.

True, the situation is not particularly heartening. But this is not the whole story. The seemingly "ineffective" United Nations is slowly gaining in power and influence. While the UN by no means guarantees salvation to the dilemna, it does offer a plausible way to all alleviate world tensions and possibly to lead to a more stable peace.

Even on the Carolina campus, the spread of this influence is being felt. UNC already had numerous programs dedicated to world brotherhod and understanding, but beginning this quarter Carolina students and Chapel Hill townspeople will have the chance to participate in a mock United Nations Organization forming right her on campus. Already the Dialectic Senate and a number of our foreign exchange students have agreed to participate. There will be a mock General Assembly and Security Council, and each of the sixty member nations will be represented by Carolin astudents or Chapel Hill townspeople. Perhaps YOU will be America, Russia, England, China, France, or Germany. Even if the individual student finds himself in the alarming position of carrying five full courses (25 hours), he could always be a "Finland"—that is, a representative actively looking on but unable to participate openly due to unavoidable circumstances.

At any rate, follow The Daily Tar Heel for explicit directions of how, when, and where to join.

Pulqué

This Saturday class business is so involved that I hardly know where to begin. And wherever I do begin, I cannot possibly finish it in one day, so I hope you will stick with me and see it through.

One notes behind the action of the Board of Trustees a sort of quick attempt to remedy a situation that is not fully understood. The question is certainly broader than merely a few hours of classes on Saturday morning. The Board seems to feel (and I am guessing here) that Carolina is slipping and something needs to be done about it. It has hit upon Saturday classes as a result. Certainly the Board's action is not merely aimed at getting Carolina on the semester system, since they could have ordered that directly, with the almost inevitable consequence of Saturday classes. Moreover, a switch to the semester system does not mean more class periods, but only spreading them out over a six-day week.

The relative merits of quarter and semester systems will be discussed at a later time, but let us for the moment assume that the Board's prime objective is the utilization of Saturdays in order to improve the quality of the education. In which case, someone would remind the Board that one does not improve the breed of fish by adding more water to the pond.

College education has become an increasingly competitive big business in recent years. Colleges go out of their way to attract students, and once doing this, they hate to part with them. This has necessarily resulted in a lowering of the academic standards, since courses had to be so arranged that the apahtetic, disinterested, lazy student could still pass and remain in school. To say nothing of the privileges given ahtletes on some campuses.

Not long ago I read the story of how England prevented the extinction of a certain game bird, (the name slips my mind). First, the birds were coddled, given special shelters, and their enemies were destroyed. The birds only got fewer in number. Finally, when things were really tough they reversed the procedure, and killed off some of the lame old birds, and destroyed some of the shelters of the rest. Amazingly enough the ones that remained proceeded to breed rapidly, and now they are quite numerous.

Raise the course work requirements of the University so that the "hangers on" either have to work or get out, and you will have gone a long way toward your goal. The enrollment will drop temporarily, or perhaps even permanently, since there are many students who are not the least bit interested in learning anything as long as they can progress by Degrees. You will, I believe, have a better University. You will also take care of the Saturday situation, if that still grates on your mind, graduate students, fo rexample, do not have Saturday classes (as was mistakenly reported in the Chapel Hill Weekly) yet very few of them do not work a good six or eight hours over the weekend.

This argument, of course, assumes that the chief function of a University is the dissemination of knowledge. This point can be argued, and will be done so at a later time. Granting this is so, however, the University could improve many situations by the simple expediency of requiring a reasonable amount of work from the students!

"Heil, Comrade"

EARL STEVENS

'John Brown's Body'

"John Brown's Body" by Stephen Vincent Benet has been feeling adapted by Charles Laughton into a brilliant "dramatic oratorio." The performance has the qualities of an oratorio in being without costume and scenery and in only using simple, stylized moments of acting to heighten the dramatic impact; moreover, out of Benet's great narrative and epic poem of the Civil War Mr. Laughton has moulded a dramatic piece of great, almost overwhelming, power and beauty.

The story of the Civil War as seen and written by Benet and dramatized by Mr. Laughton is presented by three narrators—they are supported in turn by a chorus which sings, chants, yells, or "what have you" when the occasion arises. The chorus was well-trained and did a fine job evoking all the various moods of a nation divided against itself—the moods of lighthearted gaiety of Wingate Hall, of the austere Connecticut countryside, of the somber and bitter and tattered determinations of the men in the Army of the Potomac and the Army of Northern Virginia.

The three stars of the performance—Tyrone Power, Judith Anderson, and Raymond Massey—have created one of the eternally great moments of the American drama. The only word for their performances is—INCOMPARABLE.

The magnificence of their performances is due in part to the fact that each in his or her own right is a great actor; yet notwithstanding this, each subordinated his or her own personality ot the dramatic unity of the whole—and this is the secret and essence of great artists.

There is an intimacy between actor without make-up, costume, or scenery and the audience which has compelling fascination. I hope it is superfluous to point out that the presentation of "John Brown's Body" is in the same tradition as the presentation, two years ago, of George Bernard Shaw's "Don Juan in Hell" with Charles Laughton, Charles Boyer, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, and Agnes Moorehead. The growth of this new medium of drama is a healthy and propitious sign of the vitality of the American stage. It will be interesting to consider what new "dramatic oratorio" will come forth.

Perhaps just a word should be given to the music written by one of America's leading composer's, Walter Schumann. Here again one finds the artist subordinating his own genius to the whole, and Mr. Schumann has done a most commendable job in scoring the background music for the play. The music is not great or eternal and will probably not exist outside the limits of the performances, but that should in no way detract from the competence of the score, for Mr. Schumann has elsewhere shown that he can write great music.

One minor criticism should, I feel, be made of the handling of Melora's song; the song is one of Benet's greatest lyrics; in fact, it is one of the world's greatest lyrics, and I felt a little chagrin when the singer did not project the words with sufficient loudness and clarity.

The most significant imperfection of the evening came from the adience in so far as I felt nothing would have been more appropriate than a few hearty Rebel yells signifying a heartfelt approval so frequently heard at the conclusion for a great performance.

THOSE MODEST COLLEGE EDITORS . . .

A modest group of college newsmen last month fought against a resolution in support of freedom of the college press, but the resolution passed anyway.

The debate took place at the annual convention of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity, in Denver. When the resolution was introduced, college members of the fraternity objected chiefly on hte grounds of "the irresponsibility" of most college editors.

"A college newspaper," said one undergraduate delegate, "isn't like any ohter. We go there to learn. We want a free press but we can't have it. It don't think we've got any right to go around rabble-rousing."

Other comments: "The university is the publisher, and there is no paper in the world that can go against the publisher." "Good public relations is all you need."

The resolution calling for freedom of the college press was at first defeated by a vote of 27 to 14. But a second vote reversed the decision.

DORMAN CORDELL

STEWPOT

The following is purely a fable of course, and any right-thinking individual would know such a crazy thing could never happen in this enlightened age of ours.

Once upon a time in the far-away land of Northus Carolinibus, hte people decided they would elect a new ruler, it being the custom in that strange land to elect a new ruler every quadrennium, because it had been thus even unto olden times.

And two groups of persons, the outs and the ins, vied for the rulership. There was another minority group which ran a token candidate, for although this group had some support in other lands, it was practically an underground organization in Northus Carolinibus. This group was called the Whigs.

After much fuss and ado, which gave everyone excuses to make an ass of himself, the outs won over the ins. But in revenge, the ruler, who was an in, ordered the beheading of all those who had heretically supported the outs. And there went out a decree through all the land to that effect, and there was weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth. But the elders consoled the people, saying: "But yet a little while, and the great King Will of the House of Bedstead will replace the wicked ruler of the ins, and we will be happy again."

And lo, it came to pass that hte and all the citizens of Northus day of the coronation approached, Carolinibus rejoiced at its approach, because they knew there would be a great celebration and they could raise hell freely during the celebration. For this was a pagan land, and all the citizens were heathens.

On the day of the coronation, from all parts of the land, the peoples gathered at the capital city of Really to see the ruler crowned and to celebrate—mostly celebrate.

And the ruler, who was an in, and the new ruler, who was an out, gathered, and they all shook hands, and said, "I always told everybody that you were a good guy, and I'm glad to shake your hand." For this was also a land of hypocrites.

When they gathered, the two rulers put on silk top hats and long coats and striped trousers, which made them feel ridiculous, but which the heathen customs of that heathen country decreed must be worn.

And the new ruler and the old ruler rode through the streets together in a great carriage, and everybody said, "Hooray," because they were full of the fruits of the vine.

And after the coronation, all and sundry gathered to dance the night away. And there was music and wine and women. And all the citizenry had their chance to raise hell.

But, even as with Cinderella, the clock struck 12, and the citieznry knew the celebration was over and that they must go back to their various parts of the land once again.

And they all dispersed, each with a happy feeling, for the new ruler had proclaimed that he was against sin, and favored virtue, manhood, womanhood, motherhood, and stood for the flag above all. And they said one to another, "He will make a good ruler, for his heart is pure."

And they all lived happily ever after, as all good characters should in all good make-believe stories. For, as said in the beginning, this is only a fable, and the enlightened world of today would never condone such actions For the land of Northus Carolinibus has been known from the earliest part of history to have been a land of heathens.

JOHN TAYLOR

Previews And Reviews

Well, here we go again. There is quite an impressive list of films coming up this term at one of the Chapel Hill movie palaces, and while your reporter has been unable to obtain a list of coming attractions from the other one, he is reasonably sure that it will follow suit, so it looks like another quarter of potential a scholastic disaster.

To begin with the two theatres have again done students politely dirty by scheduling two better than average movies to begin their runs today. They are "Million Dollar Mermaid," at the Carolina, and "The Happy Time," at the Varsity.

Frankly this corner has never cared for Esther Williams extravaganzas. God forbid that anyone should say something derrogatory about the lovely Esther's appearance. However the shows themselves have always had a certain sameness, and that sameness hasn't been good.

Having gotten out of the Carolina Theatre pool, the student will find the Varsity a pleasant place to dry off, and if Linda Christian, who is appearing there in "The Happy Time," doesn't warm him up, he'd better see a psychiatrist.

Anybody who is not devoted to the stage play of the same name from which the movie is adapted will find "The Happy Time" a very entertaining film, because of its amusing situations, fascinating characters, and sparkling, risque dialogue. But if people who fell in love with the legitimate version of the tale of the adolescent offspring of a delightfully amoral French - Canadian experiencing the sweet pangs of first love will find much of the tender sincerity of the original comedy replaced by the mechanical quality of the movie farce, a situation not common in Stanley Kramer productions.

The performances of Charles Boyer, Bobby Driscoll, Kurt Kasznar, Louis Jourdan, and Marlene Cameron are all of a high quality, but Marsha Hunt completely misses the warmth and genuineness of the mother.

On Other Fronts

(Editor's note: The following column is by Julian Scheer, assistant sports publicist of the University. It is a warm human interest story of one of Carolina's top athletes).

By Julian W. Scheer

AN ALL-AMERICAN

BARRY PAWLICK is 23 years old. He remembers only the last eight years of his life, but that's just fine with him.!

The story of the Carolina soccer-wrestling star, a wisp of a kid who was picked up by American GIs in battle-torn Belgium in 1944, is a Frank Merriwell-Horatio Alger-Tom Swift epic rolled into one. It's a tale of the All-American boy, working his way through college and becoming a star athlete and student, all, after overcoming adversity.

This week or next, Pawlik—if that's his name—, a nervous little guy with a tinge of accent in his voice, will become an American citizen. But already he's the personification of the Yankee youth.

H was born in 1929 somewhere in Poland. He and his parents were political prisoners and his parents were killed by the Germans. He has no living relatives.

All this he told members of the 11th Armored Division of the 3rd Army when he was liberated from a Belgian concentration camp in '44. At that time he believed he was 14 years old. He was a skinny, shaky kid of 60 pounds. Exhaustiv checks by the Red Cross and the C.I.D. reveal no more. It is the story of his youth. When he was discovered his only memories were of the horror of concentration camps, for he was confined since he was five or six.

A WEIRD STORY

WHEN POLISH SOLDIERS fighting with the Division learned his weird story, they took him along on their escapades as a mascot. It was the start of a new life for the youngster who, apparently, was hopelessly lost in the chaos of war. He spent a couple of years in Europe with the Division, the 505 MPs and the 796 MPs.

All chilling nightmares of the past were fantastically blotted out two months after his rescue. While eating lunch on a tank top one sunny afternoon in Belgium, a direct German motar hit on a nearby ammo truck, knocking him unconscious. He lost all memory that noon in Belgium and when he recovered he again pieced together the facts of his life from his liberators.

"It's a good thing, I guess," he says, "for I don't know who my parents were or what they looked like. Everything in the past was gone. I have no homesickness."

Pleasant moments followed after that. He was a popular character in the fighting and later while on MP patrol duty in Vienna. He picked up English quickly and served as an interpreter. When an arrest was made the Americans were often a bit profane, and liberal Barry translated in German or Polish verbatim!

HOMEWARD BOUND

IN 1947 PAWLIK'S AMERICAN friends started homeward and many of them wanted to take him with them. But the decision as with whom to go was too great for him. Lt. Raymond C. Carpenter submitted the first application and it was accepted, top priority of three out of 2,500,000. Soon he was headed for a strange sounding place called Albemarle, North Carolina, U.S.A.

According to the arrangements, Pawlik became the ward to Carpenter and his wife, Vertie, until he was 21. Carpenter notified his wife that the Polish (?) boy was on his way and she met him at Salisbury's train station.

"She expected me to know no English. She didn't know what to expect. When I greeted her with a plain old American 'hello', she was so dumbfounded that she nearly forgot to greet me," he recalls.

The waif began his new life in Albemarle. School officials didn't know where to put him so he took courses from the eighth through the 12th grades. He learned to play football, was a teammate of Bob (Goo Goo) Gantt, later a Tar Heel star, and idolized Charlie Justice, a hero to thousands of other "American" boys. He passed his work and was ready to graduate but was allowed to stay in school an extra year "because I wanted to play football so badly."

Through the generosity of W. A. Daniel of Albemarle, his first two years at Carolina were financed. The decision to enroll here was influenced by his hero-worship of Justice.

"I didn't want to take the money," he says, "so Mr. Daniel said it was a loan for 99 years. He said that I had to pay it back then if he was still alive."

His school work in Albemarle is a bit puzzling, one of the missing links in his past. According to the way he figures it, he must have been five or six when he was taken out of school and moved to a concentration camp. Yet he learned advanced subjects very quickly.

Since he is now over 21, he makes his cluttered little room beneath Emerson Stadium his home. He works from 8 to 8 o'clock on a dozen little jobs and his athletic career.

"The Carpenters were just wonderful. But I didn't want to be a burden anymore," he explains.

Now he visits often with Vertie and and the Carpenters' three young children and other pals in Albemarle. The European buddy is now a captain in Korea. And he still meets with other ex-Army friends, and once traveled to Michigan to see one of them. This Christmas he received many cards from his old comrades.

Before leaving Albemarle high school he won the coveted Babe Ruth Award for sportsmanship and achievement, about as American honor as a kid can receive.

Too small for football, he tried soccer here. Has been a star for two years, and next year will co-captain the Tar Heel booters. Oscar Gupton picked him up from a gym class and made a 123-pound wrestler of him. Now he's the 123-pounder on Coach Sam Barnes' varsity team for the second year and won his first match this season against Davidson.

He reached the finals in the Southern Conference consolation division last year, having to forfeit when officials learned that he gained the final round by winning the semi-final match with three broken ribs.

He plans to enter the Air Force after graduation and hopes to fly jets. He's an Air Force ROTC student, a member of the Arnold Air Society, secretary of the Monogram Club, and is generally a Big Wheel on Campus. Following his service hitch, he hopes for a career in coaching.

"You know," he adds, "I guess the story of my life is a little strange. No matter how trite it sounds, it couldn't happen any any place except in America."

Five Bainbridge Records Broken As Swimmers Win Third, 55-29

BAINBRIDGE, Md., Jan. 10 — (Special)—Donnie Evans splashed his way to tie a Carolina and break a Bainbridge record for the 200-yard breast-stroke as Coach Ralph Casey's Tar Heel mermen drowned Bainbridge Naval Training Station, 55-29.

The Carolina squad, looking their best this season, broke five pool records and gained more points than were expected.

Smashing Bainbridge records were Buddy Baarcke, Donnie Evans and Stan Tinkham in the medley relay, Buddy Heins, in the 50 free style, Evans in the breast-stroke, and Tinkham, Warren Heeman, Baarcke and Edwards in the 400 yard relay.

Evans tied a Tar Heel record set in 1949 by Dick Twining of two minutes and 24 seconds for the 200-yard breast stroke.

Carolina won eight out of ten events, losing only the 200 and 440-yard free style.

The Tar Heels play host to Georgia Tech here January 17.

BADMINTON CLUB

The badminton club will hold its second match of the year tomorrow night at 7:00 in the Women's Gym against Duke. The Tar Heels defeated the Blue Devils in a match last fall.

Cagers Rout W&L, 97-75, For 9th Win

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan. 10—Carolina's basketball team, again led by the scoring of Vince Grimaldi, spurted in the second and third quarters here last night to run up its highest point total of the season while routing Washington and Lee, 97-75.

The win was the Tar Heels' ninth in 11 games and their seventh straight Southern Conference victory without a loss.

Co-captain Grimaldi, who paces the team scoring for the season, hit for 18 points in the first half and added seven more in the second to take scoring honors for both teams with 25 points.

Washington and Lee took an early lead over the Southern Conference leaders, leading at the end of the first quarter, 24-22. But the Tar Heels turned on in the second and third quarters to hand the Generals their eighth straight loss.

The half-time score was only 46-40 in Carolina's favor. But Tar Heels outscored W&L by 13 points in the third period to put the game away.

Three other Carolina players hit for double figures with Bud Maddie, switched from center to forward, being next high with 18. Paul Likins got 15 and Al Lifson 13 in the high-scoring game.

Hughes cooperative plan for

MASTER OF SCIENCE DEGREES

Purpose TO ASSIST outstanding graduates in obtaining their Master of Science Degrees while employed in industry and making significant contributions to important military work.

Eligibility June 1953 college graduates and members of the armed services being honorably discharged prior to September, 1953, holding degrees in the following fields:

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING
PHYSICS
MECHANICAL ENGINEERING

Those chosen to participate in this plan will be from the upper portion of their graduating classes and will have evidenced outstanding ability. They must also have displayed some degree of creative ability and possess personality traits enabling them to work well with others.

Citizenship Applicants must be United States citizens, and awards will be contingent upon obtaining appropriate security clearance, as work at the Hughes Research and Development Laboratories may be related to National Defense projects.

Universities Candidates for Master of Science Degrees must meet the entrance requirements for advanced study at the University of California at Los Angeles or the University of Southern California.

Program Under this Cooperative Plan, commencing June 1953, participants will follow this schedule of employment at Hughes:

FULL TIME—from June, 1953 to Sept., 1953.
HALF TIME—from Sept., 1953 to June, 1954.
FULL TIME—from June, 1954 to Sept., 1954.
HALF TIME—from Sept., 1954 to June, 1955.

Recipients will earn five-eighths of a normal salary each year and attend a university half time during regular sessions working on their Master's Degree.

Salaries The salary will be commensurate with the individual's ability and experience, and will reflect the average in the electronics industry. Salary growth will be on the same basis as for full-time members of the engineering staff. In addition, the individuals will be eligible for health, accident, and life insurance benefits, as well as other benefits accruing to full-time members.

Travel and Moving Expenses For those residing outside of the Southern California area, actual travel and moving expenses will be allowed up to ten per cent of the full starting annual salary.

Sponsorship Tuition, admission fee, and required books at either the University of California at Los Angeles or the University of Southern California, covering the required number of units necessary to obtain a Master's Degree, will be provided by Hughes Research and Development Laboratories.

Number of Awards Approximately one hundred Cooperative Awards are made each year, if sufficient qualified candidates present themselves.

Selection of Candidates Candidates will be selected by the Committee for Graduate Study of the Hughes Research and Development Laboratories.
